The petitioner having sued out a commission of lunacy at his own expense against a party, under which he was found to be a lunatic, and the party having died before a grant had been made of his estate, the lord chancellor refused to refer the bill of costs for taxation, or to make an order that the costs and expenses of the petitioner had been properly incurred for the benefit of the lunatic. Pinks, In re, 12 L. J., Ch. 57.

—— Before hearing of Petition to confirm Master's Report.]—After presentation, but before hearing of a petition to confirm the master's report in the matter of a lunatic, the lunatic died. The court made no order on the petition, refused to allow the costs in the absence of the legal personal representative, and directed the petition to stand over, with liberty to apply as to costs when the funds in court came to be dealt with. Popham, In re, 44 L. T. 323; 29 W. R. 403.

Proceedings before Master for appointment of Committees.]—Proposals laid before the master for appointment of committees were disapproved of; a petition was then preferred that he might review his report, which he was ordered to do. Other proposals were laid before the master by the same party, and also disapproved of; and an unsuccessful opposition was made to the petition for confirming the report. Costs of all these proceedings granted. Fust, Ex parte, 1 Collins, Lun. 461. And see Ib. 306.

Refusal to produce Lunatic.]—If the person in whose custody a lunatic is, refuse to produce him to the commissioners, the court has made them pay costs. Southcot, Ex parte, 2 Ves. Sen. 401; Ambl. 111.

Costs incurred after Death of Lunatic.]—A report made by the master after the death of a lunatic cannot be acted on, but the costs incurred after the death may be ordered to be taxed. Way, In re, 30 L. J., Ch. 815; 5 L. T. 519; 9 W. R. 563.

III. LUNATIC NOT SO FOUND.

a. Jurisdiction in Lunacy.

Appointment of Receiver of Dividends.]—Where a person is, through mental infirmity arising from disease or age, incapable of managing his affairs, a master in lunacy has jurisdiction to appoint a receiver of the dividends of government and other securities without ordering a transfer of such securities into the name of the receiver. Browne, In re, 63 L. J., Ch. 729; [1894] 3 Ch. 412; 7 R. 580; 71 L. T. 365; 43 W. R. 175—C. A.

Although a judge has jurisdiction to appoint a receiver of dividends only, the usual practice both in chancery and lunacy, namely, to order the securities to be transferred into court, and to allow the receiver to obtain the dividends from the paymaster-general, ought not without sufficient reason to be departed from, but ought in general to be adhered to. Ib.

Appointment of new Trustee.]—The Duchy Court of Lancaster has no jurisdiction to appoint a new trustee in the place of a trustee of unsound mind, not so found by inquisition. The jurisdiction in such cases does not belong to the court of chancery but to the Lord Chancellor in Lunacy. Ormerod, In re, 28 L. J., Ch. 55; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1289; 7 W. R. 71.

—— Trustee Act, 1850.]—The case of an imbecile trustee is not within the jurisdiction of this court, and an application to the lords justices or lord chancellor is necessary. Good Intent Benefit Society, In re, 2 W. R. 671.

Person declared Lunatic by Foreign Jurisdiction.]—The lord chancellor has no jurisdiction, under the s. 34 of 1 Will. 4, c. 65, to deal with the property of a party declared lunatic by a foreign jurisdiction, except only in conformity with the laws of the country where the lunacy has been declared. Newton v. Manning, 1 Mac. & G. 362.

A lunatic abroad, under a judicial proceeding in nature of a commission of lunacy, is not within the statute 36 Geo. 3, c. 99, s. 3. See 6 Geo. 4, c. 74, which repeals and re-enacts this statute. Sylva v. Da Costa, 8 Ves. 316.

Directions as to Property.]—The court will not give any directions touching the property of a person of unsound mind, where no commission of lunacy has issued, though the fortune of such person consist only of an annuity of 50*l.* and 150*l.* of arrears, and though the next of kin and the parties who have to pay the annuity submit to such order as the court may make. Ridgway, Ex parte, 5 Russ. 152.

Maintenance—Fund in Court.]—An idiot, aged 29, residing with his brothers and sister, was entitled to 4,446*l.* 11*s.* consols, paid into court under the Trustee Relief Act, and also to other property, the whole income of which was under 300*l.* a year. Upon a petition presented in lunacy and under the said act, an order was made for the payment of the dividends of the fund in court to the brother and sister of the idiot so long as he should reside with them on their undertaking to maintain him. Burke, In re, 2 De G. F. & J. 124; 29 L. J., Ch. 608; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 717; 2 L. T. 587; 8 W. R. 534.

Maintenance — Reference to Master.] — The trustees under a will in which a life annuity of 600*l.* a year, and other considerable benefits were given to a person, who, at the death of the testator, was confined in a lunatic asylum, filed a bill for the directions of the court, in executing the trusts of the will relative to the lunatic. The wife of the lunatic presented a petition, praying for an allowance out of the income given to the lunatic, and the court thereupon referred it to the master to inquire into his state of mind; and the master having reported that he was of unsound mind, and not competent to the management of his affairs, the court upon petition of the wife directed the trustees to apply to the great seal for a commission of lunacy, and referred it to the master to inquire what in the meantime would be a proper allowance to be made to the wife. Exeter (Bishop) v. Ward (Lord and Lady), 2 Myl. & K. 54.

Property of Small Amount — Payment of Debts.] — The power given by the Lunacy Regulation Act, 1862, s. 12, of making orders for the purpose of rendering the small property of a lunatic available for his maintenance or benefit, is to be exercised only for his benefit, and not for the purpose of enabling his creditors to obtain payment. Price, In re, 56 L. J., Ch. 292; 34 Ch. D. 603; 56 L. T. 77; 35 W. R. 340—C. A.

A person of small means was confined as a criminal lunatic in Broadmoor Asylum, and there appeared no reasonable prospect of his ever being released. His mother and brother applied for an order that his property, along with some property in which they were interested together with him, might be applied in payment of moneys for which the lunatic had given security, the mother undertaking to pay his other debts:—Held, that the application must be refused as not being for his benefit. Ib.

"Property" in Lunacy Regulation Act.]—The word "property" in the Lunacy Regulation Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 86), s. 12, which empowers the lord chancellor to make a summary order for rendering the property of an alleged lunatic available for maintenance, where such property does not exceed 1,000*l.*, means beneficial property, or property clear of debt; and where this did not satisfactorily appear to be the case, a reference was directed to the master in lunacy to inquire whether the fact was as stated, and also whether a proposed compromise affecting part of the property was proper to be carried into effect. Adams, In re, 4 De G. J. & S. 182; 3 N. R. 339; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 137; 9 L. T. 626; 12 W. R. 291.

In ascertaining whether the property of a person of unsound mind is of the amount of 1,000*l.* or less, so as to bring the case within 25 & 26 Vict. c. 86, s. 12, his debts and the expenses incurred in his past maintenance since he became of unsound mind are to be deducted. Faircloth, In re, 13 Ch. D. 307; 42 L. T. 72; 28 W. R. 481—C. A.

Petition for Application of Income—Opposition by alleged Lunatic.]—The power given to the lord chancellor by s. 12 of the Lunacy Regulation Act, 1862 (extended by s. 3 of the Lunacy Regulation Amendment Act, 1882), to make an order for the application of the property of a person of unsound mind for his maintenance or benefit, when the property is below a specified amount, without directing any inquiry under a commission of lunacy, ought not, even if the jurisdiction extends to cases in which the alleged lunatic appears and denies unsoundness of mind, to be exercised in such cases. Lees, In re, 53 L. J., Ch. 1022; 26 Ch. D. 496; 50 L. T. 489; 32 W. R. 1005—C. A.

Petition for Application of Property—Notice signed by Agent of Solicitor.] The notice of a petition under the Lunacy Regulation Act, 1862, ss. 12, 13, 14, 15, which was served on an alleged lunatic, was signed by the London agent of the petitioner's solicitor, expressly as agent:—Held, that this was not a compliance with the 59th rule of the Lunacy Order, 1883, which directs the notice to be signed by the petitioner or his solicitor. Summerville, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 367; 31 Ch. D. 160; 54 L. T. 143; 34 W. R. 185—C. A.

Payment of Dividends without Reference.]—Upon petition, praying reference to the master, as to the state of the plaintiff and her fortune, and direction for her maintenance, the property being too small to bear a commission of lunacy, an order was made upon affidavits, without a reference for payment of the dividends for the two ensuing quarters. Eyre v. Wake, 4 Ves. 795.

Lunatic out of Jurisdiction—Fund in Court—Transfer to Curator.] — Order made, on the application of the curator of a lunatic resident in Holland, for the transfer to him of the corpus of funds in England to which the lunatic was entitled. Elias, In re, 3 Mac. & G. 234.

—— Stock—Transfer to curator Bonis.]—The Act 1 Will. 4, c. 65, does not render it imperative on the lord chancellor, on the application of a curator bonis of a lunatic, appointed by the Court of Session in Scotland, to order a transfer of stock standing in the lunatic's name in the Bank of England (the property of the lunatic) into the curator's name. Morgan, In re, 1 H. & Tw. 212.

A bill was filed by an English lunatic resident in Scotland, and by his curator bonis duly appointed in Scotland, praying the transfer by one of two trustees into the name of the curator, who was the other trustee of English Government Stock standing in the name of the curator and his co-trustee. The court, upon motion that the defendant might be at liberty to make a transfer, after requiring the bill to be amended, by making the plaintiff sue by his curator and next friend, made an order, by consent, as upon a motion for a decree. Hessing v. Sutherland, 25 L. J., Ch. 687; 4 W. R. 820.

—— Past and Future Dividends—Payment to Curator Bonis.]—The lord chancellor will order payment by the bank to the curator bonis of the past dividends due on the stock, but not future dividends. Ib.

—— Future Dividends—Payment to Curator's Attorney.]—Where a curator of the property of a lunatic residing in Malta had been appointed by the court there, and such curator had authorised a person residing in England to receive dividends of shares in companies and of consols belonging to the lunatic, which had theretofore been received by an attorney appointed by the lunatic, the court, no opposition being made by the companies or the Bank of England, made an order that they should respectively be at liberty to pay the accrued and future dividends to the curator's attorney. Baynes, In re, 44 L. T. 322.

—— Lunatic so found by German Court—Transfer of Fund in Court to German Commission.]—Where a German lady, whose only connection with England was that her mother was English, was found lunatic by, and made a ward of, the German court, whereby her person and property were put under the charge of such court, which also had power to give receipts for her property, the (English) court ordered the transfer of a fund in court, the lunatic's sole property, to a commission of the German court, appointed for the purpose of taking charge of the property of lunatics. Barlow, In re (56 L. J., Ch. 795; 36 Ch. D. 287), distinguished. De Linden, In re. Spurrier. In re, De Hayn v. Garland, 66 L. J., Ch. 295; [1897] 1 Ch. 453; 76 L. T. 180; 45 W. R. 342.

Declaration that Person of Unsound Mind by Scotch Court—Sufficiency.]—On the application by the curator of T., a person resident in Scotland, for the transfer of stock standing in his name to the curator, it appeared that the petition on which the Scotch court had appointed the curator stated that T. had been for several years of unsound mind, and was at that time incapable of managing his affairs. The only ground for the petition, stated in the affidavits annexed, was that T. was of unsound mind. By a memorandum indorsed on the petition the Scotch court appointed the curator, but the order contained no express declaration that T. was of unsound mind. It was shown that curators were appointed in Scotland, not only in cases of unsoundness of mind, but also when persons were, by illness or absence abroad, incapable of managing their own affairs: —Held, that the memorandum indorsed on the petition amounted to a declaration within the meaning of s. 141 of the Lunacy Regulation Act, 1853, that T. was of unsound mind. Tarratt, In re, 51 L. T. 310; 32 W. R. 909—C. A.

b. JURISDICTION OF THE CHANCERY DIVISION.

1. Generally.

Person—Protection of.]—Jurisdiction of the court to interfere for the protection of a lunatic not found so by inquisition. Nelson v. Duncombe, 9 Beav. 211; 15 L. J., Ch. 296; 10 Jur. 399.

Appointment of Guardian.]—Although the chancery division has power, in the administration of the trusts of the property of a person of unsound mind not so found, to give directions for his maintenance, it has no jurisdiction to appoint a guardian of his person. Vane v. Vane, questioned. Bligh, In re, 49 L. J., Ch. 56; 12 Ch. D. 364; 41 L. T. 570; 27 W. R. 876—C. A.

The chancery division has jurisdiction to give directions as to the guardianship and maintenance of a person of unsound mind not so found, but will not exercise it unless the property is small and proceedings are not intended to be taken in lunacy. Vane v. Vane, 45 L. J., Ch. 381; 2 Ch. D. 124; 34 L. T. 613; 24 W. R. 602. And see Bligh v. O'Connell, 38 L. T. 217; 26 W. R. 311; Brandon's Trusts, In re, 13 Ch. D. 773; 41 L. T. 755.

—— Infant Ward.]—The jurisdiction of the court over its infant ward is not taken away by any physical or mental disability to which the infant may be subject, and such directions ought to be given as to his treatment, whether in a lunatic asylum or not, as the court considers to be most for his benefit. Edwards, In re, 48 L. J., Ch. 233; 10 Ch. D. 605; 40 L. T. 113; 27 W. R. 611—C. A.

till the point of the lunacy is determined. Hele, In re, 3 Atk. 635.

—— Administration.]—When the property of a person of unsound mind not so found is small, and it is not desirable to take proceedings in lunacy, the court will administer such property, and give directions as to guardianship and maintenance. Bligh v. O'Connell, 38 L. T. 217; 26 W. R. 311.

Where the property of an intestate was small, and his next of kin and only known relation was a lunatic, but had not been so found by inquisition, the court declined to make a grant of administration to a stranger in blood for the use and benefit of the next of kin, until an application had been made to the Court of Chancery under the 12th section of the Lunacy Regulation Act, 1862, for an order rendering the property of the intestate available for the maintenance and benefit of the lunatic. Slumbers, In re, the Goods of, 34 L. J., P. 93; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 396; 13 W. R. 696.

—— —— Inquiry as to State of Mind of Infant Devisee.]—In a suit to administer the estate of a testator, a devisee infant being incapable of managing his own affairs, a motion was made under s. 16 of 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, for a reference to inquire into the devisee's state of mind:—Motion refused, and no order made. Costs reserved. Adams v. Smith, 1 W. R. 475.

2. Maintenance.

Jurisdiction — Property under Control of Court.]—The Chancery Division has no jurisdiction to direct the application of the property of a person of unsound mind (not so found) for his maintenance unless there is either money belonging to him in court, or the court has control over his property by reason of there being an action or some other proceeding pending relating to the property. Grimmett's Trusts, In re, 56 L. J., Ch. 419.

An order cannot be made for the maintenance of a lunatic not found so by inquisition, unless proceedings have been taken for placing the property under the administration of the Court of Chancery. Tayler, In re, 2 De G. F. & J. 125.

—— Maintenance out of Capital.]—The jurisdiction of the Chancery Division to give directions as to the maintenance of a person of unsound mind not so found is not confined to applying the income for his maintenance, but extends to the application of capital for that purpose. Tuer's Will, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 454; 32 Ch. D. 39; 54 L. T. 910; 34 W. R. 751—C. A.

J., Ch. 335; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 208; 6 L. T. 154; 10 W. R. 369.

A sum of 390*l.*, which constituted the whole fortune of a lunatic, not so found by inquisition, was ordered to be paid to the mother of the lunatic in respect of past maintenance, she undertaking to continue to maintain her daughter. Williams v. Allen, 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1219; 9 L. T. 405; 12 W. R. 94. S. C., nom. Williams v. Atlen, 33 Beav. 241.

This legacy was ordered to be retained by the brothers for her past maintenance in preference to the claims of the county, the brothers undertaking to maintain her in future. Gibson, In re, L. R. 7 Ch. 52; 25 L. T. 551; 20 W. R. 107.

—— Husband.]—Upon a petition presented by the trustees of certain marriage settlements respecting the management of the trust funds, it was ordered that the whole of the income thereof which was settled to the separate use of the wife, who had become lunatic, and was being supported by her husband in a private —— Wife.]—On a petition by a person of unsound mind, not so found, who was married but had no children, and whose sole property consisted of a fund in court, for payment of the whole income of the fund, amounting to 212*l.* per annum, to the wife of the petitioner, the court made an order as asked, upon the undertaking by the wife to apply the income for the maintenance, comfort and support of the petitioner. Silva's Trusts, In re, 57 L. J., Ch. 281; 58 L. T. 46; 36 W. R. 366.

Where a sum of stock was bequeathed to a married woman, whose husband was of unsound mind, though no commission of lunacy had been issued against him, the court, on a bill filed by the husband and wife for payment of the legacy, transferred the fund into court to the joint account of the plaintiffs, and afterwards, in consideration of the poverty of the parties, made an order on the petition of the wife that the dividends should be paid to her for her life. Steed v. Calley, 2 Myl. & K. 52.

The father of S. presented a petition in his own right, and as next friend, praying that the income of the fund might be paid to him during the life of S., or until further order, he undertaking to apply it towards the maintenance of S. The evidence shewed that S. was quite imbecile, and was not entitled to any property other than the 720*l.*, and that the father was not of ability to maintain her. The court made the order, but directed an application to be made once a year in chambers, shewing the state of mind of S., and of what her property then consisted. Sturge, In re, 5 Jur. (N.S.) 423; 7 W. R. 395.

—— Payment out to Curator.]—An Englishman while resident in France was found a lunatic by the law of that country, and a curator bonis was appointed by the French court. The fund in this country to which the lunatic became entitled was paid into court under the Trustee Relief Act:—Held, upon petition by the curator bonis for payment of the fund to him as a matter of right, that the court could exercise a discretion; and, it appearing that the lunatic was sufficiently provided for, an order was made for retaining the corpus of the fund in court, and the payment of the dividends only to the curator. Garnier, In re, 41 L. J., Ch. 419; L. R. 13 Eq. 532; 25 L. T. 928; 20 W. R. 288.

J., Ch. 788; 25 W. R. 843.

Application by the curator bonis of a Scotch lunatic for the transfer of stock standing in the lunatic's name in the Bank of England refused, the court not being satisfied that the security given by the curator in Scotland was sufficient, and holding that it was a matter of discretion to refuse or accede to the application. Stark, In re, 2 Mac. & G. 174.

The court had directed a reference to inquire whether the lunatic had been found lunatic according to the rules of the place where she was resident; whether the stock formed a part of her personal estate, and whether the petitioner had been duly appointed curator bonis and had given security accordingly, and was properly qualified to have the stock transferred to him. Ib.

—— Lunatic out of Jurisdiction—Person in New South Wales of Unsound Mind not so found—Payment to Master in Lunacy in New South Wales.]—A lady detained in a lunatic asylum in New South Wales, but not found a lunatic by inquisition, was entitled for life to the income (about 30*l.* a year) of one-third of a testator's residuary estate, and was absolutely entitled to a fund of about 2,000*l.* which had arisen from accumulations of this income. She had for years been maintained by the colonial government at a total expense of 803*l.* By the New South Wales Lunacy Act, extensive powers of management of the property of "lunatic patients" (i.e. persons detained as lunatics but not so found by inquisition) were given to the master in lunacy of New South Wales, and he was enabled to sue for and receive debts due to the patient, but the act did not vest the patient's property in him. The master claimed to have the accumulations, which were in England, paid to him, upon which the trustees paid them into court under the Trustee Relief Act. The master petitioned to have them paid out to him. Kay, J., ordered payment to him of the 803*l.*, and also payment to him of the income of the remainder of the fund so long as the patient should be detained as an insane patient in New South Wales, and authorised the trustee to pay to him the patient's share of the income of the residuary estate, which the trustee undertook to do. The master in lunacy appealed:—Held, that although the master could enforce payment in New South Wales of any sums due to the patient, still as the patient had not been found lunatic, and her property was not vested in the master, he could not compel payment of any moneys due to the patient from persons in this country, and that his claim as of right to have the whole of the accumulations made over to him could not be sustained:—But held, that a trustee here, or the court acting as trustee, was justified in paying over to the master anything which the competent authority in New South Wales decided to be necessary for the maintenance or benefit of the patient, and that the order therefore was right in ordering the payments which had been directed:—But held, that it was also right in declining to go further, no case having been made to shew that more was required for the comfort or benefit of the patient. Barlow, In re, Barton v. Spencer, 56 L. J., Ch. 795; 36 Ch. D. 287; 57 L. T. 95; 35 W. R. 737—C. A.

Person so found in Colony of Victoria—Personal Property in this Country standing in Lunatic's Name—Property "vested" in Colonial Master—Transfer to Colonial Master.]—Where a person resident in the colony of Victoria had been there found lunatic, and an order of the supreme court in the colony had appointed one of the masters of that court guardian of the lunatic, and had assigned to him the care and management of her property (part of which consisted of English stocks), and it appeared that the whole of such stocks was required for her maintenance and support, the court held that the stocks were vested in the colonial master within the meaning of s. 134 of the Lunacy Act, 1890, sufficiently to warrant the exercise of their discretion, and ordered the transfer to such master accordingly. Barlow's Will, In re (36 Ch. D. 287), distinguished. Brown, In re, 64 L. J., Ch. 808: [1895] 2 Ch. 666; 12 R. 587; 73 L. T. 375; 44 W. R. 17—C. A.

Married Woman out of Jurisdiction—Separate Estate—Payment of Income to proper Officer in Victoria.]—Accrued and future dividends of a fund settled on a married woman for her life for her separate use, without power of anticipation, were ordered to be paid to the officer charged with the care of lunatics in the colony of Victoria to provide for her past and future maintenance as a pauper lunatic in the colony. Baker's Trusts, In re, 41 L. J., Ch. 162; L. R. 13 Eq. 168; 25 L. T. 783; 20 W. R. 325.

Purchase of Annuity.]—Investment of a fund belonging to a lunatic in an annuity for his life. Dodsworth's Trust, In re, 10 Hare, 16.

An investment of lunatic's property ordered in a particular form. Magnus v. Bingley, 2 W. R. 130.

A lunatic, not found so by inquisition, was entitled to a sum of consols in court and other property, the income of which was not sufficient for her necessary expenses and maintenance; on the petition of the mother and brother of the lunatic, the court ordered part of the consols to be invested by the brother in the name of the lunatic in the purchase of a government annuity, to be paid by the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt to the brother until further order, he undertaking to apply the same for the maintenance of the lunatic. Davies v. Davies, 2 De G. M. & G. 51; 21 L. J., Ch. 419; 16 Jur. 419.

The court ordered stock standing to the account of a woman aged sixty-two, a lunatic, but not so found by inquisition, to be invested in the purchase of a government annuity in her name and for her life, and to be paid to a person named until further order, he undertaking to apply the same for her maintenance and support. Ward, In re, 29 L. J., Ch. 784; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 717; 2 L. T. 685; 8 W. R. 333.

Sale of Reversionary Interest.]—Order made, upon petition, for the sale of the reversionary interest in a fund in court belonging to a person of unsound mind, there being no other fund out of which to provide for his past and future maintenance. Walker v. Symons, Walker, In re, 8 Jur. 49.

Pauper—Receiver in Lunacy—Order of Magistrates—Guardians.]—Where an order has been made appointing a receiver of the personal property of a pauper lunatic, it is improper for guardians to take steps to enforce, by distress, against trustees, who have money of the lunatic in their possession, an order (previously made by magistrates under s. 299 of the Lunacy Act, 1890) for payment of that money to the guardians; and an injunction will be granted to restrain them from so doing. Winkle v. Bailey, 66 L. J., Ch. 181; [1897] 1 Ch. 123; 75 L. T. 577; 61 J. P. 135.

Stock standing in joint Names of Lunatic and Sister—Debts and Costs—Transfer for Payment refused.]—Investment of stock by the father (since deceased), in the joint names of the lunatic and her sister, not within either of the statutes relating to lunatics' estates. The court refused to order a moiety of the stock to be transferred for payment of the lunatic's debts, costs of commission, &c. Lynn, In re, 2 Jur. 200.

Reference as to State of Mind and Amount for Maintenance.]—The court refused a reference to inquire into the state of mind of an alleged lunatic, and what should be allowed for his maintenance, although there was a suit pending in which the lunatic was a party, and in which there was stock and money standing in his name, but his property, consisting of 4.252*l.* 3 per cents., 906*l.* cash, and a freehold worth 7*l.* a year; the court thought it was no case for dispensing with a commission. Gillbee v. Gillbee, 1 Ph. 121.

Appointment of Receiver of Dividends.]—Where a person is, through mental infirmity arising from disease or age, incapable of managing his affairs, a master in lunacy has jurisdiction to appoint a receiver of the dividends of government and other securities without ordering a transfer of such securities into the name of the receiver. Browne, In re, 63 L. J., Ch. 729; [1894] 3 Ch. 412; 7 R. 580; 71 L. T. 365; 43 W. R. 175—C. A.

Although a judge has jurisdiction to appoint a receiver of dividends only, the usual practice both in chancery and lunacy, namely, to order the securities to be transferred into court, and to allow the receiver to obtain the dividends from the paymaster-general, ought not without sufficient reason to be departed from, but ought in general to be adhered to. Ib.

Marriage Settlement by Infant—Election by Court.]—If a wife having become of unsound mind had not elected as to a marriage settlement executed by her when an infant, the court would make an election on her behalf, it having jurisdiction to bind the equitable interests of lunatics not so found by inquisition, when it appears to be for their benefit. Jones v. Lloyd, (L. R. 18 Eq. 265) followed. Wilder v. Pigott, 52 L. J., Ch. 141; 22 Ch. D. 263; 48 L. T. 112; 31 W. R. 377.

IV. INSANITY IN RELATION TO CIVIL RIGHTS AND DUTIES.

a. Contracts and Conveyances.

Subject to Delusions, Effect of.]—The mere existence of a delusion in the mind of a person making a disposition or contract is not sufficient to avoid it, even though the delusion is connected with the subject-matter of such disposition or contract. It is a question for the jury whether the delusion affected the disposition or contract. Jenkins v. Morris, 14 Ch. D. 674; 42 L. T. 817—C. A.

Plea of Incapacity—Admissibility.]—Lunatic may stultify himself as to acts done in prejudice of himself, though not of others, especially where his committee joins with him in the suit. Ridler v. Ridler, 1 Eq. Abr. 279.

H. was found a lunatic by inquisition, with a retrospect of seventeen years. It was also found that he had assigned a debt due to him for the purchase of a manor. On a bill by the attorney-general, it was held that the lunatic ought to be relieved, but that he need not be made a party, though the defendant should have leave to traverse the inquisition. Att.-Gen. v. Parkhurst, 1 Ch. Ca. 113. And see Ib. 153, where it was held necessary that the lunatic should be made a party; sed secus, of an idiot, for he shall not be admitted to stultify himself. See also Yates v. Boem, 2 Str. 1194; Thompson v. Leach, 3 Mod. 296.

Lunacy unknown to other contracting Party.]—Unsoundness of mind will not vacate a contract if unknown to the other contracting party, and no advantage is taken of the lunatic, especially where the contract is executed in whole or in part, so that the parties cannot be restored to their original position. Molton v. Camroux (in error), 4 Ex. 17; 18 L. J., Ex. 356—Ex. Ch. Affirming, S. C., 2 Ex. 487; 18 L. J., Ex. 68; 12 Jur. 800.

Therefore, where a lunatic purchased annuities for his life of a society which, at the time, had no knowledge of his unsoundness of mind, the transaction being in the ordinary course of human affairs, and fair and bonâ fide on the part of the society:—Held, that after the death of the lunatic, his personal representatives could not recover from the society the premiums paid for the annuities. Ib.

The plaintiff contracted to purchase an estate from the defendant, and paid a deposit on the terms that unless he objected to the title within a certain time the same should be considered as accepted. No objection was made by him to the title. The plaintiff at the time of the contract, and of the payment of the deposit, was a lunatic incapable of understanding the meaning of a contract or of managing his affairs, and derived no benefit from the contract, but these facts were unknown to the defendant, who made the contract with him fairly and bonâ fide, believing him capable of understanding the same:—Held, that as the contract was entered into by the defendant, and the money received fairly and in good faith and without knowledge of the lunacy, and, so far as concerned the deposit, the transaction was completely executed, the plaintiff was not entitled to a return of the money so deposited. Beavan v. M'Donnell, 9 Ex. 309; 2 C. L. R. 474; 23 L. J., Ex. 94; 22 L. T. 243.

To constitute a defence to an action for use and occupation of a house, taken by a defendant under a written agreement at a stipulated sum per annum, it is not enough to shew that she was a lunatic, and that the house was unnecessary for her; but it must also be shewn that the plaintiff knew this, and took advantage of her situation, and if that is shewn the jury should find for her; and they cannot on these facts find a verdict for the plaintiff for any smaller sum than that specified in the agreement. Danes v. Kirkwall (Viscountess), 8 Car. & P. 679.

Dealings of sale and purchase by a person apparently sane, though subsequently found to be insane, will not be set aside against those who have dealt with him on the faith of his being a person of competent understanding; but this doctrine is inapplicable to a case where the question is whether the deed of a lunatic, altering the provisions of a settlement, is void. Elliot v. Ince, 7 De G. M. & G. 475; 26 L. J., Ch. 821; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 597; 5 W. R. 465.

The rule both of law and of equity, as to a contract entered into by a person apparently of sound mind, and not known by the other contracting party to be insane, is, that such a contract, if fair, bonâ fide and completely executed, is valid; and, even though such a contract might be void at law, it will only be set aside in equity for fraud. Hassard v. Smith, Ir. R. 6 Eq. 429.

To vitiate a contract, the knowledge of the lunacy or incapacity must be, not merely actual, but presumably sufficient—from circumstances known to the other contracting party—to lead him to a reasonable conclusion that the person with whom he is dealing is of unsound mind. Ib.

The insanity of a mortgagor at the date of the mortgage will not annul the right of a mortgagee to a foreclosure decree in equity, unless the mortgagee knew of the mortgagor's insanity, and took advantage of it. Campbell v. Hooper, 3 Sm. & G. 153; 3 Eq. R. 727; 24 L. J., Ch. 644; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 670; 3 W. R. 528.

C. C., in April, 1848, mortgaged her estates at M., and in November, 1849, she borrowed a further sum on the same security. In April, 1850, A. B. (the plaintiff) paid off these mortgages, and took a conveyance of the estates, subject to the repayment of 3,250*l*. In 1846 a commission of lunacy was issued out against C. C., and she was placed in an asylum, but an arrangement having been agreed to before a verdict was given, the proceedings were discontinued, and C. C., though, as alleged, still of unsound mind, was discharged from the asylum. The arrangement not having been carried into effect, another commission was in October, 1851, sued out against C. C., and in January, 1852, she was, as from May, 1846, found a lunatic. Later in 1852 the Lord Chancellor, on the application of C. C., granted her leave to traverse the finding of the jury, but before any further proceedings were commenced C. C. died intestate. The mortgagees alleged that they, previously to the execution of the deeds, had no knowledge of any unsoundness of mind in C. C., although it was, as alleged by the defendants, public and notorious. In July, 1848, a compromise was effected, and confirmed by a decree of the court, whereby C. C. gave up a considerable benefit to some of the defendants. A. B., by his will, prayed for the usual decree of foreclosure, which was opposed, on the ground, that owing to the lunacy of C. C. at the date of the deed, he had no legal title to the estates, and that he must establish his claim at law:—Held, assuming C. C. to have been a lunatic at the time when the mortgage was executed, that the plaintiff had established his right to equitable relief, and to the usual decree for foreclosure. Ib.

The cases of Snook v. Watts (11 Beav. 105) and Jacobs v. Richards (18 Beav. 308, n.) observed upon. Ib.

Sanity of Person executing Deed—Onus probandi.]—A party claiming under a deed is not bound to prove the sanity of the person executing it; the burden of proof lies on the other side. Jacobs v. Richards, 18 Beav. 300; 2 Eq. R. 299; 23 L. J., Ch. 557; 18 Jur. 527; 2 W. R. 174.

A deed, though overreached by the finding of an inquisition in lunacy, is not, therefore, necessarily primâ facie void. Ib.

A mortgage was executed by S., who was afterwards found lunatic by inquisition as from a date prior to the mortgage. The mortgagee filed his claim for foreclosure against the mortgagor and his committee, but did not set out the date from which the mortgagor had been found lunatic. The deed was proved by the surviving attesting witness, who was not cross-examined by the defendants, but they went into evidence to shew that the mortgagor was lunatic both prior to and at the time of the mortgage being executed:—Held, first, that the suit was properly by claim, and was not defective in not setting out the prior lunacy of the mortgagor; secondly, that the deed being a good one primâ facie, the defendants could not be permitted to shew its invalidity in the present suit (except, semble, by cross-examination of the attesting witness), and that the court would act upon it until it was set aside by a court of law. The usual foreclosure decree was made, with a direction for it not to be drawn up for six months, the defendants to be at liberty in the meantime to take proceedings to set aside the deed. On appeal, the lords justices gave liberty to the plaintiff to proceed at law, and reserved further consideration, but, in default, dismissed the claim. Ib.

Though the finding of a person's insanity, by an inquisition, upon a commission of lunacy, is not binding on third parties, still it destroys the natural presumption in favour of sanity, and casts the burden of proving the person's sanity on the party alleging it. Snook v. Watts, 11 Beav. 105; 12 Jur. 444.

Capacity to Contract—Knowledge of other Party—Burden of Proof.]—A party to a contract cannot avoid it on the ground of his insanity at the time he entered into it, unless his insanity was at the time known to the other contracting party. The burden of proving both the insanity and the knowledge of it by the other contracting party lies upon the party seeking to avoid the contract. Imperial Loan Co. v. Stone, 61 L. J., Q. B. 449; [1892] 1 Q. B. 599; 66 L. T. 556; 56 J. P. 436—C. A.

In an action for work by an attorney, for a defendant, who pleaded lunacy:—Held, that this was no defence unless the plaintiff knew it; and it appearing that the defendant had been duly placed in an asylum while he suffered under delirium tremens, and was mad from time to time when under the influence of drink, but that the plaintiff did not do business with him at those times, it was for the jury, whether, when he took his instructions, the defendant was insane to his knowledge. Moss v. Tribe, 3 F. & F. 297.

No person can, in defending an action, be allowed to stultify himself; and therefore a defendant cannot, in an action for work and labour, set up his own insanity as a defence, unless he has been imposed upon by the plaintiff in consequence of his mental imbecility. Brown v. Jodrell, 3 Car. & P. 30; M. & M. 105. S. P Lery v. Baker, M. & M. 106, n.

Setting aside—Contract.]—Court of equity will not interfere to set aside a contract overreached by an inquisition in lunacy, if fair and without notice, especially where the parties cannot be reinstated. Niell v. Morley, 9 Ves. 478.

—— Recovery.]—There is no instance of a recovery suffered by an idiot; which can only be accounted for from the consciousness that such an act could not stand. Hume v. Burton, 1 Ridgw. 90.

—— Alienation not of Record.]—Alienations, not of record, by an idiot, after inquisition, may be avoided by scire facias. Ib., 214.

—— Fine.]—Where a lunatic has levied a fine, his heir-at-law cannot set it aside on the ground that it was obtained by fraud and therefore void. Murley v. Sherren, 8 A. & E. 754; 1 P. & D. 126; 8 L. J., Q. B. 152.

—— Conveyance.]—Whether a conveyance executed by a lunatic is absolutely void in the absence of notice of the lunacy to the party claiming under the conveyance, and of all circumstances of fraud (Molton v. Camroux, 2 Exch. 487, and in error, 4 Exch. 17), quære. Whether such a conveyance is voidable, and. if so, under what circumstances, quære. Such a conveyance, executed under circumstances of fraud, the lunacy being one of those circumstances, might be set aside. Price v. Berrington, 3 Mac. & G. 486; 15 Jur. 999.

In a suit to set aside a conveyance of an estate twenty-seven years after the transaction, on the ground of fraud, which was alleged to consist in the imbecility (lunacy) of the vendor insufficient consideration, suppression and coercion on the part of the purchaser, the plaintiff failed in proving any of the alleged grounds of fraud, but established the fact of lunacy. This court will not interfere to set aside the conveyance. Ib.

Where an equitable interest in an estate has been conveyed by a person of unsound mind to a party taking without fraud or notice of the unsoundness of mind, and the case is one in which the deed would be void at law on the ground of the lunacy, equity will relieve against the conveyance by the lunatic. S. C., 7 Hare, 394.

In a suit in which a person found lunatic sought to set aside a deed executed by her as a security for moneys advanced at a time subsequent to that from which she was found lunatic, and in which the defendant by his answer denied notice of the lunacy, the deed was not set aside, although at the hearing the defendant by his counsel admitted that the plaintiff was at the time of executing the deed of unsound mind; inquiries were directed as to the fact of the advance and the circumstances attending it, and as to the application of the money; and upon further directions the deed was ordered to stand as security for the money reported to have been actually advanced, with interest and costs. Kirkwall v. Flight, 3 W. R. 529.

A. obtains a conveyance from insane person long before commission issues, or is executed:—Held, fraudulent, and set aside, though consideration-money was near the value of the estate. Evans v. Blood, 3 Bro. P. C. 632.

The plaintiffs sought to set aside a conveyance made by their ancestor, as they alleged, while a lunatic under undue influence, and for an inadequate consideration. The defendant, who claimed under a derivative title from the purchaser, insisted that he was a purchaser for valuable consideration without notice. No notice, actual or constructive, having been proved, the court refused to interfere, and dismissed the bill with costs. Greenslade v. Dare, 20 Beav. 284; 24 L. J., Ch. 490; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 294; 3 W. R. 220.

The court, under the circumstances of the case, refused to set aside deeds executed by one under restraint in a lunatic asylum, under medical certificates. Selby v. Jackson, 6 Beav. 192; 13 L. J., Ch. 249.

—— ——Issue as to Sanity directed.]—On a bill to set aside deeds and recoveries on the ground of the lunacy of the party at the time he executed them:—Held, that the finding of the jury on an inquisition which overreached that period, afforded a presumption that he was then insane, but there being some evidence that after the time when the lunacy was stated to have commenced, the party was not of unsound mind, an issue was directed to inquire whether he was of unsound mind at the time of executing the deeds, &c. Frank v. Mainwaring, 2 Beav. 115.

Form of issue for trying the validity of deeds executed by a party found by inquisition to have been a lunatic from a time anterior to the execution of the deed. Ib., 4 Beav. 37.

A bill was filed on behalf of an infant, with the sanction of the master, to set aside deeds executed by a lunatic, at a time subsequent to that to which he had been found lunatic by inquisition. An issue having been directed, the jury found in favour of the deeds. The bill was dismissed with costs of suit, and of the issue. Ib.

An issue as to sanity is not directed merely upon a suggestion in an award, but such suggestion must be supported by evidence, occasioning a reasonable doubt as to the sanity. Harrod v. Harrod, 1 K. & J. 4; 18 Jur. 853.

A degree of imbecility below what would be sufficient to justify a finding of lunacy under a commission de lunatico, &c., will be sufficient to enable a court of equity to set aside a deed, if it appears that undue advantage has been taken of that weakness, such as it is, to obtain the execution of the deed. Blachford v. Christian, 1 Knapp, 73.

—— Voluntary Disposition.]—A settlement made by a lunatic, though reasonable, and for the convenience of the family, ought to be set aside in equity. Clerk v. Clerk, 2 Vern. 414.

—— Power of Attorney.]—A lunatic tenant in tail of copyholds having executed powers of attorney authorising her attorney, first, to procure her admission as tenant in tail in the several manors of the copyholds; and, secondly, to surrender them after admission, and take a readmission in fee:—Held, that the transaction was invalid, and that the estate tail was not barred; though, at the instance of a creditor disputing the lunacy, an issue was directed as to whether the lunatic was, at the time of her executing the powers of attorney, of sound mind. Elliot v. Ince, 7 De G. M. & G. 475; 26 L. J., Ch. 821; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 597; 5 W. R. 465.

—— Gift.]—What degree of weakness of intellect in a donor is sufficient, when coupled with the fact of habitual confidence reposed by him in the donee, to avoid a gift, considered, quære. Steed v. Calley, 2 Myl. & K. 52; 1 Keen, 620.

Compromise of Action.]—Any man who is not a lunatic must be considered competent to agree to a compromise of litigation in which he is engaged, the circumstances under which the compromise was made not being such as to afford evidence of fraud. Manby v. Bewicke, 3 K. & J. 342.

Necessaries—Liability for.]—A lunatic may contract for necessaries suitable to his degree, and an action will lie against him, notwithstanding an inquisition of lunacy, for the amount. Baxter v. Portsmouth (Earl), 7 D. & R. 614; 5 B. & C. 170; 2 Car. & P. 178.

Therefore, where a person of rank ordered carriages suitable to his condition, and the coachmaker supplied them bonâ fide and without fraud, and they were actually used by the party:—Held, that an action would lie upon the contract, notwithstanding an inquisition of lunacy finding the party to be of unsound mind at the time the carriages were ordered. Ib.

An action of debt for necessaries supplied will lie against a lunatic. Stedman v. Hart, Kay, 607; 23 L. J., Ch. 908; 18 Jur. 744; 2 W. R. 462.

Whether a person who supplies a lunatic with necessaries, knowing him to be a lunatic, can maintain an action against him on the ground of an implied contract, quære. Weaver, In re, 21 Ch. D. 615; 48 L. T. 93; 31 W. R. 224; 47 J. P. 68—C. A.

—— Implied Contract.]—The law will raise an implied contract, and give a valid demand or debt against the lunatic or his estate for moneys expended for the necessary protection of his person and estate. Williams v. Wentworth, 5 Beav. 325.

Semble, a contract may be implied in favour of a person who has supplied a person of unsound mind, though not so found by inquisition, with necessaries, or has provided him with proper protection and support. Nelson v. Duncombe, 9 Beav. 211; 15 L. J., Ch. 296; 10 Jur. 399.

A person furnishing necessary supplies to a de facto lunatic, not so found by commission, if it appears that he did not do it from charity, or upon the credit of another party, may prove for the amount as a creditor against the lunatic's real or personal estate. Wentworth v. Tubb, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 171. Affirmed, 5 Jur. 1150; 12 L. J., Ch. 61; 6 Jur. 980.

Whenever necessaries are supplied to a person who by reason of disability cannot himself contract, the law implies an obligation on the part of such person to pay for such necessaries out of his own property. Accordingly an obligation may be implied on the part of a lunatic (whether so found or not) to repay a person who has supplied necessaries for him, when the necessaries supplied are suitable to the position in life of the lunatic. But the provision of money or necessaries must be made under circumstances which would justify the court in implying the obligation, i.e. with the intention on the part of the person making the provision to be repaid for so doing, and to constitute a debt against the lunatic's estate. Rhodes, In re, Rhodes v. Rhodes, 59 L. J., Ch. 298; 44 Ch. D. 94; 62 L. T. 342; 38 W. R. 385—C. A.

Where a stepfather of a lunatic (not so found by inquisition) had contributed to his maintenance and paid his funeral expenses:—Held that on neither of these accounts was a debt created, chargeable on the real estate of the lunatic under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 104. Carter v. Beard, 10 Sim. 7; 3 Jur. 532.

A lady of unsound mind who was never found a lunatic, and whose income was under 96*l.* a year, was confined from 1855 down to her death in 1881 in a private lunatic asylum at a cost of 140*l.* a year. Her brother received the income of her property and applied it in part payment of the 140*l.*, paying the deficiency out of his own pocket until his death in 1875. After his death his son, who was his executor, continued to receive and apply the lady's income in the same manner, and the deficiency was made good partly by him and partly by his brother and sisters. No claim was ever made by any of these persons against the lady's estate during her life, nor did any of them appear to have kept any account against her after her death:—Held, that the deficiency was provided under circumstances from which no implied obligation could arise. Carter v. Beard (10 Sim. 7) doubted; Weaver, In re (21 Ch. D. 615), explained. Ib.

Contract made by Wife of Lunatic.]—The plaintiff was a tradesman, and the defendant had given his wife authority to deal with the plaintiff, and had held her out as his agent and as entitled to pledge his credit. Afterwards, the defendant became insane, and whilst his malady lasted his wife ordered goods from the plaintiff, who accordingly supplied them. At the time of supplying the goods the plaintiff was unaware that the defendant had become insane. The defendant afterwards recovered his reason, and then refused to pay for the goods supplied to his wife by the plaintiff:—Held, that the defendant was liable for the price of the goods. Drew v. Nunn, 48 L. J., Q. B. 591; 4 Q. B. D. 661; 40 L. T. 671; 27 W. R. 810—C. A.

A husband is liable for necessaries supplied to his wife during the period of his lunacy. Read v. Legard, 6 Ex. 637; 20 L. J., Ex. 309; 15 Jur. 494.

Proof was allowed in equity against the estate of a testator, for money advanced to his wife during his lunacy, and applied by her in payment of her necessary expenses, though she had a separate income. Wood, In re, Davidson v. Wood, 1 De G. J. & S. 465; 32 L. J., Ch. 400; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 589; 8 L. T. 476; 11 W. R. 791.

—— Separate Estate.]—A wife was entitled to separate estate derived from her first husband. Her second husband became lunatic, and she incurred a debt in order to pay for necessaries for him and herself during his lunacy. Upon his death the lender carried in a claim against his estate:—Held, that the wife was entitled to pledge her husband's credit for necessaries. Ib.

—— Repairs to House.]—In an action for the price of necessary repairs done to the defendant's house, it appeared that he was a lunatic, and that the work was done by order of his wife, with knowledge on the part of the plaintiff of the husband's lunacy. The wife had always received a sufficient allowance from her husband's estate:—Held, that the husband was not liable, as, under the circumstances, the wife had no more authority to pledge his credit than she would have had if he had been sane, and had provided her with means for all necessaries. Richardson v. Du Bois, 10 B. & S. 830; 39 L. J., Q. B. 69; L. R. 5 Q. B. 51; 21 L. T. 635; 18 W. R. 62.

Lucid Interval.]—Acts done by lunatic, during lucid intervals, are valid. Hall v. Warren, 9 Ves. 610; 7 R. R. 306.

Specific Performance.]—Upon bill for specific performance of contract overreached by commission of lunacy, the plaintiffs not having traversed the inquisition, an issue was directed whether the defendant was lunatic at the execution; if so, whether he had lucid intervals, and whether the contract was executed during a lucid interval; the difficulties in executing the contract, which was for sale of estate vested in lunatic, viz. that the price was to be paid by persons to be nominated, not appearing strong enough to preclude the previous inquiry with a view to performance, the plaintiff being willing to take the title. Hall v. Warren, 9 Ves. 605; 7 R. R. 306.

Specific performance of an agreement decreed against one who afterwards became a lunatic. Owen v. Davies, 1 Ves. Sen. 82.

On a claim by vendor for specific performance by purchaser, found by inquisition to have been lunatic at the time of the contract, the court declared the contract to have been null and void, and ordered the residue of the deposit, after deducting the vendor's costs, charges and expenses, to be repaid to the committee of the lunatic's estate. Frost v. Beavan, 22 L. J., Ch. 638; 17 Jur. 369.

—— Delusions — General Enfeeblement.]—Action by purchaser against executors of vendor for specific performance of an agreement to sell an estate. Defence, unsoundness of mind and incapability. It was held on the evidence that the vendor, who was eighty years of age, suffered from brain disease and insanity produced thereby as well as, and distinct from, insanity evidencing itself in delusions, and also from enfeeblement of mind. One of such delusions did to some extent enter into the matter of the contract, but, in the opinion of the court, not so far as to form the foundation of it. The medical evidence was that the vendor, though capable to some extent of transacting business, was not competent to enter into the contract in question, which, however, was reasonable and simple. There was strong lay evidence that the vendor perfectly understood the transaction. The court being of opinion on the whole evidence, notwithstanding the medical testimony, that the vendor was sufficiently sane at the time to understand, and did understand, the transaction, granted specific performance. Birkin v. Wing, 63 L. T. 80.

Contract by Lunatic before Lunacy—Contract Executed or Executory—Vesting Order.]—M., by writing, agreed to sell his leasehold premises and his business to T. and G. for a sum of which 2,535*l.* was to be paid at once, the residue, 3,050*l.*, at the end of five years. Possession was given, and the 2,535*l.* duly paid. After this M., who resided abroad, was found lunatic abroad, and a curator was appointed, with authority to receive the 3,050*l.* T. and G., and the curator, petitioned that on payment of the 3,050*l.* and interest to the curator, the leasehold premises might be ordered to vest in T. and G.:—Held, that under the Lunacy Act, 1890, s. 135, an order could be made vesting the leasehold in T. and G., such order to be dated and drawn up after payment of the 3,050*l.* to the curator. Pagani's Trust, In re, [1892] 1 Ch. 236; 65 L. T. 244—C. A.

Covenants by Lunatic before and after Lunacy.]—A previous covenant by a person of sound mind must prevail against any subsequent mental incapacity. Affleck v. Affleck, 3 Sm. & G. 394.

Covenant by G., on his marriage, that if he came into possession he would exercise the power of jointure, which, by the terms of the bill, could only be exercised by a tenant for life in possession. G., before coming into possession, became of unsound mind:—Held, the covenant was a defective execution of the power, which the court would enforce against the remainderman. Ib.

b. MARRIAGE.

Promise of Marriage.]—After a promise of marriage the man discovered that the woman had, before the promise, been a lunatic, and confined as such, and on that ground he refused to marry:—Held, that these facts formed no answer to an action for breach of the promise. Baker v. Cartwright, 10 C. B. (N.S.) 124; 30 L. J., C. P. 364; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1247.

Husband Lunatic—Conversion by Wife of his Property.]—An action was brought by the representative of a deceased husband against the representatives of his deceased wife, and the statement of claim stated that the wife during the lifetime of the husband (who was a lunatic, though not so found by inquisition) took possession of and sold certain of the chattels and applied the proceeds of sale to her own use, and claimed to recover the proceeds from the wife's estate in the hands of her executors:—Held, on demurrer, that the action was sustainable. Williams, In re, Williams v. Stratton, 50 L. J., Ch. 495; 44 L. T. 600.

—— Property of Wife—Reduction into Possession.]—A married woman who was the committee of the estate and person of her lunatic husband, was entitled to stock which was standing, in the name of a trustee, for her; this stock was, under an order made in the lunacy, transferred into the name of the accountant-general, in the matter of the lunacy, and part of it was afterwards sold out and applied in payment of costs; the lunatic died, leaving his wife him surviving:—Held, that the stock had been reduced into the possession of the lunatic, and that the wife was not entitled to it by right of survivorship. Jenkins, In re, 5 Russ. 183.

—— Separate Estate of Wife—Maintenance.]—The court will not allow the wife of a lunatic to convey her separate estate, under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 91, without some explanation as to the nature of the lunatic's property, and whether it contributes to the wife's support. Sarah Cloud, In re, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 833; 3 N. R. 429.

Wife Lunatic—Arrears of Pin-money—Action for not maintainable.]—F., upon her marriage with C., under the trusts of a marriage settlement executed in 1771, became entitled to annuities charged upon land, by way of pin-money, amounting to 1,000*l.* per annum: C., who afterwards became Duke of Norfolk, died in 1815. In 1816, upon a commission of lunacy, F. was found a lunatic, without a lucid interval, from December, 1782. During all this time she had lived with her husband, and in general society according to her rank. In 1820 F. died intestate. Upon a bill filed in chancery by the administrator of F., against the executor of C. claiming arrears of pin-money from December, 1782, to the death of C. :—Held, that the claim, under the circumstances, was not sustainable. Howard v. Digby (Earl), 8 Bligh (N.S.) 224 ; 2 Cl. & F. 634 ; 5 Sim. 330. Reversing, S. C., nom. Digby (Earl) v. Howard, 4 Sim. 588 ; 1 L. J., Ch. 3.

—— Portion directed to be paid to Husband on making Settlement — Assignment by Husband to Creditors.]—The portion of a lunatic was ordered to be paid to the master, and the husband was to have it on making a settlement. He made no settlement, but assigned it to his creditors, and died without issue ; then the wife died. Decreed, the creditors of the husband to have this portion. Nightingale v. Lockman, Moseley, 230 ; Fitzg. 148.

Judicial Separation — Allowance out of Lunatic's Estate—Assignment of.]—On a decree for judicial separation an order was made for payment of 60*l.* a year to the wife as permanent alimony. The husband was afterwards found lunatic by inquisition, and by an order in lunacy and chancery the dividends of a sum of stock to which he was entitled in a chancery suit were ordered to be carried to his account in the lunacy, and 60*l.* a year to be paid out of them to his wife in respect of her alimony till further order. The wife assigned the annuity to a purchaser, who presented a petition in lunacy, and in the suit to have the annuity paid to her :—Held, that the petition must be refused, on the ground that whether the annuity was considered as alimony or as an allowance made to the wife by the court in lunacy, it was not assignable. Robinson, In re, 53 L. J., Ch. 986 ; 27 Ch. D. 160 ; 51 L. T. 737 ; 33 W. R. 17—C. A.

Dissolution of Marriage—Suit by Committee.]—The lunacy of a husband or wife is not a bar to a suit by the committee for the dissolution of the lunatic's marriage. Such a suit may be instituted by the committee of the lunatic. Baker v. Baker, 6 P. D. 12 ; 49 L. J., P. 83—C. A.

See also HUSBAND AND WIFE—MARRIAGE.

c. PARTNERSHIP.

Dissolution of Partnership.]—A partner who has become incurably insane may obtain a decree for dissolution of the partnership on this ground, and although he has not been found lunatic by inquisition, may institute a suit for dissolution by his next friend, alleging that the lunatic is incurably insane, and that the dissolution is for the benefit of the lunatic, and the court will entertain the suit, in order to protect the property of the lunatic. Jones v. Lloyd, 43 L. J., Ch. 826 ; L. R. 18 Eq. 265 ; 30 L. T. 487 ; 22 W. R. 785.

—— Notice.]—When parties enter into a partnership at will, notice to one by the others that they wish to dissolve the partnership must be considered as an overture to an effectual dissolution. For this purpose, a notice to a person of unsound mind, not found a lunatic by inquisition, held good and dissolution decreed from the date of the notice. Mellish v. Keen, 7 W. R. 629.

Three persons mutually agreed to carry on and work together certain mineral property ; the deed of partnership providing that each party should be at liberty to sell his share after giving notice to the others, who were to have a right of pre-emption. One of the partners became a lunatic, and committees of his estate were appointed. On a bill filed by the plaintiff (who had purchased the shares of the other two partners) against the committees of the lunatic, praying a dissolution of the partnership and the usual accounts :—Held, that the partnership must be dissolved, and the property offered for sale as a going concern by some person to be appointed other than the parties. Rowlands v. Evans, 31 L. J., Ch. 265 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 88 ; 5 L. T. 658 ; 10 W. R. 186.

The court will not compel a person to carry on partnership with the committees of a lunatic or to have the share of a lunatic partner ascertained by an inquiry what a stranger would give for it. Ib.

Notice to the lunatic partner before his lunacy of the intention of another partner to sell his share :—Held, to bind the committees afterwards appointed, and that they had no right of pre-emption under the deed. Ib.

—— Service of Writ—Business carried on by Lunatic in the Name of a Firm.]—Ord. IX. r. 6*a*, of the Rules of Court, which permits, in certain cases, the service of a writ at the principal place of business carried on by one person in the name of a firm apparently consisting of more than one person, does not apply where such person is a lunatic or of unsound mind. In such a case the proper mode of service is that laid down in Ord. IX. r. 5. Fore Street Warehouse Co. v. Durrant, 52 L. J., Q. B. 287 ; 10 Q. B. D. 471 ; 48 L. T. 531 ; 31 W. R. 765.

d. TRUSTS.

See TRUST AND TRUSTEE (VESTING ORDERS).

e. MORTGAGES.

Lunatic Mortgagee—Payment off.]—If the mortgagor be ready to pay, the committee of a lunatic mortgagee should apply for a reference under the statute, and it seems he would not be allowed to bring an action. Richards, Ex parte, 1 J. & W. 264.

—— Petition—Costs.]—When a mortgagee becomes of unsound mind, and the mortgagor desires to pay off the mortgage debt, and presents a petition, to obtain a vesting order, he must pay the whole of the mortgage debt and interest into court, and will not be allowed the costs of his petition, nor will he have to pay the mortgagee's costs. Sparks, In re, 6 Ch. D. 361 ; 37 L. T. 301 ; 25 W. R. 869.

And see TRUST AND TRUSTEE (VESTING ORDERS).

f. POWERS.

Consent to exercise of Power of Advancement by Committee.]—A marriage settlement contained a power of advancement exercisable by the trustees after the death of the husband and wife, or at any time previously if they or the survivior of them should direct. The husband was found lunatic : — Held, that under the Lunacy Regulation Act, 1853, s. 137, the court had jurisdiction to authorise the committee to consent on behalf of the lunatic to the exercise of the power. Neville, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 435; 31 Ch. D. 161; 54 L. T. 290—C. A.

—— Land of which Lunatic Mortgagee—Power of Sale.]—The master in lunacy having reported that it was desirable that property of which the lunatic was mortgagee should be sold under a power of sale in the mortgage, the court declined to make an order authorising the committee to sell and to convey the estate to the purchaser, but only directed him to sell, leaving the transfer of the legal estate to be dealt with on a subsequent application under the Trustee Act, 1850. Harwood, In re, 56 L. J., Ch. 974; 35 Ch. D. 470; 56 L. T. 502; 36 W. R. 27—C. A.

Ord. I. 1850, art. 3.] — Article 3 of Ord. I. 1850, applies to the case where the donee of a power is lunatic. Tilt v. Jesselyn, 14 Jur. 848. See 19 L. J., Ch. 572, as to Article 11 of the same Order.

Appointment of new Trustees—Order authorising Execution of Power on behalf of Lunatic by appointing two named Persons — Vesting Order.] — Where a person entitled to a life interest under a settlement of stock who has the power to appoint new trustees of such settlement in the event of the death of any trustee, becomes of unsound mind, there is jurisdiction on the death of the trustees to make an order authorising another person to exercise such power on behalf of such person by appointing two named persons as new trustees, and vesting in them when appointed the right to call for a transfer of the stock. Such orders should in future be accompanied by a certificate of the master that the deed of appointment had been duly executed. The jurisdiction to make such an order is given by the Lunacy Acts, the power to appoint being a fiduciary one. Bowmer, In re (3 De G. & J. 658), and Sheat's Settlement, In re (42 Ch. D. 522), approved. Shortridge, In re, 64 L. J., Ch. 191; [1895] 1 Ch. 278; 12 R. 81; 71 L. T. 799; 43 W. R. 257; 60 J. P. 38—C. A.

—— Committee — Lunacy Regulation Act, 1853, ss. 137, 138.]—Form of order directing the committee of the estate of a lunatic to exercise a power of appointing new trustees vested in lunatic. Bowmer, In re, 3 De G. & J. 658; 28 L. J., Ch. 618; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 348; 7 W. R. 313.

The court declined to make an order under the Trustee Act, 1850, appointing a new trustee, in a case where there was an existing power of appointment vested in a lunatic tenant for life, in the absence of the committee of the lunatic, and directed the petition to stand over, with liberty to serve the committee with the petition. Parke's Trust, In re, 8 L. T. 378; 11 W. R. 655.

—— —— Consent of Lunatic Tenant for Life.]—A will contained a power of appointment of new trustees exercisable with the consent of the tenant for life. The trustees having died, the tenant for life, who had been found lunatic, presented a petition in lunacy and chancery by the committee of her estate as next friend for the appointment of new trustees:—Held, that there was no jurisdiction in lunacy to appoint new trustees, and that the only proper application in lunacy was to ask for an order authorising the committee to consent on behalf of the lunatic to an appointment of trustees under the power. Garrod, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 311; 31 Ch. D. 164; 54 L. T. 291; 34 W. R. 157—C. A.

Lunatic Protector of Settlement.] — For the principles by which the Lord Chancellor, when protector of a settlement in the place of a lunatic will be guided, in giving or withholding his consent to a deed of disposition under the Fines and Recoveries Act. Newman, In re, 2 Mont. & C. 112.

Order made by the Lord Chancellor, as protector under the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, to enable a quasi tenant in tail in remainder of a sum of stock, of which the tenant for life was a lunatic, to dispose of the fund. Grant v. Yea, 3 Myl. & K. 245.

Under the act 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, for the abolition of fines and recoveries, the Lord Chancellor is not the protector of the settlement in the place of a lunatic, when the lunatic is tenant in tail in possession. Wood, In re, 3 Myl. & C. 266; 7 L. J., Ch. 144; 2 Jur. 201.

Semble, that where a lunatic has a particular estate, in respect of which the Lord Chancellor is protector of the settlement, and has also the remainder or reversion fee, subject only to an intervening estate tail, his lordship will not concur in any deed for barring the estate tail. Ib.

The Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, and not the Lord Chancellor of Ireland, is the protector of a settlement, in the place of a lunatic, of estates situated in Wales, although the party is resident in Ireland, and has been found lunatic by inquisition issued by the Lord Chancellor of Ireland. The Lord Chancellor, in acting as protector of a settlement in the place of a lunatic, considers the moral as well as the legal result of his consent to bar remainders over. And where the only child of the lunatic, who, upon her marriage, had converted her estate tail into a base fee, reserving a power of appointment, required his consent to bar the remainders over, the Lord Chancellor refused his consent, the remainder over being to the brother of the lunatic. Graydon, In re, 1 Mac. & G. 655; 2 H. & Tw. 182; 14 Jur. 157, 211.

The Lord Chancellor refused his consent in the absence of the remainderman, and where the effect of such consent would have been to vest the estates in the husband of the tenant for life, to the exclusion of her issue, and also of the brother of the lunatic, that brother being the remainderman. Ib.

Where the tenant in tail in possession is a lunatic, the Lord Chancellor has an authority under the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, to consent to the first tenant in tail in remainder barring the subsequent limitations, on a proper case being made out for the exercise of that authority. Blewitt, In re, 6 De G. M. & G. 187; 25 L. J., Ch. 393; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 217; 4 W. R. 195.

Barring Entail—Powers of Court in relation to.]—A lunatic was tenant for life of real estates, including the advowson of a rectory. A lease of this property had been granted by order of the court for ninety-nine years, if the lunatic should so long live. This lease had become vested in a person who was also first tenant in tail in remainder expectant on the death of the lunatic without issue male. The lunatic was over eighty years of age, and had never had any issue. The first tenant in tail in remainder wishing to sell the next presentation to the rectory presented a petition praying the court, as protector of the settlement, to consent to the barring of the entail of the advowson:—Held, that the court ought not to interfere, as the application was not made for the benefit of the lunatic's estate. Thorp or Tharp, In re, 3 Ch. D. 59; 35 L. T. 293.

Where there was a devise of real estate to trustees, upon trust to raise, by sale or mortgage, certain sums of money, and subject thereto, to the use of A. for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail, with remainders over; and in a suit instituted in the Court of Exchequer, a decree for a sale of the real estate had been made, and a sale accordingly had: but pending the proceedings A. died, leaving three sons, of whom S., the eldest, and first tenant in tail, under the will, was a lunatic, and so found by inquisition:—Held, that the court had no jurisdiction under 1 Will. 4, c. 65, s. 28, to order the committee of the lunatic to execute the deed for barring the entail of the estates. Skerrett, In re, 2 Dr. & War. 585.

Where a lunatic has an equitable estate tail, it may be barred without the concurrence of the committee of his estate. Ib.

—— —— Copyholds.]—A person who was tenant in tail of copyhold estates was, by inquisition, found lunatic in 1852, and the lunacy was dated back to the 1st May, 1846. The lunatic subsequently obtained permission to traverse the inquisition, but died without having done so. In 1847 the lunatic had executed deeds (not pursuant to any contract with third parties) appointing an attorney to surrender the copyhold to uses, so as to enlarge her estate tail into a fee simple, and the surrender was made accordingly. Upon a claim by a simple contract creditor to make this copyhold property liable:—Held, that the entail was not effectually barred, there being no analogy to the old doctrine that fines and recoveries were good although made by a lunatic, which depended on a fiction, a deed barring an entail being now open to every objection that might be taken to any other deed. Elliot v. Ince, 7 De G. M. & G. 475; 26 L. J., Ch. 821; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 597; 5 W. R. 465.

g. Executor or Administrator.

Administration—To Guardians of Poor.]—A person died lunatic and intestate, having been maintained since 1862 in the county lunatic asylum at the cost of the Totnes Union; he was nevertheless entitled to 440*l.* His only next of kin was a lunatic sister:—The court granted administration to the nominee of the guardians of the Totnes Union, as being creditors under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 103, s. 16, the grant to be for the use and benefit of the lunatic sister during her lunacy. Windeatt v. Sharland, 41 L. J., P. & M. 9; L. R. 2 P. & M. 266; 25 L. T. 574; 20 W. R. 211.

—— Grant to Administrator durante animi vitio.]—Where the next of kin of a deceased lunatic was of unsound mind, though not so found by inquisition, a transfer of the lunatic's personal estate was directed to be made to the person, to whom administration durante animi vitio of such next of kin had been granted, agreeably to the practice of the Ecclesiastical Court. Evelyn, Ex parte, 2 Myl. & K. 3.

Lunatic Husband—Wife Executrix.]—Where a feme covert had been appointed one of the executors of a will, and her husband was a person of unsound mind, the court refused to restrain her from applying for and obtaining probate, but intimated that if probate was granted to her, an injunction might issue to restrain her from receiving or intermeddling with the estate. Yetts v. Palmer, 2 N. R. 255; 8 L. T. 528; 11 W. R. 765.

V. Insanity in Relation to Certain Acts of Parliament Affecting Real Estate.

a. Settled Estates Acts.

Leases and Sales of Settled Estates Act (19 & 20 Vict. c. 120), s. 36—Lunatic Tenant in Tail—Application by or Consent of Committee—Practice.]—The committee of a lunatic tenant in tail, before making or consenting to an application to the Court of Chancery under the Leases and Sales of Settled Estates Act for the sale of the lunatic's estate, must obtain the authority of the jurisdiction in lunacy by an application to the master in lunacy, whose report must be approved by the lords justices. Woodcock's Settled Estates, In re, L. R. 3 Ch. 229; 16 W. R. 469, 532.

—— Service of Application on Lunatic having remote Contingent Interest.]—The service of an intended application under the Settled Estates Acts (19 & 20 Vict. c. 120), on a person of unsound mind, not so found by inquisition, who had only a remote contingent interest was dispensed with, there being others in the same interest who concurred. Frankling's Settled Estates, In re, 7 W. R. 45.

—— Appointment of Guardian to concur in Petition.]—A guardian may be appointed to concur for a lunatic in a petition under the Leases and Sales of Settled Estates Act. Venner's Settled Estates, In re, L. R. 6 Eq. 249; 16 W. R. 1033.

The court cannot appoint a guardian to consent on behalf of a lunatic not so found by inquisition, to a sale of his estate. Clough's Estate, In re, 42 L. J., Ch. 393; L. R. 15 Eq. 284; 28 L. T. 261; 21 W. R. 452.

—— Person of Unsound Mind—Jurisdiction of Court.]—There are no provisions in the Leases and Sales of Settled Estates Act, enabling the court to act on behalf of persons of unsound mind. Turbutt's Estate, In re, 2 N. R. 158; 8 L. T. 603.

In the case where such a person was entitled to a charge, the court dispensed with his being made a party to the petition, and protected his interest by making the order subject to his charge. Ib.

Notice of Application.]—A notice under 37 & 38 Vict. c. 33, s. 2, of an application under the Leases and Sales of Settled Estates Act, may be given to a person not so found by inquisition. Crabtree's Settled Estates, In re, 44 L. J., Ch. 261; L. R. 10 Ch. 201; 32 L. T. 349; 23 W. R. 761.

Payment into Court of Purchase-money.]—The payment of money into court to the credit of the lunacy is not a payment "to a person becoming absolutely entitled" within the meaning of s. 23 of the Settled Estates Act (19 & 20 Vict. c. 120). Barker, In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 334; 17 Ch. D. 241; 44 L. T. 33; 29 W. R. 873.

b. SETTLED LAND ACTS.

Leases—Tenant for Life Lunatic—Appointment of Trustees for purposes of Act.]—Where a tenant for life is a lunatic, and his committee wishes to exercise the powers of leasing given by the Settled Land Act, 1882, if there are no trustees of the settlement in existence new trustees must be appointed for the purposes of the act. Taylor, In re, 52 L. J., Ch. 728; 49 L. T. 420; 31 W. R. 596.

Power of Committee to Lease.]—Where a tenant for life is a lunatic and his committee wishes to exercise the powers of leasing given by the Settled Land Act, 1882, if there are no trustees of the settlement in existence new trustees must be appointed for the purposes of the act. Taylor, In re, 52 L. J., Ch. 728; 49 L. T. 420; 31 W. R. 596—C. A.

Under s. 116 of the Lunacy Act, 1890, the court has jurisdiction to authorise the person appointed to act as committee of the estate of a person lawfully detained as a lunatic, though not so found by inquisition, to exercise the power of leasing vested in such lunatic as tenant for life, under the Settled Land Act, 1882. Baggs, In re (68 L. J., Ch. 612; [1894] 2 Ch. 416, n.), distinguished. Salt, In re, 65 L. J., Ch. 152; [1896] 1 Ch. 117; 73 L. T. 598; 44 W. R. 146—C. A.

Sale—Power of Committee to Sell.]—Where a person has been appointed to exercise the powers of a committee of the estate of a tenant for life of settled estate, who is lawfully detained as a lunatic, the court has no power to authorise him to exercise on behalf of the lunatic the power of sale vested in the latter by the Settled Land Act, 1882. To enable this to be done it is necessary that the lunatic should be so found by inquisition. Baggs, In re, 63 L. J., Ch. 612; [1894] 2 Ch. 416, n.; 71 L. T. 138—C. A.

The court will give leave to the committee of a lunatic tenant in tail to take proceedings under the Settled Land Act, 1882, for the sale of his undivided shares to the owner of the other shares. Weld, In re (28 Ch. D. 514) considered. Gaitskell, In re, 58 L. J., Ch. 262; 40 Ch. D. 416—C. A.

—— Mansion-house.]—Where a tenant for life under a settlement which contained a general power of sale of all or any of the settled hereditaments has become through mental infirmity incapable of managing his affairs, and a person has been appointed to manage the property and to exercise the powers vested in the tenant for life by statute or under the settlement of granting leases, the court has jurisdiction under ss. 120 and 128 of the Lunacy Act, 1890, to authorise the person so appointed to act on behalf of the tenant for life to exercise the power of sale in reference to the mansion-house. X., In re, 63 L. J., Ch. 613; [1894] 2 Ch. 415; 7 R. 365; 71 L. T. 139; 42 W. R. 657—C. A.

—— Notice by Committee.]—The committee of a lunatic tenant for life cannot give a valid notice under s. 45 of the Settled Land Act, 1882, unless he has previously obtained authority from the Court of Lunacy to do so. Ray's Settled Estates, In re, 53 L. J., Ch. 205; 25 Ch. D. 464; 50 L. T. 80; 32 W. R. 458.

c. LANDS CLAUSES CONSOLIDATION ACT, 1845.

Sale by Committee.]—Sect. 7 of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, does not authorise a person of unsound mind to sell land to a company or public body who have statutory power to take it; the section only authorises the committee of a lunatic to sell. Tugwell, In re, 53 L. J., Ch. 1006; 27 Ch. D. 309; 51 L. T. 83; 33 W. R. 132.

Where freehold land of a lunatic had been taken by a corporation under the provisions of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act and the committee petitioned for leave to convey to the corporation and to have the purchase-money carried over to the credit of the lunacy and invested:—Held, that the next of kin of the lunatic were the proper parties to the application, and that their costs, as well as those of the heirs-at-law must be paid by the corporation. Briscoe, In re, 2 De G. J. & S. 249; 4 N. R. 311; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 859.

Application of Purchase-money.]—Money paid into court by a railway company for land taken under the Lands Clauses Act, from a person who was in a state of mental imbecility, and who continued in that state until his death, but was not the subject of a commission of lunacy, ordered, after his death, not to be re-invested in or considered as land, but to be paid to his executors. Flamanck, Ex parte, East Lincolnshire Ry. Act, In re, 1 Sim. (N.S.) 260.

Land belonging to a lunatic having been purchased by a railway company under the powers of its act, an order was made for the payment of the purchase-money to the credit of the lunacy, and for its investment to the joint account of the lunatic and the company, without its being first paid into court under the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, s. 69. Milnes, In re, 1 Ch. D. 28; 34 L. T. 46; 24 W. R. 98.

The application for such an order must not be made in the lunacy only, but also in the Chancery Division. Ib.

The purchase-money of a lunatic's land taken by a public body under the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, s. 69, was, under the circumstances, ordered to be invested in guaranteed railway stock; but the name of the public body was directed to be omitted from the title of the account, an investment of this nature being treated as equivalent to a re-investment in land. Buckingham, In re, 2 Ch. D. 690.

Lands which were the subject of a rentcharge in favour of a lunatic during his life were taken by a corporation acting under the Lands Clauses Act. The court authorised the committee of the lunatic to release the lands from the rentcharge upon the corporation purchasing in the name of the lunatic a government annuity of the same yearly amount for his life. Brewer, In re, 1 Ch. D. 409; 34 L. T. 466; 24 W. R. 465.

VI. ACTIONS AND PROCEEDINGS BY AND AGAINST.

a. LUNATIC SO FOUND.

1. Plaintiff or Petitioner.

Action by Committee—Trustee in Bankruptcy of Lunatic made Defendant—Attendance at Proceedings in Chambers—Subsequent Application by Trustee for Stay of Proceedings—Relief notwithstanding Delay.]—The principle laid down in Beall v. Smith (L. R. 9 Ch. 85), with reference to a lunatic suing by his next friend, is equally applicable to a lunatic suing by his committee, with this difference, that in the case of the latter the committee should be added as co-plaintiff. The committee of a lunatic who has been adjudicated a bankrupt subsequently to the inquisition cannot bring an action to assert a right which is vested in the trustee in bankruptcy of the lunatic, and if the trustee refused to be made a co-plaintiff the committee cannot make him a defendant. Where the committee of a lunatic so found by inquisition, and subsequently made a bankrupt, brought an action against the solicitors of the bankrupt for an account of certain moneys received by them, and the trustee in bankruptcy who refused to be a co-plaintiff, but was on May 2 by order in chambers made a defendant, and attended certain proceedings in chambers on the account, took out a summons on June 15 for a stay of proceedings against himself on the ground that they were vexatious, the court made the order asked for notwithstanding the delay on his part. Whatman, In re, Hoar v. Whatman (W. N. 1889, p. 213), and Farnham, In re ([1895] 2 Ch. 795), discussed and explained. Farnham v. Milward, 64 L. J., Ch. 816; [1895] 2 Ch. 730; 13 R. 810; 73 L. T. 434; 44 W. R. 135.

—— Sanction of Court.]—A committee of a lunatic ought, before bringing or defending an action on behalf of a lunatic, to have the sanction of the court. Nottley, In re, 3 Jur. 719.

Jurisdiction of Master in Lunacy.]—Under s. 27, sub-s. 1, of the Lunacy Act, 1891, a master in lunacy has jurisdiction to authorise the committee of a lunatic to bring an action in the name of the lunatic, in respect of an alleged breach of trust by the trustees of a will under which the lunatic is a beneficiary, without any confirmation of his order by the judge in lunacy. Hinchliffe, In re, 73 L. T. 522—C. A.

—— Parties.]—Where a committee sues in the right of the lunatic, in such case the committee and the lunatic are made parties. Fuller v. Lance, 1 Ch. Ca. 18.

Administration Action by Lunatic Devisee of Realty and his Committee.]—A devisee of real estate, subject to payment of debts, became of unsound mind, and was so found by inquisition. A committee was appointed, and an action for the administration of the testator's real and personal estate was commenced with the sanction of the master in lunacy, in the chancery division, by the lunatic and his committee, and, the testator's personal estate proving to be insufficient for payment of his debts, an order was made for sale of all the testator's real estate upon payment of the purchase-money into court. Under this order the real estate was sold, and the purchaser paid the purchase-money into court. He, however, raised an objection to the title of the vendors, on the ground that they could not convey without an order in lunacy:—Held, that the administration action in which the order for sale was made, having been properly commenced with the sanction of the master in lunacy, the lunatic plaintiff was entitled to carry on the action, and was, therefore, also bound by the order for sale made in it; that the lunatic was, therefore, a trustee within the Trustee Extension Act, 1852, s. 1, of the real estate and that his committee should be appointed to convey. Stamper, In re, Stamper v. Stamper, 46 L. T. 372. See also Windeatt v. Sharland, ante, col. 662, and Bligh v. O'Connell, 38 L. T. 217; 26 W. R. 311.

Action to set aside Mortgage.]—In a suit in which a person found lunatic to set aside a deed executed by her as a security for moneys advanced, at a time subsequent to that from which she was found lunatic, and in which the defendant by his answer denied notice of the lunacy, the deed was not set aside, although at the hearing the defendant by his counsel admitted that the plaintiff was at the time of executing the deed of unsound mind: inquiries were directed as to the fact of the advance and the circumstances attending it, and as to the application of the money, and upon further directions the deed was ordered to stand as a security for the money reported to have been actually advanced, with interest and costs. Kirkwall v. Flight, 3 W. R. 529.

Claim as Heir-at-law—Failure of Action—Costs.]—A lunatic claimed as heir-at-law of T., and certain estates having been devised by T. to trustees for charitable purposes by an instrument, the validity of which as a will was impeached, a suit was instituted, and an issue to try the validity of the will directed, as necessary for freeing the lunatic's estate from doubts, and the trustees directed to conduct the issue as plaintiffs. The issue was found against the will:—Held, that though the trustees were not entitled to their costs under the decree, yet the court could give them, upon petition, out of the lunatic's estate. Turnley, In re, 12 Ir. Eq. R. 581.

The court will not make any order for the payment of extra costs out of the estate of a lunatic until such costs have been incurred. Manson, In re, 21 L. J., Ch. 249.

Impeaching Settlement by—Action by next Friend—Costs.]—A gentleman made a settlement of nearly the whole of his property in trust for himself for life, and then for four of his five children and their issue. About two years afterwards he was found lunatic. A son who took no benefit under the settlement desired to have it impeached, and adduced evidence shewing that there was reasonable ground for contending that the settlor was of unsound mind when he executed it. The income of the lunatic was amply sufficient for his wants:—Held, that no proceedings ought to be directed at the expense of the lunatic's estate, but that the excluded son ought to be allowed to file a bill, as next friend of the lunatic, without giving security for costs, to impeach the settlement. Gordon, In re, 44 L. J., Ch. 208; L. R. 10 Ch. 192; 32 L. T. 348; 23 W. R. 760.

Action by Receiver—Abandoned Proceedings—Costs.]—Receiver of estate of lunatic proceeding in a wrong form of action, which he was advised to abandon and adopt another form of action, in which he succeeded for the lunatic, refused the costs of the abandoned proceeding, although the master reported that he had acted bonâ fide, and ought to be allowed the costs. Montgomery, In re, 1 Moll. 419.

Unauthorised Proceedings by Solicitors after Inquisition—Costs.]—Solicitors who took proceedings after the date of the inquisition were, on the petition of the committee of the lunatic's estate, ordered to refund costs and expenses which had been paid out of the estate under an order in the suit, and to pay the costs of the petition, and of an appeal, as between solicitor and client. Beall v. Smith, 43 L. J., Ch. 245; L. R. 9 Ch. 85; 29 L. T. 625; 22 W. R. 121.

Petition by Receiver for Renewal of Lease—Concurrence of Committee.]—A petition to grant a renewal to a tenant under a lease, with covenant of renewal, presented by the receiver in a lunacy matter without the concurrence of the committee of the estate, will be dismissed with costs. Kilkenny (Earl), In re, 7 Ir. Eq. R. 594.

Action by Curator bonis — Property in England.]—A curator bonis duly appointed in Scotland to a person found lunatic there, can recover and give a good discharge for personal property of the lunatic in this country. Scott v. Bentley, 1 K. & J. 281; 24 L. J., Ch. 244; 3 Eq. R. 428; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 394; 3 W. R. 280.

Where the owner of an estate charged with annuity in favour of the lunatic had acknowledged that she had in hand certain arrears of the annuity which she was ready to pay to any person on his behalf who could give a good receipt for it:—Held, that this was a declaration of trust which entitled the curator to sue in equity for those arrears. Ib.

Action by Representatives—Pleading.]—An action was brought by the representatives of a lunatic against an auctioneer, by the agent of the committee, for moneys come to his hands, part of the lunatic's estate. The auctioneer pleaded that he had paid some of these moneys by the order of the committee's agent, for the use of the lunatic. The fact of such payment, in manner pleaded, was disputed:—Held, that the principal question was the question of fact, whether the plea could be proved or not; that without deciding whether the plea, if proved, afforded either a legal or an equitable defence, a court of equity would not (having regard to the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125) restrain the action. Farebrother v. Welchman, 3 Drew. 122; 24 L. J., Ch. 410. See 1 Jur. (N.S.) 126; 3 Eq. R. 383; 3 W. R. 257.

Action by Wife of Lunatic.]—An action having been brought by a wife of a lunatic (not so declared by commission) in his name, for the recovery of a debt due to him, the defendant paid the amount into court. The court made absolute a rule for payment of the money out of court to the wife. Gleddon v. Trebble, 9 C. B. (N.S.) 367; 30 L. J., C. P. 160.

Supplemental Order.]—Where a sole plaintiff, after issue joined and before decree, becomes lunatic, and a committee is appointed, such committee is entitled to a supplemental order under s. 52 of 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86. Dangar v. Stewart, 3 L. T. 770; 9 W. R. 266. S. P., Timpson v. L. & N. W. Ry., 1 N. R. 562; 11 W. R. 558.

The jurisdiction to make such an order is in chancery, not in lunacy. Ib.

2. Defendant or Respondent.

Lunatic Defendant — As Next of Kin.]—A lunatic was made a defendant as one of the next of kin of an intestate. He and his committee presented a petition entitled in the suit and also in the lunacy, praying that the lunatic might defend by his guardian, and that the committee might be appointed such guardian. The committee prayed that as such he might be at liberty to prosecute the claim of the lunatic as next of kin, and that all such costs as should be properly incurred and as should not be paid out of the estate to be administered might be raised and paid out of the lunatic's estate. The court gave liberty to the committee to defend the suit, but refused to appoint a guardian as being unnecessary, or to make any prospective order as to costs, and directed the title in the cause to be struck out. Manson, In re, 21 L. J., Ch. 249.

—— Evidence.]—A defendant of unsound mind answering by a guardian, unable to give a full discovery, on a motion to dissolve an injunction, affidavits cannot be read by the plaintiff to prove facts that might be given in evidence. Barrett v. Tickell, Jacob, 155.

—— Bill Filed by Committee—Practice.]—Practice as to lunatic answering where he is made defendant to a bill filed by the committee of his person and estate. Worth v. Mackenzie, 3 Mac. & G. 363.

—— Substitution of New Committee—Pendente Lite.]—In a suit to which a lunatic and his committee were defendants, the court declined before decree to make an order on motion, substituting a new committee as defendant. Rudd v. Speare, 3 De G. & Sm. 374.

After a decree in a suit in which a lunatic and his committee were defendants, the committee died and a new one was appointed. Ordered upon motion that the name of the new committee should be substituted for the deceased in all future proceedings in this cause. Bryan v. Twigg, 3 Eq. R. 62; 3 W. R. 42.

—— Death of Committee after Decree.]—If a lunatic and his committee be defendants, and the committee die after the decree, and a new one be appointed, the court on motion will order that the future proceedings in the cause be carried on in the name of the new committee. Lyon v. Mercer, 1 Sim. & S. 356.

—— Service of Writ — No Committee appointed.]—In an action for specific performance of contract, where one of the parties to the contract had become a lunatic so found by inquisition, but no committee had been appointed of her person or estate, the court directed service of the writ upon the keeper of the asylum at which she was residing, or upon the person with whom she was residing. Than v. Smith, 27 W. R. 617.

The court will not allow substituted service to be made upon the medical officer of the asylum where a lunatic defendant is confined. Semble, such service is to be effected upon the lunatic himself in the presence of the medical officer. Morgan v. Jones, 4 W. R. 381.

When a defendant is a lunatic the court has no power under the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, s. 17, to allow the plaintiff to proceed as if personal service of the writ of summons had been effected, unless it can be made to appear that the writ has come to his knowledge, and that he wilfully evades service. Holmes v. Service, 15 C. B. 293; 24 L. J., C. P. 24; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 258; 3 C. L. R. 234.

When a lunatic cannot be served with a writ of summons, leave cannot be granted to proceed without service. Williamson v. Maggs, 28 L. J., Ex. 5; 7 W. R. 50.

But the court has power to allow a plaintiff to proceed in an action as if personal service of the writ of summons had been effected, although the defendant is a lunatic, and will so order, if satisfied that reasonable efforts have been made to effect personal service, and that the writ has come to his knowledge. Kimberley v. Alleyne, 2 H. & C. 223; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 650; 8 L. T. 398; 11 W. R. 757.

—— Service of Process.]—When the medical officer of an asylum refused to allow service of a bill in equity on a lunatic who was not so found by inquisition, the court allowed substituted service on the medical officer. Raine v. Wilson, 43 L. J., Ch. 469; L. R. 16 Eq. 576; 29 L. T. 51.

—— Service of Writ — Distringas.] — The defendant being a lunatic, the court granted a rule nisi for a writ of distringas to compel an appearance, upon an affidavit stating that two calls had been made at the house where he resided, when the party was informed that he could see neither the defendant nor the keeper, and on the last occasion had stated to the servant the object of his visit, and left a copy of the writ with him. Banfield v. Darrell, 2 D. & L. 4; 13 L. J., Q. B. 202.

The governor of a lunatic asylum having refused to permit a writ of summons to be served upon the defendant, a lunatic, the court allowed a distringas to issue to be served upon the wife of the lunatic. Limbert v. Hayward, 13 M. & W. 481; 2 D. & L. 406; 14 L. J., Ex. 46.

—— Inrolling Decree.]—After decree a defendant had been found lunatic. After six months had elapsed from the date of the decree, the court allowed the decree to be inrolled, on notice to the lunatic's solicitor, on the record. Smith v. Whitmore, 11 L. T. 507.

—— Quare impedit.]—It seems that, if a defendant in quare impedit is a lunatic, the action is properly brought against him and not against his committee. Tyrrell v. Jenner, 3 M. & P. 648; 6 Bing. 283; 8 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 57.

Arrest.]—A lunatic may be arrested. Hall, Ex parte, 1 Jacob, 161.

—— Discharge.]—The court would not discharge a defendant out of custody on filing common bail, on the ground that he was insane at the time of the arrest. Nutt v. Verney, 4 Term Rep. 121.

Nor that he had since become so. Kernot v. Norman, 2 Term Rep. 390. S. P., Ibbotson v. Galway (Lord), 6 Term Rep. 133.

Even where there had been a commission of lunacy. Steel v. Alan, 2 Bos. & P. 362; 5 R. R. 647.

—— Answer by Committee—Admissions.]—A bill was filed against a lunatic and her committees, A., B. and C. After answer by the committees, and replication, and evidence having been taken, but before the hearing, the lunatic died. Administration having been granted to A., D. and E., by bill of revivor; and in the answer to the bill of revivor the defendants claimed the benefit of the previous answers of the committees. To this answer no replication was filed:—Held (affirming the decree of the court below), by the Lord Chancellor, that although the answer of the committees might not in general be binding on the estate of a lunatic, yet that the representatives, being really the same parties as the committees, and having adopted their answer, must be concluded by it; and by Lord St. Leonards, that the answer of the committees is in general binding on the lunatic's estate, and that under the circumstances there was nothing to take the case out of the general rule: also, that although an answer is not replied to, the court may read parts of it as admissions against the defendants, and may discredit other parties in their favour. Stanton v. Percival, 5 H. L. Cas. 257; 24 L. J., Ch. 369; 3 W. R. 391.

Quære, is an answer by committees binding upon the estate of the lunatic. It is binding on them in any other character. Ib.

Committee Defendant—Evidence as to Sanity of Lunatic.]—In a suit seeking relief against a deceased lunatic's estate, the defendants, her committees and legal personal representatives, endeavoured, and produced some evidence, to establish the lunatic's insanity at the date of a particular transaction, before the period to which the jury under the commission of lunacy had carried it back; but the court being of opinion that the evidence and circumstances appearing on the pleadings preponderated in favour of the then sanity of the lunatic, granted immediate relief, without further investigation at law as to the then state of the lunatic's mind. Percival v. Caney, 14 Jur. 1056.

—— Bankruptcy—Fund in Court—Petition for payment out.]—In 1854 a person entitled to a contingent future interest in a fund took the benefit of the Insolvent Act, but did not mention this interest in his schedule. In 1876 the contingent interest vested in possession. In the same year he was found lunatic, and shortly afterwards an order was made giving the holder of the fund liberty to pay it into court to the credit of the lunacy, and directing it to be invested and the income paid to the committee. Shortly afterwards the provisional assignee presented a petition in the lunacy, praying that the fund might be transferred to the credit of the insolvency, or that he might be at liberty to take proceedings in the chancery division for its recovery. The court ordered a transfer of the fund as prayed. Hinds, In re, 7 Ch. D. 26; 37 L. T. 768; 26 W. R. 193.

—— Order to Inspect Documents.]—In an action of trespass to land brought against the committee of a lunatic whose title-deeds are in the custody of the court having jurisdiction in lunacy, an order on the defendant for inspection of the documents ought not to be made, as they are not in his possession or control. Vivian v. Little, 32 L. J., Q. B. 771; 11 Q. B. D. 370; 48 L. T. 793; 31 W. R. 891; 47 J. P. 566.

Executors Defendants—Evidence—Effect of Inquisitions.]—Where, to an action against executors on the bond of their testator, they pleaded non est factum, and set up lunacy as a defence at the trial, an inquisition taken under a commission of lunacy against the testator, after the execution of the bond, finding that he had been a lunatic from a day antecedent to that, without any lucid interval, is admissible evidence. Faulder v. Silk, 3 Camp. 126.

b. LUNATIC NOT SO FOUND.

1. Plaintiff or Petitioner.

Next Friend.]—A bill may be filed by the next friend on behalf of a person of weak mind, and the fit subject for a commission of lunacy, his property being too small to bear the expense of a commission. Carr v. Boyce, 13 Ir. Eq. R. 102.

A bill may be filed in the name of a person alleged to be of unsound mind, though not so found by inquisition, by any one professing to be his next friend; and such a person may be sued as a defendant, and the court then appoints a guardian to answer for him. In such cases, the court imposes all the restraints of infancy, and the party is bound by the acts of the guardian so appointed. The court having proper evidence, that they are incapable of protecting their own interests, treats them as infants or as insane, though not so found by inquisition, and being satisfied that their next friend or guardian pays proper attention to their interests, and making all necessary inquiries to ascertain their rights, and what is beneficial to them; or, if necessary, directing that a commission may be applied for, ultimately deals with their rights and property as justice may require. Nelson v. Duncombe, 9 Beav. 211; 15 L. J., Ch. 296; 10 Jur. 339.

Suit instituted by an imbecile person in the name of her next friend. Wilkinson v. Harwood, 4 Jur. 957.

Jurisdiction of the court to entertain a suit instituted in the name of a person of weak mind by a next friend. Light v. Light, 25 Beav. 248.

Decree made in such a suit for the protection of the plaintiff's property, and liberty given to apply in lunacy as to its application. Ib.

A suit instituted by a next friend on behalf of a person of unsound mind, not so found by inquisition, becomes absolutely paralysed by a change in his status. Beall v. Smith, 43 L. J., Ch. 245; L. R. 9 Ch. 85; 29 L. T. 625.

If he becomes of sound mind there is no pretext for the continued intervention of the next friend; if he is found a lunatic by inquisition, and is thus placed under the protection of the crown, the suit should be continued only with the sanction of the court in lunacy. Ib.

—— Inquiry as to Capacity.]—Where an action has been commenced in the name of a person alleged to be of unsound mind not so found by a next friend, and such person denies that he is of unsound mind, and applies to have his name removed from the record, the court will direct an inquiry as to the competency of the person alleged to be of unsound mind. Howell v. Lewis, 61 L. J., Ch. 89; 65 L. T. 672; 40 W. R. 88.

—— Partition.]—An action for partition was brought, whereby the sale and distribution of the proceeds of certain real estate were asked for. One of the two plaintiffs was alleged to be a person of unsound mind not so found by inquisition, suing by his next friend. The defendant and the plaintiff said to be of unsound mind moved that the name of the person of unsound mind might be struck out:—Held that a person of unsound mind not so found may be plaintiff suing by his next friends in an action for the partition or sale of real estate. Porter v. Porter, 37 Ch. D. 420; 58 L. T. 688; 36 W. R. 580—C. A.

Under the Partition Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 17, s. 6), a person of unsound mind not so found by inquisition may, by his next friend, be plaintiff in an action instituted for the purpose of obtaining a sale. Watt v. Leach, 26 W. R. 475.

—— Bill filed by, to dispose of Real Estate.]—It is irregular for a bill to be filed by a person of unsound mind not so found by inquisition, by his next friend, for the purpose of dealing with the real estate of the person of unsound mind. Halfhyde v. Robinson, 43 L. J., Ch. 398; L. R. 9 Ch. 373; 30 L. T. 216; 22 W. R. 448.

A bill was filed by a person of unsound mind not so found, by his next friend, for a partition or sale of real estate, and a decree for sale was made. A petition was afterwards presented under the Trustee Act, 1852, for an order vesting the estate of the plaintiff in the purchaser. The court refused to make the order, considering that the suit was irregular, but as the plaintiff's share was only 200*l.*, and she had no other property, the court directed an application to be made in lunacy, under the Lunacy Regulation Act, 1862, s. 13, for a sale, and permitted the petition to be amended for that purpose. Ib.

—— Bill to avoid Lease.]—Bill to avoid a lease for that the lessor was a lunatic, the attorney-general must be a party. Leigh v. Wood, Rep. t. Finch, 135.

—— Action for Recovery of Land—Stay of Action as not beneficial to Plaintiff.]—An action for the recovery of land may be brought under Ord. XVI. r. 17, by the next friend of a person of unsound mind not so found by inquisition; and a writ issued in such an action by the next friend, in the name of the person of unsound mind is regular. But where the court is of opinion on the facts of the case that such action is not a beneficial one to the lunatic plaintiff, it will be stayed by the court on that ground. Waterhouse v. Worsnop, 59 L. T. 140.

—— Suit by—Change of Status.]—A suit instituted by a next friend on behalf of a person of unsound mind, not so found by inquisition, becomes absolutely paralysed by a change in his status. Beall v. Smith, 43 L. J., Ch. 245; L. R. 9 Ch. 85; 29 L. T. 625; 22 W. R. 121.

If he becomes of sound mind there is no pretext for the continued intervention of the next friend: if he is found a lunatic by inquisition, and is thus placed under the protection of the crown, the suit should be continued only with the sanction of the court in lunacy. Ib.

Every proceeding taken in the suit after the inquisition, whether or not a committee has been appointed, is irregular and void and a contempt of the court in lunacy. Ib.

—— —— Allegation of Insanity—Sanity of Lunatic established—Costs.]—M. filed a bill as next friend of P., whom he alleged to be of unsound mind. An application in lunacy was directed, and P.'s sanity was established. P. thereupon applied to have the bill taken off the file, which was ordered, but without any directions as to costs. P. moved the court of appeal to vary this order by directing the next friend to pay his costs as between solicitor and client, and the defendant moved to vary it by inserting a direction for the next friend to pay her costs:—Held, that P. was entitled to indemnity against all consequences of the suit having been instituted in his name, and that M. must pay P.'s costs as between solicitor and client of the application to the court below, and of P.'s appeal motion, and must pay the defendant's costs of the suit as between party and party, including the costs of motions in the court below and on appeal. Palmer v. Walesby, L. R. 3 Ch. 732; 16 W. R. 924.

—— Lunacy established — Leave to Committee to continue Action.]—Where the plaintiff, a person of unsound mind, not so found, suing by a next friend, becomes a lunatic, during the progress of the action, and a committee is appointed, the committee may obtain an order, under Ord. L. r. 4, for leave to continue the action. Green's Estate, In re, Green v. Pratt, 48 L. J., Ch. 681; 41 L. T. 30.

—— Affidavit of Documents.]—Where a plaintiff of unsound mind sues by a next friend, the defendant is entitled to an affidavit of documents, to be made by the next friend, or by someone acquainted with the facts. Higginson v. Hall, 48 L. J., Ch. 250; 10 Ch. D. 235; 39 L. T. 603; 27 W. R. 469.

Proceedings commenced by Solicitor on Behalf of Client alleged to be Lunatic—Misconduct—Costs.]—A solicitor is not prevented from taking legal proceedings on behalf of his client by the mere fact that to his knowledge a petition in lunacy for an inquiry into the state of mind of the client is pending, provided that he believes the client to be sane. The court will, however, in a proper case, when informed of the petition, stay the proceedings until the inquiry is completed. Hartley v. Gilbert (13 Sim. 596) and Beall v. Smith (43 L. J., Ch. 245; L. R. 9 Ch. 85) explained. Armstrong and Sons, In re, 65 L. J., Ch. 258; [1896] 1 Ch. 536; 74 L. T. 134; 44 W. R. 281.

A solicitor who was aware that a petition in lunacy against his client was pending, obtained on her behalf an order ex parte without disclosing the fact. He believed her to be sane, but she was subsequently found to be of unsound mind. Upon the order being discharged:—Held, that he had not been guilty of such professional misconduct as to make him liable for the costs. Ib.

Non-compliance with Order for Discovery—Incapacity arising after Writ.]—Where, after writ issued, the plaintiff became incapable of transacting business, and his brother, on his behalf, made an affidavit of documents and answered interrogatories, the defendant took out a summons to dismiss the action for non-compliance with orders to make an affidavit of documents, and to answer interrogatories; the plaintiff then took out a summons for leave to amend by adding a next friend:—Held, that the defendant was not entitled, under r. 21 of Ord. XXXI. of the Rules of Court, 1883, to have the action dismissed. The action still subsisted, and the plaintiff must have leave to amend by adding a next friend; the plaintiff to pay the costs of both summonses. Cardwell (Lord) v. Tomlinson, 54 L. J., Ch. 957; 52 L. T. 746; 33 W. R. 814.

Order for Protection of Property.]—Decree made for the protection of the plaintiff's property, and liberty given to apply in lunacy as to its application. Light v. Light, 25 Beav. 248.

Petitioner Deaf, Dumb and Blind—Dispensing with next Friend.]—A deaf, dumb and blind person petitioned for payment to herself of 7,000*l.*, carried to her separate account:—Held, that she might be a petitioner without a next friend, but the court declined, without special reasons assigned, to make an order for payment of more than the income for her benefit. Form of the order. Biddulph's and Poole's Trusts, In re, 5 De G. & Sm. 469.

Taking Bill off File.]—A bill may be taken off the file, if filed in the name of a plaintiff who is in a state of mental incapacity, semble. Wartnaby v. Wartnaby, Jac. 377.

Where one of several co-plaintiffs was of imbecile understanding at the time of the filing of the bill, and his name was used without authority, the court would not order the bill to be taken off the file. Aliter, if he were the sole plaintiff. Brangan v. Gorges, 7 Ir. Eq. R. 225.

Quære, could the court under such circumstances order the imbecile plaintiff's name to be struck out of the bill. Ib.

The court, upon the motion of a defendant, supported by affidavits, suggesting that the bill had been filed without any authority from the person named as the plaintiff, such person being so imbecile as to be unable to give any authority for the purpose, and that the suit was instituted for litigious purposes in the name of the plaintiff, but by another defendant in the suit, referred it to the master to inquire whether any authority was given by the plaintiff for the filing of the bill, and whether the institution of the suit was for his benefit, and whether it was for his advantage that the same should be prosecuted. On the master's reporting in the negative, and that the bill was filed under the authority of one of the defendants, the court ordered the bill to be taken off the file, and the costs of the other defendants to be paid by the defendant who had instituted the suit. Blake v. Smith, Younge, 594.

2. Defendant or Respondent.

(a) Guardian ad litem.

i. Appointment or Change, Proceedings for.

Jurisdiction to appoint.]—A guardian to an infant defendant of unsound mind, not so found by inquisition, should be appointed by the court of chancery, and not under the jurisdiction in lunacy. Pidcock v. Boultbee, 2 De G. —— The order appointing a solicitor to be the guardian ad litem of a lunatic not found so by commission, may be made under the twenty-eighth Order of October, 1842, on the application of the plaintiff, but it cannot be made without service of notice upon the alleged lunatic. Brooks v. Jobling, 2 Hare, 155 ; 8 Jur. 186.

Appointment without Commission.]—Guardian ad litem to lunatic defendant (not so found by inquisition) appointed without a commission. Piddocke v. Smith, 9 Hare, 395 ; 21 L. J., Ch. 359 ; 15 Jur. 1120.

J., Ch. 315 ; 5 Jur. 930.

Appointment of New Guardian.]—Where a guardian ad litem of a person of unsound mind, though not so found by inquisition, dies, a special application is necessary to obtain the appointment of a new guardian, and an appointment by an order of course is irregular. Needham v. Smith, 6 Beav. 130.

Sufficiency of Affidavit in Support of Application for Appointment.]—When one of the defendants in a suit was alleged to be of unsound mind, but had not been found to be so by commission, on an application by the plaintiff to appoint a guardian ad litem :—Held, that an affidavit of the plaintiff was insufficient which only referred to a statement in the answer of the other defendants in the suit alleging that the defendant to whom it was sought to appoint a guardian was "imbecile." Watson v. Knilans, 22 W. R. 639.

Service of Notice of Motion for Appointment.]—In an administration action commenced by originating summons when the defendant is a lunatic not so found by inquisition, and makes default in appearance, notice of motion for the appointment of a guardian ad litem should be served in the same manner as in the case of default of appearance to a writ of summons. Pepper, In re, Pepper v. Pepper, 50 L. T. 580 ; 32 W. R. 765.

Appointment improperly obtained.]—A plaintiff and his sister had given a mortgage to M., a solicitor, and the bill was filed against M. and the sister to have accounts taken of what was due, and for redemption. The sister was alleged to be of unsound mind though not found so by inquisition. The plaintiff's solicitor did not serve the bill on the sister, but, by the plaintiff's instructions, assumed to act for her, entered an appearance in her name, and obtained at the Rolls the appointment of a guardian ad litem. The appearance and the appointment of a guardian were discharged by Wickens, V.-C., on evidence that the sister had sufficient capacity to authorise a solicitor to act for her, and that she had authorised M. so to act :—Held, on appeal, that whether the capacity of the sister was proved or not, the order of the Vice-Chancellor was right, for that the appearance and the appointment of a guardian founded on it were irregular. Camps v. Marshall, L. R. 8 Ch. 462.

Co-defendants.]—A guardian ad litem to a defendant may, under circumstances rendering it necessary, be appointed at the instance of a co-defendant by analogy to r. 1 of Ord. Person resident out of Jurisdiction.]—The court would not appoint as guardian ad litem a party not resident within the kingdom where the party was found lunatic, in Ireland, and the committee a resident there:—Held, that the course was to have the Irish commission recorded in England under 1 Will. 4, c. 65, s. 41, and then for the lunatic and his committee to answer together. Hartland (Lady) v. Atcherley, 7 Beav. 53; 13 L. J., Ch. 122.

Senior Six-clerk.]—If the return to an attachment issued against a defendant for want of appearance, be, that the defendant is lunatic, the senior six-clerk not towards the cause will, on motion, be appointed guardian of the lunatic defendant, and be ordered to enter an appearance for him. Kitson v. Cutts, 9 L. Solicitor of Suitors' Fund.]—The solicitor of the suitors' fund, appointed under the twenty-eighth Order of October, 1842, guardian ad litem of a lunatic, not so found by inquisition. M'Keverakin v. Cort, 7 Beav. 347.

It is not absolutely necessary in the case of a defendant, a lunatic, but not found so by inquisition, that the solicitor to the suitors' fund be appointed his guardian for the purpose of his appearing to and answering the plaintiff's bill, but any other solicitor may be appointed his guardian who will undertake the duty of appearing to and answering the bill for the party. In the present case, the solicitor for the wife was appointed the guardian of the husband, on the production of an affidavit shewing that the husband had no interest adverse to the wife. Biddulph v. Dayrell, 15 L. J., Ch. 320.

If a defendant in the progress of a suit becomes insane, it is the practice to appoint the solicitor to the suitors' fund guardian ad litem, when the application for the appointment of guardian is made by the plaintiff; but if that application is made by the family of the defendant, the court will appoint any one whom the family may select, on being satisfied of his fitness for the office. Charlton v. West, 30 L. J., Ch. 815; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 614; 4 L. T. 455; 9 W. R. 511.

Solicitor.]—On an application to appoint a solicitor guardian ad litem to a defendant of unsound mind, not so found, the court required to be first satisfied that no relative would undertake the defence. Moore v. Platel, 7 Beav. 583.

—— The court refused to appoint the plaintiff's solicitor guardian ad litem of a lunatic defendant. Biddulph v. Camoys (Lord), 9 Beav. 548; 10 Jur. 485.

In appointing such guardian, the court will not interfere with his discretion. Ib.

On an application that the solicitor of a feme covert might be appointed, under the thirty-second Order of 1845, guardian to defend her husband, who was a lunatic, the court required evidence that the husband and wife had no adverse interests. Ib.

The court refused to appoint the solicitor of a trustee his guardian ad litem to put in an answer to a bill of complaint filed against him, though from age and infirmity he was incapable of transacting business. Patrick v. Andrews, 22 L. J., Ch. 240; 1 W. R. 96.

Son.]—Where an aged defendant was imbecile, and incapable of attending to business, his son, a co-defendant, but whose interest in the subject-matter of the suit was not adverse to that of his father, was appointed his guardian ad litem. Newman v. Selfe, 8 L. T. 487; 11 W. R. 764.

The defendant being of unsound mind, though not so found by inquisition, the court, on motion ex parte, appointed his son guardian ad litem, upon an affidavit averring that there was no conflict of interest between the father and son. Dobbin v. Billing, Ir. R. 6 Eq. 623.

Brother.]—Where a defendant was a lunatic, not so found by inquisition, the court, on an application of the plaintiff, appointed his brother, who was a co-defendant, but had no adverse interest, his guardian ad litem. Bonfield v. Grant, 11 W. R. 275.

iii. In What Cases.

Committee One of Plaintiffs.]—Committee of lunatic defendant being one of plaintiffs, guardian appointed. Snell v. Hyat, Dick. 287.

Insanity after Decree.]—Defendant becoming insane after decree, guardian appointed. Gason v. Garnier, Dick. 286.

To put in Examination.]—Guardian appointed for defendant to put in his examination, he being incapable. Att.-Gen. v. Waddington, 1 Madd. 321.

Infant Heir-at-Law.]—Whether it is necessary for any purpose in lunacy, that an infant heir-at-law should appear by a testamentary or legal guardian, or whether there is any process in lunacy by which a legal guardian can be appointed, quære. Brown, In re, 1 Mac. & G. 201.

Property of small Value.]—One, through a great age, being deprived of his memory, and become almost non compos mentis, was admitted to answer by his guardian, in regard the demand in question was but small; but had the value been considerable, the regular way had been to have taken out a commission of lunacy, and have gotten a committee assigned. Per Lord Talbot. Anon., cited in Sheldon v. Fortescue Aland, 3 P. W. 111, n.

Refusal of Court to appoint Guardian—Default in putting in Answer.]—Where defendants had taken no proceedings until the last day allowed for putting in their answer, when they obtained an order for further time, but afterwards obtained the appointment of a guardian ad litem, on the ground that they were of unsound mind, the court refused an application of the plaintiff, under the thirty-second Order of May, 1845, to appoint a guardian for them, on the ground that they were in default for want of answer. Saunders v. Walter, 2 Hall. & Tw. 199; 19 L. J., Ch. 409.

—— Bad Health only.]—Where a defendant, in consequence of bad health only, and not from any mental incapacity, is unable to put in his answer, the proper course is to apply to the master for further time: and the Lord Chancellor discharged an order made by the Vice-Chancellor Knight Bruce, that a defendant so circumstanced might have a guardian assigned him for the purpose of putting in his answer. Willyams v. Hodge, 1 Mac. & G. 516; 1 Hall. & Tw. 575; 19 L. J., Ch. 196.

When a defendant, not required to put in an answer, was a person of great age, and had been afflicted with a paralytic stroke, and was incapable of giving a continuous attention to business, but whose health was not absolutely destroyed, the court declined to appoint a guardian to act for him in the suit, but intimated that if in the course of the cause it became necessary to obtain his consent to an arrangement or a compromise, it might be necessary to appoint a guardian. Steel v. Cobb, 1 N. R. 302; 11 W. R. 298.

—— Committee—Leave to Defend.]—A lunatic was made a defendant as one of the next of kin of an intestate. He and his committee presented a petition, intituled in the suit and also in the lunacy, praying that the lunatic might defend by his guardian, and that the committee might be appointed such guardian. The committee prayed, that, as such, he might be at liberty to prosecute the claim of the lunatic as next of kin, and that all such costs as should be properly incurred, and as should not be paid out of the estate to be administered in the suit, might be raised and paid out of the lunatic's estate. The court gave liberty to the committee to defend the suit, but refused to appoint a guardian as being unnecessary, or to make any prospective order as to costs, and directed the title in the cause to be struck out. Manson, In re, 21 L. J., Ch. 249.

Imbecility and Old Age.]—Where an aged defendant was imbecile, and incapable of attending to business, his son, a co-defendant, but whose interest in the subject-matter of the suit was not adverse to that of his father, was appointed his guardian ad litem. Newman v. Selfe, 8 L. T. 487; 11 W. R. 764.

(b) Other Matters.

—— Insufficiency of.]—A plaintiff cannot except for insufficiency to the answer of a defendant of unsound mind, but who had answered by his guardian, against whom a commission of lunacy has not issued. Micklethwaite v. Atkinson, 1 Coll. C. C. 173.

Necessity for Appointment of Guardian—Service of Writ—Non-appearance of Defendant.]—When the writ of summons in an action has been served upon a defendant to the action, being a person of unsound mind not so found by inquisition, in manner provided in that behalf by Ord. XIII. r. 1, and the defendant does not appear, the action can proceed (at all events if the defendant is only a formal party) under Ord. XIII. r. 9, as if such party had appeared, and it is not imperative on the plaintiff to apply for the appointment of a guardian to such defendant. Taylor v. Pede, 44 L. T. 514; 29 W. R. 627.

Service of Decree.]—Lunatic defendant, not found so by inquisition. Service of copy decree must be personal on him. Anon., 2 Jur. (N.S.) 324.

Service on Medical Officer of Asylum.]—When the medical officer of an asylum refused to allow service of a bill in equity on a lunatic who was not so found by inquisition, the court allowed substituted service on the medical officer. Raine v. Wilson, 43 L. J., Ch. 469; L. R. 16 Eq. 576; 29 L. T. 51.

After appearance, but before answer, one of the defendants became lunatic, and to enable the plaintiff to bring on his cause to a hearing, an order was obtained by him appointing the solicitor to the suitors' fee fund his solicitor. An answer was then put in for this defendant, submitting his interests to the court. Before the hearing the lunatic defendant became sane, but took no step to discharge the order. At the hearing, a question arose as to who was to pay the costs of the solicitor to the fee fund:—Held, that the defendant was bound to pay these costs, and add them to his own costs of suit. Frampton v. Webb, 2 N. R. 547; 9 L. T. 114; 11 W. R. 1018.

Refusal to appear.]—The statute 7 Geo. 2, c. 14, enabling plaintiffs to proceed where defendants refuse to appear, does not apply to defendants labouring under incompetency, as idiotcy, &c. Carew v. Johnston, 2 Sch. & Lef. 292.

Equitable Defence—Set-off.]—Auctioneers are employed to sell by the agents of a committee of a lunatic, and they hand over the proceeds of such sale to such agents, partly by the direction of committee. The lunatic dies, and his representative brings an action of assumpsit for the proceeds of sale against the auctioneers. To this action pleas of payment by the direction of the committee, and the application of the moneys for the benefit of the lunatic, are put in. Upon a bill filed to restrain that action and a motion for an injunction :—Held, that the payment, being a question of fact, could be tried at law, and the question of privity and set-off did not affect the question, the Common Law Procedure Act giving defendants in an action a greater liberty than they before had to resist it on equitable grounds. Proceedings in lunacy are as distinct from proceedings in chancery as chancery from common law. Farebrother v. Welchman, 3 Drew. 122 ; 3 Eq. R. 383 ; 24 L. J., Ch. 410 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 126 ; 3 W. R. 257.

Allegation of Insanity—Sufficiency of.]—A charge in the bill that A. "was of a weak and feeble understanding, approaching almost to idiotcy," was an allegation sufficiently precise (no demurrer being taken), to put in issue that A. was "of insane memory." It being proved that A "was incapable of managing himself or his affairs," he was held to be within the saving of the statute 7 Geo. 2, c. 14, s. 8. But this allegation would not have been sufficiently precise on a plea, nor on a bill, if demurred to. The heir of the mortgagor may take advantage of the saving in s. 8 of the statute. Carew v. Johnston, 2 Sch. & Lef. 280.

Evidence—Action for Account.]—A. kept cash with B., a banker, and the balances to his credit were stated from time to time in a pass-book. A. became a lunatic, but the account continued to be kept with his family, and in the pass-book, the entries in which were in B.'s handwriting, a balance was stated to the credit of A. :—Held, that this was not evidence to support an account stated with A., in an action brought by his representative against B. to recover the amount of such balance. Turbuck v. Bispham, 2 M. & W. 2 ; 6 L. J., Ex. 49.

—— Action to perpetuate Testimony—Costs of Evidence to substantiate Will.]—A lunatic, so found by inquisition, had made two wills before the finding. Upon the petition of the committee of the estate, it was ordered that such costs as the master should think proper of a suit to perpetuate testimony as to the wills should be paid out of the lunatic's estate, the suit being instituted with the approbation of the master. Tayleur, In re, L. R. 6 Ch. 416 ; 19 W. R. 462.

A bill will not lie to perpetuate the testimony of witnesses to a lunatic's will in his lifetime, made before his lunacy. Sackville v. Aylesworth, 1 Vern. 105.

Information—Relator.]—In an information at the relation of a lunatic, a proper relator was directed to be appointed, who might be responsible for the costs of the suit. Att.-Gen. v. Tyler, 2 Eden, 230 ; Dick. 378.

Demurrer.]—A bill praying for an account for delivery up of property, for a receiver, and for an injunction pending a suit in the Ecclesiastical Court to recall probate of the will, will lie at the suit of one of the next of kin of a lunatic against the executors and one of the legatees in a will fraudulently obtained by them from the lunatic ; and a demurrer for want of equity by the defendant, the legatee overruled, on the ground that the bill alleges fraud, and that the demurring defendant was a legatee under the will which was impeached. Dimes v. Steinberg, 2 Sm. & G. 75.

Where a bill was brought to have a guarantee delivered up on the ground of fraud, and A. and his wife were made parties to the bill upon an allegation that the wife was concerned in a conspiracy to defeat the guarantee, and no act was alleged against the husband, but it was stated that he was imbecile :—Held, that a demurrer to the bill by the husband was sustainable. Price v. Chippendale, 4 Y. & C. 469.

Specific Performance—Mental Incapacity of conveying Party.]—A demurrer will not lie to a bill for specific performance of an agreement to buy land, on the ground that the present mental incapacity of a necessary party to the conveyance, to join therein and concur in a parol variation of the original written contract appears on the face of the bill. Beaufort (Duke) v. Glynn, 23 W. R. 463, 502.

Lunatic necessary Party.]—A lunatic must be a party to a suit for his own benefit, otherwise perhaps in case of an idiot. Att.-Gen. v. Woolrich, 1 Ch. Ca. 153.

Where the suit is to be relieved against an act done by the lunatic as assigning a debt, he need not be a party. Att.-Gen. v. Smith, 1 Ch. Ca. 113.

Subpœna.]—A senseless dumb man is not to answer upon subpœna. Altham v. Smith, Cary, 93.

Partition—Parties—Costs.]—To a suit for partition of property one undivided share of which was vested in a lunatic tenant in tail in possession, with remainder to an infant tenant in tail, with remainder to a married woman in tail, with remainders over, the persons interested in remainder after the lunatic and infant tenants in tail were made defendants, and they by their answers claimed such interest in the undivided share as they were alleged to have by the bill :—Held, that the persons so named as defendants were not unnecessary parties to the suit ; and that, having regard to the remoteness and uncertainty of their interest in the property, their costs up to the decree on the hearing should be a charge on the property, which should be allotted in severalty in respect of the undivided share in which they were so interested. Singleton v. Hopkins, 25 L. J., Ch. 50 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1199 ; 4 W. R. 107.

—— Form of Decree.]—Where one of the parties entitled to land, the subject of a partition suit, is a person of unsound mind, the proper form of decree, after allotting portions in severalty and directing conveyances by the other parties is to declare the person of unsound mind a trustee for the other parties of the portions allotted to them. Moorehead v. Moorehead, Ir. R. 2 Eq. 492.

Property vested in Lunatic Trustee—Transfer by Committee—Petition for.]—A petition praying that the committee of a lunatic may be ordered to transfer property vested in the lunatic as a trustee ought to be entitled in the lunacy, and need not be entitled in the matter of the Act which authorises the Lord Chancellor to make the order. Fowler, In re, 2 Russ. 449.

19 & 20 Vict. c. 120.]—The service of notice, of an intended application under the act to facilitate leases and sales of settled estates, upon a person of unsound mind, not so found by inquisition, who had only a remote contingent interest in the property, was dispensed with, there being others in the same interest who concurred. Franklin's Settled Estate, In re, 7 W. R. 45.

VII. WILLS.

Testamentary Capacity—Weakness of Mind.]—Weakness of mind and forgetfulness are not sufficient to invalidate a will, if it is proved that the mind of testator was, when called to exertion, capable of attention and application. Tufnell v. Constable, 3 Knapp, 122.

—— Insane Delusions—Medical Evidence—Onus probandi when Commission of Lunacy has been issued and not superseded at Date of Will.]—When a testator has been found to be of unsound mind under a commission of lunacy, which commission has not been superseded, the legal presumption is against the validity of any testamentary instrument, and the onus of proving the soundness of mind of the testator is imposed on the person setting up the instrument. East India Co. v. Dyce Sombre, 4 W. R. 714—P. C.

Under such circumstances it is competent to the party setting up a testamentary instrument to maintain either that the testator was always of sound mind; or, that though he may have been formerly of unsound mind, he had completely recovered; or, that the will was made during a lucid interval. Ib.

In such a case, where unsoundness of mind has been before proved, though previous circumstances are entitled to some weight, the true inquiry is, whether the deceased testator had entirely recovered, or was of sound mind at the time of giving instructions for and the execution of the instrument in question. Ib.

A will and codicil made and executed under such circumstances, when it was clearly proved that at the time of their execution the insane delusions of the testator which existed at the time the commission of lunacy was issued, still continued to exist, were held by the judicial committee of the privy council, affirming the judgment of the prerogative court, to be invalid. The circumstances of the case being deemed to be such as to make it essential to the purposes of justice that the validity of the testamentary instruments should be submitted to judicial decision, the appellants (the executor of the parties interested under the will) were allowed one set of costs between them out of the estate, including the costs of the appeal. Ib.

Validity—Lucid Interval.]—A testator, who had been in confinement as a lunatic between the years 1815 and 1817, executed his will in 1820. He was again placed in confinement in 1822. In November, 1838, a commission in the nature of a writ de lunatico inquirendo was issued, and the testator was found, in January, 1839, a lunatic without any lucid interval from the 1st August, 1815. Will pronounced for. Difference between imbecility or idiotcy and delusion in respect of acts of business observed upon. The witnesses against the will deposed to a case of idiotcy. Bannatyne v. Bannatyne, 2 Rob. Ec. Rep. 472; 16 Jur. 864.

VIII. CONVERSION, ADEMPTION, ELECTION.

Conversion—Sale of Real Estate—16 & 17 Vict. c. 70, s. 124.]—Money realised by the sale of real estate sold under s. 124 of the 16 & 17 Vict. c. 70, is personalty in the hands of the heir. Wheeler, In re, 4 De G. F. & J. 540; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 785; 6 L. T. 846.

A., B. and C. were tenants in common in fee of land. C. became of unsound mind. A. and B. sold part of the land, and conveyed their shares to a purchaser. They also granted a lease of the minerals under other parts, and demised their shares to the lessee, in consideration of a gross sum of money payable by instalments, called in the lease rent, within a limited time. In both deeds they covenanted that C. should concur, and that they would hold her share of the moneys payable in trust for her. B. afterwards became also of unsound mind, and A. sold other parts of the land, and granted leases of minerals under other parts for a like consideration, covenanting in like manner that B. and C. should concur, and that he would hold their shares of the moneys payable in trust for them. B. and C. were both found lunatic by inquisition; and the court confirmed the sales and leases, and ordered the committee to execute the deeds. C. died, leaving B. her heir-at-law and sole next of kin. Afterwards B. died also:—Held, that the leases were in the nature of absolute sales of portions of the real estate; that the confirmation of the sales and leases were sales under the Lunacy Regulation Act, 1853, s. 124, and that as between the real and personal representatives of B. the proceeds both of the sales and the leases effected after B. became of unsound mind belonged to her heir-at-law as real estate. Smith, In re, L. R. 10 Ch. 79; 23 W. R. 297.

Held, also, that as to the shares both of B. and C. in the proceeds of the sale and lease in which B. concurred they were converted into personalty, and belonged to B.'s next of kin. Ib.

—— —— Subsequent Lunacy of Beneficiary.]—On the 21st May, 1879, P. N. died intestate, leaving M. H. P. one of four co-heiresses-at-law. On 18th February, 1880, an action was brought asking for sale of P. N.'s real estate in lieu of partition. On the 15th June, 1880, an order was made for sale. The sale took place on the 30th August, 1880, and the proceeds of sale were carried to the credit of the action, "proceeds of the sale of the testator's real estate." On the 22nd April, 1882, by the order on further consideration in the said action, one-fourth part of the money standing to that account was ordered to be paid to M. H. P., subject to duty. M. H. P. left the money in court, and took no steps concerning it. On the 14th January, 1884, by an order made on a petition presented in lunacy, T. was authorised to apply to the Chancery Division for a transfer of the said one-fourth, amounting to 434*l.* 17*s.* 9*d.*, to the account of M. H. P., a person of unsound mind, "proceeds of the sale of the real estate of P. N.," and the transfer was made accordingly. M. H. P. died on the 10th June, 1884:—Held, that there being no evidence that M. H. P. was of unsound mind at the date of the sale and the order for payment to her, the fund then ordered to be paid to her belonged to her absolutely without any trust or equity for re-conversion, and went on her death to her personal representatives. Pickard, In re, Turner v. Nicholson, 53 L. T. 293.

—— Proceeds of Sale — Real and Personal Representatives.]—Where the real estate of a lunatic has been sold, the proceeds of the sale are, as between the real and personal representatives of the lunatic, to be treated for the purpose of transmission as realty; but for other purposes the proceeds are to be considered as personalty, so that the same will be paid out of court to the husbands of married women, who were the real representatives, with their consent, as personalty, and without their executing a deed under the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74. Trevylyan, In re, 31 L. J., Ch. 560; 10 W. R. 828.

—— —— Land Acquired by Descent.]—Proceeds of sale of a lunatic's land acquired by descent will not by virtue of ss. 124 and 135 of the Lunacy Regulation Act, 1853, be treated as land acquired by the lunatic by purchase. Matson, In re, James v. Dickinson, 66 L. J., Ch. 695; [1897] 2 Ch. 509; 77 L. T. 69.

—— Transfer to Married Woman.]—Under the 16 & 17 Vict. c. 70, ss. 124 and 125, a married co-heiress of a deceased intestate lunatic can consent in court to the payment of her share of the proceeds of the lunatic's real estate to her husband, and an acknowledged deed is unnecessary. Wheeler, In re, 4 De G. F. & J. 540; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 785; 6 L. T. 846.

—— Sale of Stock-in-Trade.] — Testator, having made his will, became lunatic, but no commission was sued out; his wife and friends disposed of his business and stock-in-trade, and invested the proceeds in the funds:—Held, that at his death the sum invested would pass to the legatee entitled to the stock-in-trade, and not to the residuary legatee. Taylor v. Taylor, 17 Jur. 583; 21 L. T. 213; 1 W. R. 198, 398.

—— Contract — Purchase-money.] — Where, before inquisition of lunacy, a person who was found a lunatic has made a purchase, with the approbation of his only son, the court will not change the disposition that has been made of this sum of money, but the purchase will stand. Sergeson v. Sealey, 2 Atk. 412; 9 Mod. 370.

Ademption—Mortgage by Court—Will—Proviso in Mortgage Deed altering Effect of Will.]—The court, under the powers of the Lunacy Regulation Act, mortgaged one of the lunatic's estates, and introduced a proviso that as between the lunatic, his heirs and devisees, the estate should be primarily liable for the mortgage debt. The lunatic had, before his lunacy, made a will, in which he had directed certain devised estates (not including the mortgaged estate) to be sold for payment of his debts:—Held, in the administration of his estate, that the proviso in the mortgage deed was not intended to alter the effect of the will, and that the mortgage debt must be primarily paid out of the devised estates. Quære, whether the court would have had the power to make a proviso altering the effect of the will. Freeman v. Ellis, 1 H. & M. 758; 3 N. R. 243.

—— Specific Bequest of Shares—Sale by Order of Court.]—A testator bequeathed the income of certain shares specifically, and bequeathed the shares to his residuary legatee. After the date of the will he was found a lunatic, and by an order in the lunacy the shares were directed to be sold, and the proceeds were invested in consols:—Held, that as the provisions of the 16 & 17 Vict. c. 70, whereby the rights of owners of property sold by order of the Lord Chancellor in lunacy are preserved, extend only to land, the gift of income was adeemed by the sale, and the sum of consols fell into the residue. Jones v. Green, 37 L. J., Ch. 603; L. R. 5 Eq. 555; 16 W. R. 603.

—— A testator made a specific bequest of stock in the G. railway company. After the date of his will he was found a lunatic. Under an order in the lunacy, the stock was sold and the proceeds were invested in a sum of consols, which was carried to the credit of the lunatic to an account intituled "Proceeds of the sale of stock in the G. railway company." In an action for the administration of the testator's estate:—Held, that the specific legacy was adeemed by the sale in the lunacy, and that the consols therefore fell into the residue. Observations on Jones v. Green (L. R. 5 Eq. 555), and Leeming, In re (3 De. G. F. & J. 43). Freer, In re, Freer v. Freer, 52 L. J., Ch. 301; 22 Ch. D. 622; 31 W. R. 426.

A bequest of consols standing in the name of a testatrix at her death is not adeemed by a transfer of the same during her life into the name of the paymaster-general under an order in lunacy. Wood, In re, Anderson v. City of London Mission, 63 L. J., Ch. 772; [1894] 2 Ch. 577; 8 R. 817.

The bequest does not take effect upon consols by order of the court purchased on behalf of the lunatic testatrix, and which never stood in her name. Ib.

A sale by order of the court of a portion of stock in court, directed for payment of costs, was treated as a sale of part of the stock purchased as above-mentioned, so as not to injure the rights of the legatees. Ib.

Election—Sale of Land for Payment of Mortgage—Surplus Money.]—Under 11 Geo. 4 and 1 Will. 4, c. 65, authorising moneys to be raised by sales or mortgages of lunatics' estates, and providing that the lunatic's heirs, next of kin, &c., shall have the like interest in the surplus moneys so raised as they would have had in the estate if it had not been so dealt with, and that such moneys shall be of the same nature as the estate:—Held, that where the lunatic's heir had died also a lunatic and without having elected to take such surplus moneys as personalty, they were impressed with the character of realty. Wharton, In re, 5 De G. M. & G. 33; 23 L. J., Ch. 522; 18 Jur. 289; 22 L. T. 298; 2 W. R. 248.

IX. LUNATIC IN MISCELLANEOUS RELATIONS.

a. ADVOWSON.

The 28th section of the act 1 Will. 4, c. 65, confers no power to sell the right to the next presentation to a rectory of the advowson of which a lunatic is tenant in tail in possession, except for one of the purposes specified in the section. Vavasour, In re, 3 Mac. & G. 275 ; 20 L. J., Ch. 619.

b. BANKRUPT.

Act of Bankruptcy.]—Semble, a lunatic cannot commit an act of bankruptcy by omitting to pay or give security. Stamp, Ex parte, Spence, In re, 1 De G. 345.

A judgment debtor not appearing to a summons issued under s. 76 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, the reason of his absence being that he was in confinement in a private lunatic asylum, was adjudicated bankrupt under s. 83, it appearing that he had whilst in confinement executed a trust-deed under s. 192. Farr, Ex parte, Kulp, In re, 10 L. T. 44.

Commission in Bankruptcy — Defence.]—Lunacy is no defence against a commission of bankruptcy, as it would not be so against an action. Anon., 13 Ves. 590.

Petition for Liquidation, by whom signed.]—A liquidation petition cannot be signed by a next friend on behalf of a lunatic not so found by inquisition. Semble, that in the case of a lunatic so found by inquisition, the court of lunacy might have jurisdiction to direct that a liquidation petition should be signed on his behalf. Cahen, Ex parte, 10 Ch. D. 183 ; 39 L. T. 645 ; 27 W. R. 387—C. A.

Bankruptcy Petition—Affidavit.]—When the petitioning creditor is lunatic so found by inquisition, the affidavit verifying the petition may be sworn by the committee of the lunatic. Brady, In re, 19 L. R., Ir. 71.

Leave to Committee to file Declaration of Insolvency.]—Where it appears to be for the benefit of a lunatic that he should be made bankrupt, the court will give leave to the committee in the name of the lunatic to file a declaration of insolvency, or to present a bankruptcy petition under the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, s. 4 (f). James, In re, 53 L. J., Q. B. 575 ; 12 Q. B. D. 332 ; 50 L. T. 471—C. A.

Leave to Committee to take Proceedings to annul Bankruptcy—Benefit of Lunatic.]—The court in lunacy will not authorise the committee of a bankrupt lunatic to apply in the bankruptcy for payment to him of moneys of the lunatic which are in the hands of the trustee in bankruptcy, or to take proceedings to annul the adjudication, where such proceedings are likely to fail and would not be for the benefit of the lunatic. Farnham, In re, 65 L. J., Ch. 456 ; [1896] 1 Ch. 836 ; 74 L. T. 214 ; 44 W. R. 465 ; 3 Manson, 123 ; 60 J. P. 389—C. A.

Leave to Committee to consent to Adjudication.]—Leave given to the committee of the estate of a lunatic trader to consent to an adjudication in bankruptcy against the lunatic. Lee, In re, 23 Ch. D. 216 ; 48 L. T. 193 ; 31 W. R. 802.

Jurisdiction of Judge in Lunacy.]—Quære, whether a person found lunatic by inquisition can be adjudicated a bankrupt, otherwise than under the direction of the committee acting under the order of the judge in lunacy. Where a lunatic so found by inquisition was subsequently adjudicated a bankrupt, the lords justices, assuming that the adjudication was valid, and in exercise of the power given by ss. 117, 120 of the Lunacy Act, 1890, to dispose of the lunatic's property for his maintenance and otherwise, refused to hand over to the trustee in bankruptcy certain property of the lunatic in court which had been originally claimed by the committee, the wife of the lunatic, as a gift to her prior to the inquisition, but which gift was void under s. 47 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, by reason of its having been made within two years of the adjudication in bankruptcy. The gift being void, the property reverted to the donor, i.e. the lunatic, and as such it vested in the trustee subject to the jurisdiction of the judge in lunacy. Sanguinetti v. Stuckey's Banking Co. ([1895] 1 Ch. 176), approved. Farnham, In re, 64 L. J., Ch. 717 ; [1895] 2 Ch. 799 ; 12 R. 554 ; 73 L. T. 231 ; 3 Manson, 109—C. A.

Contingent Interest in Fund—Concealment—Payment into Court—Transfer to Insolvency Account.]—In 1854 a person entitled to a contingent future interest in a fund took the benefit of the Insolvent Act, but did not mention this interest in his schedule. In 1876 the contingent interest vested in possession. In the same year he was found lunatic, and shortly afterwards an order was made giving the holder of the fund liberty to pay it into court to the credit of the lunacy, and directing it to be invested and the income paid to the committee. Shortly afterwards the provisional assignee presented a petition in the lunacy, praying that the fund might be transferred to the credit of the insolvency, or that he might be at liberty to take proceedings in the chancery division for its recovery. The court ordered a transfer of the fund as prayed. Hinds, In re, 7 Ch. D. 26 ; 37 L. T. 768 ; 26 W. R. 193—C. A.

c. AGENT OR ATTORNEY.

Revocation of Power of Attorney.]—A., a creditor of B. & C., gives D. a general power of attorney for the management of his affairs, dated 4th July, 1834, under which D. consents to an arrangement between B. & C. on the dissolution of their partnership, that C. should become solely responsible for A.'s debt ; that being still unpaid, C. becomes bankrupt, B. remaining solvent ; and D. proves the debt against the separate estate of C. After the fiat, A. is found to have been lunatic since 1st July, 1834. On petition to expunge, on the ground that D.'s adoption of C. as sole debtor was under a void power, and without authority, and that B. remained solvent, and therefore liable :—Held, that the proof was properly made ; lunacy is not per se a revocation of power of attorney. Bradbury, Ex parte, Walden, In re, Mont. & C. 625 ; 4 Deac. 202 ; 9 L. J., Bk. 7 ; 3 Jur. 1108.

d. WITNESS.

Competency.]—A lunatic under confinement in a lunatic asylum is admissible as a witness if the judge considers him competent in point of understanding, and to be aware of the nature and sanctity of an oath. Reg. v. Hill, 2 Den. C. C. 254; T. & M. 582; 20 L. J., M. C. 222; 15 Jur. 470.

A habeas corpus ad testificandum may be obtained to bring up the body of a confined lunatic to give evidence in a cause, upon an affidavit shewing that he is not a dangerous lunatic, and that he is in a fit state to be brought up. Fennell v. Tait, 1 C. M. & R. 584; 5 Tyrw. 218; 3 D. P. C. 161.

—— To make Affidavit.]—The jurat of an affidavit sworn by a person suffering from monomania, and confined in a lunatic asylum, should state the fact that it was sworn in an asylum, otherwise it is irregular, and will be taken off the file. Spittle v. Walton, 40 L. J., Ch. 368; L. R. 11 Eq. 420; 24 L. T. 18; 19 W. R. 405.

Before the evidence of a lunatic, subject to insane hallucinations, can be received there must be an inquiry as to his mental condition. Ib.

e. INSURANCE.

Policy of Insurance—Suicide of Lunatic.]—A policy of insurance is not rendered void by the suicide of the assured while in a state of insanity. Horn v. Anglo-Australian and Universal Family Life Insurance Co., 30 L. J., Ch. 511; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 673; 4 L. T. 142; 9 W. R. 359.

f. DOMICIL.

H., a Scotchman by birth, after a service of 40 years in India, became insane, and was sent to England on leave. He never recovered his faculties, and died in England:—Held, that his domicil was Anglo-Indian. Hepburn v. Skirving, 9 W. R. 764.

g. PAYMENTS TO.

Payment out of Court on Lunacy of Plaintiff.]—A defendant, being sued for a sum which he admitted to be due to the plaintiff, paid the money into court under a judge's order. The plaintiff, before and at the time of action and of the application, was suffering from temporary derangement, and an inmate of Bethlehem Hospital; but no commission of inquiry into the state of his mind had been issued, and no committee of his estate or person had been appointed. On application by his wife, the court ordered the money to be paid out to her or to the plaintiff's attorney in the action. Gliddan v. Treble, 9 C. B. (N.S.) 367; 30 L. J., C. P. 160. S. P., Rock v. Slade, 7 D. P. C. 22; 1 Arn. 346; 2 Jur. 993.

X. INSANITY IN RELATION TO CRIME.

See CRIMINAL LAW.

XI. ILL-TREATMENT OF LUNATICS.

XII. EVIDENCE OF INSANITY.

Presumption, as to Sanity.]—The ordinary presumption of sanity is removed by an inquisition finding a person to be of unsound mind; and, in the case of a contract subsequently entered into by him, the burthen of proof is shifted; but the finding, being usually ex parte, is not conclusive, and the court has jurisdiction (which, however, it will be slow in exercising) to arrive at a contrary conclusion without the aid of another party. Hassard v. Smith, Ir. R. 6 Eq. 429.

Inquisition — Finding of Insanity — Lucid interval—Onus of Proof.]—General lunacy being established, the proof is thrown upon the party alleging a lucid interval, and he must establish, beyond a mere cessation of violent symptoms, a restoration of mind sufficient to enable the party soundly to judge of the act. Hall v. Warren, 9 Ves. 611; 7 R. R. 306.

—— Presumption of Sanity destroyed—Third Parties.]—Though the finding of a person's insanity by inquisition upon a commission of lunacy, is not binding on third parties, still it destroys the natural presumption in favour of sanity, and casts the burden of proving the person's sanity on the party alleging it. As to the difficulties in ascertaining a man's sanity, and the proper tests to be employed. Snook v. Watts, 11 Beav. 105; 12 Jur. 444.

—— Not conclusive as to Date of Commencement.]—An inquisition of lunacy is not conclusive evidence of the precise date at which the lunacy commenced. Bradbury, Ex parte, Walden, In re, Mont. & C. 625; 4 Deac. 202; 9 L. J., Bk. 7; 3 Jur. 1108.

—— —— Leave to traverse—Primâ facie Evidence of Insanity rebutted.]—An inquisition finding a person lunatic is primâ facie evidence of insanity, but where leave has been granted to traverse the same, this, in part, rebuts the evidence, and entitles a creditor to an issue to try the question of the party's sanity on a day on which a deed, subsequent to the finding, and objected to as invalid by reason of insanity, has been executed by the lunatic. Elliot v. Luce, 7 De G. M. & G. 475; 26 L. J., Ch. 821; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 597; 5 W. R. 465.

—— Finding of Sanity—Not conclusive.]—A commission of idiotcy and inquisition returned thereon, finding the party not to be of unsound mind, is not conclusive evidence of his sanity; but in this case the commission, inquisition, and return, together with a fine, præcipe, and concord, and caption of the said fine, and warrant of attorney, and the caption thereof, were held to be conclusive evidence of the sanity of Lord Ely to make a warrant of attorney and suffer a recovery, the issue upon his sanity being joined after his death, and the warrant of attorney and caption thereof, appearing to have been made, and acknowledged before the chief justice of the chancery bench at the time that the caption of the fine was taken and acknowledged by and before him, and the tenant to the præcipe, in said recovery being made, by fine levied by Lord Ely. Hume v. Burton, 1 Ridgw. 204.

The writ dum non fuit compos lies only for privies in blood, and not for privies in estate. Ib., 232.

Relative Value of Evidence.]—Fits of mania extending for twenty years anterior to, and down to the year in which deeds were executed by a man found some years afterwards, by commission de lunatico, to have been all along insane are not an answer to a primâ facie case on an issue as to his sanity at the time of executing the deeds. Ferguson v. Borrett, 1 F. & F. 613.

Conduct before and after contract—Admissibility.]—A contract having been made between the plaintiff, who was insane, and the defendant, which it was sought to set aside:—Held, upon an issue whether the defendant had notice of such insanity, that evidence was admissible of the plaintiff's conduct both before and after the signing of the contract, in order to shew that the character of his disease was such that it must have developed itself to one having the opportunity of observation afforded to the defendant, though a stranger. Beavan v. M'Donnell, 10 Ex. 184; 23 L. J., Ex. 326.

Partial Insanity.]—A deed was executed by a person who at the time was insane upon particular subjects. Quære, whether the jury, being satisfied of the existence of the morbid feeling at the time of the execution of the deed, though not then called into activity, are at liberty to say, that as the lunatic was reasonable in all other respects his deed was valid. Quære, if a man is partially insane, and that partial insanity is never removed from his mind, is he capable of entering into solemn acts which he would not have entered into if the subject of his delusion had been touched upon. The acts of the parties to a particular instrument are properly to be taken into consideration of the question whether it was executed during a lucid interval. If a man has been insane and afterwards recovers his reason, it is not sufficient, in order to impeach an act done by him after his recovery, to shew that he was not as sound a man in his judgments as before his insanity. All that the law requires is, that a man should have possession of his reason so as to know the effect of the act he is about to perform, and to be capable of carrying that act into effect. Creagh v. Blood, 2 Jo. & Lat. 509; 8 Ir. Eq. R. 434.

Hereditary Insanity.]—Quære—How far, in cases of alleged unsoundness of mind, hereditary constitutional insanity may be pleaded. Frere v. Peacocke, 3 Curt. 664.

Medical Opinion.]—On a plea of insanity, at the time of making a contract, the opinion of the medical men who gave certificates on which the defendant was confined as insane, at or about the time, is only evidence for the jury, who must judge of the grounds on which it was formed. Lovatt v. Tribe, 3 F. & F. 9.

Knowledge of Insanity.]—Where the plaintiff himself, according to his own evidence, was in personal communication with the defendant at the time, that, in itself, is some evidence that the plaintiff knew of the insanity, supposing the jury find the fact of insanity established. Ib.

Report of Chancery Visitors—Admissibility.]—Sect. 186 of the Lunacy Act, 1890, provides that (1) the reports of the chancery visitors shall be filed and kept secret in their office, and shall not be open to the inspection of any person save the members of the board of visitors and the judge in lunacy, and such persons as he specially appoints; (2) all reports relating to any particular patient shall be destroyed on his death, &c. On the trial of a probate action, where the testatrix had been found of unsound mind on inquisition, a visitor stated that these reports had not been destroyed:—Held, that the reports must be treated as destroyed on the death of the testatrix, and could not be produced even on subpœna. Subsequently the visitors gave evidence of the state of mind of the testatrix at the times when their reports were made. Roe v. Nix, 62 L. J., P. 36; [1893] P. 55; 1 R. 472; 68 L. T. 26.

Conflict of Evidence.] — Where sanity is impeached, and the evidence is conflicting, the question is not whether the facts adduced in support of it are not in general indications of sanity, but whether they are inconsistent with, or sufficiently explanatory of, the indications of insanity, produced on the other side on which the onus lies. Steed v. Calley, 1 Keen, 620.

Inspection of Lunatic.]—Motion that a lunatic, who had recovered his understanding, might be inspected, and make a settlement of his estate. Wright, Ex parte, 1 Vern. 155.

Existence of Delusions — Contract.] — The mere existence of a delusion in the mind of a person making a disposition or contract is not sufficient to avoid it, even though the delusion is connected with the subject-matter of such disposition or contract. It is a question for the jury whether the delusion affected the disposition or contract. Jenkins v. Morris, 14 Ch. D. 674; 42 L. T. 817.

Issue on Non compos mentis.]—In an issue on non compos mentis, you may give particular acts of madness in evidence, and not general, only that he is insane. Clark v. Periam, 2 Atk. 340; 9 Mod. 346.

—— Evidence of General Reputation in neighbourhood.]—Evidence of the general reputation of the insanity of a person in the neighbourhood in which he resides, is inadmissible to prove that a person was cognisant of that fact. Greenslade v. Dare, 20 Beav. 284; 24 L. J., Ch. 490; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 294; 3 W. R. 220.

Execution of Deed.]—On a question whether a person was sane at the time of her executing a certain deed, witnesses cannot be asked whether the sister of the party be not insane. Doe d. Mather v. Whitefoot, 8 Car. & P. 270.

Testator, Sanity of.]—Upon a question as to the general sanity of a devisor, the treatment of the devisor by other persons is immaterial, unless there is some evidence of his conduct with respect to such treatment, and is admissible in evidence only as being explanatory of such conduct. Doe d. Tatham v. Wright, 6 N. & M. 132; 5 L. J., K. B. 124. Wright v. Doe d. Tatham, 7 A. & E. 313; 7 L. J., Ex. 340.

XIII. LUNATIC ASYLUMS.

a. PRIVATE.

Previous to 14 Geo. 3, c. 40.]—Before Geo. 3, c. 40, s. 1, private madhouses were not authorised by law, but the keepers were excused in their conduct when it was exercised properly. Rex v. Coate, Lofft, 73, 78.

A person put to superintend an unlicensed house for the reception of lunatics was liable to the penalties of that statute, though he did not receive any of the profits of the establishment. Budd v. Foulkes, 3 Camp. 404.

Deed—Undue Influence of Keeper.]—A deed was set aside as obtained by fraud and undue influence, by a keeper of a house for lunatics, from a person under his care, as within the general principle arising from the relation of guardian and ward, attorney and client. Wright v. Proud, 13 Ves. 138.

8 & 9 Vict. c. 100, s. 45.]—The prohibition in 8 & 9 Vict. c. 100, s. 45, as to receiving insane persons into licensed houses or hospitals without such medical certificate as the act requires, is not general, but relates only to the keepers of licensed houses; the confinement of lunatics in all other cases being left as it was at common law. Shuttleworth, In re, 9 Q. B. 651; 2 New Sess. Cas. 470; 16 L. J., M. C. 18; 11 Jur. 41.

Surgeon giving Certificate Improperly.]—An indictment charged that a surgeon, knowingly, and with intention to deceive, signed a certificate required by 9 Geo. 4, c. 41, s. 30, without having visited and personally examined the patient, contrary to the statute; the jury negatived the intention to deceive, and found him guilty:—Held, that in the description of the offence the averment of intention was surplusage, and that such unnecessary matter might be rejected, as well in an indictment on a penal statute as at common law. Rex v. Jones, 2 B. & Ad. 611.

b. Confinement and Restraint.

1. Where Parties Dangerous.

Right to Restrain.]—In an action against two medical men, for having, with other persons, unlawfully entered the house of the plaintiff, and assaulted and imprisoned her therein, they pleading only not guilty, and leave and licence; and the case being that she had called them both in as her medical attendants, and had asked them to send a nurse, and that they, at the desire of her friends, sent not only a female nurse, but also a male attendant, who were both engaged by the plaintiff's friends, but to whom the defendants gave directions, and against whom the plaintiff alleged certain acts of violent restraint and coercion; the defence being that she was suffering under delirium tremens, and that there was no more restraint than necessary as a part of medical treatment:—Held, that if this was so, even assuming that the defendants were responsible for the acts of the attendants, there was a justification in law, had it been so pleaded. Symm v. Fraser, 3 F. & F. 859.

Any man may justify an assault, when it is to restrain the fury of a lunatic and prevent mischief. Brookshaw v. Hopkins, Lofft, 243.

At common law a medical man may justify measures necessary to restrain a dangerous lunatic. So also, if he is called in to attend a person suffering under delirium tremens, he may justify such measures as are reasonably necessary, either to cure him or to restrain him from doing mischief, so long as the fit lasts, or it is likely to return. Scott v. Wakem, 3 F. & F. 328.

"Charged" with Crime in "Court" in India, but "not tried"—Removal to England.]—By 14 & 15 Vict. c. 81, s. 1, if any person shall be indicted for or charged with any crime or offence in any court in India, and shall be acquitted of or not be tried for such crime or offence on the ground of his being found to be of unsound mind, he may be removed to England in the manner prescribed by the act. A European British subject in India having been arrested for homicide, a district magistrate was informed of it, and went with witnesses to a private house in the presidency, where the accused was detained. On seeing him, and receiving medical testimony on oath as to his state of mind, the magistrate deemed him insane and unfit to be tried, and so reported to the government of the presidency. The government made an order under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 81, s. 1, for the removal of the prisoner to England. By virtue of the order he was brought in custody to England, and on his arrival a royal warrant was issued, under s. 2, for his reception into a lunatic asylum, where he was accordingly kept:—Held, that the prisoner was charged with a crime in a "court," and "not tried" on the ground of being "found" to be of unsound mind within the meaning of s. 1, and that his detention was lawful. Maltby, In re, 50 L. J., Q. B. 413; 7 Q. B. D. 18; 44 L. T. 711; 29 W. R. 678; 14 Cox, C. C. 609; 45 J. P. 681.

2. Under Medical Certificates.

Duty of Medical Man.]—A medical man is not warranted, merely on statements made by the relations of a person supposed to be insane, in sending men to take him into custody, and confine him, unless he is satisfied from those statements that such a step is necessary to prevent some immediate injury from being done by the individual, either to himself or to other persons. Anderdon v. Burrows, 4 Car. & P. 210. See 5 Vict. c. 4, s. 3.

To an action for imprisonment of the plaintiff, a plea that he conducted himself as a person of unsound mind, and incompetent to take care of himself, and proper to be taken charge of and detained under due care and treatment; that two medical certificates had been given by persons authorised, according to the provisions of the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 100, and 16 & 17 Vict. c. 96, certifying that he was of unsound mind and proper to be taken charge of and detained; that the defendant had notice of the certificates, and had reasonable and probable grounds for believing, and did believe them to be true; and that the plaintiff was of unsound mind; and that the defendant being his uncle, and a proper person to cause him to be taken in charge and detained, did for the causes aforesaid, cause him to be taken charge of and detained as a person of unsound mind, is a bad plea, inasmuch as at common law the defendant would be justified only if the plaintiff was actually insane at the time, which the plea did not allege, and the protection given by 8 & 9 Vict. c. 100, s. 99, to parties duly and bonâ fide acting under certificates and an order for confinement, does not extend to the party making the order. Fletcher v. Fletcher, 1 El. & El. 420; 28, L. J., Q. B. 134; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 678; 7 W. R. 187.

A medical man, who has merely signed a certificate, and has done nothing more towards causing the confinement of a lunatic, is not liable in trespass. Nor, if he has merely consulted another medical man who has signed the other certificate, and told him his own idea of the case, is he liable for causing the other to sign such certificate. But if he signs such a certificate without taking due care and making due inquiries, he is liable for the consequences which ensue. And if on his own personal examination he is not satisfied, he is bound to make due inquiries. Nor is he the less liable for the want of such due care and inquiries because he has acted bonâ fide. Hall v. Semple, 3 F. & F. 337.

Certificate—Production of.]—The 8 & 9 Vict. c. 100, requires every person receiving a single lunatic into his or her care to obtain and transmit to the lunacy commissioners certain orders and certificates, which are upon receipt at their office entered and filed. In the books in which the receipt of such orders and certificates was entered no notice was found of any such having been received from the defendant. Notice was given to him to produce any orders or certificates he might have received, entitling him to take charge of the alleged lunatic:—Held, that although, as a general rule, a defendant must have his guilt proved, and not be called upon to establish his innocence, yet seeing that the proof was in the nature of a negative proof, and that, if he had received the documents and not transmitted them they would be in his possession and that after notice to produce them had been given he had not produced them, there was a sufficient case to go to the jury. Reg. v. Harris, 10 Cox, C. C. 541.

8 & 9 Vict. c. 100, s. 90—"Lunatic"—Definition.]—C. was placed in the house of a medical man as an invalid; the house not being licensed or registered for the reception of lunatic patients. C.'s mind was quite imbecile, and he allowed himself to be kept in a state of revolting filthiness; but it did not appear that he laboured under any delusion or mental aberration, nor was he subject to fits of frenzy or violence:—Held, that he was a lunatic within the meaning of 8 & 9 Vict. c. 100, s. 90, and that the medical man was liable to the charge of receiving C. to board and lodge in an unlicensed house. Reg. v. Shaw, 37 L. J., M. C. 112; 18 L. T. 583; 16 W. R. 913; 11 Cox, C. C. 109.

Liability of Keeper.]—Even assuming that a person is of sound mind when conveyed under proper authority to a lunatic asylum, it would not be illegal on the part of the keepers of the asylum to detain him until they had proper authority for his discharge. Mackintosh v. Smith, 4 Macq. H. L. 913.

3. Orders for Confinement.

Effect of.]—In justification for the detention or recapture by the proprietor or superintendent of a licensed house or registered hospital, or other authorised person, of a person who has been received into such asylum under an order, and certificates required by 8 & 9 Vict. c. 100, it is not necessary to aver that such person is a lunatic, as s. 99 affords a complete defence for such detention or recapture. Norris v. Seend, 3 Ex. 782; 18 L. J., Ex. 300; 13 Jur. 830.

Such order and certificates are equally a justification for taking a wife from her husband Ib.

A return to a habeas corpus, directing a keeper of a lunatic asylum to bring up the body of R. F., certified that he was, on a certain day, received under 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 107, and that on the day and year aforesaid, the keeper received an order and medical certificates, in the form directed by that act (setting them out). It then further certified, that, on the 22nd November, 1845, an order and two medical certificates, under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 100 (setting them out), were delivered to the keeper, and concluded, "that R. F. is now detained under our custody, under and by virtue of the last-mentioned act of parliament":—Held, that the return was sufficient under 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 107, as it sufficiently appeared that the order and certificates returned were received at the same time with the lunatic, and that they were those under which he was received. Fell, In re, 3 D. & L. 373; 15 L. J., M. C. 25.

The 8 & 9 Vict. c. 100, s. 1, which repeals the 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 107, leaves orders made under the latter act so far valid as to amount to a justification of a detainer in an asylum. Ib.

16 & 17 Vict. c. 96, s. 4, is Compulsory.]—The 16 & 17 Vict. c. 96, s. 4, which enacts that no person (not a pauper) is to be received as a lunatic into any licensed house or hospital without the medical certificate according to the form in schedule A, No. 2, of two persons, being physicians, surgeons or apothecaries, is not merely directory, but compulsory. Reg. v. Pinder, Greenwood, In re, 24 L. J., Q. B. 148; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 522.

It appeared upon return to a habeas corpus, that the certificates, under which a person had been received into a private asylum as a lunatic, omitted to state the number of the street and the number of the house where the examination took place, in accordance with the form in schedule A, No. 2; and it further appeared by affidavit that the examination did in fact take place in a house in a street, and that the alleged lunatic was not dangerous either to the public or himself:—Held, that the certificates were defective in a material particular, and the lunatic was ordered to be discharged from custody. Ib.

Order for Reception—Alteration of Order—Order for Discharge.]—The plaintiff was taken to and detained in the defendant's asylum as a person of unsound mind under an order signed by the plaintiff's husband, and containing a statement of questions and answers concerning the plaintiff. To the question "Age?" the answer was "Fifty." To the question, "Whether first attack?" the answer was "For the last twenty years has been subject to what is termed hysteria." To the question, "Age (if known) on first attack?" the answer was "Thirty." To the question, "When and where previously under care and treatment?" the answer was, "During this period of twenty years has been constantly under treatment." A few days after the plaintiff had been received into the asylum the last answer was altered by adding to it the words "For hysteria" by several doctors whose names were given. No copy of the order as so altered was sent to the commissioners, nor did they sanction the alteration. Afterwards the plaintiff's husband wrote a letter to the defendant begging him to discharge the plaintiff "as soon as you may think it advisable." Notwithstanding this letter the defendant detained the plaintiff for a considerable time. The plaintiff having brought an action against the defendant for maliciously and without reasonable and probable cause assaulting and imprisoning her, the defendant relied upon 8 & 9 Vict. c. 100, ss. 99, 105:

—Held, that the answers were a sufficient compliance with the requirements of 16 & 17 Vict. c. 96, s. 4, and schedule A, No. 1; that the alteration not being of a material part of the order did not invalidate the order; that the letter written by the plaintiff's husband to the defendant was not an order of discharge within the meaning of 8 & 9 Vict. c. 100, s. 72; and that there was no evidence for the jury in support of the plaintiff's case. Lowe v. Fox, 56 L. J., Q. B. 480; 12 App. Cas. 206; 56 L. T. 406; 36 W. R. 25; 51 J. P. 468—H. L. (E.)

Detention under Reception Order—Application for Order of Discharge—Discretion of Lunacy Commissioners to make Order.]—Where an application is made to the commissioners in lunacy for an order to discharge a patient detained under a reception order, the commissioners have a discretion under s. 49 of the Lunacy Act, 1890, as to making such order, and are not bound by the certificate of two medical practitioners that in their opinion the patient may, without risk or injury to himself or the public, be discharged; and where they do not agree with the opinion of such medical practitioners, they cannot be compelled by mandamus to issue an order of discharge. Reg. v. Lunacy Commissioners, 66 L. J., Q. B. 387; [1897] 1 Q. B. 630; 76 L. T. 353; 45 W. R. 505; 61 J. P. 278.

Clergyman issuing Order.]—The clergyman of a parish in which a lunatic is living, who has had opportunities of observing his conduct, is competent to issue an order under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 100, s. 45, for his admission into an asylum and detention there. Shuttleworth, In re, 2 New Sess. Cas. 470; 9 Q. B. 651; 16 L. J., M. C. 18; 11 Jur. 41.

In such an order, it is not imperative that all the particulars enumerated in the appendix, schedule (B), to the form of the order for receiving a lunatic into an asylum, should be set out, if the act is substantially complied with. Ib.

The form of a medical certificate given in schedule (C) is directory only, and an equivalent will suffice. Ib.

On what Grounds given.]—A general statement in a certificate that a lunatic "labours under delusions of various kinds, and is dirty and indecent in the extreme," is a sufficient statement, within s. 16, of the fact from which a medical man forms his opinion of existing insanity; so also is his statement that he forms his opinions from conversations with the lunatic, without describing their purport. Ib.

Reception of Lunatics in Unlicensed House—Honest Belief Immaterial.]—The defendant was convicted under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 100, s. 44, of receiving two or more lunatics into her house, not being a registered asylum or hospital, or a house duly licensed under the above act, or under any previous act, but it was specially found by the jury who convicted, that though the persons so received were lunatic, the defendant honestly, and on reasonable grounds, believed that they were not lunatic:—Held, by the court (Lord Coleridge, C.J., Denman, J., Pollock, B., Field and Stephen, JJ.), that such belief was immaterial, and that the conviction was right. Reg. v. Bishop, 49 L. J., M. C. 45; 5 Q. B. D. 259; 42 L. T. 240; 28 W. R. 475; 14 Cox, C. C. 404; 44 J. P. 330.

4. Release on Habeas Corpus.

A person may be discharged from a madhouse by habeas corpus. Rex v. Turlington, 2 Burr. 1115.

But where it appeared that a person confined was a lunatic, and not fit to be produced in court, and that the relations were applying for a commission of lunacy, the court enlarged the time for making a return to a habeas corpus, directed to a keeper of a private madhouse. Rex v. Clarke, 3 Burr. 1362.

If an alleged lunatic is detained under an improper or invalid certificate, he will be discharged on a writ of habeas corpus, on the ground that the detention is illegal unless it is shewn that it would be injurious to himself or others to set him at liberty. Reg. v. Pinder, Greenwood, In re, 24 L. J., Q. B. 148; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 522.

A rule having been obtained for a habeas corpus to bring up a lunatic confined in an asylum in this country under Irish medical certificates; the court discharged the rule with costs, there being no evidence to shew that the party promoting the application was duly authorised by the lunatic. Child, Ex parte, 15 C. B. 238.

A lunatic might be brought up by habeas corpus from St. Luke's Hospital, to be surrendered in discharge of his bail. Pillop v. Sexton, 3 Bos. & P. 550.

When all reasonable efforts have been made to effect personal service of a writ of summons on a lunatic in confinement in an asylum:—Semble, that unless the lunatic be in such a state that personal service of a writ of summons may injuriously affect his health, the court will grant a writ of habeas corpus to bring up the body of said lunatic. Ridgway v. Cannon, 2 W. R. 473.

5. Maintenance.

Paid by Union for long Period—How far an inference that Order had been made by Justices.]—The keeper of a private asylum received an insane prisoner, by virtue of a warrant of the secretary of state, under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 54, and the guardians of a union, to which the prisoner was chargeable during thirteen years, paid for maintenance a certain weekly sum, which was a reasonable sum in that behalf:—Held, that no inference could be drawn, either that there had been an order of justices under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 54, ss. 2, 3, for payment of that sum, or that an arrangement had been made to pay that sum, or a reasonable sum, so long as the lunatic should be kept. Pegge v. Lampeter Union, 43 L. J., C. P. 181; L. R. 9 C. P. 373; 31 L. T. 132; 22 W. R. 882—Ex. Ch.

XIV. PUBLIC ASYLUMS.

a. GENERALLY.

Joint Asylum—County and Borough—Agreement by Borough—Transfer of Liability.]—A borough situated in the county of S. entered into an agreement with the justices to pay an annual rent for the privilege of using an asylum, the property of the county, such agreement providing that on the termination of the arrangement the borough should not be entitled to any right, claim, or interest in the asylum, and should not, whilst the arrangement subsisted, contribute towards the expenses of the asylum. The borough when the Local Government Act, 1888, came into operation had a quarter sessions, with a population of less than 10,000 :—Held, that the liability of the borough under the agreement to provide for the maintenance, management of, and other dealings with the joint asylum, was not extinguished, but was transferred under s. 38, sub-s. 1, of the Local Government Act, 1888, from the borough to the county council of the county of S., subject to the agreement entered into. Salop County Council, In re, 65 L. T. 416 ; 56 J. P. 213.

Chaplain—Right to Dismiss.]—By 9 Geo. 4, c. 40, ss. 30 and 32, the visiting justices have the power of appointing and dismissing the chaplain of the asylum. Reg. v. Middlesex Lunatic Asylum JJ., 2 G. & D. 300 ; 2 Q. B. 433 ; 6 Jur. 682.

—— Retiring Allowance—Right to.]—A chaplain of a lunatic asylum, appointed under the Lunatic Asylums Act, 1853, performed the duties of his office in the asylum, but did not reside therein or give his whole time to the duties of his office. He wished to retire on a superannuation allowance, and such allowance was granted by the visitors, but the county council refused to pay the same, on the ground that, as the chaplain did not reside in the asylum or give his whole time to his duties therein, though he might be an officer of the asylum, he was not an officer in the asylum, and therefore not entitled to a pension within the 57th section of the act :—Held, that it was not necessary for the purpose of receiving a superannuation allowance that the chaplain should reside in the asylum, or give his whole time to the duties of his office therein, that there was no distinction between an officer of, and an officer in, the asylum, and that, as the chaplain performed his duty in the asylum, he was an officer in the asylum, and therefore entitled to a superannuation allowance, if the visitors in their discretion granted it. Reg. v. Hereford County Council, 63 L. T. 245 ; 38 W. R. 775 ; 55 J. P. 72.

Sale of Land for—Approval of Quarter Sessions.]—A contract for the sale of land to the committee of visitors of a lunatic asylum may be approved of by the court of quarter sessions before being actually signed by the parties, if it can be identified as the contract which was afterwards entered into. Devenish v. Brown, 26 L. J., Ch. 23 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1043 ; 4 W. R. 783.

The 16 & 17 Vict. c. 97, s. 36, incorporating the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, with respect to the purchase-money or compensation coming to parties having limited interests, enables parties having limited interests to contract with the committee of visitors for the sale of land although the committee of visitors has no compulsory powers of purchasing. Ib.

Jurisdiction of Justices—Personal Examination by Justices of alleged Lunatic.]—In order to give two justices jurisdiction to make an order under s. 68 of the Lunatic Asylums Act, 1853, for the reception of a person into a lunatic asylum as a lunatic who is not a pauper, and not wandering at large, but who is not under proper care and control, it is not necessary that they should examine such person in the presence of the medical man whom they have called to their assistance, nor that the examination should be made with the knowledge of the alleged lunatic, so that he should have the opportunity of explaining, if he could, what might otherwise be signs of insanity. Though the examination must not be a sham, yet if it be made by the justices bonâ fide for the purpose of satisfying themselves of the sanity or insanity of the person examined it is sufficient, and their order is not without jurisdiction because the examination lasted only four or five minutes and was made at the door of the carriage in which the alleged lunatic was seated with his attendants preparatory to his being taken to the asylum. Reg. v. Whitfield, 54 L. J., M. C. 113 ; 15 Q. B. D. 122 ; 53 L. T. 96—C. A. Reversing 49 J. P. 230.

Where the person deemed to be a lunatic is examined by two justices at his place of abode or elsewhere, the 68th section requires that one of such two justices must already have had, as a condition precedent to the vesting of the jurisdiction of the justices, either an information upon oath, or private or personal knowledge of his own as to the insanity of such person. Per Coleridge, C.J. Ib.

Committee of Visitors—Profits arising from Management.]—The committee of visitors of a lunatic asylum, built and managed under the Lunatic Asylums Act, 1853 (repealed), had in their hands a sum of money, being the excess of receipts over the costs incurred in maintaining lunatics under their care :—Held, that the guardians of the several unions in the county had no claim to these funds, but that the county council were entitled to them under s. 64 of the Local Government Act, 1888. Proctor v. Cheshire County Council, 56 J. P. 532.

—— Contract by — Action against Clerk.]—By 8 & 9 Vict. c. 126, s. 17, a select number of justices for a county or borough, called the "committee of visitors," were empowered to contract for plans, &c., for the erection of a lunatic asylum for the county, &c., and by s. 16 they were enabled to sue and be sued in the name of their clerk :—Held, that an action might be maintained against the committee of visitors in the name of their clerk in respect of a contract so entered into by them, although the plaintiff might have no means of enforcing his judgment when obtained. Kendall v. King, 9 C. B. 483 ; 25 L. J., C. P. 132 ; 4 W. R. 389.

Expenses of Pauper Lunatics — Parochial Rates on Asylum Buildings.]—The expression "the expenses of maintenance and other expenses of each pauper lunatic in the asylum," in s. 283 of the Lunacy Act, 1890, includes the payment of parochial and other rates charged upon the buildings of the asylum, and payment of such rates may lawfully be made out of the maintenance fund of the asylum. Reg. v. Dolby, 61 L. J., Q. B. 809 ; [1892] 2 Q. B. 301 ; 67 L. T. 296 ; 56 J. P. 599.

Doctor giving Certificate—Duty of Relieving Officer.]—The effect of s. 20 of the Lunacy Act, 1890, is to vest an absolute discretion in the constable, relieving officer, or overseer, with regard to the duty imposed upon them by that section. Therefore, where the plaintiff was taken by a relieving officer to an infirmary upon receiving a certificate from a doctor, the doctor was not liable to the plaintiff for negligence in giving the certificate. Thompson v. Schmidt, 56 J. P. 212—C. A.

Person Violent and Dangerous—Removal to Workhouse—Right of Guardians to recover.]—A person suffering from delirium tremens became violent in his own house, used threats and broke the windows and furniture; a relieving officer of the union was sent for who ordered his removal to the workhouse where he was kept for some days. He was then examined by a doctor and brought before the magistrates as a lunatic, but as the magistrates held that he was not a lunatic he was discharged. Certain expenses were incurred by the guardians in respect of these services:—Held, that, apart from the lunacy acts, there was a common law liability upon such person to repay to the guardians the expenses so incurred, and that the guardians therefore could recover such money as necessaries expended by them. West Ham Union v. Pearson, 62 L. T. 638; 54 J. P. 645.

A. FALSE IMPRISONMENT.

1. Imprisonment in General.

What is].—The forcibly preventing a party from proceeding in a particular direction, e.g. along a public footway, is not an imprisonment in law. Bird v. Jones, 7 Q. B. 742; 15 L. J., Q. B. 82; 9 Jur. 870. See Wright v. Wilson, 1 Ld. Raym. 739.

In an action for false imprisonment proof must be given of circumstances, from which the judge and jury may decide whether there was or was not a restraint or a detention of the person; and it is not enough for witnesses to swear that they considered the plaintiff was in custody, and thought that he was under restraint; nor is it enough to shew that the defendant, at a police-office, stood before the plaintiff and said, "You cannot go away till the magistrate comes," if it appears that he relinquished that attitude, and went to another part of the office before the plaintiff had made any attempt to depart. Cant v. Parsons, 6 Car. & P. 504.

The merely giving a person in charge to a peace officer, where the officer never takes the person of the defendant into custody, is not an imprisonment which will support an action. Simpson v. Hill, 1 Esp. 431.

It is an imprisonment where a bailiff tells a person that he has a writ against him, and thereupon such person peaceably accompanies him. Grainger v. Hill, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 212; 5 Scott, 561; 7 L. J., C. P. 85. S. P., Whalley v.

Pepper, 7 Car. & P. 506; Bristow v. Heywood, 1 Stark. 48; 4 Camp. 213.

If, whilst A. is unlawfully imprisoned by B., C. commits an assault upon him, C. is guilty of the false imprisonment as well as B. Boyce v. Douglas, 1 Camp. 60.

Voluntarily going with a constable into whose charge a person has been given, is sufficient to support an action for false imprisonment. Chinn v. Morris, 2 Car. & P. 361. S. P., Peters v. Stanway, 6 Car. & P. 737.

So also where the constable says, "You must go with me," and the person voluntarily goes. Pocock v. Moore, 1 Ry. & M. 321.

And where an attorney's clerk accompanied a creditor to his debtor, and pretended he was a bailiff's officer, whereby the debtor went away with them not willingly but supposing they had power to compel him, this was held a sufficient arrest to support an action for false imprisonment. Wood v. Lane, 6 Car. & P. 774.

Plaintiff appeared before defendant, a magistrate, to answer the complaint of A. for unlawfully killing his dog. Defendant advised a settlement, but as the plaintiff declined to accede to this the defendant threatened to convict him under the Trespass Act. The defendant afterwards called in a constable and said, "Take this man out and see if they settle the matter; if not bring him in again as I must proceed to commit him under the act." The plaintiff went out and settled the matter by paying a sum of money:—Held, that this was an assault and false imprisonment. Bridgett v. Coyney, 1 M. & Ry. 211; 6 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 42; 31 R. R. 316.

Bonâ fide Mistake of Law—Acting in Discharge of Public Duty.]—An officer in command of military cantonments, having general control of the police in the absence of the cantonment magistrate, believing the appellant to be, or to be likely to become, a dangerous lunatic, directed two medical officers to examine him, and placed a guard over him, until they could decide on the case. The medical officers reported that the appellant was perfectly sane:—Held, that as the conduct of the officer was not authorised by law, the fact that he acted in perfect good faith in the supposed discharge of a public duty, and on a bonâ fide belief that the appellant was dangerous, did not prevent his being liable for damages at the suit of the appellant. Sinclair v. Broughton, 47 L. T. 170.

Arresting Witness.]—No action lies against the sheriff or his officer for arresting a person attending court as a witness, although it is alleged that he knew that he was privileged, and arrested him maliciously. Magnay v. Burt, D. & M. 652; 5 Q. B. 381; 7 Jur. 1116—Ex. Ch. And see Stokes v. White, 4 Tyr. 186; 1 C. M. & R. 283; 3 L. J., Ex. 321.

Detaining Person converting Chattel.]—The plaintiff, having wrongfully in his possession a chattel of the defendants, and being about to remove it from their premises and convert it to his own use, they demanded it from him, and, on his refusal to give it up, laid hands on him and detained him on their premises, in order to prevent his carrying away and converting the chattel; doing no more, and detaining the plaintiff no longer than was necessary:—Held, that the detention of the plaintiff was illegal. Harvey v. Mayne, Ir. R. 6 C. L. 417.

Continuance of False Imprisonment.] — A plaintiff issued a plaint in a county court for false imprisonment, with a notice appended that he did not claim for malicious prosecution. It was proved at the trial that he lodged at the defendant's; that the defendant had removed the plaintiff's goods on a claim of money owing; that the plaintiff broke open a door of a room in the house to get them, upon the defendant's wife refusing to give them up: that she gave him in charge; that at the police-station the defendant signed the charge-sheet, on the police saying that everything must be on his responsibility; and that the plaintiff was kept in charge, taken before justices, and discharged. The judge nonsuited, on the ground that though there was evidence of false imprisonment till the signing of the charge, the case then became one of malicious prosecution, over which he had no jurisdiction, and the whole evidence was inseparable, and had been heard by the jury:—Held, that the false imprisonment lasted till the plaintiff was before the magistrates, and that the judge should not have nonsuited the plaintiff, but told the jury to exclude from their consideration anything that then occurred. Austin v. Dowling, 39 L. J., C. P. 260; L. R. 5 C. P. 534; 22 L. T. 721; 18 W. R. 1003.

Direction to Jury.] — The defendant, the owner of a beerhouse, placed the plaintiff therein to carry on the business as his servant at weekly wages, under an agreement for a month's notice to determine the service. Having given him a week's notice, the defendant made up the account, and required the plaintiff to pay him the balance; and on his refusal to accede to this request, on the ground that he had not received the stipulated month's notice, the defendant brought in a superintendent and a sergeant of police, one of whom, on the plaintiff's attempting to go upstairs, refused to permit him to do so, and ultimately only allowed him to go accompanied by an officer. After some further altercation about the money, and the plaintiff's again refusing to hand it over at the request of the superintendent, the latter asked the defendant if he should take him; it did not appear what answer the defendant made, but the officer took the plaintiff into custody, and entered a charge of embezzlement against him at the station-house, and afterwards carried him before the magistrates, by whom he was discharged. In an action for the false imprisonment, the judge told the jury first that "to constitute an imprisonment it was not necessary that the person should be locked up within four walls, but that if he was restrained in his freedom of action by another, that was an act of imprisonment, and that the way in which the plaintiff had been constrained in his own house, and the restraint put upon his person by refusing him permission to leave the room and go upstairs in his own house, was in itself an imprisonment, independent of his being conveyed before a magistrate"; secondly, "that if they found the defendant was the moving party in causing the imprisonment, he was responsible for it"; and, thirdly, "that the plaintiff, as tenant or as lawful occupier, under an agreement not then terminated, of the premises, was not legally liable to be ejected by compulsion and without notice, and that if he refused to leave his house, the defendant could only eject him by adopting the proper legal proceedings to obtain possession, and that there was no evidence whatever to support or justify the charge of embezzlement." The jury having found for the plaintiff:—Held, that although the latter part of the summing up (which seemed to assume that there was a tenancy, or quasi tenancy) was somewhat inaccurate, it did not amount to a misdirection in point of law. Warner v. Riddiford, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 180.

Prolonging Imprisonment.]—The plaintiff was in custody under an attachment from the court of chancery, for nonpayment of costs to the plaintiff in a suit in equity, the defendant in this action. After the costs were paid, the solicitor of the plaintiff in equity (the now defendant) refused to give an order to the sheriff to discharge the plaintiff, saying, "Let him go to the court to purge his contempt." The judge in equity discharged him on motion:—Held, that no action was maintainable for refusing to give the order to the sheriff, and thereby prolonging plaintiff's imprisonment, except on proof of express malice. Moore v. Gardner, 16 M. & W. 595.

Removing while in Prison.]—The removal of a person from one part of a prison to another, in which he is not legally confined, is a trespass. Cobbett v. Grey, 4 Ex. 729; 19 L. J., Ex. 137. See also Bint v. Lavender, 1 Car. & P. 659.

Governor of Prison—Protection of Warrant.]—The governor of a prison is protected in obeying a warrant of commitment valid on the face of it, and an action for false imprisonment will not lie against him for the detention of a prisoner in pursuance of the terms of such warrant. Henderson v. Preston, 57 L. J., Q. B. 607; 21 Q. B. D. 362; 36 W. R. 834; 52 J. P. 820—C. A. Affirming 59 L. T. 334.

2. Giving in Charge of the Police.

On Breach of the Peace.]—The plaintiff entered the defendant's shop to purchase an article in the shop, when a dispute arose between the plaintiff and the defendant's shopman; the plaintiff refusing on request to go out of the shop, the shopman endeavoured to turn him out, and an affray ensued between them; the defendant came into the shop during the affray, which continued for a short time after he came; the defendant then requested the plaintiff to leave the shop quietly; but he refusing to do so, the defendant gave him in charge to a policeman, who took him to a station-house:—Held, that he was justified, under the circumstances, in giving the plaintiff in charge to a policeman, for the purpose of preventing a renewal of the affray. Timothy v. Simpson, 1 C. M. & R. 757; 5 Tyr. 244; 6 Car. & P. 499; 4 L. J., Ex. 81.

A man and his wife refused to go out of the shop of a baker, and continued to abuse him in relation to an alleged overcharge, until a crowd collected round the shop, and obstructed the public passage:—Held, that the baker was justified in giving the man and his wife into custody, and that their conduct amounted to a breach of the peace. Cohen v. Huskisson, 2 M. & W. 477; M. & H. 150; 6 L. J., M. C. 133.

While a clergyman after performing the communion service was walking from the table to the vestry a person rose in the church and read a notice. A constable at the minister's request took the person out of the church, and detained him until he promised to appear before a magistrate next morning, when he did appear and was discharged:—Held, that the constable was not justified in detaining the person until he was taken before a magistrate. Williams v. Glenister, 2 B. & C. 699; 4 D. & R. 217; 2 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 143; 26 R. R. 525.

Proof of annoyance and disturbance by a person present at a meeting, such as crying, "Hear, hear," and putting questions to a speaker, and making observations on his statement, will not justify the chairman of the meeting in giving such person in charge to the police; but, to justify such course of proceeding, it must be shown, that what was done amounted to a breach of the peace. Wooding v. Oxley, 9 Car. & P. 1.

If a person conducts himself in a disorderly manner in a public-house, and the landlord requests him to depart, and he refuses to do so, the landlord is justified in laying hands on him to put him out; and if, while the landlord has hold of him to put him out, the person lays hands on the landlord, this is an assault; and if it is seen by a peace officer, he is justified in taking the person into custody. Howell v. Jackson, 6 Car. & P. 723.

So, if a person, without committing any assault, makes such noise or disturbance in a public-house as would create alarm, and disquiet the neighbourhood, and the persons passing along the adjacent street, this would be such a breach of the peace as would not only justify the landlord in turning the person out of the house, but would justify the landlord in immediately giving the person into the custody of a peace officer, provided that this had occurred in the presence of the officer. Ib.

A plea, justifying an arrest for an affray, without warrant, ought to contain a direct averment that there was an affray or a breach of the peace continuing at the time of the arrest, or a well-founded apprehension of its renewal. Price v. Seeley, 10 Cl. & F. 28.

A person is justified in giving in charge, and a constable in arresting, without warrant, a party who has been guilty of a breach of the peace, if there are reasonable grounds for apprehending its continuance or immediate renewal, but not otherwise; and the circumstances from which such an inference is raised are for the jury. Baynes v. Brewster, 2 Q. B. 375; 1 G. & D. 669; 11 L. J., M. C. 5; 6 Jur. 392. S. P., Ingle v. Bell, 1 M. & W. 516; 5 L. J., M. C. 85.

To an action for false imprisonment, a plea that the plaintiff came to the door of the defendant's house, and with violence attempted to enter against his will, and wilfully and wantonly rang the door bell, without lawful occasion, and made a great noise and disturbance, to the annoyance of the defendant, and against the peace of the queen, and (after request to cease) continued making such noise, without any lawful excuse; and thereupon the defendant, in order to preserve the peace, and render good order and tranquillity in his house, gave the plaintiff in charge to a policeman :—Held, bad, as not shewing that, at the time the plaintiff was given in charge, he was committing a breach of the peace, or that there was reasonable ground for apprehending that a breach of the peace would be committed. Grant v. Moser, 5 Man. & G. 123 ; 6 Scott (N.R.) 46 ; 2 D. (N.S.) 923 ; 12 L. J., C. P. 146 ; 7 Jur. 854.

—— Chairman of Meeting — Direction to remove Persons creating Disturbance.]—Where at a public meeting in a hall a disturbance was being created in the gallery near which the plaintiff was standing, and the defendant, who was chairman of the meeting, said: "I shall be obliged to bring those men to the front who are making the disturbance. Bring those men to the front," whereupon a man and two policemen seized the plaintiff, who was making no disturbance, and dragged him over some benches, whereby he was injured. There was nothing to shew the position or duty of those who seized the plaintiff, or whether any instructions as to keeping order had been given by the defendant before the act complained of :—Held, that there was no evidence of any liability on the part of the defendants as there was not the ordinary relation of master and servant between him and those who assaulted the plaintiff ; but only a particular direction as to a particular matter, and that the words used by the defendant did not authorise the officers to act upon their judgment as to who were the persons making the disturbance. Lucas v. Mason, 44 L. J., Ex. 145 ; L. R. 10 Ex. 251 ; 33 L. T. 13 ; 23 W. R. 924. See also Wooding v. Oxley, col. 706.

Trespasser.]—A person who is in a house in such circumstances as amount to a continuing civil trespass may be removed, but unless he is actually committing a breach of the peace he cannot lawfully be given into custody ; and if he is given into custody he may maintain an action for false imprisonment. Jordan v. Gibbon, 8 L. T. 391. S. P., Rose v. Wilson, 1 Bing. 353 ; 8 Moore, 362 ; 2 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 14.

An occupier of land found a man (employed by the owner) felling trees into the land in such a way as to damage growing barley ; and after again and again desiring him to desist, gave him into custody for wilfully damaging the barley. In an action of trespass, the man having recovered 20*l.*, and the judge having declined to certify for costs, a suggestion was entered to deprive him of costs, on the ground that the defendant was acting in pursuance of 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 22. The judge on the trial of the suggestion, having left it to the jury to say whether the defendant really and reasonably believed he was acting according to law, and they having found in the affirmative :—Held, that whether the question was for the judge or the jury, the verdict was right. Norwood v. Pitt, 5 H. & N. 801 ; 29 L. J., Ex. 127 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 614.

A party who trespassed upon land, under a fair and reasonable supposition that he has a right to do the act complained of, was not liable to be apprehended under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 28, by the owner of the property, although the latter had reason to suppose the party to be within the act. Parrington or Pennington v. Moore, 2 Ex. 223 ; 17 L. J., M. C. 117.

Liability of Company for Acts of Servants—Scope of Employment.]—Sect. 52 of the Tramways Act, 1870, which enables any officer or servant of the promoters or lessees of any tramway to detain any person defrauding the company of his fare, must be construed as limited to any officer or servant appointed for that purpose. A tramway company gave to their conductors printed instructions, in which it was ordered that, except in cases of assault, conductors were not to give passengers into custody without the authority of an inspector or timekeeeer. The conductor of a car, in which the plaintiff was a passenger, detained the plaintiff, and gave her into custody on a charge of passing bad money : —Held, in an action for false imprisonment against the company, that the defendants were not liable. Charleston v. London Tramways Co., 36 W. R. 367. Affirmed 32 S. J. 557—C. A.

A passenger on a tramway tendered a half sovereign to the conductor of a car in payment of the fare. The conductor, supposing the coin to be counterfeit, gave the passenger in charge to the police :—Held, that the tramway company were liable in an action against them by the passenger for false imprisonment. Furlong v. South London Tramways Co., 1 Cab. & E. 316 ; 48 J. P. 329.

3. Arresting on Suspicion.

With Warrant.]—If an individual prefers a complaint to a magistrate, and procures a warrant to be granted, upon which the accused is taken into custody, the complainant is not liable for that imprisonment, and that even although the magistrate had no jurisdiction. Brown v. Chapman, 6 C. B. 365 ; 17 L. J., C. P. 329 ; 12 Jur. 799.

A defendant gave information before a magistrate, upon which the plaintiff was taken up on a warrant, and brought before the magistrate. After the charge was dismissed for the time, and the plaintiff liberated on his promise to appear at a future day, the defendant stated that he had another charge, of forgery, against the plaintiff, who was retiring, but was again put to the bar :—Held, that trespass was not maintainable. Barber v. Rollinson, 1 C. & M. 330 ; 3 Tyr. 267 ; 2 L. J., Ex. 101.

The defendant having charged the plaintiff with felony, the plaintiff was taken up for it under a justice's warrant. At the hearing before the justice, the plaintiff was discharged on his promise to appear again in a week, upon which the defendant said he had another charge of forgery against him. The plaintiff was stopped by an officer and again put to the bar, but dismissed on a similar promise :—Held, that his remedy against the defendant was in trespass. Ib.

Where a party lays a complaint before a magistrate on a subject-matter over which he has a general jurisdiction, and the magistrate grants a warrant on which the party charged is arrested, the party laying the complaint is not liable as a trespasser, although the particular case is one in which the magistrate had no authority to act. West v. Smallwood, 3 M. & W. 418 ; 6 D. P. C. 580 ; 7 L. J., Ex. 144.

—— Issued in another County.]—Knowledge by the police that a warrant has been issued for the arrest of a particular person for felony constitutes a sufficient ground of reasonable suspicion that a felony has been committed by such person so as to authorise the police to arrest him ; and if the warrant has been issued at a distance from the place where such person is to be found, the police are entitled to bring him before a justice having jurisdiction in the place where the arrest is made and obtain a reasonable remand until the warrant shall arrive and be backed by the proper authorities. Creagh v. Gamble, 24 L. R., Ir. 458.

—— Against whom.]—In an action by A. against B. for false imprisonment, B. cannot defend himself under a magistrate's warrant against C., although A. was charged with felony before the magistrate, and was the person against whom the warrant was intended to issue. Hoye v. Bush, 2 Scott (N.R.) 86; 1 Man. & G. 775; 10 L. J., M. C. 168.

—— Excess of Violence.]—Where in an action against the serjeant-at-arms of the house of commons, for forcibly and with the assistance of armed soldiers, breaking into the house of the plaintiff (the outer door being shut and fastened) and arresting him there, being justified under the speaker's warrant to arrest the plaintiff, a member of the house, for a breach of privilege, to which there was a new assignment of excess in using military force:—Held, that evidence of acts of violence of the mob committed in parts adjacent, though out of view and hearing of the plaintiff in his house, if they appeared to be connected with the same purpose as actuated those about the house, might be admitted to show the danger and difficulty of executing the warrant by force against the plaintiff in his own house without the aid and protection of the military. Burdett v. Colman, 14 East, 163, 183; 12 R. R. 478.

—— Evidence.] — In an action for false imprisonment, the onus of justifying rests on the defendant; therefore, in trespass, for causing the plaintiff to be apprehended under a justice's warrant:—Held, that he might maintain the action without producing the warrant. Holroyd v. Doncaster, 11 Moore, 441; 3 Bing. 492; 4 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 178; 28 R. R. 672.

Without Warrant—Felony.]—A private person cannot apprehend another upon a suspicion of felony, for the purpose of taking him to the place where the theft was committed, in order to ascertain whether he was the thief. Hall v. Booth, 3 N. & M. 316.

If a person be taken by a private individual without warrant, on suspicion of felony, and will not tell his name, and otherwise conducts himself so as to excite suspicion, this only goes in mitigation of damages, if it turn out that no felony was committed. Cowles v. Dunbar, 2 Car. & P. 565.

In an action for false imprisonment the defendant pleaded that money was stolen from him by some person unknown, and that he gave the plaintiff into custody, suspecting him on reasonable and probable grounds of being the thief, but did not plead that the plaintiff had committed the theft. The plaintiff had been tried on the charge of stealing the money, and was acquitted. At the trial of the civil action, evidence was given on both sides as to the question whether the offence had been committed by the plaintiff. The judge who tried the case being of opinion that there was no evidence of theft by any person other than the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff's acquittal precluded the question of his guilt being tried in the civil action, directed a verdict for the plaintiff notwithstanding the objection of the defendant's counsel, who required the question "whether the defendant's money had been feloniously stolen by any person" to be left to the jury:—Held, a misdirection, and that it was open to the defendant upon the pleadings to show that the plaintiff had stolen the money, and that he was not precluded from doing so by the acquittal of the plaintiff on the criminal charge. Cahill v. Fitzgibbon, 16 L. R., Ir. 371.

In an action for false imprisonment, the defendant justified on the ground that the plaintiff had been his lodger, and after she had left her apartments, he discovered that some feathers were missing from a bed which she had occupied and he, suspecting her to be the person that had stolen them, caused her to be apprehended. It appeared that the defendant took a policeman at night to the new lodging of the plaintiff, a few days after she had left his house, and had her apprehended and taken to the station-house, and the next day she was examined before the magistrate and discharged:—Held, that as the defendant had taken the law into his own hands, and not adopted, as a prudent person would under such circumstances, the cautious course of having a previous investigation by a magistrate, and obtaining a warrant from him, it was incumbent on him to make out to the entire satisfaction of the jury, not only that a felony had been committed, but that the circumstances of the case were such that they or any reasonable person, acting without passion or prejudice, would fairly have suspected the plaintiff of being the person who had committed it. Allen v. Wright, 8 Car. & P. 522.

A plea justifying the breaking and entering a house, without warrant, on suspicion of felony, ought distinctly to show, not only that there was reason to believe that the suspected person was there, but also that the defendant entered for the purpose of apprehending him. Smith v. Shirley, 3 C. B. 142; 15 L. J., C. P. 230.

It is doubtful whether, in an action for false imprisonment, mere personal resemblance between the plaintiff and the person who had committed a felony can afford reasonable ground of suspicion, justifying an arrest on the part of a private person without a warrant. But, at all events, the plea will fail unless either the defendant himself saw the felony committed, or unless the person who saw it, and on whose information he acted, spoke positively to the identity. Rayner v. German, 1 F. & F. 700.

A declaration charged an assault and battery of the plaintiff, and taking him into custody along certain streets, and imprisoning him on a false charge of an assault with an intent to commit a felony; plea, that the plaintiff having assaulted the defendant, the latter gave the former in charge to a peace officer, who took him before a magistrate; all the allegations in the court being proved:—Held, that the plea was no sufficient answer. Stammers v Yearsley, 3 M. & Scott, 410; 10 Bing. 35; 2 L. J., C. P. 256.

Whether a person alleged to be found committing an offence punishable by the Larceny Act, 1861, has been "immediately apprehended" or not, within the meaning of s. 103 of that statute, is a question of fact for the determination of the jury. Griffith v. Taylor, 46 L. J., C. P. 152; 2 C. P. D. 194; 36 L. T. 5; 25 W. R. 196—C. A.

Detention of Person offering Article to pawn.]—The plaintiff offered in pawn to the defendant, a pawnbroker, a gold horseshoe pin, set with seven diamonds, and a ring. The defendant having previously received from the police a notice of articles recently stolen, amongst which was "a gold horseshoe pin, set with seven diamonds," and a ring, asked the plaintiff if he was a dealer. He replied that he was not. The defendant also asked the plaintiff where he obtained the articles. The plaintiff said that he got them from a publican, whose name and address he stated. The defendant gave the plaintiff into custody of a constable. It was afterwards proved that the articles in the possession of the plaintiff had not been stolen, and that his statements were true. In an action by him for false imprisonment the judge left the question whether the defendant had a reasonable suspicion to the jury, who found their verdict for the plaintiff:—Held, that the question arising under the Pawnbrokers Act, 1872, whether the defendant reasonably suspected that the pin had been stolen or otherwise illegally or clandestinely obtained was for the judge; that on the facts there was no evidence of absence of reasonable suspicion in the mind of the defendant, and therefore judgment should be entered for him. Howard v. Clarke, 20 Q. B. D. 558; 58 L. T. 401; 52 J. P. 310.

4. Other Matters.

Claims.]—A count alleging that the defendant caused the plaintiff to be arrested and imprisoned, without reasonable or probable cause, on a false and malicious charge of felony, is a count for an assault and false imprisonment, and not an informal count for a malicious prosecution, and therefore requires no evidence of malice, or want of reasonable and probable cause. Brandt v. Craddock, 27 L. J., Ex. 314.

Trespass for assault and false imprisonment may be laid diversis diebus et vicibus. Burgess v. Freelove, 2 Bos. & P. 425. See English v. Purser, 6 East, 395.

Justification.] — A plea which professes to justify several assaults and false imprisonments laid in separate counts, must show distinct occasions upon which the defendant was justified in committing each particular trespass. M'Curday v. Driscoll, 1 C. & M. 618; 3 Tyr. 571; 2 L. J., Ex. 185.

It is necessary to show, in pleading, the causes of suspicion, with certainty, in order that the court may judge of their reasonableness; and using the term suspicious will not aid what is necessary to be averred. Mure v. Kaye, 4 Taunt. 34. S. P. Haynes v. Mewis, 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 47.

A plea justifying an arrest by a private person, on suspicion of felony, must show the circumstances, from which the court may judge whether the suspicion was reasonable. Ib.

B. MALICIOUS PROCEDURE.

1. In General.

a. Procuring Warrants and Summonses.

Liability.]—Though it may be the subject of a trespass in the magistrate to grant an illegal warrant, yet an action on the case may be supported against the person who causes and procures such warrant to issue, if it is done maliciously, and without reasonable or probable cause. Elsee v. Smith, 1 D. & R. 97; 2 Chit. 304; 24 R. R. 639—Ex. Ch.

A bankrupt (who had obtained an order for protection under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 112), at the time of his bankruptcy, was in arrear for two poor-rates, and had been assessed to a third rate, which, however, was not allowed or published until after his bankruptcy. The overseers, pending the protection, summoned him for the non-payment of the three rates; he did not attend before the justices, but returned the summons to the assistant overseer, stating in writing on it the fact of his having a protection order, and the assistant overseer saw the messenger of the court of bankruptcy in possession of his goods, which were afterwards sold. The justices, on the application of the overseers, then issued a distress warrant on his goods for the amount of the three rates, which warrant was returned nulla bona, and a warrant of commitment issued, under which he was arrested and imprisoned, until released by an order of a commissioner in bankruptcy. The bankrupt then brought an action against the overseers, for maliciously, and without reasonable or probable cause, procuring and obtaining from the justices, a warrant of commitment against him, and under that arresting and imprisoning him, and also for assaulting him, and giving him into custody:—Held, first, that there was no absence of reasonable or probable cause for assuming the court of bankruptcy not to have the power of protecting the bankrupt from arrest in respect of the rate made before, but not allowed till after the bankruptcy. Secondly, that there was no absence of reasonable or probable cause for supposing that the protection was not good against the warrant of commitment in respect of the aggregate of all the rates. Thirdly, that there was no evidence of malice. Fourthly, that trespass would not lie against the overseers for causing the bankrupt to be arrested under the warrant of commitment. Philips v. Naylor, 4 H. & N. 565; 28 L. J., Ex. 225; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 996; 7 W. R. 504—Ex. Ch.

Misdescription of Offence.]—Where a person having lost a bill of exchange, which he supposes to have been stolen, goes before a magistrate, and relates the circumstances of the loss, and the magistrate grants his warrant to apprehend A. on a charge of having "feloniously stolen, taken and carried away," the bill of exchange (language which the complainant did not use when he laid his information), and upon subsequent investigation of the case it turns out to be no felony:—Held, that an action would not lie for maliciously procuring the magistrate to grant his warrant; to sustain the averment of malice, the charge must be wilfully false. Cohen v. Morgan, 6 D. & R. 8; 28 R. R. 533. S. P., Carratt v. Morley, 1 G. & D. 275; 1 Q. B. 18; 10 L. J., Q. B. 259.

Search Warrant.]—An action lies for maliciously obtaining or executing a warrant to search a house for smuggled goods, though none are found. Boot v. Cooper, 1 Term Rep. 535; 3 Esp. 135.

A declaration stated that the defendant went before a magistrate, and falsely, maliciously and without probable cause, charged that certain goods of his had been feloniously stolen, and that he suspected that the goods were concealed in the plaintiff's dwelling-house; and the defendant procured the magistrate to grant a warrant, authorising a constable, with necessary assistance, to enter the plaintiff's house to search for the goods; and the defendant, with other persons, caused the dwelling-house to be searched and rummaged for the goods by such persons, and the door of such house, and a pantry there to be broken to pieces, and the plaintiff and his family to be disturbed in the possession, and his goods to be carried away:—Held, that the acts of violence alleged to have been committed in the house appeared sufficiently by the declaration to have been acts done in pursuance of the warrant, and in consequence of the charge made by the defendant. Henswortb v. Fowkes, 4 B. & Ad. 449.

—— And subsequent Arrest.]—The defendant, a miller, saw a number of sacks, which he identified as his property, lying on a quay alongside a vessel. Being informed that the sacks were about to be shipped by the plaintiff, he laid an information before a magistrate that he had reason to suspect, and did suspect, that some sacks, his property, had been stolen, and were then in possession of the plaintiff. Thereupon the magistrate issued a warrant to search for the goods, and if they should be found, to bring them and the plaintiff before him, to be dealt with according to law. The plaintiff was accordingly apprehended, and taken before the magistrate, who dismissed the charge. In an action for maliciously causing the search warrant to be issued, and the plaintiff apprehended:—Held, first, that the magistrate was justified in issuing a warrant in that form, since the application for a search warrant involved an application to arrest. Secondly, that there was no absence of reasonable and probable cause for the information, and consequently the defendant was not liable either in respect of the search warrant or arrest. Wyatt v. White, 5 H. & N. 371; 29 L. J., Ex. 193; 1 L. T. 517; 8 W. R. 307.

Under s. 10 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885, the justice has a judicial duty to perform, and his decision that there is reasonable cause for such suspicion is a protection to a person who bonâ fide applies for a search warrant, and is an answer to an action for maliciously causing the warrant to issue. Hope v. Evered, 55 L. J., M. C. 146; 17 Q. B. D. 338; 55 L. T. 320; 34 W. R. 742; 16 Cox, C. C. 112. S. P., Lea v. Charrington, 58 L. J., Q. B. 461; 23 Q. B. D. 45; 61 L. T. 222; 37 W. R. 736; 16 Cox, C. C. 704; 53 J. P. 614. Affirmed on other grounds, 23 Q. B. D. 272; 61 L. T. 450; 16 Cox, C. C. 704; 54 J. P. 19—C. A.

In an action for malicious prosecution, it is no evidence of malice on the part of the defendant that in applying for a search warrant to issue against the plaintiff, the defendant asked that a warrant at the same time might issue against another person for the same offence. Utting v. Bernay, 52 J. P. 806.

Summons against Passenger for knowingly and wilfully refusing to pay the Fare.]—Proceedings by a tramway company under ss. 51 and 52 of the Tramways Act, 1870 (which relate to nonpayment of fares), are of a criminal character, and therefore the company are liable in an action for malicious prosecution brought by the person against whom a summons in respect of such an offence has been dismissed. Rayson v. South London Tramways Co., 62 L. J., Q. B. 593; [1893] 2 Q. B. 204; 4 R. 522; 69 L. T. 491; 42 W. R. 21; 17 Cox, C. C. 691; 58 J. P. 20—C. A.

Evidence.]—In a declaration for a malicious prosecution, it is not necessary to state that there was an information. It is sufficient to state that the defendant procured a warrant to be issued; but if the declaration states that the defendant made information on oath, and that upon that information the magistrate granted the warrant, the information must be proved, and a recital of it in the warrant is not sufficient. Gregory v. Derby, 8 Car. & P. 749. S. P., Stevens v. Clark, Car. & M. 509.

In an action for a malicious prosecution, in which the plaintiff charges the defendant with having imposed on him the crime of felony, by reason of which he was imprisoned; and on production of the information before the justice there is no charge of felony, though the warrant was to arrest the plaintiff for felony; the evidence does not support the declaration. Leigh v. Webb, 3 Esp. 165.

b. Malicious Convictions.

Proof of.]—In an action against a magistrate for a malicious conviction, it is not sufficient for the plaintiff to show that he was innocent of the offence of which he was convicted; but he must also prove, from what passed before the magistrate, that there was a want of probable cause. Burley v. Bethune, 1 Marsh. 220; 5 Taunt. 580.

A count alleged that the defendant, a justice of the peace, unlawfully and maliciously, and without reasonable or probable cause, took the information of A. against the plaintiff, and wrongfully, wilfully, maliciously, and without reasonable or probable cause, convicted the plaintiff, who was thereby compelled to pay a sum of money, and that upon appeal to the quarter sessions the conviction was afterwards quashed. A verdict having been found for the plaintiff, the court refused to arrest the judgment. Gelen v. Hall, 2 H. & N. 379; 27 L. J., M. C. 78; 5 W. R. 757.

2. In Bankruptcy and Winding-up.

Presenting Petition in Bankruptcy.]—S., an attorney, having been instructed by H. to make J. bankrupt, obtained a debtor's summons, and served it on him, who thereupon applied to the registrar of the county court to dismiss the summons. Having heard both parties, the registrar made an order on the 12th of April that J. should, within seven days, enter into a bond, with two such sufficient sureties as the court should approve, to pay such sum as should be recovered by H. in respect of the debt due to him from the debtor, together with costs; and that all proceedings on the summons should be stayed until the court in which such proceedings should be taken had come to a decision thereon. S. drew up the order, which was the first of the kind made by the county court in pursuance of the statute. During the seven days a correspondence took place as to the proposed sureties, who were objected to by S. on behalf of H., and no bond having been executed in consequence, a petition in bankruptcy was, by the express order of H., presented by S. on the 21st of April, and on the same day a receiver was appointed, the act of bankruptcy alleged being that the petitioning creditor had served on J. a debtor's summons, and that he being a trader had for seven days neglected to pay the debt alleged to be due, or to secure or compound for the same. J. objected to the petition; and after several hearings the county court judge on the 8th of May adjudged him to be bankrupt. This decision was affirmed by the chief judge in bankruptcy, but was afterwards reversed by the lord justice of appeal, who annulled the proceedings on the ground that the order of the 12th of April was a stay of proceedings at the time of the petition and adjudication:—Held (per Kelly, C.B., and Cleasby, B.), that upon these facts an action was maintainable by J. against S. for maliciously and without reasonable and probable cause presenting the petition and causing him to be adjudicated a bankrupt. Held, contrà (per Martin, B., and Bramwell, B.), that such an action was not maintainable by J. against S. Johnson v. Emerson, 40 L. J., Ex. 201; L. R. 6 Ex. 329; 25 L. T. 337.

A declaration alleged that the defendant falsely and maliciously, and without any reasonable or probable cause, filed a bankruptcy petition against the plaintiff, and falsely and maliciously, and without reasonable or probable cause, caused and procured him to be declared a bankrupt:—Held, that this charge was established by proof that the defendant petitioned for the adjudication, and, by depositions false in fact, and maliciously made, induced the commissioner to adjudicate the bankruptcy, although it appeared that, even if the depositions had been true, the adjudication could not have been supported in law. Farley v. Danks, 4 El. & Bl. 493; 24 L. J., Q. B. 244; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 331; 3 W. R. 173.

An action lay for maliciously suing out a commission of bankruptcy, notwithstanding the specific remedy given by 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 23. Brown v. Chapman, 3 Burr. 1418; 1 W. Bl. 427.

Although the commission was afterwards superseded. Chapman v. Pickersgill, 2 Wils. K. B. 145.

Serving Notice requiring Debtor to make an Assignment for his Creditors.]—A notice served upon a debtor in accordance with s. 14 of the Statutes of Canada (32 & 33 Vict. c. 16), requiring him to make an assignment of his estate and effects for the benefit of his creditors, being a legal proceeding is primâ facie privileged, and no action will lie for the delivery of it to a third person for service upon the plaintiff unless upon proof of express malice. Bank of British North America v. Strong, 1 App. Cas. 307; 34 L. T. 627—P. C.

Onus.]—Evidence of facts upon which the act of bankruptcy was probably proved, but which facts do not amount to an act of bankruptcy, is sufficient to call upon the defendant to prove the affirmative of probable cause. Cotton v. James, 1 B. & Ad. 128.

The adjudication of the commissioners does not in itself negative the want of probable cause. Ib.

Whether Adjudication set aside.]—A bankrupt whose adjudication in bankruptcy has not been set aside cannot maintain an action for maliciously procuring the bankruptcy, and such an action may be summarily dismissed upon summons as frivolous and vexatious. Metropolitan Bank v. Pooley, 54 L. J., Q. B. 449; 10 App. Cas. 210; 53 L. T. 163; 33 W. R. 709; 49 J. P. 756—H. L. (E.)

It must be averred and proved, if traversed, that the commission was superseded before the commencement of the action; and if this fact is not proved, the plaintiff ought to be nonsuited, though it was not averred in the declaration, and though the defendant, who might have demurred for the omission, has not done so. Whitworth v. Hall, 2 B. & Ad. 695; 9 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 297.

It is not sufficient to prove merely that the commission was superseded, as a supersedeas may proceed upon strict legal grounds, and does not, therefore, furnish evidence of the want of probable cause. Hay v. Weakley, 5 Car. & P. 361.

Presentation of Petition to wind up Company.]—An action will lie for falsely and maliciously, and without reasonable or probable cause, presenting a petition under the Companies Acts, 1862, 1867, to wind up a trading company, even although no pecuniary loss or special damage to the company can be proved, for the presentation of the petition is, from its very nature, calculated to injure the credit of the company. The defendant, who had been a shareholder in the plaintiff company, instructed certain brokers to sell his shares, and signed a transfer. The brokers informed him that they could not sell the shares, but the transfer was not returned to him. After waiting ten or eleven days he presented a petition to wind up the company on the ground of fraud in its formation, and of the impossibility that it could carry on business at a profit. At the time of presenting the petition the company, which was a trading company, had property of a large amount, and its debts were trifling. The defendant was not then, in fact, a shareholder; his shares had been sold, and the transfer had been registered. Upon discovering that his shares had been sold, he gave notice that the petition would be withdrawn, and it was ultimately dismissed without costs. The company having brought an action for falsely and maliciously, and without reasonable or probable cause, presenting the petition, at the trial no proof of damage to the company was given beyond the liability to pay its own costs of defending itself against the petition; and, upon this ground, the company was nonsuited at the close of its case:—Held, that although the liability to pay "extra costs" was not a ground of legal damage, nevertheless the nonsuit was wrong, and a new trial must be had, because an action would lie for falsely and maliciously, and without reasonable or probable cause, presenting the petition to wind up, which was necessarily injurious to the credit of the company. Quartz Hill Gold Mining Co. v. Eyre, 52 L. J., Q. B. 488; 11 Q. B. D. 674; 49 L. T. 249; 31 W. R. 668—C. A.

Held, further, that as at the time of presenting the petition the company was an existing and going concern, and had valuable property and was solvent, unless other facts could be shown, there was a want of reasonable and probable cause for presenting the petition, and the opinion of the jury ought to have been taken whether the defendant had been actuated by malice. Ib.

Held, further, that if the defendant as a matter of business ought, in the opinion of the jury, to have inferred from the failure of the brokers to return the transfer, that the shares had been sold, the defendant would have had no reasonable or probable cause to suppose that he was still a shareholder. Johnson v. Emerson, col. 715, commented upon. Ib.

On the second trial the judge asked the jury whether the defendant at the time he presented the petition honestly believed that he was a shareholder; but they were not asked whether the defendant had taken reasonable care to inform himself of the fact:—Held, that the latter question should have been left to the jury, and that there must be a new trial. Quartz Hill Gold Mining Co. v. Eyre, 50 L. T. 274.

3. Arrest for Debt.

a. When Wrongful.

Abolished save in certain cases by the Debtors Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 62).

Process and Arrest.]—If in a declaration for a malicious arrest it is averred that the plaintiff was arrested, that allegation is satisfied by proof of a detainer. Whalley v. Pepper, 7 Car. & P. 506.

An officer, who had a writ against a man, sent to him to say so, and asked him to appoint a time to come to his office and execute a bail-bond, which he did:—Held, not to constitute an arrest, so as to support an action for a malicious arrest, although the original plaintiff had no cause of action. Berry v. Adamson, 6 B. & C. 528; 9 D. & R. 558; 2 Car. & P. 503; 5 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 215.

An allegation that the defendant maliciously caused the plaintiff to be arrested, and to be detained in prison, until, in order to procure his release, he was forced to procure bail, is not a divisible allegation; and if there was a giving of bail proved, but no evidence of any arrest, it is not sufficient. Ib.

But an averment in an action for a malicious arrest, that the defendant detained the plaintiff until he found bail, if some detention is proved, is sufficient to support the action, although no bail was put in. Bristow v. Heywood, 1 Stark. 48; 4 Camp. 213.

In an action for malicious arrest, it should be averred that the arrest was "malicious." Saxon v. Castle, 1 N. & P. 661; 6 A. & E. 652; W. W. & D. 305; 6 L. J., K. B. 177.

And without reasonable or probable cause. Rout or Rovet v. Lewis, 5 D. & L. 371; 17 L. J., Ex. 99.

A declaration alleged that the defendant arrested the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff had been detained in custody until he was discharged by reason of the defendant's not having declared against him; that the defendant might have procured judgment in that suit if he had thought fit, but that he afterwards, without any reasonable or probable cause, maliciously arrested him a second time for the same cause of action, without the leave of any judge of the court:—Held, that the declaration was good, as it must be taken that the second arrest was maliciously made by the defendant without the contemplation of any benefit to himself. Heywood v. Collinge, 1 P. & D. 202; 9 A. & E. 268; 1 W. W. & H. 702; 8 L. J., Q. B. 6; 2 Jur. 1038.

Amount due.]—If a plaintiff maliciously takes a defendant in execution for a debt, in respect of which he has been discharged under the Irish Insolvent Act, he is liable to an action on the case. Ewart v. Jones, 3 D. & L. 252; 14 M. & W. 774; 15 L. J., Ex. 18.

But trespass will not lie against a plaintiff or his attorney for suing out execution, and arresting thereon a defendant who has obtained an order for protection from process under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 116. Yearsley v. Heane, 3 D. & L. 265; 14 M. & W. 322.

Where a cause (in which the defendant has been arrested) is referred to arbitration, and the award is given in favour of the defendant, he cannot on that ground maintain an action against the plaintiff for a malicious arrest. Habershon v. Troby, Peake, Ad. C. 181; 3 Esp. 33.

No action lies against an execution creditor or his attorney for issuing a fi. fa. indorsed to levy the whole sum recovered by a judgment, which, to the knowledge of both, has been partly satisfied by payments, unless malice and want of probable cause are alleged in the declaration, and proved. De Medina v. Grove, 10 Q. B. 152; 15 L. J., Q. B. 284; 10 Jur. 426. S. C. affirmed, 10 Q. B. 152; 17 L. J., Q. B. 321; 11 Jur. 145—Ex. Ch.

But an action lies at the suit of a debtor taken in execution under a ca. sa. upon a judgment against an execution creditor who maliciously and without any reasonable or probable cause, causes and procures a warrant to be issued upon such writ, indorsed to levy a larger sum than remains due upon the judgment, and the debtor to be taken to satisfy such sum, there being no difference between an arrest on mesne process and an arrest under a ca. sa. on a judgment. Churchill v. Siggers, 3 El. & Bl. 929; 2 C. L. R. 1509; 23 L. J., Q. B. 308; 18 Jur. 773; 2 W. R. 551.

A. having issued a writ of summons against B., specially indorsed for 28*l.*, B., without appearing to the writ, paid 10*l.* to A. on account of the debt. A. afterwards signed judgment, for default of appearance, for the full amount of 28*l.* and costs, and issued a ca. sa. indorsed for that amount, under which B. was arrested, and paid the sum demanded. B. having brought an action against A. for maliciously, and without probable cause, signing judgment and issuing execution:—Held, that whilst the judgment stood for the whole amount, it estopped the plaintiff from denying the correctness of the judgment or of the execution. Huffer v. Allen, 4 H. & C. 634; 36 L. J., Ex. 17; L. R. 2 Ex. 15; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 930; 15 L. T. 225; 15 W. R. 281.

A declaration stated that the defendants (the one, A., acting as attorney for B., the other) recovered a judgment against the plaintiff for 30*l.* 7*s.* 4*d.*, that the plaintiff paid and satisfied to B. the debt recovered by such judgment, except 15*s.* 8*d.*, and that they sued out a ca. sa. upon the judgment, and wrongfully and maliciously, and without any reasonable or probable cause, indorsed the writ with directions to levy 5*l.* 14*s.* 8*d.*, and interest, and 1*l.* 7*s.* for the costs of execution; that the plaintiff tendered and offered to pay to the defendants 3*l.* 8*s.*, which was sufficient to pay and discharge all that was recoverable against the plaintiff upon the judgment and writ, together with the costs of the writ of execution, and all other legal and incidental expenses; and that they wrongfully and maliciously, and without any reasonable or probable cause, procured the sheriff to arrest the plaintiff, and detain him until he paid 7*l.* 6*s.* 9*d.*, whereas the sum of 3*l.* 8*s.* and no more was due and owing from and recoverable against the plaintiff upon the judgment:—Held, that the declaration disclosed a good cause of action, and that it was not necessary to allege that the plaintiff had obtained his discharge by order of the court, or a judge, so as to show that the proceedings had terminated in his favour. Gilding v. Eyre, 10 C. B. (N.S.) 592; 31 L. J., C. P. 174; 5 L. T. 136; 9 W. R. 946.

A declaration, in an action by an execution debtor against his creditor for maliciously and without reasonable or probable cause arresting the plaintiff for more than was due on the judgment, alleged as damage that the plaintiff was always, during his detention, able and willing, and offered to pay, and was finally discharged from imprisonment by paying the smaller sum; and that he was put to costs and expenses in and about his maintenance during his detention, and in and about obtaining his discharge:—Held, that the declaration sufficiently showed special damage resulting to the plaintiff from the arrest, inasmuch as to entitle him to a verdict he must show, not merely that he was arrested and detained for a greater amount than was due, however properly indorsed, but also that, by reason of the arrest and detention for the larger sum, his imprisonment was prolonged, or the expense of obtaining his discharge increased. Jenings v. Florence, 2 C. B. (N.S.) 467; 26 L. J., C. P. 277; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 774.

By a cognovit A. confessed the action, and that B. had sustained damage to the amount of 3,000*l.*, and agreed, that, in case A. should make default in payment of 259*l.* on the 7th of May, B. should be at liberty to enter up judgment for 3,000*l.*, and sue out execution for 259*l.* and costs, which would have left a principal sum of 1,650*l.* due to B. A. not having paid the 259*l.* on the 7th of May, B. entered up judgment, and sued out execution for 3,011*l.*, indorsed with a direction to the sheriff, requiring him to levy 1,967*l.*, and A. was arrested and detained in prison for that sum:—Held, that A. might maintain an action against B. for having caused him to be arrested for a larger sum than he ought. Wentworth v. Bullen, 9 B. & C. 840; 9 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 33.

In Inferior Courts.]—An action was held to lie for holding to bail in an inferior court, when no more than 30*s.* was due. Smith v. Cattel, 2 Wils. K. B. 376.

So, when an inferior court had no jurisdiction over the cause. Goslin v. Wilcock, 2 Wils. K. B. 302.

Under Irregular Process.]—An action of trespass is not maintainable where the process is irregular merely, and not void. Reddell v. Pakeman, 2 C. M. & R. 30; 1 Gale, 104; 5 Tyr. 721; 3 D. P. C. 714; 4 L. J., Ex. 130. S. P., Kilshaw v. Crowther, 3 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 101.

A., being in the custody of the marshal of the king's bench prison, was brought up to that court upon an order of court, and charged with an attachment for contempt, upon which attachment he was afterwards detained in custody:—Held, that trespass was maintainable against the party who caused the order to be served on the marshal. Bryant v. Clutton, 1 M. & W. 408; 5 D. P. C. 66; 2 Gale, 50; 1 Tyr. & G. 843; 5 L. J., Ex. 182.

An action for false imprisonment could be maintained against a sheriff for arresting a person who was wrongly named in the process, although he was the person against whom it was issued. Carridge v. Lautour, 7 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 33.

Trespass would not lie against a plaintiff or his attorney for suing out execution, and arresting thereon a party who had obtained an order for protection from process, under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 116. Yearsley v. Heane, 3 D. & L. 265; 14 M. & W. 322.

If an attorney issues a ca. sa., which is afterwards set aside on the ground that the sum of 20*l.* was not due, the client is liable to an action for false imprisonment at the suit of the party arrested. Collett v. Foster, 2 H. & N. 356; 26 L. J., Ex. 412; 5 W. R. 790.

And the defendant who is taken under a ca. sa., issued on a judgment for less than 20*l.*, may maintain trespass against the creditor and his attorney, although the writ has not been set aside. Brooks v. Hodgkinson, 4 H. & N. 712; 29 L. J., Ex. 93; 7 W. R. 735.

Evidence of Bona Fides.]—To an action for false imprisonment of the plaintiff, the defendant pleaded, that a judgment was recovered against the plaintiff, and that a ca. sa. issued thereon, under which he was arrested. Replication, that the judgment was signed upon a warrant of attorney, and that the judgment and ca. sa. were set aside by a judge's order, which was afterwards made a rule of court, on the ground that the warrant of attorney was never delivered as a complete authority to do or suffer any of the acts therein specified, but as an escrow to take effect in an event which had never happened, and was to be kept by the plaintiff, in his own possession, till such event should happen; and that the defendant, by an improper contrivance, obtained and kept possession of it, without the plaintiff's consent; that judgment was signed under colour of that document, and the ca. sa. issued upon the judgment:—Held, that the replication was good, as it sufficiently appeared that the ca. sa. was set aside, not on the ground of its being erroneous, but on the ground of irregularity, or want of good faith. Brown v. Jones, 15 M. & W. 191; 3 D. & L. 678; 15 L. J., Ex. 210.

The defendant having issued a writ of summons against the plaintiff specially indorsed for 34*l.*, signed judgment in default of appearance for the full amount and costs, and issued a ca. sa. indorsed for that amount, under which he was arrested, and paid the sum demanded. The plaintiff then applied to set aside the judgment on the ground that the sum of 16*l.* only was due to the defendant, and the master set aside the judgment on payment of costs by the plaintiff; the plaintiff then brought an action against the defendant for false imprisonment:—Held, that as the judgment was regular, and as it must be taken that it was set aside as a favour to the plaintiff, and not for irregularity or any bad faith on the defendant's part, the action could not be maintained. Smith v. Sydney, 39 L. J., Q. B. 144; L. R. 5 Q. B. 203; 22 L. T. 16; 18 W. R. 628.

It will be evidence of malice in an arrest on mesne process that the plaintiff has taken a bill for the debt, and it will also negative reasonable and probable cause. And though the party has been discharged on the condition of bringing no action for trespass, that does not preclude an action on the case. Macfarlane v. Ellis, 1 F. & F. 288.

b. Under Judge's Order.

False Statement to Judge.]—An action for maliciously arresting on a capias issued by a judge lies only where the party obtaining the order for the capias has imposed on the judge by some false statement or suggestio falsi, and thereby satisfied him of the existence of the debt to the requisite amount, and that there was reasonable ground for supposing that the debtor was about to quit the country. Daniels v.

Fielding, 16 M. & W. 200; 4 D. & L. 329; 16 L. J., Ex. 153; 10 Jur. 1061.

Such an action cannot be supported on the mere fact, that the defendant, when he procured the order and arrest, had no reasonable or probable cause for believing that the plaintiff was going abroad. Ib.

A creditor receiving information from one person that his debtor is going abroad, and obtaining an order to arrest him on an affidavit, which is afterwards held to be insufficient and to some extent untrue, is not therefore liable to an action for maliciously obtaining the arrest without reasonable cause, there being enough to justify the belief that the debtor was going abroad, and the payment into court of a sum over 20*l.* is a sufficient admission of a debt to justify the application. Nerill v. Loadman, 2 F. & F. 313.

A declaration stated that the defendant, not having any reasonable or probable case of action against the plaintiff, to the amount for which he maliciously caused the plaintiff to be arrested, falsely, maliciously, and unjustly procured from a judge an order for a capias, by falsely and maliciously representing to the judge that the plaintiff was justly and truly indebted to the defendant in a certain sum, by means of a false affidavit shown and uttered by the defendant before the judge, and thereupon maliciously caused a capias to be issued, and without any reasonable or probable cause of action, caused the plaintiff to be arrested:—Held, that the declaration was sufficient, and that it need not more particularly set out the false statement, by which the judge was induced to make the order, nor show that the facts were false within the defendant's knowledge, or that he had not reasonable or probable cause for believing them to be true. Ross v. Norman, 1 L. M. & P. 409; 5 Ex. 359; 19 L. J., Ex. 329.

The plaintiff alleged that the defendants maliciously and without reasonable or probable cause, obtained a writ of capias against him in an action on certain promissory notes of which he was the maker and the defendants were the indorsees for value, by falsely and maliciously representing by a false affidavit that he was about to leave the province, and alleging his arrest thereunder and his subsequent discharge by an order of court on its appearing that he was not about to leave the province. Plea, that having been informed and believing that the plaintiff was about to leave the province the defendants caused proceedings to be taken to recover their debt, which was of long standing. The judge directed the jury that if the defendants did not at the time of the arrest believe that their debt would be otherwise lost, and acted with a view to protect the interests of the indorsers of the notes rather than their own, that would be evidence of want of reasonable and probable cause for arresting, and entitle the plaintiff to damages:—Held, that there was misdirection, which justified a new trial. There was reasonable and probable cause for the arrest if the defendants believed that the plaintiff was about to leave the province, and that their remedy against him would be lost if he were not arrested; notwithstanding they might have believed that they could recover the debt from the indorsers, and were endeavouring to protect the interests of the indorsers. Bank of British North America v. Strong, 1 App. Cas. 307; 34 L. T. 627—P. C.

In an action for maliciously and without reasonable or probable cause obtaining a judge's order to hold the plaintiff to bail, and without reasonable or probable cause for believing and not believing, that the plaintiff was about to quit England, suing out a capias, and wrongfully and maliciously causing the plaintiff to be arrested under such writ, and to be thereupon imprisoned, the evidence was, that the defendants obtained the order, and caused a capias to be issued thereupon; that the plaintiff was afterwards found in the custody of the sheriff; that one of the defendants being informed (in the presence of the other) that the plaintiff was in custody at their suit, observed that they had got him fast and meant to keep him; that an application by the plaintiff to the judge for his discharge from custody was opposed by the defendants; and that, on the order for his discharge as to that writ being left with the officer in whose custody he was, he was released:—Held, that this was sufficient to sustain the action without proof of any warrant. Petrie v. Lamont, 4 Scott (N.R.) 335; 3 Man. & G. 702; 11 L. J., C. P. 63.

In an action against a builder, his attorney, and the attorney's clerk, for maliciously and without reasonable or probable cause procuring an order for the arrest of the plaintiff in an action of debt, it appeared that he, being a Roman Catholic priest, had entered into a contract with the builder for the erection of a church, the contract containing a condition for payment only on an architect's certificates; and all the money originally due upon it having been paid, and a further claim made by the builder for extras, which the architect refused to allow, thereupon the builder consulted his attorney, who sent his clerk to serve the plaintiff, and see what he would say; and on the clerk's statement as to what he said (viz. that the plaintiff had said he was going abroad at some time, the precise words being in dispute), the attorney caused his clerk to make an affidavit thereof, and his client to make an affidavit of debt, and of belief that the plaintiff was going abroad, upon which a judge made the order, the affidavit not making mention of the contract and its condition, or of the architect's refusal to certify, or of the plaintiff's permanent office:—Held, first, that there was no reasonable or probable cause for the proceeding, as there was no reason to suppose that the plaintiff was going abroad for any lengthened time, or to avoid the action; secondly, that if the proceeding was for any improper purpose, as to coerce the plaintiff into more speedy payment, it would be malicious; and thirdly, that in such case the attorney would be liable, but that its merely being an improper proceeding, and without reasonable cause, was not per se evidence of malice, assuming bonâ fides. Melia v. Neate, 3 F. & F. 757.

G., who had advertised his farming stock and effects for sale, was arrested at the suit of B., on a judge's order to hold to bail, made upon an affidavit of C. that G. had stated his intention to go to Jersey to avoid his creditors, but he was at once discharged upon paying the amount to the officer. On the following day he was arrested at the suit of the defendants, upon a like order made upon the affidavit of their London agent, that he had read and believed the statement in the affidavit of C. to be true. It eventually appeared that C.'s statement was untrue, and G. was discharged by a judge's order. At the trial of the action against the defendants for arrestin him maliciously, and without reasonable and probable cause, the agent was called on their part, and he swore that he believed, without further inquiry, the statement in C.'s affidavit to be true at the time that he applied for and obtained the order to hold to bail, and thereupon the judge directed the verdict to be entered for the defendants on the ground that there was reasonable and probable cause for the arrest, and that the action could only be maintained on proof, first, of malice on the part of the defendants, and secondly, of want of reasonable and probable cause:—Held, that there was reasonable and probable cause for the arrest, and that there was no duty on the defendants or their agent to make inquiry into the truth of the facts stated in C.'s affidavit before making an application based thereon for an order to hold the plaintiff to bail. Gibson v. Veasey, 15 L. T. 586.

4. Other Malicious Proceedings.

In Court-martial.]—An action will not lie for a malicious prosecution of a court-martial by a captain in the navy against his commander-in-chief. Sutton v. Johnstone, 1 Bro. P. C. 76; 1 Term Rep. 493, 784.

An inferior officer cannot maintain an action against his superior officer in respect of any matter done by such superior officer in the discharge of his duty, but he must pursue the mode of redress prescribed by the articles of war. Dawkins v. Paulet (Lord), 9 B. & S. 768; 39 L. J., Q. B. 53; L. R. 5 Q. B. 94; 21 L. T. 584; 18 W. R. 336.

Abuse of the Process of Court.]—In an action for abusing the process of the court, in order illegally to compel a party to give up his property, it is not necessary to prove that the action in which the process was improperly employed has been determined, or to aver that the process was sued out without reasonable or proper cause. Granger v. Hill, 3 Scott, 561; 4 Bing. (N.C.) 212; 1 Arn. 42; 7 L. J., C. P. 85; 2 Jur. 235

Procuring Sureties to Keep the Peace.]—In an action for maliciously, and without reasonable or probable cause, going before a magistrate, and procuring the plaintiff to be held to bail to keep the peace, it is not necessary, as in an action for a malicious prosecution, to aver that the proceeding before the magistrate was determined in favour of the plaintiff, such a proceeding being ex parte, and the truth of the statement made by the applicant to the magistrate not being controvertible. Steward v. Gromett, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 191; 29 L. J., C. P. 170; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 776.

In an action for laying a complaint before a magistrate of threatening language, in consequence of which the plaintiff was taken into custody and imprisoned till he found bail; if it appears that the threat was used in consequence of a private dispute, and was not uttered to the defendant, but related to him by a servant, who gave evidence of it before a magistrate, the question for the jury will be, whether the defendant acted bonâ fide upon the threat mentioned to him, or merely used it as a pretext for accomplishing his own private purposes. Venafra v. Johnson, 3 M. & Scott, 847; 10 Bing. 301; 6 Car. & P. 50; 3 L. J., C. P. 51.

Filing Judges' Orders.]—A trader gave B. a judge's order for payment of debt and costs to be taxed: the costs were duly taxed, and the amount of debt and costs paid; and afterwards, and within twenty-one days from the order, B. caused it to be filed:—Held, that, whether the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 137, made the filing of the order, under the circumstances, imperative or not, no action would lie against B. for filing it, inasmuch as it could not be said to have been done without reasonable or probable cause. Dimmock v. Bowley, 2 C. B. (N.S.) 542; 26 L. J., C. P. 231; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1059.

Registering Charges.]—Where, in a suit in equity, an order was made that G. should pay into the name of the accountant-general, in trust in the cause, a certain sum admitted by his answer to have been the amount of the sale of a trust fund; and the solicitor for the plaintiff in the suit registered it under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 19, and G. was in consequence prevented from disposing of his lands:—Held, that the registering of the order was not of itself a wrongful act, and that no action could be maintained for it without proof of malice. Gibbs v. Pike, 9 M. & W. 351; 1 D. (N.S.) 409; 12 L. J., Ex. 257; 6 Jur. 465.

Wrongful Registration of Bill of Sale.]—No action will lie for the wrongful registration of a document erroneously supposed to be a bill of sale unless the plaintiff proves malice and want of reasonable and probable cause. Horsley v. Style, 4 R. 574; 69 L. T. 222; 58 J. P. 38—C. A.

Distraining.]—A count for distraining for more rent than is due is bad, although it alleges it to have been done maliciously, for an act which does not amount to a legal injury cannot be actionable, because it is done with a bad intent. Stevenson v. Newnham, 13 C. B. 285; 22 L. J., C. P. 110; 17 Jur. 600—Ex. Ch.

In an action for a malicious distress, the plaintiff cannot recover his extra costs as between attorney and client, incurred in an action of replevin which the plaintiff had brought to recover the goods distrained. Grace v. Morgan, 1 Hodges, 398.

Outlawry.]—The debtor's going abroad was held reasonable cause for the creditor's proceeding to outlawry, notwithstanding the creditor might know that the debtor had an agent in England. Drummond v. Pigou, 2 Bing. (N.C.) 114; 1 Hodges, 190; 2 Scott, 228; 4 L. J., C. P. 294.

Conspiracy.]—A declaration, stating that the plaintiff being possessed of premises, the defendant and S. maliciously conspired to get possession of a portion of the premises, and to set up illicit stills there; and thereupon, in pursuance of the conspiracy, they, by falsely, and fraudulently representing to the plaintiff that S. required such portion of the premises for the purpose of making ink, induced the plaintiff to permit S. to enter thereon; and thereupon the defendant and S., in further pursuance of the conspiracy, entered thereupon, and set up illicit stills; and in further pursuance of the conspiracy, maliciously represented, and made it appear and be believed, that it was the plaintiff who had so set up the stills; and also, that, in further pursuance of the conspiracy, the defendant and

S. manufactured in that portion of the premises exciseable articles contrary to the statute; and then maliciously represented, and made it appear and be believed it was the plaintiff who manufactured such articles, and that he was knowingly aiding and concurring in the manufacturing of such articles, by means whereof an officer of the excise found in the said portion of the premises manufacturing, and in the course of manufacturing, divers goods, and did at the same time discover in and about such place the plaintiff, who, by reason of the premises, appeared to be assisting in the manufacture, &c., whereupon the officer arrested the plaintiff, and he was convicted by a magistrate in the penalty of 30*l.*:—Held, bad, as neither stating a good cause of action in the nature of conspiracy, nor of an action for a malicious prosecution. Barber v. Lesiter, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 175; 29 L. J., C. P. 161; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 654.

—— To issue Commission of Lunacy.]—An action lies for a conspiracy in issuing a commission in lunacy. Turner v. Turner, Gow, 50.

To support such an action, malice and a want of probable cause must be proved; but on proof of a total want of probable cause, malice may be implied; and although express malice is proved, some slight evidence of a want of probable cause must be given. Ib.

Procuring Breach of Contract.]—An action lies for maliciously inducing a person to break his contract with the plaintiff. Whether the contract is between a master and servant or not is immaterial. Bowen v. Hall (6 Q. B. D. 333) followed. Temperton v. Russell, 62 L. J., Q. B. 412; [1893] 1 Q. B. 715; 4 R. 376; 69 L. T. 78; 41 W. R. 565; 57 J. P. 676—C. A.

—— Intention to injure Plaintiff—"Malice."]—If the persuasion is used for the purpose of injuring the plaintiff, or of benefiting the defendant at the expense of the plaintiff, the act becomes malicious. Ib.

—— Special Damage.]—The plaintiffs, under an agreement with the committee of the Stock Exchange, were allowed to collect information as to the prices of stocks and shares. The plaintiffs entered into contracts with their own subscribers which contained a stipulation that the information supplied to them by the plaintiffs should not be sold or communicated to non-subscribers:—Held, that in order to support an action against the defendant for inducing one of the plaintiffs' subscribers to break his contract by communicating the information to him, it was not necessary to prove specific damage, but that it was enough to show that the act complained of was of such a nature that damage to the plaintiffs ought to be inferred. Exchange Telegraph Co. v. Gregory, 65 L. J., Q. B. 262; [1896] 1 Q. B. 147; 74 L. T. 83; 60 J. P. 52—C. A. See also Exchange Telegraph Co. v. Central News, 66 L. J., Ch. 672; [1897] 2 Ch. 48; 76 L. T. 591; 45 W. R. 595.

Inducing Person not to Enter into Contract.]—It is not actionable maliciously to induce a person not to enter into a contract. Allen v. Flood, 67 L. J., Q. B. 119; [1898] A. C. 1; 77 L. T. 717; 46 W. R. 258—H. L. (E.) S. P., Huttly v. Simmons, 67 L. J., Q. B. 213; [1898] 1 Q. B. 181.

Rejecting Elector's Votes.]—Action for maliciously rejecting the plaintiff's vote at an election of vestrymen and auditors under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120. Plea, that the plaintiff was rated to a church rate more than six months before the election, and at the time of the election the rate was due and unpaid. Replication, that the rate was void in this, that it was made for defraying expenses for which a rate could not be made. Rejoinder, that the rate was good on the face of it, and had never been quashed:—Held, that the plaintiff having no means of questioning the rate, the rejoinder was not good. But that the replication was good, as it shewed that the rate was not due, therefore that the plaintiff was entitled to vote; and that the action lay, malice being admitted on these pleadings. Tozer v. Child, 6 El. & Bl. 289; 25 L. J., Q. B. 337; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 928; 4 W. R. 513.

In an action against a returning officer for refusing a vote, the malice of the defendant is an essential ingredient to support the action. Tozer v. Child, 7 El. & Bl. 377; 26 L. J., Q. B. 151; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 409; 5 W. R. 287—Ex. Ch.

Vexatious Ejectment.]—An action on the case to recover damages against the lessor of the plaintiff, in a vexatious ejectment, is not maintainable. Purton v. Honnor, 1 Bos. & P. 205.

Annoyance by Musical and other Sounds.]—Where a tenant of a house makes musical and other sounds for the purpose of vexing and annoying his next door neighbour, this is in point of law done maliciously, and is an unreasonable user of the house that may be restrained by injunction. Christie v. Davey, 62 L. J., Ch. 439; [1893] 1 Ch. 316; 3 R. 210.

Prosecuting Civil Action.]—If A., in the name of B., prosecutes an action against C. maliciously, and without reasonable and probable cause, C. has no action against A. unless he has thereby sustained legal damage. Cotterell v. Jones, 11 C. B. 713; 21 L. J., C. P. 2; 16 Jur. 88.

If C. has thereby sustained legal damage, an action lies. Ib.

Semble, no action will lie against a party for inciting a third person to bring a civil action against a plaintiff without reasonable or probable cause. Fixaz or Finan v. Nicholls, 2 C. B. 501; 15 L. J., C. P. 125; 10 Jur. 50.

—— Party interested in Suit.]—An action cannot be maintained against a third person on the ground that he was a mover of and had an interest in a suit, in the absence of malice and want of probable cause. Ram Coomar Coondoo v. Chunder Canto Mookerjee, 2 App. Cas. 186—P. C.

Defending without Authority.]—A declaration stated that the defendant was an attorney, that a writ of summons had been issued against the plaintiff at the suit of A., but no further proceedings had been had, nor would the plaintiff have defended the same, nor had the defendant been retained by the plaintiff to defend the action, or take any step therein or in relation thereto, yet the defendant wrongfully, and without the consent of the plaintiff, entered an appearance for the plaintiff in the action, and defended the same, and such proceedings were had thereupon that A. recovered judgment against the plaintiff for 83*l.* 9*s.*, and thereupon execution issued against him, and he was forced to pay the sum recovered, and 9*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.* for costs of the execution:—Held, bad, in arrest of judgment.

Westaway v. Frost, 17 L. J., Q. B. 286; 12 Jur. 698.

Opposing Grant of Letters Patent.]—A count alleged that the plaintiff was the first and true inventor of certain improvements in the manufacture of fire-arms, and had petitioned for a patent; that his petition had been referred to the solicitor-general, who had allowed the title of his invention to be amended in certain particulars, and given a certificate of allowance; yet the defendant falsely, fraudulently, maliciously and wrongfully, and without any reasonable or probable cause, represented to the solicitor-general that he had an interest in opposing a grant of letters patent to the plaintiff, and gave notice that he had applied for a patent, and obtained provisional protection for a certain invention, and that in consequence of the alteration in the title of the plaintiff's patent, he had reason to apprehend that such alteration in the title might admit of his invention being embraced in the plaintiff's patent, whereby the solicitor-general refused to allow the plaintiff's application for letters patent to proceed, and he was put to expense in opposing a grant of letters patent to the defendant:—Held, that the special damage alleged did not naturally flow from the grievances charged, and that, without it, the count disclosed no cause of action. Haddan v. Lott, 15 C. B. 411; 3 C. L. R. 144; 24 L. J., C. P. 49.

Setting up Wrongful Claim.] — If special damage results from a claim made to goods, an action against the claimant may be maintained if he makes the claim maliciously and without any reasonable or probable cause. Green v. Button, 1 Gale, 349; 2 C. M. & R. 707; 1 Tyr. & G. 118; 5 L. J., Ex. 81.

It is a sufficient special damage that the party with whom a contract has been made for the sale of the goods refuses to deliver them in consequence of the claim, he not being under a perfect obligation to deliver the goods. Ib.

Issuing Extents.]—A declaration stated that the defendant maliciously, and without reasonable or probable cause, caused to be issued out of the court of exchequer a writ, on which an inquisition was held, and the debt deposed to by the defendant was found to be due from the plaintiff to the crown; that afterwards the defendant, maliciously, and without reasonable or probable cause, caused to be sued out a writ of extent against the plaintiff, directed to the sheriff, who levied thereupon and held the goods until the writ of extent was superseded by the court. Plea, that the writ of supersedeas was issued as matter of grace and favour of the crown:—Held, first, that the causing the writ of extent to be sued out was the gist of the action, and that the declaration was sufficient, inasmuch as it showed the discharge of that writ; and, secondly, that the plea was bad. Craig v. Hasel, 3 G. & D. 299; 4 Q. B. 481; 12 L. J., Q. B. 181; 7 Jur. 368.

Issuing Foreign Attachment.]—A declaration that the defendant maliciously and without reasonable and probable cause procured an attachment to be issued out of the mayor's court, to attach a debt due to the plaintiff, is bad, for not showing that the proceedings in the suit in the mayor's court had been terminated. Parton v. Hill, 10 L. T. 414; 12 W. R. 753.

Rendering in Discharge of Bail.] — In an action for maliciously and without the authority of the bail causing the defendant to be rendered in discharge of his bail, it is necessary to prove express malice as well as want of authority. Porter v. Weston, 5 Bing. (N.C.) 715; 8 Scott, 25; 8 L. J., C. P. 349; 3 Jur. 507.

C. WHAT MUST BE PROVED IN SUCH ACTIONS.

1. Proceedings before a Judicial Officer.

Defamation and Malicious Prosecution.] — A claim alleged that the defendant wrote and sent to the police letters charging the plaintiff with a murder, and required his arrest, and that a superintendent, in consequence, endeavoured to arrest the plaintiff on several occasions, but was unable to meet with him; that the defendant had no reasonable or probable cause for making the charge, that the same was false, and made maliciously and with intent to injure the plaintiff, whose credit and reputation were thereby injured. On demurrer:—Held, that the claim was bad; because, if it was for libel or slander, the defamatory words were not set out; if for malicious prosecution, none had been instituted before a judicial officer. Harris v. Warre, 48 L. J., C. P. 310; 4 C. P. D. 125; 40 L. T. 429; 27 W. R. 461.

2. Termination of Proceedings favourably to Plaintiff.

Plaintiff must Show that he Succeeded.]—A plaintiff, to recover in an action for the malicious issue of process, must have had judgment in his favour in that process. Taylor v. Ford, 29 L. T. 392; 22 W. R. 47.

A declaration for maliciously setting in motion a court of competent jurisdiction is not bad, because it does not aver that the proceedings terminated in favour of the plaintiff. Reduay v. McAndrew, L. R. 9 Q. B. 74; 29 L. T. 421; 22 W. R. 60.

Therefore a declaration for maliciously and without reasonable or probable cause procuring the arrest and detention of a vessel in a county court suit for necessaries, "until the proceedings in the court in the matter of the arrest and detention were determined and the ship released," is good, without an express averment that the proceedings were determined in favour of the plaintiff. Ib.

An action for malicious prosecution cannot be maintained till the prosecution is terminated, which must appear upon the declaration. Fisher v. Bristow, 1 Dougl. 215.

A declaration in an action for a malicious prosecution for felony must state that the prosecution is at an end; and alleging that the plaintiff was discharged from his imprisonment is not sufficient. Morgan v. Hughes, 2 Term Rep. 225.

If it alleges that he was discharged by the grand jury not finding the bill, it will show a legal end to the prosecution. Ib.

It is necessary to state in a declaration every allegation proper to support the action; namely, that the defendant falsely, maliciously, and without any reasonable or probable cause, caused the plaintiff to be indicted, and to state the trial and acquittal. Carman v. Truman, 1 Bro. P. C. 101.

—— Proceedings Abroad.]—The principle that in an action for maliciously and without reasonable and probable cause setting the law of this country in motion to the damage of the plaintiff, it is essential to show that the proceeding alleged to be instituted maliciously, and without reasonable and probable cause, has terminated in favour of the plaintiff, if from its nature it is capable of such a termination, applies where an action is brought for falsely and fraudulently causing a proceeding to be taken in a foreign court to the damage of the plaintiff. Castrique v. Behrens, 3 El. & El. 709; 30 L. J., Q. B. 163; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1028; 4 L. T. 52.

—— Ex Parte.]—The rule, that in an action for a malicious prosecution the plaintiff is bound to shew a termination of the proceedings in his favour, does not apply where the proceedings, in respect of which the action is brought, are ex parte, and must of necessity terminate unfavourably to the plaintiff; as where the defendant maliciously exhibits articles or demands sureties of the peace against the plaintiff, in which cases the latter has no opportunity of controverting the oath of the defendant. Stewart v. Gromett, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 191; 29 L. J., C. P. 170; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 776.

Nature of Termination of Proceedings.]—An action lies for a malicious prosecution, though the plaintiff is acquitted on a defect in the indictment. Wicks v. Fentham, 4 Term Rep. 247; 2 R. R. 374.

So, for the malicious prosecution of a bad indictment for perjury. Pippet v. Hearn, 1 D. & R. 266; 5 B. & Ald. 634.

If a party is indicted for a felony, though he is acquitted without calling witnesses, he cannot maintain an action for a malicious prosecution, if his acquittal was the result of deliberation, and the evidence was sufficient to cause the jury to pause. Smith v. Macdonald, 3 Esp. 7.

An action for a malicious arrest cannot be maintained where the former cause was terminated by a stet processus, by the consent of the parties. Wilkinson v. Howel, M. & M. 495.

An action may be brought to recover damages for a malicious arrest, where the suit is terminated by a rule of court, and that rule is evidence of the termination of the suit. Brook v. Carpenter, 3 Bing. 297; 11 Moore, 59; 4 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 70.

The acceptance of the debt and costs, in satisfaction of the action, under a judge's order or rule of reference, is a sufficient determination of the suit. Combe v. Capron, 1 M. & Rob. 398.

An averment that the suit is wholly ended and determined, is evidenced by proof of the rule to discontinue upon payment of costs, and that the costs were taxed and paid. Bristow v. Heywood, 1 Stark. 48; 4 Camp. 213.

In an action for a malicious arrest, the plaintiff proved the averment in the declaration that the defendant's action had been discontinued by production of a rule to discontinue on payment of costs, and subsequent payment of them by the defendant:—Held, sufficient. Watkins v. Lee, 5 M. & W. 270; 7 D. P. C. 498; 8 L. J., Ex. 266; 3 Jur. 484. See also Pierce v. Street, 3 B. & Ad. 397; 1 L. J., K. B. 147; and Norrish v. Richards, 5 N. & M. 269; 1 H. & W. 437; 3 A. & E. 733; 4 L. J., K. B. 254.

When Proceedings not Quashed.]—An action for a malicious prosecution will not lie if the proceeding complained of terminated in the conviction of the plaintiff, which has not been quashed; and it makes no difference that there is no appeal from such conviction. Basébé v. Matthews, 36 L. J., M. C. 93; L. R. 2 C. P. 684; 16 L. T. 417; 15 W. R. 839.

Quære, whether an action is maintainable against a justice of the peace for wilfully and maliciously, and without reasonable and probable cause, convicting a person in a penalty in a matter in which the justice has jurisdiction, and which penalty is paid, but the conviction has been subsequently quashed. Gelen v. Hall, 2 H. & N. 379; 27 L. J., M. C. 78; 5 W. R. 757.

A person convicted of a trespass under the Game Act. 1 & 2 Will. 4. c. 32, underwent the sentence of imprisonment under that conviction, and did not appeal against it:—Held, that that conviction was an answer to an action against the informer for a malicious prosecution. Mellor v. Baddeley, 2 C. & M. 675; 4 Tyr. 962; 6 Car. & P. 374; 3 L. J., Ex. 217.

A declaration stated that A. issued against B. a writ of summons, specially indorsed, for 28*l.*; that B. paid A. 10*l.* on account; that A. afterwards, maliciously, and without reasonable or probable cause, signed judgment for default of appearance for 28*l.*, and arrested B. under a ca. sa. for that amount, and compelled him, in order to obtain his discharge, to pay 30*l.*:—Held, that the action was not maintainable, inasmuch as the judgment operated as an estoppel, and precluded the plaintiff from averring that the sum of 28*l.* was not due. Huffer v. Allen, 4 H. & C. 634; 36 L. J., Ex. 17; L. R. 2 Ex. 15; 12 Jur. (N. S.) 930; 15 L. T. 225; 15 W. R. 281.

The proper course would have been to apply to the court or a judge to reduce the judgment to the amount actually due. Ib.

3. Malice, and Absence of Reasonable and Probable Cause.

Malice.]—An act which is lawful in itself does not become unlawful because it is done with malicious intent. Bradford Corporation v. Pickles, 64 L. J., Ch. 759; [1895] A. C. 587; 11 R. 286; 73 L. T. 353; 44 W. R. 190; 60 J. P. 3—H. L. (E.) S. P. (per Lord Watson), in Allen v. Flood, 67 L. J., Q. B. 119; [1898] A. C. 1; 77 L. T. 717; 46 W. R. 258.

Malice must be proved in an action for a malicious arrest. George v. Radford, 3 Car. & P. 464.

An action will not lie against a party suing out a writ if he neglects to countermand it after payment of the debt, at least, unless malice is averred. Scheibel v. Fairbain, 1 Bos. & P. 388.

And if the costs are paid as well as the debt. Page v. Wiple, 3 East, 314; 7 R. R. 470.

In an action for a malicious arrest, the jury may imply malice from the absence of reasonable or probable cause. But this is an inference not of law but of fact, which the jury is not bound to draw. Mitchell v. Jenkins, 2 N. & M. 301; 5 B. & Ad. 588; 3 L. J., K. B. 35.

Presenting to the jury the absence of such cause as conclusive evidence of legal malice is a misdirection. Ib.

In an action against an attorney for a malicious arrest, the jury must be satisfied of the absence of any just demand on the part of his client, and also, that the attorney knew that there was not any such demand; and, applying the law for some purpose of his own, or for some other ill purpose, which the law calls malicious, committed the injury complained of by the plaintiff. In such a case it is not necessary to prove malice in the ordinary sense of the word; any improper or sinister motive will be sufficient. Stokley v. Harnidge, 8 Car. & P. 11.

A. having by his laches lost all right of action on a note indorsed by B., arrested B., and afterwards discontinued the action; these circumstances do not of themselves so exclude all probable cause as to afford a presumption of malice. Bristow v. Heywood, 1 Stark. 48; 4 Camp. 213.

The first action being non-prossed, is not of itself evidence of malice. Sinclair v. Eldred, 4 Taunt. 7.

An action lies for maliciously and without reasonable or probable cause arresting the plaintiff, and detaining him until discharged by a judge's order, pending a former suit by the defendant for the same cause of action, in which the plaintiff had been arrested and discharged out of custody by reason of the defendant's delay in declaring. Heywood v. Collinge, 9 A. & E. 268; 1 P. & D. 202; 1 W. W. & H. 702; 8 L. J., Q. B. 6; 2 Jur. 1038.

To such action it is no defence that the second suit is still pending. Ib.

E. having obtained a judgment against F. and T., he, by H., his attorney, sued out concurrent writs of ca. sa. into London and Surrey. F. was taken on the former writ, and on giving to H. a promissory note jointly with B., as his surety, was discharged. No notice of this was given to the sheriff of Surrey, and he took T. on the other writ of ca. sa. In an action against H. for maliciously omitting to give notice to the sheriff of Surrey, that the judgment had been satisfied by the arrangement with F.:—Held, that, to support this action, the jury must be satisfied that there was malice; but that to constitute malice, it was not necessary that H. should have acted from any spite or ill-will, or the like; but that if he acted as he did from any indirect motive, such as to get the debt for his client from T., or get more costs for himself, that would be malice for this purpose. Tebbutt v. Holt, 1 Car. & K. 280.

The mere fact of H. not giving notice to the sheriff of Surrey, that the judgment had been satisfied, was one from which alone the jury might infer malice; but that, if they thought H. had been defrauded when he received the promissory note, or had taken it on a representation that the parties were solvent when they were not so, this would go to negative the malice. Ib.

A plaintiff gave the defendants a warrant of attorney to enter up judgment, if certain costs should be unpaid within four days after the master should have taxed the same; the defendants procured a taxation ex parte, and by an incorrect representation to the master, obtained from him an allocatur for more costs than they were entitled to. By order of a judge, a new taxation was directed, pending which the defendants arrested the plaintiff; afterwards the new taxation was had, and the costs were reduced. The plaintiff declared for a wrongful arrest, and the defendants pleaded that the costs had been taxed, and a sum found due, for which they arrested:—Held, first, that the plaintiff might properly sue for a malicious arrest, and was not bound to declare for a deceitful representation to the master; secondly, that the plea was not supported, there having been, in effect, no taxation when the defendants arrested. Saxon v. Castle, 6 A. & E. 652; 1 N. & P. 661; 6 L. J., K. B. 177.

—— Where Privilege.]—No action lies against a sheriff or his officer for arresting a person attending court as a witness, although alleged that the defendant knew that he was privileged, and arrested him maliciously. Magnay v. Burt, D. & M. 652; 5 Q. B. 381; 12 L. J., Q. B. 225—Ex. Ch.

In an action against a party for causing the arrest of a person privileged from arrest (e.g. a witness attending on his subpœna, or a practising attorney), thereby putting him to the expense of finding bail and procuring his discharge by order of a judge, the plaintiff must show that his imprisonment at the particular time in question took place by some act of the defendant, and that he knew or recognised the circumstances accompanying it, and also knew that the party arrested was privileged at that time. Stokes v. White, 4 Tyr. 786; 1 C. M. & R. 223; 3 L. J., Ex. 321.

Intention.]—Prosecuting a person with any other motive than that of bringing a guilty party to justice is a malicious prosecution in law; as, for instance, where a prosecution is instituted against a person with a view of terrifying parties from the commission of some prevalent offence—Per Alderson and Martin, BB. Stevens v. Midland Counties Ry., 2 C. L. R. 1300; 10 Ex. 352; 23 L. J., Ex. 328; 18 Jur. 932.

To show that the prosecutor was in the wrong is not enough to make him liable in an action for malicious prosecution; it must appear that he was maliciously so, that is, obstinately and improperly in the wrong, through anger, ill-feeling, or any bad motive or feeling, differing from a sincere, honest desire to put the law in force. Darling v. Cooper, 11 Cox, C. C. 533.

An action lies for maliciously inducing a person to break his contract with the plaintiff. If the persuasion is used for the purpose of injuring the plaintiff, or of benefiting the defendant at the expense of the plaintiff, the act becomes malicious. Bowen v. Hall (6 Q. B. D. 333) followed. Temperton v. Russell, 62 L. J., Q. B. 412; [1893] 1 Q. B. 715; 4 R. 376; 69 L. T. 78; 41 W. R. 565; 57 J. P. 676—C. A.

Evidence of Malice.]—A forged cheque had been presented at the defendants' bank, and the plaintiff, because he was supposed to be one C. who was suspected, was arrested by the police on the charge of uttering it, and was then positively identified by the bank cashier as the man to whom the money was paid. In an action for malicious prosecution:—Held, that there was no evidence of the absence of reasonable and probable cause; that though, when the plaintiff set up an alibi and denied that he was C., the defendants found that evidence would be forthcoming which, if true, would establish these facts, it was no evidence of malice on the part of the defendants that they did not withdraw from the prosecution till the plaintiff had been thrice remanded; that it not being the duty of the defendants to bring this evidence, which they doubted, before the magistrates, their not doing so was no evidence of malice. Held, further, that the question whether the plaintiff was in fact C., or whether he was in fact the guilty person, was not a question relevant to the issue; and it was no evidence of malice on the part of the defendants that they put witnesses into the box, who, as the defendants well knew, would assert their belief that the plaintiff was guilty. Harrison v. National Provincial Bank, 49 J. P. 390.

The defendant having been robbed in a crowd, gave a description of the offender, of whom he caught a glimpse, to a police constable, by whom the plaintiff, upon the strength of that description, was apprehended on suspicion. The defendant met the constable while taking the plaintiff before the magistrate, and said, "This is the man," and accompanied them to the magistrate. The plaintiff was twice remanded, being let out on bail, and having surrendered and the defendant not appearing, the plaintiff was discharged. The defendant was afterwards informed that the plaintiff was not the thief, but subsequently he took out a fresh warrant against the plaintiff:—Held, in an action for false imprisonment and malicious prosecution, that the defendant was not responsible for the remands, but that the failure to appear before the magistrate at the hearing, coupled with the procuring of a fresh warrant, was evidence of want of probable cause and also of malice to support the count for malicious prosecution. Shufflebottom v. Allday, 5 W. R. 315.

—— Against whom.]—There is a material distinction, as to the liability for a malicious prosecution, between the institution of the prosecution and its continuance after it has been already instituted without authority by an agent. And the absence of reasonable and probable cause, which might be evidence of malice in the one case, will not be so in the other. Weston v. Beeman, 27 L. J., Ex. 57.

Where the party put in possession under a bill of sale issued a summons against the assignor for feloniously stealing some of the chattels assigned, and the assignees attended the hearing, and allowed the case to be opened on their behalf as prosecutors:—Held, that the absence of reasonable and probable cause would not be evidence of malice as against them. Ib.

Onus of Proof.]—In an action for malicious prosecution the burden of proof as to all the issues arising therein lies upon the plaintiff. Abrath v. North Eastern Ry., 55 L. J., Q. B. 457; 11 App. Cas. 247; 55 L. T. 63; 50 J. P. 659—H. L. (E.)

It lies on the plaintiff to give evidence of malice in the defendant, either express, or to be collected from circumstances, showing plainly the want of probable cause; and the malice is not to be implied from the mere proof of the plaintiff's acquittal for want of the prosecutor's appearing when called. Purcell v. Macnamara, 9 East, 361; 1 Camp. 199; 9 R. R. 578.

Difference between Malicious Prosecution and False Imprisonment.]—In false imprisonment, the onus lies on the defendant to plead and prove affirmatively the existence of reasonable cause as his justification, whereas in an action for malicious prosecution the plaintiff must allege and prove affirmatively its non-existence. Hicks v. Faulkner, 51 L. J., Q. B. 268; 8 Q. B. D. 167; 30 W. R. 545. Affirmed, 46 L. T. 127; 46 J. P. 420—C. A.

Proof generally.]—Where the bill has not been found, an action cannot be supported without evidence of express malice, as well as the want of probable cause. Byne v. Moore, 1 Marshall, 12; 5 Taunt. 187.

Malice and the want of probable cause must both concur. Farmer v. Darling, 4 Burr. 1971.

Reasonable and Probable Cause.]—An action for a malicious prosecution cannot be maintained, though the accusation turns out to be unfounded, if the prosecutor can show probable cause for the prosecution. Arbuckle v. Taylor, 3 Dow, 160.

Although want of reasonable and probable cause cannot be inferred from proof of malice, yet where a person acting upon the information of another makes a highly improbable charge before a magistrate, the jury may infer from the proof of malice that he did not believe the statement to be true. Wright v. Greenwood, 1 W. R. 393.

—— Definition of.]—Reasonable and probable cause is an honest belief in the guilt of the accused based upon a full conviction, founded upon reasonable grounds, of the existence of a state of circumstances which, assuming them to be true, would reasonably lead any ordinarily prudent and cautious man, placed in the position of the accuser, to the conclusion that the person charged was probably guilty of the crime imputed. There must be (1) an honest belief of the accuser in the guilt of the accused; (2) such belief must be based on an honest conviction of the existence of the circumstances which led the accuser to that conclusion; (3) such secondly-mentioned belief must be based upon reasonable grounds; (4) the circumstances so believed and relied on by the accuser must be such as amount to reasonable ground for belief in the guilt of the accused. Hicks v. Faulkner, 46 L. T. 127; 46 J. P. 420—C. A. Affirming, 51 L. J., Q. B. 268; 8 Q. B. D. 167; 30 W. R. 545.

Question for Decision of Judge.]—Where the judge to enable himself to determine the issue of reasonable and probable cause leaves subsidiary questions of fact to the jury, the onus of proving the existence of such facts as tend to establish the want of reasonable and probable cause, rests upon the plaintiff. The plaintiff, a surgeon, had attended M. for injuries alleged to have been sustained in a collision upon the defendant's railway. M. brought an action against the defendants, which was compromised by the defendants paying large sums for costs and damages. Subsequently the directors of the defendant company caused certain investigations to be made which went to show that M.'s alleged injuries were not caused by the accident, but were fraudulently produced by the plaintiff with the consent of M. with the intention of defrauding the defendants. Counsel advised, on these statements being laid before him, that there was good ground for prosecuting the plaintiff and M. for conspiracy. The plaintiff was accordingly prosecuted and acquitted. In an action for malicious prosecution, the judge directed the jury to find whether the defendants had taken reasonable care to inform themselves of the true state of the case, and whether they honestly believed the case which they laid before the magistrates; the jury having answered these questions in the affirmative, the judge entered judgment for the defendants:—Held, that the direction to the jury was correct, that upon the facts and findings of the jury, the defendants had reasonable and probable cause for prosecuting the plaintiff, and that judgment had been rightly entered for the defendants. Abrath v. North-Eastern Ry., 55 L. J., Q. B. 457; 11

At the hearing of a plaint in a county court, to recover rent, the tenant's son was called as a witness, and swore that he had given up the key of the premises to the landlord before the rent accrued due. The landlord denied this, and subsequently prosecuted the witness for perjury. He was acquitted, and brought an action against the landlord for malicious prosecution. At the trial the plaintiff and defendant repeated their evidence as to the key, and the judge directed the jury alternatively, that if they could not arrive at a conclusion as to which of the parties was speaking the truth, the plaintiff had not made out his case, and the defendant was entitled to a verdict; and that if they thought the plaintiff did give up the key, but the defendant, owing to a defective memory, had forgotten the occurrence, and went on with the prosecution, honestly believing that the plaintiff had sworn falsely and corruptly, then the jury would not be justified in saying that the defendant maliciously and without reasonable and probable cause prosecuted the plaintiff, and the defendant would be entitled to their verdict:—Held, that the direction was right. Hicks v. Faulkner, 46 L. T. 127; 46 J. P. 420—C. A. Affirming, 51 L. J., Q. B. 268; 8 Q. B. D. 167; 30 W. R. 545.

It is a rule of law that the jury must find the facts on which the question of reasonable and probable cause depends, but that the judge must then determine whether the facts found do constitute reasonable and probable cause. No definite rule can be laid down for the exercise of the judge's judgment. Lister v. Perryman, 39 L. J., Ex. 177; L. R. 4 H. L. 521; 23 L. T. 269; 19 W. R. 9.

In an action for false imprisonment, the question of reasonable and probable cause is one of law for the judge to decide, and not for the jury. Hailes v. Marks, 7 H. & N. 56; 30 L. J., Ex. 389; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 851; 4 L. T. 805; 9 W. R. 808. S. P., West v. Baxendale, 9 C. B. 141; 19 L. J., C. P. 149.

The existence of reasonable or probable cause is to be decided by the judge, and is a question for him and not for the jury. Busst v. Gibbons, 30 L. J., Ex. 75. S. P., Watson v. Whitmore, 14 L. J., Ex. 41; 8 Jur. 964.

In an action for a malicious prosecution, the question, whether there is or is not reasonable or probable cause, may be entirely for the judge or for the jury, according to the evidence in each particular case. James v. Phelps, 11 A. & E. 483; 3 P. & D. 231; 9 L. J., Q. B. 106.

If the facts are undisputed, the judge may decide the question of reasonable and probable cause without taking the finding of the jury upon them. Wilkinson v. Foote, 5 W. R. 22.

—— Where no Question for Jury.]—In an action by an attorney for maliciously, and without probable cause, indicting him for sending a threatening letter, it appeared that his clients having inquired of the defendants as to the truth of a representation made by a person who had offered to buy goods of them, the defendants replied, that they would not be responsible for the price of the goods, but believed the person had the employment he represented. The goods were then supplied to him. His representation turned out to be false, and the attorney, by direction of his clients, wrote a letter to the defendants, demanding payment of them for the price of the goods obtained from his clients through the defendants' representation, and stating that the circumstances made it incumbent on his clients to bring the matter under the notice of the public, if the defendants did not immediately discharge the amount; and that he had instructions to adopt proceedings, if the matter was not arranged in the course of the morrow; and that, as those measures would be of serious consequence to the defendants, he hoped they would prevent them by attention to his letter. The defendants were then summoned before a magistrate to answer a charge of obtaining goods under false pretences. The attorney served the summons, and attended for his clients, and the complaint was dismissed. The defendants afterwards indicted the attorney for sending a threatening letter, contrary to 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 8, and he was acquitted. On a trial in this action, the judge, without leaving any question to the jury, decided that there was reasonable and probable cause for preferring the indictment:—Held, that the decision was correct, and that the evidence did not raise a question of fact for the jury, whether the defendants bonâ fide believed that they had a reasonable cause for indicting; but a pure question of law for the judge, whether the defendants had such reasonable cause. Blachford v. Dod, 2 B. & Ad. 179; 9 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 196.

Questions on Inference from Facts.]—In an action for a malicious prosecution, though in it the question of reasonable or probable cause depends not upon few and simple facts, but upon facts which are numerous and complicated, and upon numerous and complicated inferences to be drawn therefrom, it is the duty of the judge to inform the jury, if they find the facts to be proved, and the inferences to be warranted by such facts, that the same do or do not amount to reasonable or probable cause, so as thereby to leave the question of fact to the jury, and the abstract question of law to the judge. Panton v. Williams, 1 G. & D. 504; 2 Q. B. 169; 10 L. J., Ex. 545—Ex. Ch.

Though the question of reasonable and probable cause is to be determined on facts, the existence of which, in cases of doubt, can only be properly decided by the jury, yet it is not necessary for the judge, where there is a variety of facts, to leave each fact specifically to the jury, but to decide, on a general view of the circumstances, whether there is or is not reasonable and probable cause for the prosecution. Rowlands v. Samuel, 11 Q. B. 39; 17 L. J., Q. B. 65.

The facts material to the question of probable cause must be found by the jury, and the judge is then to decide, as a point of law, whether the facts so found establish probable cause or want of it. Turner v. Ambler, 10 Q. B. 252; 16 L. J., Q. B. 158; 6 Jur. 346. S. P., Chapman v. Heslop (in error), 2 C. L. R. 139; 23 L. J., Q. B. 49; 18 Jur. 348; 2 W. R. 74—Ex. Ch.

Among these facts are the defendant's knowledge of the alleged ground of accusation at the time when he prosecuted, and his belief at the time that the conduct forming such ground of accusation amounted to the offence charged. Turner v. Ambler, supra.

If the defendant did not so believe, the want of reasonable and probable cause is established, though the imputed offence appear primâ facie to have been committed by the plaintiff, and the fact to have been known to the defendant before the charge was made. Ib.

The absence of belief must be proved by the plaintiff; and if it be not proved, the defect is not supplied (for the purpose of shewing probable cause) by evidence that the defendant made use of the charge as a means of obtaining an unfair advantage over the plaintiff. Ib.

Upon the trial of an action for maliciously indicting the plaintiff, he proved a case, which in the opinion of the judge shewed that there was no reasonable or probable cause for preferring the indictment. The defendant then called a witness to prove an additional fact, and that being proved, the judge was of opinion that there was:—Held, that there being no contradictory testimony as to that fact, and there being nothing in the demeanour of the witness who proved it to impeach his credit, the judge was not bound to leave to the jury to find the fact, but that he might act upon it as a fact proved, and nonsuit the plaintiff. Davis v. Hardy, 6 B. & C. 225; 9 D. & R. 380; 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 91; 30 R. R. 306.

The defendant had indicted the plaintiff for maliciously obstructing the air-way of a mine, but which it appeared the plaintiff did bonâ fide under a claim of right. In an action by the plaintiff for a malicious prosecution:—Held, that it ought to have been left to the jury to say, whether the defendant knew that the obstruction had been done under a claim of right; for that, if so, there was no probable cause for the indictment. James v. Phelps, 3 P. & D. 231; 11 A. & E. 483; 9 L. J., Q. B. 106.

Where the question of malice was never in terms left to the jury, the court made a rule absolute for a new trial. Payne v. Revans, 9 W. R. 693. See S. C. at nisi prius, 2 F. & F. 367.

Action for maliciously, and without probable cause, indicting the plaintiff for perjury; averment, that he was tried and acquitted, and judgment given that he should depart without day, as by the record appeared. The evidence on which perjury was assigned was given against the defendant in an action in which he was the defendant, and in which the evidence for him contradicted that of the then plaintiff. The defendant, on being told of the now plaintiff's evidence, said he would indict him for perjury. The defendant's informant said, he thought there was no ground for such indictment, but the defendant replied that he should move for a new trial (in the then action), and the indictment would stop the mouths of the now plaintiff and the opposite party for a time:—Held, first, that the jury were properly asked whether the defendant believed there was reasonable and probable cause for the prosecution, and they having found that he did not, that the judge was right in ruling that there was no such cause. Haddrick v. Heslop, 12 Q. B. 267; 17 L. J., Q. B. 313; 12 Jur. 600.

The jury was rightly told that, if upon the above evidence they believed that the defendant acted from an improper motive, they might infer malice. Ib.

In an action against a defendant for taking the plaintiff to a police-office, and causing him to be imprisoned without reasonable or probable cause, on the charge that he uttered menaces against the defendant's life:—Held, that it was not for the judge alone to determine whether the menaces justified the charge, but that it should have been left to the jury to determine whether the defendant believed the menaces, before the judge decided whether or not there was reasonable and probable cause for the charge. Venafra v. Johnson, 3 M. & Scott, 847; 10 Bing. 301; 6 Car. & P. 50; 3 L. J., C. P. 51.

In an action for maliciously and without reasonable or probable cause causing the plaintiff to be arrested on a capias, the order for which had been obtained upon an affidavit not fairly disclosing the nature of the contract for the alleged breach of which the defendant was suing, the judge having stated that, in his opinion, the plaintiff had failed to make out a want of reasonable and probable cause, told the jury that, to entitle the plaintiff to a verdict, they must be satisfied that there was a total want of reasonable and probable cause, and that the defendant had acted with malice:—Held, a misdirection. Gibbon v. Allison, 3 C. B. 181.

The question of probable cause is a mixed proposition of law and fact; whether the circumstances alleged are true or not, is a question of fact for the jury; whether they amount to probable cause, is a question of law. Johnstone v. Sutton, 1 Term Rep. 545; 1 Bro. P. C. 76; 1 R. R. 269. And see Candell v. London, 1 Term Rep. 520, n.

If A. strikes B., and B. returns the blow, on which A. indicts B. for an assault, the bare fact of A. having struck the first blow is not sufficient to support an action for a malicious prosecution. Fish v. Scott, Peake, 135.

How Question to be left by Judge to the Jury.]—Where A. arrested B. upon the advice of his special pleader that he had a good cause of action, but afterwards upon being ruled to declare, discontinued proceedings, and B. brought an action for a malicious arrest, without any reasonable or probable cause:—Held, that the reasonableness or probability of the cause was a mixed question of law and fact for the jury to decide; and that they were rightly told by the judge, that if they believed the defendant to have acted bonâ fide upon the advice he had received, he was entitled to a verdict; but if otherwise, they ought to find for the plaintiff. Ravenga v. Macintosh, 4 D. & R. 107; 2 B. & C. 693; 1 Car. & P. 204.

Question when left to the Jury.]—In an action for malicious prosecution though reasonable or probable cause, or the want of it, is a question of law for the opinion of the judge; yet when such question is combined with, and depending upon, a long chain of facts, as given in evidence, the whole may be left to the jury for their decision; and the judge, by leaving the matter thus, does not surrender the authority with which he is vested. M'Donald or M'Donnell v. Rooke or Brooke, 2 Bing. (N.C.) 217; 2 Scott, 359; 1 Hodges, 314; 5 L. J., C. P. 9. And see Shrosbery v. Osmaston, 37 L. T. 792.

Honest Belief in Charge.]—In an action for a malicious prosecution, although the question of reasonable and probable cause is an inference to be drawn by the judge from facts undisputed or found, yet the test is, not what impression the circumstance would make on the mind of a lawyer, but whether the circumstances warranted a discreet man in instituting and following up the proceedings. Kelly v. Midland Great Western Ry., Ir. R. 7 C. L. 8.

The evidence in support of the plaintiff's case was, that he had been a foreman porter in the employment of a railway company, his duty being to charge for extra luggage, and to give receipts for the sums received by him on that account; that he was informed by the manager of the company, in the presence of the chairman, one of the directors, and the solicitor, that a passenger had accused him of having charged and received double the amount for which he had given a receipt, and was coming up from the country to swear information against him; that he was subsequently arrested on informations sworn against him by the passenger; that he was afterwards tried, and the passenger and his wife swore to the truth of their accusation; notwithstanding which, the jury acquitted him:—Held, that the plaintiff failed to shew want of reasonable and probable cause, and that the judge ought to have nonsuited him, or directed a verdict against him. Ib.

The railway company produced their solicitor, who deposed that the passenger wrote a letter to the manager making the accusation; that the matter was put into his (the solicitor's) hands; that he had the passenger brought up from the country, took down his statement in writing and closely sifted him as to the truth of it; that his answers were satisfactory; that he (the solicitor) believed the statement, and then directed informations to be prepared, and the criminal prosecution to be proceeded with. This evidence having been in no wise impeached:—Held, that the judge ought to have inferred from it reasonable and probable cause, and directed a verdict for the company. Ib.

Where in an action for a malicious prosecution for sheep-stealing, the sheep which the plaintiff was charged with having stolen was not the defendant's, but the jury found that the defendant believed it was his, and that he had reasonable ground for so believing, and the judge ruled that there was reasonable and probable cause:—Held (Erle, J., dissenting) that the ruling was right. Douglas v. Corbett, 6 El. & Bl. 511; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1247.

In an action for malicious prosecution the jury found that the defendant did not take reasonable care to inform himself of the true facts of the case, that he honestly believed in the charge made by him, but that he was actuated by malice and indirect motives. There was no direct evidence of malice and indirect motives, the only evidence relied upon by the plaintiff as proving malice being that the defendant acted in haste, anger, and without adequate inquiry:—Held, that although the absence of reasonable and probable cause is sometimes evidence of malice, yet it is not evidence of malice when the prosecutor honestly believes in the charge; that there was, therefore, no evidence of malice to be left to the jury, and that judgment must be entered for the defendant. Brown v. Hawkes, 61 L. J., Q. B. 151; [1891] 2 Q. B. 718; 65 L. T. 108; 55 J. P. 823—C. A.

—— Honest though Unreasonable.]—The defendant having received a threatening letter, transmitted it to the executive government with a statement that he believed it was written by the now plaintiff, whereupon an official prosecution was instituted at petty sessions, and the plaintiff was examined as a witness in support of it; but the court dismissed the case. An action was then brought for that prosecution, and the judge left to the jury the first issue, scilicet, Whether the defendant did the acts complained of? He also left to them the question, Whether the defendant honestly and reasonably believed that the letter was in the plaintiff's handwriting? But he did not explain to them how their finding upon the first issue should be regulated by their answer to the question. The jury having found the issue in the affirmative, and answered the question in the negative:—Held, that there was misdirection, inasmuch as the defendant's belief might have been honest, though not reasonable, and that, if it was honest, the finding upon the first issue could not be sustained. Lowe v. Collum, 2 L. R. Ir. 15; 13 Cox C. C. 641.

Though if the jury find that the defendant acted bonâ fide, the question of reasonable and probable cause is for the judge, yet, where the defendant is found by them not to have believed in circumstances justifying his action, the question of reasonable and probable cause cannot be ruled in his favour. Reasonable and probable cause in the mind of the judge is not sufficient; there must have been reasonable and probable cause moving the defendant. Shrosbery v. Osmaston, 37 L. T. 792.

Evidence of Disbelief in Charge.]—The plaintiff is to give primâ facie evidence of want of probable cause, which the defendant may rebut, if he can, by shewing the existence of probable cause. The defendant presented two bills for perjury against the plaintiff, but did not appear himself before the grand jury, and the bills were ignored. He presented a third, and on his own testimony the bill was found. This prosecution he kept suspended for three years, till the plaintiff taking the record down to trial, the defendant declining to appear as a witness, although in court, and called on, plaintiff was acquitted:—Held, sufficient primâ facie evidence of want of probable cause. Taylor v. Willans, 2 B. & Ad. 845; 1 L. J., K. B. 17—Ex. Ch. Affirming S. C., nom. Willans v. Taylor, 6 Bing. 183; 3 M. & P. 350; 7 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 250; 31 R. R. 379.

The disbelief of the party making a charge before a magistrate is some evidence of want of probable cause, notwithstanding other evidence may have shewn that there was primâ facie probable cause for making the charge. Broad v. Ham or How, 5 Bing. (N.C.) 722; 8 Scott, 40; 8 L. J., C. P. 357.

In an action for maliciously indicting the plaintiff for an assault on the defendant, it was proved the defendant came to the plaintiff's house, which was let out as chambers, to inquire for a Mr. S., and on being informed that no such person lived there, uttered abusive language, and, on the plaintiff requesting him to go away, laid hands on him, whereupon he forced him out. There was conflicting testimony as to the degree of violence used by plaintiff. The plaintiff was indicted by the defendant for the assault, and acquitted. The judge directed the jury, that, if the defendant preferred the indictment with a consciousness that he was in the wrong, there was no reasonable or probable cause for the indictment:—Held, that the mere fact of the plaintiff having assaulted the defendant did not of itself constitute reasonable and probable cause without reference to the other circumstances of the case, and that the direction of the judge was substantially correct. Hinton v. Heather, 14 M. & W. 131; 15 L. J., Ex. 39.

A defendant, having reasonable and probable cause for suspecting that A. had made an assault upon him with intent to rob, gave him in charge to a constable. The constable stated that A.

was a very respectable man, and not likely to have committed the offence. The defendant, however, persisted in his charge, and he was taken before a magistrate. In an action for a malicious arrest:—Held that it was a misdirection to tell the jury, that if the defendant believed the good character given by the constable, and persisted in his charge merely from obstinacy, it put an end to the reasonable or probable cause for taking A. into custody. Musgrave v. Newall, 1 M. & W. 582; 2 Gale, 91; 1 Tyr. & G. 957; 5 L. J., Ex. 227.

If C. is intrusted to receive money for A., with a written direction for its application, and C. writes a letter to A. stating that he has not received it, when in fact he has, this is sufficient evidence of probable cause to render a prosecution of C. under the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 49, not malicious. Eagar v. Dyott, 5 Car. & P. 4.

In an action for malicious prosecution, the charge having been for stealing a horse left with a servant to shew with a view to a sale, and the horse having been bought honestly and openly:—Held, that there was no reasonable cause. Held, also, that the facts, not having been fully and fairly stated, and there being apparently some anger on the part of the prosecutor, there was evidence of malice. Stewart v. Beaumont, 4 F. & F. 1034.

Claim of Right.]—In an action for maliciously causing the plaintiff to be arrested, it appeared that he was employed to work up some timber into spars, under a contract with H., by which he was to be paid 48*l*., by weekly instalments, during the progress of the work, and the balance on the completion of it. Before the work was completed H. assigned all his goods to the defendant and others, for the benefit of his creditors generally. At this time about 19*l*. remained due to the plaintiff, as the value of the work done up to that time. The plaintiff went to the defendant's yard, where the spars were, and asked for them, and on the defendant's foreman refusing to give them up, he took them the next morning, at four o'clock a.m. His attorney then wrote to the defendant's attorney to say that he claimed a lien on the spars. The defendant demanded them back, but the plaintiff refused to give them up. The plaintiff was then taken into custody for stealing the spars, on the information and complaint of the defendant. He asked the defendant why he gave him into custody; to which the defendant replied, "You had no right to take the spars away; I think you merely fetched them away to get what was your due":—Held, that there was evidence of the absence of reasonable and probable cause for the charge. Huntley v. Simson, 2 H. & N. 600; 27 L. J., Ex. 134; 6 W. R. 106.

The plaintiff having become tenant to the defendant, who resided in Wiltshire, of a house and lands in Carmarthenshire, together with the exclusive right of sporting over lands adjacent, belonging to the defendant, fished one of the ponds by cutting down the dam, and but few fish having been caught, D., who was the defendant's local agent, suggested to the plaintiff that he might fish a certain pond on the estate by cutting down a bank and placing a net to catch the fish, which the plaintiff accordingly afterwards did during the tenancy, and a few fish were taken. Disputes having afterwards arisen between the plaintiff and defendant, D. laid an information before magistrates against the plaintiff for unlawfully and maliciously breaking down the dam and destroying the fish, under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 15; and D. having been examined, the magistrates required the plaintiff to find bail to appear to an indictment for that offence at the assizes, where a bill was preferred but ignored. The defendant was not present at the hearing of the information, nor was there any evidence to shew that he knew that D. had given the plaintiff permission. At the trial, the judge asked the jury whether, in their opinion, D. had given permission, and they found that he had; they also found that D. acted under the defendant's authority in instituting the proceedings, and the judge having expressed his opinion that there was absence of reasonable and probable cause:—Held, that he was correct in so deciding, and that, independently of the permission given by D., there was no reasonable or probable cause for instituting the proceedings. Mitchell v. Williams, 11 M. & W. 205; 12 L. J., Ex. 193.

—— Forcible Entry.]—L., being entitled to the possession of premises, entered upon them, but was afterwards ejected by T. and W. He then indicted them for a forcible entry, but they were acquitted. They then brought an action against him for malicious prosecution:—Held, that the action could not be maintained, as the facts shewed that L. had a right to the possession, and there was therefore reasonable and probable cause for the indictment. Lows v. Telford, 45 L. J., Ex. 613; 1 App. Cas. 414; 35 L. T. 69—H. L. (E.)

Knowledge of what Evidence was Given.]—In actions against a railway company for malicious prosecution, it appeared that there had been a disturbance and struggle at one of the company's stations between their servants and some passengers, and that after the struggle was over, and W., who had been one of such passengers, had left the station and was walking away, A., one of the company's servants, who had been engaged in such struggle, and who was a sworn constable, took W. into custody on the charge, first, of being drunk, and on the sergeant of the police station refusing to take that charge, then for assaulting A. in the discharge of his duty. During the struggle and before it was over, the plaintiff S., another of such passengers who had taken part in the struggle, was given into custody by A., and removed to the police-station and there charged, in the first instance, with being drunk and refusing to quit the company's premises, and afterwards with assaulting the company's officers in the execution of their duty. The instructions issued by the company to their servants, who were sworn constables, were that they might, when on duty, take into custody any one whom they might see commit an assault at any of the stations, "and for the purpose of putting an end to any fight or affray," but that such power was to be used with extreme caution, and not if the fight or affray was at an end before they interfered. The attorney for the company appeared before the magistrates to prosecute, and both plaintiffs were committed for trial, and afterwards prosecuted by the company at the sessions and acquitted. In order to shew the absence of reasonable and probable cause, the depositions of the servants of the company before the magistrate were put in evidence, but they contained evidence of assaults upon such servants, and particularly of an assault on A. in the execution of his duty as a constable:—Held, that inasmuch as, if the facts stated in the depositions of the company's servants had been communicated to the company's attorney before appearing to prosecute, and there was no evidence that they had not been, he might reasonably have considered there was a probable cause for the prosecution; there was no evidence of the absence of probable cause, and the onus being with the plaintiffs to shew such absence, it was not for the company to shew that they undertook the prosecution with a knowledge of the testimony their servants were prepared to give. Walker v. S. E. Ry., 39 L. J., C. P. 346; L. R. 5 C. P. 640; 23 L. T. 14; 18 W. R. 1032.

Nature of Evidence.]—A trustworthy servant informed his master, whose gun had been stolen, that a credible person (one Robinson) had told him that he had seen the gun with a young man in the village; and went on to inform the master, as the fact was, that he had brought Robinson and the accused together, and had heard the accusation repeated in the presence of the accused; that they had then, at the proposal of the accused, gone together to the place where Robinson stated he had seen the gun, namely, a barn of the father of the accused; and that they there had found a gun which Robinson said was not the gun he had seen there on a former occasion. The master thereupon gave the accused into custody, and the latter having been tried and acquitted, brought an action for false imprisonment. The judge directed the jury that if the master had acted on the information of his servant without making inquiry of Robinson he must be taken to have acted on hearsay evidence, and without reasonable and probable cause. The jury found for the plaintiff:—Held, that the latter part of the information given by the servant was an original account and not merely a confirmation of the hearsay evidence contained in the first part of his information, and that it was a misdirection by the judge to direct the jury that there was no reasonable and probable cause for the arrest of the suspected person, on the assumption that the information on which the arrest had been ordered was derived from hearsay evidence only. Lister v. Perryman, 39 L. J., Ex. 177; L. R. 4 H. L. 521; 23 L. T. 269; 19 W. R. 9.

The porter of a silk mercer, whose duty it was to sleep in the warehouse at night, pointed out to his master that some silk had been stolen by cutting the same out of larger pieces and then sewing on the ends of same. As the duties of the porter gave him no opportunity of becoming acquainted with the state of the silk, suspicion against him was excited, and a search being made, a chain and seal were found in a box of which the porter kept the key and of which he had the use, and which were identified by his master as belonging to him, and the porter was given into custody upon a charge of stealing the silk and the chain and seal. It turned out that the silk was stolen, but not by the porter, and that the chain and seal had been given to him, which at the time the charge was made his master had forgotten. In an action for malicious prosecution:—Held, first, that there was sufficient evidence of reasonable and probable cause for giving the plaintiff into custody irrespective of anything connected with the chain and seal; secondly, that the circumstances of suspicion at the time connected with the finding of the chain and seal were some evidence of reasonable and probable cause for suspecting that the plaintiff had stolen the silk. Wilkinson v. Foote, 5 W. R. 22.

A defendant in an action for maliciously and without reasonable or probable cause procuring the plaintiff to be apprehended on a charge of felony, cannot rely on circumstances of mere suspicion as evidence of reasonable or probable cause for a defence to the action. Busst v. Gibbons, 30 L. J., Ex. 75.

A robbery had been committed by A., who immediately absconded. The plaintiff, who had been a fellow-workman with A., had been heard to say that he (the plaintiff) had heard, a few hours after the robbery, that A. had absconded, and that A. had previously told him (the plaintiff) that he intended to go to Australia. A. had also been seen, early in the morning after the robbery, coming from a public entry leading to the back door of the plaintiff's house. The defendant, the plaintiff's master, having been informed of these circumstances, caused the plaintiff to be apprehended and charged before magistrates with the robbery:—Held, no evidence of reasonable or probable cause, justifying the plaintiff in making the charge. Ib.

The defendant, who was robbed in a crowd, gave a description of the offender to the police, who on this arrested the plaintiff. The plaintiff was charged and remanded on bail. Having surrendered and the defendant not appearing, he was discharged. The defendant was subsequently informed that the plaintiff was not the thief, but notwithstanding he took out a fresh warrant:—Held, that the defendant's failure to appear before the magistrate, coupled with the procuring of a fresh warrant, was evidence of want of probable cause and also of malice. Shuttlebottom v. Allday, 5 W. R. 315.

A farmer having lost two trusses of straw and finding the plaintiffs soon afterwards at a place some two or three miles distant with some loose straw in a cart, gave them into custody with some expression of irritation and prosecuted them for stealing it:—Held, that if the straw was of the same kind as that lost, and in particular if it was clean and new, there was probable cause for suspicion; but if otherwise, there was not probable cause; and if the jury thought that the defendant had acted under irritation, rashly, and rather through the influence of angry feeling than with reasonable care or due inquiry, there was evidence of malice on a count for malicious prosecution. Darling v. Cooper, 11 Cox, C. C. 533.

Reasonable and probable cause may be shewn by evidence which would make a primâ facie case such as would justify a criminal charge, although it might be insufficient to convict, and although it might require confirmation by further evidence not disclosed or discovered by the prosecutor until after he had given the plaintiff into custody. Dawson v. Vansandau, 11 W. R. 516.

Evidence of an accomplice, that he had been tampered with by the attorney for the defence, coupled with a letter found on the person of the attorney, after his arrest on the criminal charge, is evidence of reasonable cause for its prosecution. Ib.

Similarity of handwriting is not, per se, and without other circumstances, probable cause for preferring a charge of perjury against a person whose handwriting is like that of a forged instrument. Clements v. Ohrly, 2 Car. & K. 686.

Information received from persons apparently respectable, and believed to be credible, is sufficient evidence of reasonable and probable cause for a prosecution. Chatfield v. Comeford, 4 F. & F. 1008.

In justifying giving a person into custody on a charge of felony, it is sufficient to prove such facts as constitute a reasonable and probable cause for the charge, although the defendant may have acted not merely on those facts which are proved, but also on others, the truth of which, although alleged in the plea, are either not proved, or are disproved. Hailes v. Marks, 7 H. & N. 56; 30 L. J., Ex. 389; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 851; 4 L. T. 805; 9 W. R. 808.

A female who occupied a house belonging to the defendant, saw a man, on a Sunday, throw a stone at the windows of the house. She immediately pointed out to the defendant two men running away, saying, "It was one of them, the one with the stick," and telling him to arrest them. He did so; and one of them, the plaintiff, was proved to be the one who had thrown the stone:—Held, that there was reasonable ground for giving him into custody. Jones v. Howell, 29 L. J., Ex. 19; 1 L. T. 330; 8 W. R. 151.

—— Intent.]—The mere fact that a report and balance-sheet prepared and published by the secretary of a public company, contain errors or misstatements, does not afford reasonable and probable cause for charging him criminally under the Larceny Act, 1861, s. 84, and will be no defence to an action for malicious prosecution brought by him if he has been so charged, unless some proof be given that he made and circulated the report and balance-sheet as a wilful falsehood and with a fraudulent intent. Ayres v. Elborough, 22 L. T. 106.

—— Inference from subsequent Acts.]—In an action for malicious prosecution the conduct of the defendant subsequent to the making of the charge may be looked at with a view to shew malice. Where, therefore, the defendant had, without reasonable or probable cause, charged the plaintiff with leaving his wife and family chargeable to the parish, and after the plaintiff had been arrested, and before he had been brought before a magistrate, colluded with a parish officer to get the plaintiff's wife into the workhouse:—Held, that the jury might infer malice from such conduct. Heath v. Heape, 1 H. & N. 478; 26 L. J., M. C. 49; 5 W. R. 23.

Some Charges preferred maliciously and without Cause.]—If a plaintiff declares in an action that the defendant maliciously and without probable cause preferred an indictment, setting it forth, the averment is proved, if some charges in the indictment were maliciously and without probable cause preferred, although there was good ground for others of the charges preferred. Reed v. Taylor, 4 Taunt. 616; 13 R. R. 701. And see Ellis v. Abrahams, 8 Q. B. 709; 15 L. J., Q. B. 221.

The plaintiff was indicted under s. 4 of the Newspaper Libel Act, though only committed for trial under s. 5. In an action for malicious prosecution:—Held, that he had been put on his trial wantonly and that there was an absence of reasonable and probable cause; he was therefore entitled to maintain an action for malicious prosecution under s. 4 of the act. Boaler v. Holder, 51 J. P. 277.

Undisclosed Facts sufficient to support Charge.]—In an action for malicious prosecution, it appeared that the defendant's traveller applied to P. for payment, that P. shewed him a receipt of the plaintiff (who had formerly been the defendant's traveller) for 20*l*., which he never accounted for; that the defendant on learning this communicated with P. who sent the receipt and reaffirmed the payment, that the defendant then consulted his attorney, and charged the plaintiff with embezzlement before a magistrate, who dismissed the charge; it also appeared that there were other cases which, if known to the defendant, would clearly have justified him in making the charge, but it was not shewn whether he knew of them when he made it:—Held, that the plaintiff had failed to shew the absence of reasonable and probable cause, because (per Bovill, C.J.) the facts of P.'s case shewed reasonable and probable cause, or because at all events (per Byles, J. and Brett, J.), as the plaintiff did not shew the contrary, the defendant was to be assumed to have known of the other matters. Brooks v. Blain, 39 L. J., C. P. 1.

Interference of Judge—Evidence of Counsel.]—In an action for false imprisonment and malicious prosecution, to which the defence was a justification on the ground of embezzlement, it appeared that the plaintiff had been servant to the defendant, and was by him given into custody on a charge of embezzlement, and taken before magistrates, when a day-book kept by him was produced by the prosecution, and no entry found of the sum in question. The plaintiff was remanded, but bailed, and on a further hearing the book was again produced, and found to contain the entry, whereupon the charge was dismissed. At the trial of the action the defendant's counsel charged the plaintiff with having when on bail surreptitiously made that entry in the book. The judge, observing in court a barrister who had been counsel for the plaintiff on both occasions when he was before the magistrates, said he ought to be examined as to whether the entry was in the book at the first examination. He was accordingly examined by the defendant's counsel, and deposed that in his belief it was not. The judge told the jury that if the plaintiff made that entry surreptitiously it was the strongest evidence of his guilt; adding, that he was ashamed to put it as matter of doubt, because they had the evidence of the counsel whose duty it was to make the investigation. The jury having found for the defendant:—Held, first, that the evidence was rightly received, as the fact deposed to by the counsel was not a privileged communication; secondly, that the judge had not improperly interfered with the conduct of the cause by calling him as a witness; and thirdly, that the observations of the judge to the jury on his evidence were not a misdirection, or a ground for a new trial. Brown v. Foster, 1 H. & N. 736; 26 L. J., Ex. 249; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 245; 5 W. R. 292. And see Shrewsbery v. Osmaston, 37 L. T. 792.

Opinion of Counsel.]—In an action for a malicious prosecution, it is no answer that the defendant was encouraged in what he did by the opinion of counsel, if the statement of facts was incorrect, or the opinion ill founded. Hewlett v. Cruchley, 5 Taunt. 277. And see Abrath v. North-Eastern Ry., ante, col. 734.

D. PRACTICE.

1. PARTIES.

Action against Corporation.]—An action for a malicious prosecution will lie against a company. Stevens v. Midland Ry., infra, not followed. Edwards v. Midland Ry., 50 L. J., Q. B. 281; 6 Q. B. D. 287; 43 L. T. 694; 29 W. R. 609; 45 J. P. 374.

An action for malicious prosecution will lie against a corporation or a limited company. Kent v. Courage & Co., 55 J. P. 264.

Per Lord Bramwell: An action for malicious prosecution will not lie against a corporation aggregate. Abrath v. North-Eastern Ry., 55 L. J., Q. B. 457; 11 App. Cas. 247; 55 L. T. 63; 50 J. P. 659—H. L. (E.)

A man was arrested on a warrant issued on the sworn information of an officer employed by a railway company on a charge of theft; he was taken before a magistrate and remanded for a week at the request of an attorney employed by the company, and was ultimately discharged. At the trial of an action for malicious prosecution against the railway company, he denied that he was guilty of the theft, and the judge nonsuited:—Held (per Kelly, C.B., and Cleasby, B.), that the nonsuit was wrong; but per Bramwell, B., that the nonsuit was right; and that no action for malicious prosecution will lie against a railway company, for a corporation aggregate is in law incapable of acting maliciously. Henderson v. Midland Ry., 24 L. T. 881; 20 W. R. 23.

A railway company, though a corporation, is liable to an action for false imprisonment, if that imprisonment is committed by its authority, and such authority need not be under seal, but it lies upon the party to give evidence justifying the jury in finding that the persons actually imprisoning him or some of them had authority from the company to do so. Goff v. G. N. Ry., 3 El. & El. 672; 30 L. J., Q. B. 148; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 286; 3 L. T. 850.

An incorporated railway company is not liable for a malicious prosecution, in respect of a criminal proceeding instituted by their servant without their knowledge or direction. Stevens v. Midland Counties Ry., 2 C. L. R. 1300; 10 Ex. 352; 23 L. J., Ex. 328; 18 Jur. 932.

If a servant of a corporation commits an assault by the authority of the corporation, an action for assault and battery is maintainable against the corporation. Eastern Counties Ry. v. Broom, 6 Ex. 314; 6 Railw. Cas. 743; 20 L. J., Ex. 196; 15 Jur. 297—Ex. Ch.

If an assault is committed on behalf and for the benefit of a corporation, the corporation may ratify the act of the agent, and if they do so they render themselves liable to an action for the assault. Ib.

If a servant of a railway company, acting on behalf of the company, assaults and imprisons a passenger, to compel him to pay his fare for riding in a carriage of the company, the act of the servant is one which may be for the benefit of the company and may be ratified by the company. Ib.

Trustee in Bankruptcy.]—A trustee in bankruptcy may be liable to be proceeded against for malicious prosecution of the bankrupt, even when the prosecution has been directed by order of the court. Mittens v. Foreman, 58 L. J., Q. B. 40.

Authority of Servants to Prosecute on Behalf of Master.]—In an action for malicious prosecution against an incorporated banking company, the jury found that the same had been authorised on behalf of the bank by W., the acting manager, and were directed by the judge that it was to be inferred from W.'s position as manager that he had sufficient power under the circumstances for directing a prosecution. A rule nisi to enter a nonsuit or for new trial was discharged:—Held, on appeal, that assuming the prosecution to have been authorised by W., the direction to the jury to the effect that it was to be inferred from W.'s position that he had authority to direct the prosecution was on the evidence incorrect. Bank of New South Wales v. Owston, 48 L. J., P. C. 25; 4 App. Cas. 270; 40 L. T. 500; 14 Cox, C. C. 267—P. C.

The arrest, and still less the prosecution of offenders, is not within the ordinary routine of banking business, and therefore not within the ordinary scope of a bank manager's authority. Evidence accordingly is required to shew that such arrest or prosecution is within the scope of the duties and class of acts such manager is authorised to perform. That authority may be general, or it may be special and derived from the exigency of the particular occasion on which it is exercised. In the former case it is enough to shew commonly that the agent was acting in what he did on behalf of the principal; but in the latter case evidence must be given of a state of facts which shews that such exigency is present, or from which it might reasonably be supposed to be present. Ib.

Police.]—Where a party charges another with felony, a police officer ought to take him into custody, unless there are circumstances shewing that the charge is an unreasonable one. If he takes the party into custody where there are such circumstances, he is liable to an action for false imprisonment. Hogg v. Ward, 3 H. & N. 417; 27 L. J., Ex. 443; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 885; 6 W. R. 595.

A police constable having imprisoned the plaintiff in a cell, on a charge of aiding another person in assaulting him in the execution of his duty, some hours afterwards the defendant (the chief constable) arrived at the station, and, on the report of another constable, without inquiring into the facts, handcuffed the plaintiff and took him before the magistrate, who dismissed the charge:—Held, that the defendant, in order to justify himself, was bound to shew that the charge was well founded; and that, having failed to do so, he and all other persons concerned in the imprisonment of the plaintiff were liable in trespass. Griffin v. Colman, 4 H. & N. 265; 28 L. J., Ex. 134.

—— Persons giving Information to.]—A party is not liable to an action for false imprisonment who, seeing a man in custody of a constable for a supposed offence, points out another as the real criminal, and does not direct the constable to take that party into custody. Gosden v. Elfick, 4 Ex. 445; 19 L. J., Ex. 9; 13 Jur. 989.

The defendant, having missed two pairs of horse clippers from his stables, sent for a police constable and said, "I have had two pairs of clippers stolen from me, and they were last seen in the possession of Danby." Thereupon the constable, having made inquiry, and without communicating with the defendant, arrested the plaintiff, who was taken before the magistrate and committed for trial:—Held, that there was no evidence that the defendant was actively instrumental in putting the criminal law in force, and therefore he was not the prosecutor, and not liable in an action for false imprisonment and malicious prosecution. Danby v. Beardsley, 43 L. T. 603. See also, Browne v. Stradling, 5 L. J., C. P. 295.

—— Giving in Charge of.]—The fact that the defendant signed the charge-sheet, and appeared before the magistrate against the plaintiff, is strong, though not conclusive, evidence that he authorised the arrest. Harris v. Dignum, 29 L. J., Ex. 23; 1 L. T. 169.

A felony having been committed, the defendant sent for a policeman, who, on the defendant's information, and on inquiries made by himself, arrested the plaintiff. The defendant accompanied the policeman to the station, and signed the charge-sheet:—Held, that he was not liable in trespass. Grinham v. Willey, 4 H. & N. 496; 28 L. J., Ex. 242; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 444; 7 W. R. 463.

The person giving another in charge for felony, and assisting a constable in the arrest, is not entitled to an acquittal on the general issue in trespass brought against him, together with the constable. Hough v. Marchant, M. & M. 510.

If A., having been robbed, suspects B. to be guilty, and takes him and delivers him into the charge of a constable present, B. (if innocent) may maintain trespass against A. Stonehouse v. Elliott, 6 Term Rep. 315; 1 Esp. 272; 3 R. R. 183.

A. telling a policeman to take charge of B. is the same as his telling the policeman to take him into custody, and is sufficient to support an action for false imprisonment by B. against A. Wheeler v. Whiting, 9 Car. & P. 262.

—— Authority of Agent.]—The plaintiff, a workman employed in the defendants' factory, was discharged with others in consequence of slackness of work. He carried away with his own tools one belonging to the defendants, which, when he found inquiry was made for it he returned to the foreman of the factory. When he afterwards called about it at the factory, a detective was present who asked the foreman if he gave the plaintiff in charge for stealing the tool, to which the foreman replied he must see the defendants' managing director first. The plaintiff and the detective went together to the police-station, and the foreman afterwards appeared and charged the plaintiff, and signed the charge-sheet. The next morning, the plaintiff having been locked up all night, the defendants' managing director gave evidence against the plaintiff, but the charge was dismissed. Upon that, the managing director made a remark impugning the magistrate's decision, for which he was called to order. The plaintiff brought an action in a county court for false imprisonment; at the end of the plaintiff's case the judge refused to nonsuit; and the jury found a verdict of 50*l.* for the plaintiff:—Held, that these facts afforded no evidence that the managing director ratified the foreman's action in the matter; and that a nonsuit must be entered. Held, also, that, under the circumstances, the managing director had no power to render the defendants liable in the action. Rowe v. London Pianoforte Co., 34 L. T. 450; 13 Cox, C. C. 211.

A servant has an implied authority to give a person into custody only when it is necessary to take such a step to protect his master's property. If a servant gives a person into custody, when no such danger exists, the master will not be liable. Stevens v. Hinshelwood, 55 J. P. 341—C. A. Abrahams v. Deakin, 60 L. J., Q. B. 238; S. P., [1891] 1 Q. B. 516; 63 L. T. 690; 39 W. R. 183; 55 J. P. 212—C. A.

Whether Agent's Act authorised or ratified.]—The defendant's son, a youth about seventeen or eighteen, in his employ, caused a servant whom he suspected of obtaining money from him by false pretences, to be apprehended and taken before a magistrate, who remanded, but ultimately discharged him. After the remand, the son told his father what he had done; the latter did not prohibit his son from proceeding in the matter, but said that as he (the son) had begun it he would not interfere:—Held, no evidence for a jury of either previous authority or subsequent ratification by the father. Moore v. Towers, 8 C. B. (N.S.) 611.

Person inciting Third Person to sue Plaintiff.]—Semble, no action will lie against a party for inciting a third person to bring a civil action against a plaintiff without reasonable or probable cause. Fivaz or Finan v. Nicholls, 2 C. B. 501; 15 L. J., C. P. 125; 10 Jur. 50.

Maliciously causing Plaintiff to be indicted.]—A declaration for maliciously indicting the plaintiff is sustained, although it appears that the defendant preferred the indictment unwillingly, and solely because he was bound over to do so, if it appears that he was himself the cause of his being bound over by originally making a malicious charge before the magistrate. Dubois v. Keates, 3 P. & D. 306; 11 A. & E. 329; 9 L. J., Q. B. 66; 4 Jur. 148.

In an action for malicious prosecution against A. and B., if it appears that both A. and B. entered into a joint recognizance to prosecute and give evidence; but that A. only employed the attorney, and that B. attended before the magistrate and the grand jury at the request of the attorney, the judge will direct the acquittal of B. Eagar v. Dyott, 5 Car. & P. 4.

In an action A., by means of perjured evidence, led the judge to believe that B., also a witness, had committed perjury; whereupon the judge directed that B. should be indicted, and bound over A. to prosecute him at the assizes, where B. was acquitted:—Held, that an action for malicious prosecution lay against A., at the suit of B. Fitzjohn v. Mackinder, 9 C. B. (N.S.) 505; 30 L. J., C. P. 257; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1283; 4 L. T. 149; 9 W. R. 477—Ex. Ch.

Evidence of Person being Prosecutor.]—In an action for malicious prosecution, a person is liable who gives evidence in support of the charge, and who represents himself as preferring it, although it is preferred at some other persons expense, and such other persons have told him that he shall be a witness only, and they employ the counsel and solicitor; and if it is shewn that, during the examination on the charge, such person is, in his hearing, repeatedly alluded to as prosecutor, and does not deny that character, that is evidence from which a jury may infer that he represented himself as the person preferring the charge. Clements v. Ohrly, 2 Car. & K. 686.

To maintain an action against a person for having made a false charge of felony before a magistrate, it is not necessary to shew that the charge was taken down in writing and acted upon by the magistrate; but it is necessary that the jury should be satisfied that it was made to the magistrate with a view to induce him to entertain it as a charge of felony. Clarke v. Postan, 6 Car. & P. 423.

Where a person who was robbed while in a state of intoxication was compelled to go before a magistrate next day and bound over to prosecute, but who made no charge, merely saying he had lost his watch, and the suspected party was committed on the evidence of another person, it was held that an action for malicious prosecution was not maintainable against him as no malice was proved, and it did not appear that he put the law in motion. Browne v. Stradling, 5 L. J., C. P. 295.

Before Foreign Authorities.]—The captain of a merchant ship is liable in trespass, for procuring a mutinous seaman to be flogged and imprisoned in a foreign port by the local authorities, if he took an active part in the proceedings, and did not merely leave the local authorities to act as they thought fit. Aitken v. Bedwell, M. & M. 68; 31 R. R. 712.

Trespass lies for procuring by awe, fear and influence, and contrary to his own inclination, a sovereign, independent, absolute prince to imprison the plaintiff. Rafael v. Verelst, 2 W. Bl. 983, 1055.

Convicting Magistrate.]—In an action against parish officers, for maliciously taking the plaintiff before a magistrate, and procuring him to be convicted of an act of vagrancy, and imprisoned and kept to hard labour, the conviction being afterwards quashed, it is not necessary that the convicting magistrate should be made a defendant. Simpkin v. French, 12 Price, 394.

Where Rule for Criminal Information.]—A rule for a criminal information obtained by the plaintiff in an action for the malicious prosecution of an indictment, and made absolute, is no bar to such action, although the indictment was against the plaintiff and another person. Caddy v. Barlow, 1 M. & R. 275; 6 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 19; 31 R. R. 325.

Persons Jointly Liable.] — If, while A. is unlawfully imprisoned by B., C. commits an assault upon him, C. is guilty of the false imprisonment as well as B. Boyce v. Bayliffe, 1 Camp. 60. See Day v. Porter, 2 M. & Rob. 151.

Liability of Person to Separate Actions for False Imprisonment and Malicious Prosecution—Same Facts.]—False imprisonment and malicious prosecution give rise to distinct causes of action, and therefore a person may be liable to separate actions arising out of the same facts. Guest v. Warren, 9 Ex. 379; 2 C. L. R. 979; 23 L. J., Ex. 121; 18 Jur. 133; 2 W. R. 159.

Joint Action for.]—It was doubtful before the Judicature Act and rules made thereunder whether two persons could bring a joint action for malicious prosecution. Lowe v. Telford, 45 L. J., Ex. 613; 1 App. Cas. 414; 35 L. T. 69—H. L. (E.)

2. EVIDENCE.

Consequential Injury.] — A count for maliciously indicting the plaintiff for an assault, cannot be supported without proof of some consequential injury sustained by him. Freeman v. Arkell, 3 D. & R. 669; 1 Car. & P. 137.

Grand Juryman.]—In such an action the plaintiff may call one of the grand jury to prove that the defendant was the prosecutor of the indictment. Ib.

Counsel.]—Counsel for an employer in proceedings for embezzlement examined as to the condition of the employer's books at former trial. Brown v. Foster, 1 H. & N. 736; 26 L. J., Ex. 249; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 245; 5 W. R. 292.

Solicitor.] — In an action against A. for maliciously causing an indictment for a riot to be preferred against B., it was proved on the part of A., by a solicitor, that he preferred the indictment by order of a city alderman:—Held, that A.'s counsel might ask the solicitor whether A. had desired him not to prosecute on his behalf, but could not ask him generally what A. had said to him on the subject of the prosecution. Osterman v. Bateman, 2 Car. & K. 728.

Opinion of Magistrate or Judge.]—On the trial of an action for malicious prosecution for perjury in making a charge against the defendant before a magistrate, evidence of what the magistrate said in his hearing on disposing of the charge is admissible for the purpose of shewing the existence of reasonable and probable cause. Edden v. Thorniloe, 6 Jur. 265.

In an action for maliciously indicting the plaintiff, the observations made by the judge on the trial of the indictment are not evidence for him. Barker v. Angell, 2 M. & Rob. 371. See contra Warne v. Terry, Rosc. Nisi Prius Evid. 886, 16th edit.

The plaintiff cannot give in evidence what the magistrate said on his discharge, as, if unfavourable to the plaintiff, he had no power of replying to it. Wetzlar v. Zachariah, 16 L. T. 432.

On the trial of an action for false imprisonment on a charge of felony, if the plaintiff's counsel asks his witness what was said by the defendant when the parties were before the magistrate, the defendant's counsel may ask, on cross-examination, what was said by the magistrate. Richards v. Turner, Car. & M. 414.

—— Of Jury.]—The opinion of the jury on a former trial is not material. Hibberd v. Charles, 2 F. & F. 126.

Evidence of Accomplice.] — Where a plea justifying the trespasses, in such cases, states that the plaintiff committed a felony, the jury must try that question in the same way as if sitting in a criminal court trying the plaintiff for the offence itself; and, if a witness, who admits that he stole similar property at the same time, is called to sustain the plea, though he is not exactly in the situation of an accomplice, yet it seems that his testimony ought to receive some confirmation. Richards v. Turner, Car. & M. 414.

Depositions.]—Where, in an action for a malicious charge of felony, the plaintiff put in, to prove a formal part of his case, the defendant's and another person's depositions before the magistrate, the defendant has a right to use his own deposition as evidence in the cause, but not that of the other deponent. Jackson v. Bull, 2 M. & Rob. 176.

As to Character.]—In an action for maliciously procuring the plaintiff to be arrested on a charge of larceny, the defendant cannot give evidence to shew that the plaintiff's character was suspicious, and that his house had been searched on former occasions. Newsam v. Carr, 2 Stark. 69; 19 R. R. 675.

In an action by A. for the malicious prosecution by C. of an indictment against A. and B., evidence of the misconduct of C. towards B., after his apprehension tending to shew the bad motives of C. is admissible. Caddy v. Barlow, 1 M. & R. 275; 6 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 19; 31 R. R. 325.

Where the defendant gives evidence of probable cause, a witness may be asked whether the plaintiff was not a man of notoriously bad character. Rodriguez v. Tadmire, 2 Esp. 721.

In an action for false imprisonment on a criminal charge, the defendant cannot cross-examine as to the bad character of the plaintiff, nor as to previous charges made against him. Downing v. Butcher, 2 M. & Rob. 374.

Of Proceedings.]—In an action for malicious arrest on a charge of felony, it is not necessary for the plaintiff to give in evidence the whole of the proceedings before the magistrates. Biggs v. Clay, 3 N. & M. 464; 3 L. J., K. B. 124.

A declaration which alleges that the defendant charged the plaintiff with felony, is supported by evidence that the defendant stated to the magistrate that he had been robbed of specific articles, and that he suspected and believed, and had good reason to suspect and believe, that the plaintiff had stolen them. Davis v. Noake, 6 M. & S. 29; 1 Stark. 377; 18 R. R. 290.

A., the servant of B., stated before a magistrate that C. came into the yard of his employer, and took from a stable there two geldings, the property of B., and rode them away, though he was told that he must not:—Held, that this information did not support a count in an action for malicious prosecution, which alleged that the information charged C. with having feloniously stolen and ridden away with two geldings. Milton v. Elmore, 4 Car. & P. 456.

A declaration, alleging that the defendant maliciously and without probable cause preferred an indictment against the plaintiff for perjury, is supported by proof that some of the assignments of perjury in the indictment, which was set out at length in the declaration, were preferred without probable cause. Ellis v. Abrahams, 8 Q. B. 709; 15 L. J., Q. B. 221; 10 Jur. 593.

The plaintiff's counsel stated that he should offer no evidence as to the transactions to which the other assignments of perjury related:—Held, that the defendant was not at liberty to give evidence to shew that there was probable cause for those other assignments of perjury. Ib.

To a declaration containing one count only for assault and false imprisonment, the plea justified the apprehending the plaintiff on a charge of felony, and proceeded to aver that the plaintiff resisted, whereupon he beat him. At the trial, the justification as to the apprehension for felony was proved; but the defendant did not prove the resistance of the plaintiff. The jury having found for the defendant:—Held, that the verdict was right, the defendant having proved so much of his plea as was necessary to cover the declaration, and it not being necessary for him to prove what was unnecessarily alleged. Atkinson v. Warne, 1 C. M. & R. 827; 5 Tyr. 481; 3 D. P. C. 483; 6 Car. & P. 687.

Charge Sheet.]—A charge sheet is sufficient proof of the signatures which it contains. Ross v. Lascelles, 15 L. T. 293.

Returns on Writs.]—In an action against a judgment creditor for maliciously suing out an alias fi. fa., after a sufficient execution levied upon the plaintiff's goods under the first fi. fa.:—Held, that the sheriff's returns indorsed upon the two writs (which writs had been produced in evidence by the plaintiff as part of his case), wherein the sheriff stated that he had forborne to sell under the first, and had sold under the second writ, by the request and with the consent of the now plaintiff, were primâ facie evidence of the facts so returned; credence being due to the official acts of the sheriff between third persons. Gyfford v. Woodgate, 11 East, 297; 2 Camp. 117.

Subsequent Acts.]—The plaintiff, the secretary of a joint-stock bank in London, with a branch at D., went with the cashier to the latter place, with a paper purporting to be an order upon the party having charge of the branch bank, to deliver up to them the books and moneys in his custody. The defendant, one of the directors of the bank, seeing a light in the banking-house at an unusual hour, went there, and not being satisfied of their authority to act as they were doing, placed the plaintiff and the cashier in the custody of a policeman, who handcuffed them, and put them in the cage for the night. In an action for false imprisonment, evidence, that the defendant had, on the following morning, gone to the banking-house in London, broken open the desks of the secretary and cashier, and abstracted papers, for the purpose (as was suggested) of depriving them of means of justifying their conduct, was properly received. Edgell v. Francis, 1 Scott (N.R.) 118; 1 Man. & G. 222; 9 L. J., C. P. 233; 4 Jur. 366. And see Brooks v. Blain, 39 L. J., C. P. 1.

Of Authority.]—The defendant was lieutenant-governor of the fortress of Gibraltar, and wishing to obtain possession of General Torrijos, a Spanish refugee, whom he thought was harboured in the house of the plaintiff, an English merchant residing at Gibraltar, he placed a part of the military force of the garrison under the command of his military secretary, who ordered it to surround the plaintiff's house, and, in the course of their duty, one of the soldiers prevented the plaintiff's egress. This was the assault and false imprisonment complained of:—Held, that there was sufficient evidence that the various proceedings were under the direction, and carried on by the authority, of the commandant of the garrison.

Glynn v. Houstoun, 2 Scott (N.R.) 548; 2 M. & G. 337; 5 Jur. 125.

Held, also, that the soldiers being directed to search for Torrijos, whose person they did not know, the governor's military secretary in command of them was only carrying out his orders in directing them to prevent all persons from leaving the house; and that the governor's general orders made him liable for this particular act. Ib.

If a party is taken into custody by a constable on a warrant, the signature of which is proved to be of the handwriting of the defendant, a magistrate, this is primâ facie evidence against the defendant in an action for false imprisonment, without further proof that the warrant was issued by him. Mason v. Barker, 1 Car. & K. 100.

Joint Acts.]—If A. imprisons B., and in continuation of that imprisonment delivers him into the charge of C. who keeps him in custody, the acts and declarations of C. are evidence against A. Powell v. Hodgetts, 2 Car. & P. 432.

In an action against three defendants jointly, the declarations of one tending to shew malice made some weeks after the imprisonment though in the absence of his co-defendants, are admissible. Wright v. Court, 2 Car. & P. 232.

A. directed a police-officer to take B. into custody, on a charge of embezzlement, and the officer having done so, the officer and A. went together to a box of B., and the officer, in the presence of A., searched the box, and took from it a sovereign:—Held, that in an action by B. against A. for the trespass in opening of the box and taking the sovereign, proof of these facts was evidence of A.'s participation in the trespass. Jones v. Morrell, 1 Car. & K. 266.

Prior Conviction.]—In an action against the defendant for giving the plaintiff into custody on a charge of stealing oysters from an oyster-bed:—Held, that he could not, for the purpose of proving bona fides on his part, give evidence of a prior conviction of a third party for stealing oysters from the same bed, such conviction not having come to his knowledge at the time of his giving the plaintiff into custody. Thomas v. Russell, 9 Ex. 764; 2 C. L. R. 542; 23 L. J., Ex. 233; 2 W. R. 418.

What may be Considered.]—When in an action for maliciously giving the plaintiff into custody and for slander, the defendant pleaded to the latter cause of action a plea in justification, which would have been no answer to the former, and at the trial the plaintiff failed to prove the slander:—Held, that the jury ought to disregard this plea in considering the former cause of action. Brooke v. Avrillon, 42 L. J., C. P. 126; 21 W. R. 594.

3. Damages.

Malicious Prosecution—Costs.]—Semble, that if one of two parties indicted, having a defence common to both, retains an attorney to defend them, and pays him the whole costs of defence, and they are acquitted, such party, in an action for malicious prosecution, may demand the costs so paid as part of his damages:—Held, that at all events he may so recover, if the costs of defence, being divisible, it has been expressly left to the jury to deduct any part of such costs which they thought not fairly incurred by the plaintiff, and they have found for him as to the whole. Rowlands v. Samuel, 11 Q. B. 39; 17 L. J., Q. B. 65.

In the calculation of damages, in an action for maliciously holding to bail, the plaintiff is entitled to recover not merely the taxed costs, but the costs as between attorney and client. Sandback v. Thomas, 1 Stark. 306; 18 R. R. 771.

In an action for a malicious arrest the plaintiff is entitled to recover costs incurred in the former suit beyond the taxed costs in that suit. Gould v. Barratt, 2 M. & Rob. 171.

The plaintiff can recover no damages for extra costs, nor any damages, unless malice is proved. Sinclair v. Eldred, 4 Taunt. 7. S. P., Webber v. Nicholas, R. & M. 419; 4 Bing. 16; 12 Moore, 87.

Aggravation.]—To an action for false imprisonment, the defendant pleaded a justification that the plaintiff had committed a felony. At the trial his counsel abandoned the plea, and exonerated the plaintiff from the charge:—Held, that it was not a misdirection on the part of the judge to tell the jury that putting such a plea on the record was a persisting in the charge contained in it, and was to be taken into account in estimating the damages. Warwick v. Foulkes, 12 M. & W. 507; 1 D. & L. 638; 13 L. J., Ex. 109; 8 Jur. 85.

If there is an abuse of an authority, by which the party becomes a trespasser ab initio, the plaintiff is entitled to recover damages, as well for the part of the injury which would have been justified if there had been no abuse, as for that part which is directly caused by the abuse. Kerbey v. Denby, 2 Gale, 31; 1 M. & W. 336; 1 Tyr. & G. 688; 5 L. J., Ex. 162.

A defendant is answerable for all the ordinary acts of precaution on the part of the policeman to whom he has given the plaintiff into custody, on a charge of felony, though more severity may have been used than the occasion required. Edgell v. Francis, 1 Scott (N.R.) 118; 1 Man. & G. 222; 9 L. J., C. P. 233; 4 Jur. 365.

Mitigation.]—In an action for false imprisonment, by giving the plaintiff in charge to a police officer, the defendant may, in mitigation of damages, give evidence to shew that the plaintiff had, for several days, been in the habit of going after him and annoying him. Thomas v. Powell, 7 Car. & P. 807.

In an action against an individual for giving the plaintiff into custody on a charge of felony, reasonable and probable cause of suspicion is good evidence in mitigation of damages. Perkins v. Vaughan, 4 Man. & G. 989; 5 Scott (N.R.) 881; 12 L. J., C. P. 38; 6 Jur. 1114. S. P., Chinn v. Morris, 2 Car. & P. 361; Ry. & M. 424; Tulley v. Corrie, 10 Cox, C. C. 584; Cowles v. Dunbar, 2 Car. & P. 565.

In an action for assaulting the plaintiff, and giving him into custody of a policeman, it appeared that the charge upon which the defendant arrested the plaintiff was for fraudulently heaping up mounds of earth, to make it appear that he was entitled to receive from the defendant a large sum for work contracted to be done:—Held, that as the charge could not be pleaded as a justification, evidence of the truth of it was admissible in mitigation of damages. Linford v. Lake, 3 H. & N. 276; 27 L. J., Ex. 334; 6 W. R. 515.

In an action for false imprisonment on a charge of stealing money, where there is no plea of justification, the defendant cannot, in mitigation of damages, give evidence of recent apparent losses of money on his part, though offered for the purpose of explaining the circumstances which induced in his mind a belief in the plaintiff's guilt. Yardley v. Hine, 17 L. T. 264.

Expenses Incurred.]—The defendant by a warrant of commitment on a coroner's inquisition, without jurisdiction, caused the plaintiff to be imprisoned. The plaintiff was bailed, and afterwards, while on bail, procured the inquisition to be quashed:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled, under an allegation that he had incurred expense in procuring his discharge from custody, to recover damages for the expenses of quashing the inquisition. Foxall v. Barnett, 2 El. & Bl. 928; 2 C. L. R. 273; 23 L. J., Q. B. 7; 18 Jur. 41; 2 W. R. 61.

Remoteness.] — A plaintiff cannot recover damages in respect of having been detained beyond a certain hour, whereby he missed an opportunity of being taken into an employment in a shop or factory, the damages being too remote. Hoey v. Felton, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 142; 31 L. J., C. P. 105; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 764; 5 L. T. 354; 10 W. R. 78.

Several Defendants.]—In trespass and assault against two, damages cannot be severed, though the assault is proved to have been committed by one with more violence and more circumstances of aggravation than by the other. Brown v. Allen, 4 Esp. 158.

In an action against several where all are implicated in one joint act of trespass, the damages must be assessed against all jointly, though all may not have been equally culpable. Eliot v. Allen, 1 C. B. 18.

Where two persons are jointly sued for false imprisonment, one of whom has acted from improper motives, the damages ought not to be assessed with reference to the act and motives of the most guilty or the most innocent party, but the true criterion of damage is the whole injury which the plaintiff has sustained from the joint act of trespass. Clark v. Newsam, 1 Ex. 131; 16 L. J., Ex. 296.

A. GENERALLY.

"Fair"—Meaning of—Shows and Contrivances for Amusements—Buying and Selling.]—The appellant brought upon his land swing-boats, roundabouts, shows, and other contrivances for amusements, and allowed certain other persons to bring upon his land similar contrivances without any payment. There was no buying or selling, and no exposure of goods for sale. The appellant having been convicted of having permitted a "fair" to be held without obtaining a licence so to do:—Held, by Bruce, J., that there was no evidence to justify the conviction, as there was no buying and selling of goods, which is a necessary element in a "fair." Held, by Lawrance, J., that the amusements in question constituted a "fair," and that the appellant was properly convicted. Collins v. Cooper, 5 R. 256; 68 L. T. 450; 17 Cox, C. C. 647; 57 J. P. 248.

—— Restraining Holding of.]—Where land was directed by a local act to be put and kept in proper condition for purposes of recreation, the court restrained a corporation from holding thereon a fair at which cattle were sold. Att.-Gen. v. Southampton Corporation, 1 Giff. 363; 29 L. J., Ch. 282; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 36; 1 L. T. 155.

Accommodation in Market.]—A person who exposes goods for sale in a public market has a right to occupy the soil with baskets necessary and proper for containing the goods. Townend v. Woodruff, 5 Ex. 506; 19 L. J., Ex. 315.

If a person is refused, at a fair or market, the accommodation to which he is entitled, a court of equity cannot interfere by injunction, semble. Weale v. West Middlesex Waterworks, 1 Jac. & Walk. 373; 21 R. R. 183.

A custom for all persons exercising a particular trade to enter on the soil where a fair was to be held a reasonable time before it took place, and erect stalls and booths thereon for the more convenient carrying on of the trade and to keep them there until a reasonable time after the fair, paying 2*d.* to the lord of the fair, is valid. Tyson v. Smith, 6 A. & E. 745; 1 N. & P. 784; 6 L. J., K. B. 189.

Interference with Market—Power of District Board to erect Posts.]—A district board of works, under the statutory powers conferred by 57 Geo. 3, c. 29, s. 58, and 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 108, threatened to erect posts by the side of public footpaths along the public roads leading into the area of Spitalfields Market, in order to preserve the rights of the public and to insure the safety of foot-passengers. It was proved that this would seriously interfere with the access to the market, which had been recently enlarged by throwing into it the site of houses which had been pulled down belonging to the plaintiff:—Held, that such an exercise of the board's powers would be an interference with the "rights and privileges vested in the plaintiff in reference to a market" within the exception contained in 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 91, and an injunction was granted restraining the proposed action of the board. Horner v. Whitechapel Board of Works, 55 L. J., Ch. 289; 53 L. T. 842—C. A.

Erection of Weighing-house and Weighing-machine—Interference with Public Highway.]—In Dec., 1887, the plaintiffs, as the market authority under the Markets and Fairs (Weighing of Cattle) Act, 1887, took steps to provide under that act a weighing-machine for cattle upon a site in their market-place which, according to the plaintiffs' contention, consisted of two long and narrow strips in the market town separated by the highway. The defendants interfered, their contention being that the market-place was not distinct from the highway; but that the entire space upon which the markets were held was a public highway dedicated to the use of the public, subject only to the right of the owner of the soil for the time being or his lessees to hold markets thereon: and that the market-place, as a highway, was vested in them, the defendants, as an urban authority under the Public Health Act, 1875, and that the proposed weighing-machine would be a public nuisance, and interfere with their rights in such highway and with the public right of passage thereon:—Held, that s. 4 of the Markets and Fairs (Weighing of Cattle) Act, 1887, was an imperative section, and that the market authority was not only at liberty, but was bound to provide a proper weighing-machine for their market, which, according to the act, must be a permanent structure and not a movable machine, and that the defendants were wrong in their contention. McIntosh v. Romford Local Board, 61 L. T. 185.

Power to let Covered Portion of Market for other Purposes.]—By 37 & 38 Vict. c. lxxxv., s. 8, the corporation of Edinburgh (who were grantees of a market in Edinburgh) "may cover in a suitable and convenient manner the fruit and vegetable market-place, and improve and better adapt the same for the purposes of such market, and for the accommodation of parties using the same, and of the public, &c. Provided always that the ground floor only of such market-place shall be used for such fruit and vegetable market, and that all vacant portions of such market-place, whether on the ground floor or above the same, and all vacant and unlet stands, stalls, or shops in or on such market-place may be let or used by the corporation for such purposes and for such rents or sales as to them shall seem proper" :—Held, that the corporation were not entitled to exclude members of the public from the covered portion of the market during market hours and devote the building to other purposes. Edinburgh Magistrates v. Blackie, 11 App. Cas. 665—H. L. (Sc.)

B. RIGHT, HOW ACQUIRED.

Prescription.]—Such a right may be gained by immemorial enjoyment or prescription. Penryn Corporation v. Best, 48 L. J., Ex. 103; 3 Ex. D. 292; 38 L. T. 805; 27 W. R. 126—C. A.

Where a place had been used as a fair or a market, to which persons resorted to expose articles to sale :—Held, to be a sufficient answer to an indictment for a nuisance, that the same had been enjoyed more than twenty years without interruption. Rex v. Smith, 4 Esp. 111; 6 R. R. 842.

If the grantee of a market suffers another to erect a market in his neighbourhood, and he uses it for twenty-four years without interruption, the grantee is by such use barred of his action for disturbance. Holcroft v. Heel, 1 Bos. & P. 400.

Crown Grant.]—The crown has a right to grant a market franchise to one person over the land of another, though it cannot be exercised against the will of the person to whom the land belongs. Att.-Gen. v. Horner, 54 L. J., Q. B. 227; 14 Q. B. D. 245; 33 W. R. 93; 49 J. P. 326—C. A. Affirmed infra.

There is no public right of holding fairs or markets. The right to set up a market or fair is a prerogative right, which can only be granted by the crown after a preliminary inquiry under a writ of ad quod damnum. Downshire (Marquis) v. O'Brien, 19 L. R., Ir. 380.

Limits of—"In or Near."]—A grant of a right to hold a market "in or near" a certain place is not a grant by metes and bounds. Att.-Gen. v. Horner, in C. A., supra—per Lord Esher, M.R.

—— Dedication of Street subject to Market Rights.]—By letters patent in 34 Charles 2, the king granted market rights "in sive juxta" a certain place called "Spittle square" to one who was lessee of the square, and had acquired the greater part of the reversionary interest in it. The grantee or his successors in title laid out the square as a market-place with four internal streets. The land immediately surrounding the square was afterwards laid out in four external streets, but it did not appear to whom the property in this surrounding land at any time belonged. There was evidence of usage from the time of living memory to grant licences and take tolls for the sale of marketable articles over parts of the external streets as well as over the market-place and the internal streets :—Held, that under the grant "in sive juxta" the market-rights extended into the four external streets as well as over the market-place and the four internal streets; and that the inference from the documents and evidence was that the streets were dedicated to the public, subject to the exercise of the market-rights. Att.-Gen. v. Horner, 55 L. J., Q. B. 193; 11 App. Cas. 66; 54 L. T. 281; 34 W. R. 641; 50 J. P. 564—H. L. (E.)

—— "In or at."]—Under a grant of the right of holding markets and fairs "in or at" a town, the limits of the franchise include all the town, and the grantee has the right, in the absence of anything in the grant to the contrary, to appoint the place in which the market is to be held. Downshire (Marquis) v. O'Brien, 19 L. R., Ir. 380.

On what Days.]—Where by the term of a grant a market is to be held on specified days, no length of user will entitle the grantee to hold markets on other days. Att.-Gen. v. Horner, in C. A., supra.

Discontinuance—Abandonment.]—Disuser of the fair ground, in consequence of the illegal holding of rival fairs, does not constitute a discontinuance amounting to an abandonment of the patentee's right. Downshire (Marquis) v. O'Brien, 19 L. R., Ir. 380.

Forfeiture of Grant—Waiver.]—The principle laid down in the Islington Market Case (3 Cl. & Fin. 513), that whilst the grant of a fair or market remains unrepealed, the default of finding proper accommodation for the public cannot operate in point of law as a ground of granting a new charter to another to hold a market within the common law distance, applies equally to other breaches of duty involving forfeiture of grant, such as holding a fair or market on days other than those appointed by the charter. The crown only can take advantage of such a forfeiture. A forfeiture may be waived by the crown as well as by private individuals, and such waiver may be proved by similar evidence, e.g. by the continued acceptance of the crown rent. Midleton (Lord) v. Power, 19 L. R., Ir. 1.

Waiver of Statutory Rights.]—A statute, or charter having the force of a statute, may be waived by the party for whose benefit it was enacted, so as to render the acts of persons disregarding it legal. G. E. Ry. v. Goldsmid, 54 L. J., Ch. 162; 9 App. Cas. 927; 52 L. T. 270; 33 W. R. 81; 49 J. P. 260—H. L. (E.)

Grant of New Market—Extinguishment of Old Franchise.]—Under the powers of an act of 1844, the Corporation of Manchester purchased the manorial rights of the manor of Manchester, which was co-extensive with one of the six townships included in the borough. Among these rights was an ancient franchise to hold a market, which appeared to have been a Saturday market. After this, by the Manchester Market Act, 1846, the corporation were empowered to hold markets on such days as they should think fit at any places within the borough which they should appropriate as market-places, and to charge any tolls not exceeding those mentioned in the schedule to the act (which were higher than the old accustomed tolls), and to make certain charges for weighing which could not have been made under the old franchise :—Held, that there being under the act a change of time, a change of place, an alteration of the old charges, an imposition of new charges, and an extension of the market from the township to the borough, the effect of the act was to give the corporation new rights of holding markets in substitution for the old franchise, and that the old franchise was extinguished. Manchester Corporation v. Lyons, 22 Ch. D. 287 ; 47 L. T. 677—C. A.

—— When Old Grant Insufficient.]—If, by the terms of the grant, the market was to be held in a fixed place, defined and known by metes and bounds, should those limits not be sufficient, and the owner of the market have no power to enlarge them, a new market might be granted to such an extent as to supply the deficiency, but no more. Islington Market Bill, In re, 3 Cl. & F. 513 ; 12 M. & W. 20, n.

Charter—How Repealable.]—And where the first charter purported to be granted "de assensu prælatorum, comitum, &c., in instanti parliamento convocato," a new charter granted to hold the market within the prescribed distance would be void, and would be repealable by scire facias. The words stated would have the effect of giving the first charter the authority of an act of parliament. Ib.

Such a charter could only be repealed by act of parliament. If the market created by the first charter had not sufficient space for the accommodation of the public, and also if part of the space originally allotted to it was employed, or suffered by the grantee to be employed for other purposes, without his providing a convenient place for the public to buy and sell in elsewhere, within the limits of his grant, such circumstances would form a good defence to an action brought by him against any person for selling out of the market. They might also furnish ground for a scire facias to repeal the patent. Ib.

Quære, whether such circumstances would not render the grantee liable to an indictment for a misdemeanour. If they would, an action would lie also against him for his default ; but while such grant remains unrepealed, no other market could be granted within the limited distance. Ib.

Effect of Charter on Prescriptive Right.]—Where a corporation held a market by prescription, and the crown afterwards granted to the corporation a charter with these words : "quod nullum mercatum infra septem leucas in circuitu burgi prædicti per nos vel hæredes nostros alieno concedatur" :—Held, that such prohibition, if it could be considered to extend beyond that which is attached by the common law to the grant of a market, was void. Islington Market Bill, In re, 3 Cl. & F. 513 ; 12 M. & W. 20, n.

Right to Prevent Sale of Marketable Articles in Shops.]—The right of the owner of a market to prevent tradesmen from selling marketable articles in their shops within the limits of the franchise without paying the market dues in respect of such sales, is not unreasonable and may be gained by immemorial custom or prescription. The grant of a market "with all liberties and free customs to such a market belonging" does not imply such a right. Penryn Corporation v. Best, 48 L. J., Ex. 103 ; 3 Ex. D. 292 ; 38 L. T. 805 ; 27 W. R. 126—C. A.

The grant of a market does not of itself imply a right in the grantee to prevent persons from selling marketable articles in their private shops within the limits of the franchise on market days. Macclesfield Corporation v. Chapman, 12 M. & W. 18 ; 13 L. J., Ex. 32 ; 7 Jur. 1041.

A right by custom to exclude persons from selling marketable articles in their shops on market days without the limits of the market, is valid. Macclesfield Corporation v. Pedley, 1 N. & M. 708 ; 4 B. & Ad. 397.

—— Evidence for.]—Where a market for meat, &c., was proved to have been in existence in the reign of James 1, proof that the grantees of the market had for the last hundred years appointed market brokers, that no butchers' shops had existed out of the market place until 1810, and that the shops then set up were objected to by the grantees :—Held, to be sufficient evidence of such immemorial right. Ib.

A corporation claimed to be entitled by prescription to a meat market within the borough, and as incident thereto they claimed the right to prevent butchers from selling meat in their own shops on market days within the limits of the franchise. The evidence was that from the time of living memory down to 1862 butchers who had shops in the borough closed them on market days, and resorted to the market and sold there, paying stallage ; that in 1862 two butchers refused to do this, but on actions being brought submitted, and thenceforth paid toll for keeping their shops open on market days, and that the defendant had paid a similar toll for some years before 1875, when he declined to continue the payment :—Held, that the evidence was sufficient to support the claim to prevent the owners of shops from selling in them on market days. Penryn Corporation v. Best, supra.

Locality of Market.]—In an action by a lord of a manor, for disturbance of a market, if the lord proves a market immemorially holden in certain places within the manor, it is not a necessary legal inference (no grant being produced) that the market was granted to be holden in those places only ; but a jury may presume, from circumstances, that the market was granted to be holden in any convenient place within the manor. De Rutzen v. Lloyd, 5 A. & E. 456 ; 6 N. & M. 776 ; 5 L. J., K. B. 202.

—— Under Parliamentary Powers.]—A market company obtained an act, the preamble of which recited that a convenient site might be obtained between certain streets on the east and certain other streets on the west, and which enacted that the Market and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, was incorporated therewith. The special act authorised the erection of a market-house on land described in the deposited plans, and the company was enabled to alter and widen streets in the way pointed out on the deposited plans, and to buy additional lands, not exceeding two acres. A. was owner of land on the west side of one of the streets on the western boundary of the area spoken of in the preamble, and his land was described in the deposited plans, but it did not thereby appear that more was intended to be taken than enough to widen one of the streets. The company proceeded to take the whole land of A. compulsorily, and to build upon it a covered building, in addition to the market-house, authorised by the act, whereupon A. filed a bill for an injunction:—Held, that as the land of A. was described in the plan, and as therefore it might be wanted, the company was authorised to take it; and as by the general act "the singular may mean the plural," the company was not restricted by the word "market-house"; that the enactments of the special act did not require a reference to the preamble to explain them, and the injunction must be refused, the company being the proper judges of what lands were necessary for the works. Richards v. Scarborough Public Market Co., 23 L. J., Ch. 110—L.JJ.

C. DISTURBANCE OF MARKET.

1. ACTIONS FOR.

No Toll taken.]—An action will lie for erecting a market near the plaintiff's ancient market, though the defendant only took money in the nature of rent for his stalls, which is a lawful act; but took no toll, and had no pretence to a pie-poudre court, or any thing that amounted to a usurpation of a franchise of the crown. Mosley v. Chadwick, 7 Bos. & C. 47, n.; 31 R. R. 150, n.; 3 Doug. 117.

Effect of Waiver.]—If the grantee of a market under letters patent from the crown suffers another to erect a market in his neighbourhood, and uses it for the space of twenty-four years without interruption, he is by such use barred of his action for disturbance of his market. Holcroft v. Heel, 1 Bos. & P. 400. See G. E. Ry. v. Goldsmid, infra.

Interference without Sale.]—To support an action for the disturbance of a market, it is not necessary that the defendant should have actually sold; any active interference by him in the conduct of the new market, or participation in its profits or risk, is sufficient. Dorchester Corporation v. Ensor, 39 L. J., Ex. 11; L. R. 4 Ex. 335.

Where Space Deficient—Sale by Individual.]—Where part of the space granted for a market was used for other purposes than those specified in the grant, and the remaining part became insufficient for the public accommodation:—Held, that the lord of the market could not maintain an action against an individual for selling vegetables in the neighbourhood of his market, and thereby depriving him of toll, even at a time when there was room in the market, without shewing that on the day when the sale took place, he gave notice to the seller that there was room within the market. Prince v. Lewis, 5 B. & C. 363; 3 D. & R. 121; 2 Car. & P. 66; 4 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 188; 29 R. R. 265. And see G. E. Ry. v. Goldsmid, infra, Moseley v. Walker, 7 B. & C. 40; 9 D. & R. 863; 5 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 358; 31 R. R. 146.

—— Competing Market.]—It is essential to the complaint of an old market against a new one set up near it, that the old one was competent to the accommodation of the public. O'Reilly, Ex parte, 1 Ves. J. 114; 1 R. R. 89.

Failure on the part of the lord of a market to afford sufficient accommodation for the public is not a defence to an action for disturbance by the setting up of a rival place of sale, although it is a defence to an action against a dealer who cannot find room in the market. In order to make a defendant liable to an action for disturbance of a market, it is not necessary to prove that he acted with the intention of defrauding the plaintiffs of their tolls by taking advantage of the concourse at their market. G. E. Ry. v Goldsmid, 54 L. J., Ch. 162; 9 App. Cas. 927; 52 L. T. 270; 33 W. R. 81; 49 J. P. 260—H. L. (E.)

A charter was granted by Edw. 3, with the advice of his parliament, to the city of London, conferring certain privileges on the citizens, and granting that no market should be held within seven miles of the city. A charter was granted by Car. 2, in 1662, to the plaintiff's predecessors in title, giving them the right to hold a market "in or next to S. Square," which was within seven miles of the city. User of the market was proved from 1723. The plaintiffs built houses at S. Square, and let many of them for purposes unconnected with the market, and there was evidence that the market was very crowded, that it was difficult for dealers to get stalls there, and that substantially the whole market area was let by the year, month, or week, leaving no space for the general public. The defendants, who were a railway company, established a depôt or row of shops at their terminus, which was within 300 yards of S. Square, and let them to dealers for the purpose of selling vegetables brought up by the railway; the company also circulated their tenants' advertisements inviting consignments of produce; no persons were allowed to sell except the tenants of the shops. The plaintiffs brought an action to restrain the defendants from interfering with their market rights:—Held, that although the charter of Edw. 3 had the force of an act of parliament, the corporation of London might waive their rights as to establishment of markets, and that the court would presume that they consented to the charter of 1662. Held, also, that the depôt of the defendants, although not technically a market, was a disturbance of the plaintiffs' rights, and made them liable to an injunction; and that even if the plaintiffs' mode of conducting their market would preclude them from maintaining an action against a tenant of the defendants, yet it did not preclude them from bringing an action against the defendants to restrain them from establishing a rival place of sale in the neighbourhood. Islington Market Case (12 M. & W. 20, n.; 3 Cl. & F. 513), and Prince v. Lewis (5 B. & C. 363; 4 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 188; 29 R. R. 265), considered. Ib.

Illegal Tolls no Excuse.]—Although the taking of tolls on an animal not sold may be illegal, unless such tolls are demanded as stallage, still the levying of them cannot form a justification for setting up a rival market. Midleton (Lord) v. Power, 19 L. R., Ir. 1.

Prescribed Limits—Different days—Liability of Persons taking part in Disturbing.]—Where there is a franchise right of holding fairs and markets, and of taking tolls in respect thereof, and an unauthorised fair or market is held within a reasonable distance of the prescribed place, and within the ambit of the grant, and such fair or market is held on the same day as is prescribed by the grant for holding a fair or market, there is an actual intendment of law that there has been a disturbance. If, however, the injury arises from acts done outside the prescribed limit, or done on different days from those specified, a question of fact arises, and proof must be adduced of actual disturbance by the persons sought to be made liable, and of injury to the rights of the patentee. Every person who takes part in an illegal combination to disturb a franchise right of holding fairs, or who knowingly takes advantage of it, is guilty of disturbance. Downshire (Marquis) v. O'Brien, 19 L. R., Ir. 380.

Injunction—Damages—Costs.]—In an action for disturbance of the plaintiff's fairs and markets, it appeared that a combination had been formed to set up rival fairs within the ambit of the plaintiff's grant, and in such a way as to disturb their franchise rights; that the defendants were not parties to such combination, but that they sold at one of the rival fairs with a knowledge that they were infringing the plaintiff's rights. The defendants, by their pleading and evidence in the action, denied the plaintiff's rights as claimed, and attempted to justify the holding of such rival fairs and the conduct of the originators of the combination:—Held, that they had contributed to the disturbance; that they should be restrained by injunction; that they should not be held liable in damages; but that, having regard to the case made by them, they should pay the costs of the action. Semble, if the defendants had by their pleading admitted the plaintiff's rights, and shewn that they were mere casual vendors, and that the part they took in the rival fairs was due to inadvertence, they would not have been condemned in costs. Ib.

Interlocutory Injunction.] — The plaintiffs were owners of the tolls of an ancient cattle market held weekly on Thursday. The defendants, who were auctioneers, fitted up with stalls and pens a neighbouring piece of ground, and issued circulars stating that weekly sales of cattle by auction would be held there on Mondays. The plaintiffs brought their action to restrain the defendants from holding their proposed sales, as being an interference with the plaintiffs' market:—Held, by the Master of the Rolls, that, having regard to modern facilities for traffic, a market on Monday was primâ facie an injury to a market on Thursday, that what the defendants were doing was in fact the establishment of a rival market, and that an interlocutory injunction ought to be granted. But held, on appeal, that the defendants undertaking to keep an account, an interlocutory injunction ought not to be granted, for that, if an injunction was granted and it turned out that the defendants were in the right, there would be great difficulty in ascertaining the compensation to which they would be entitled, whereas, if an injunction was refused, and the plaintiffs succeeded at the trial, there would be no difficulty in giving them compensation, and their market would suffer no permanent injury from the sales by the defendants in the meantime. Elwes v. Payne, 48 L. J., Ch. 831; 12 Ch. D. 468; 41 L. T. 118; 28 W. R. 234—C. A.

2. DISTURBANCE, WHAT IS.

Sale by Sample.]—A sale by sample, on a market day, near to but without the limits of the market, is not a disturbance of the market, unless done designedly and with the intention to evade payment of toll. Brecon Corporation v. Edwards, 1 H. & C. 51; 31 L. J., Ex. 368; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 461; 6 L. T. 293.

Sale out of Market—Customers from the Market.]—A person brought sheep to a public-house forty yards out of the limits of a market, left them there, went into the market in search of customers, whom he brought back to the public-house, and there sold the sheep to them:—Held, that this was a fraud upon the market, for which the seller was liable to an action by the lessee of the market. Bridgland v. Shapter, 5 M. & W. 375; 8 L. J., Ex. 246.

Alteration by Statute—Modern Market—Sale Yard.]—The commissioners of a town were by their act incorporating the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, empowered to set up a market and take tolls for articles sold therein. Sect. 47 of the local act imposed tolls on all persons selling except on premises in their own occupation. Sect. 13 of the Consolidation Act imposes penalties on all persons selling except in their own dwellings or shops:—Held, that an auctioneer holding sales on a field in his own occupation could not be sued for disturbance of the market, though apart from the special act that mode of sale would have been a disturbance of an ancient market. Abergavenny Improvement Commissioners v. Straker, 58 L. J., Ch. 717; 42 Ch. D. 83; 60 L. T. 756; 38 W. R. 158.

The provisions in the local act were not intended to increase the liability of a person infringing the Consolidation Act, but to increase the area of exemption, and that a person protected by the local act in respect of tolls was also exempt from the penalty under the Consolidation Act. Rutherford v. Straker, 58 L. J., Ch. 718, n.; 42 Ch. D. 85, n.; 60 L. T. 756, n.

A corporation granted leases, with covenants for quiet enjoyment, of land within the limits of their borough, to the appellant, who occupied it as a sale-yard, and held periodical sales of cattle upon it. Subsequently the corporation, by their urban sanitary authority, opened a public market in the borough and established tolls. The appellant was convicted in a penalty provided by s. 13 of the Markets and Fairs Act, 1847, for selling bullocks in his sale-yard without payment of toll:—Held, that the exemption in s. 166 of the Public Health Act, 1875, referred to a franchise, and did not apply to the case of the appellant, as he had not by his leases acquired such a right to sell cattle in his sale-yard that the corporation could not interfere with it by the establishment of a new market. Spurling v. Bantoft, 60 L. J., Q. B. 745; [1891] 2 Q. B. 384; 65 L. T. 584; 40 W. R. 157; 17 Cox, C. C. 372; 56 J. P. 132.

By virtue of a consolidating statute of 1883, the corporation of Birmingham had the sole right to establish, and had, in fact, a market for pigs. Under s. 90 of this act penalties were imposed upon any person selling, or exposing for sale within the borough, any animals or articles (in respect of which tolls were authorised to be taken) "except in some market or fair lawfully authorised, or in his own dwelling-place, shop, or place of business, . . . or on any farm or land in his occupation." The defendants were an association of six individuals who had set up within the borough a sale-yard, or private market for pigs, to which the public had access during market hours, and at which the pigs of any one might be sold. In this sale-yard there were common ways, and a common room provided for the frequenters of the market. All the sales of pigs were, however, effected through the individual members of the association, to whom alone the various stalls were let as yearly tenants; and a charge of 2*d.* had to be paid by them to the association for every pig sold, whether on the premises or not. There was evidence that sales took place on portions of the yard not let to the individual defendants:—Held, that what the defendants were doing as an association and as individuals was not within the exceptions of the act of 1853, but amounted to a disturbance of the market rights of the plaintiffs, which much be restrained by an injunction. Birmingham Corporation v. Foster, 70 L. T. 371.

Selling Cattle in Lairs on Transfer of Market.]—The plaintiffs were, down to 1855, seised in fee of an ancient market for the sale of cattle, known as Smithfield Market, and were entitled to certain tolls in respect of cattle exposed for sale in the market. In 1855 the Smithfield Market was, under the authority of an act of parliament, removed to Islington; but all privileges were expressly preserved to the plaintiffs, and it was enacted that no new market for the sale of cattle should be opened within a distance of seven miles from St. Paul's Cathedral, in the city of London. For more than fifty years before the closing of Smithfield Market, the defendants, or one of them, had been in possession of a private lair near to that market, and in 1854 the business that had there been carried on was transferred to certain premises about six hundred yards distant from the Islington Market and within the distance of seven miles from St. Paul's Cathedral; lairs and receptacles for cattle were there provided, containing accommodation for about four hundred head. Some of the cattle were from time to time sold by the defendants upon the premises between the market days, which were held on Mondays and Thursdays. Beyond a uniform charge of lairage there was nothing in the nature of a toll upon sales effected by other persons than the defendants; but where the defendants themselves acted as salesmen, they charged the same commission as if the cattle had been sold in the plaintiffs' market. The cattle thus sold in the interval between the two markets, would if there had been no opportunity for sale between the two markets, have found their way to and have been sold in the market of the plaintiffs. From time immemorial cattle had been sold in certain lairs near Smithfield Market, of which that possessed by the defendants was one. The defendants now claimed to have a right either from lost grant, prescription, or otherwise, to sell cattle in the manner described:—Held, that an action was maintainable against the defendants for a disturbance of the plaintiffs' market. London Corporation v. Low, 49 L. J., Q. B. 144; 42 L. T. 16; 28 W. R. 250; 44 J. P. 169.

Held, also, that if the defendants had had any prescriptive right to carry on such sales in the neighbourhood of Smithfield Market (which the court were clearly of opinion they had not), such right had in no way been transferred to lairs in the neighbourhood of Islington Market. Ib.

Another Market on same Day.]—A market held in the same town with an old market, if held upon the same day, is a disturbance by intendment of law; but if it is held on a different day it is only evidence of a disturbance. Dorchester Corporation v. Ensor, 39 L. J., Ex. 11; L. R. 4 Ex. 335.

The establishment of a new market, to be holden within the same times, within the common law distance of the old market, was primâ facie injurious to the latter, and therefore void; the convenience of the public would not, under such circumstances, justify the grant of a new market. Islington Market Bill, In re, 3 Cl. & F. 513.

Holding Markets on different Days.]—The plaintiffs were owners of the tolls of an ancient cattle market held weekly on Thursdays. The defendants, who were auctioneers, fitted up with stalls and pens a neighbouring piece of ground, and issued circulars stating that weekly sales of cattle by auction would be held there on Mondays. The plaintiffs brought their action to restrain the defendants from holding their proposed sales, as being an interference with the plaintiffs' market:—Held, that, having regard to modern facilities for traffic, a market on Monday was primâ facie an injury to a market on Thursday, that what the defendants were doing was in fact the establishment of a rival market—per M.R. Elwes v. Payne, 48 L. J., Ch. 831; 12 Ch. D. 468; 41 L. T. 118; 28 W. R. 234.

Shop opposite Market.]—A corporation brought an action to restrain the defendants from selling eggs and dried fish on market days in their shop. The shop was situate in a street which adjoined one side of the plaintiff's market, and was on the opposite side of the street from, but not opposite to, the entrance from that street to the market. The defendants only sold their own goods in their shop in the ordinary course of business:—Held, that this was no disturbance of the statutory right of market. Manchester Corporation v. Lyons, 22 Ch. D. 287; 47 L. T. 677—C. A. See cases ante, col. 764.

Pleading.]—To account for disturbance of a fair and market place, a plea that the market was held by the plaintiff, without any lawful warrant or authority, is not embarrassing. Fitzgerald v. Connors, Ir. R. 5 C. L. 191.

Where, by law, markets are forbidden to be held on particular feast days, it is unnecessary, in pleading the right to hold a market on certain days of the week, to state the exceptions of the feast days. Mosley v. Walker, 7 B. & C. 40; 9 D. & R. 863; 5 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 358; 31 R. R. 146.

D. RIGHT OF REMOVAL.

Transfer within Township—Right to Ancient Site.]—The lord of a manor to whom a grant of a market is made infra villam de W., may hold it anywhere infra villam de W.; and whether villa extends to the town of W., or the township or parish of W., the lord has a right to remove the market place from one situation to another within the precinct of his grant; and though he should have holden it above twenty years within the township of W. when the grant only gave it him within the town properly so called at the time, yet if he afterwards gives notice of the removal to another place in the township, the public has no right to go upon his soil and freehold in the old market place; and any person going there is liable to an action of trespass by the lord. Curwen v. Salkeld, 3 East, 538; 7 R. R. 510.

A person indicted for a nuisance in erecting a stall in the old market place, after a wrongful removal of the market, may set up the wrongfulness of the removal as a defence, and need not proceed by scire facias to repeal the grant of the market. Rex v. Starkey, 7 A. & E. 95; W. W. & D. 502; 6 L. J., K. B. 202.

Incident to grant of Market.]—Charles the Second, by a charter, granted to a corporation two fairs to be holden annually within the borough and foreign, and confirmed to them all markets which they then held, with a reservation of the rights of the lord of the manor. A market had been holden immemorially in the High street until a very late period, when the corporation, finding it inconvenient, removed it out of the High street to another and more convenient place within the borough; the corporation exercised acts of ownership in pulling down an old market-house and erecting a new one; the clerk of the markets, however, had been appointed by the lord of the manor, but he did not receive any toll from the persons frequenting it. The defendant having been indicted for a nuisance in erecting stalls in the High street, after the removal of the market, the judge left it to the jury to say, whether the corporation was owner of this market; adding, that if so, the right of removal was incident to the grant. The jury, having found in the affirmative, the court refused to grant a new trial. Rex v. Cotterill, 1 B. & Ald. 67; 2 Chit. 487.

A municipal corporation was entitled to hold a market at any place within the limits of its municipal borough. The 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 64, enlarged the boundaries of the borough for parliamentary purposes. The 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, subsequently extended the boundaries of the municipal borough to those of the parliamentary borough for certain purposes. The corporation thereupon removed its market to a place without the boundaries of the old municipal borough, but within those of the parliamentary borough:—Held, that the corporation did not forfeit its ancient right to hold the market by the change which it had made in the place for holding it. Dorchester Corporation v. Ensor, 39 L. J., Ex. 11; L. R. 4 Ex. 335.

Under a grant of a market to be holden within certain limits, the grantees may hold the market in any convenient place within the limits, and may from time to time remove such market, or any part thereof, to any other convenient place within the limits. Wortley v. Nottingham Local Board, 21 L. T. 582.

When a grant of market is not confined to any particular locality, the grantee may from time to time change the site in order to suit his own convenience; but it is an implied condition of the exclusive privilege that he shall provide a market place, and that implied condition is satisfied so long as he gives reasonable accommodation to those members of the public who use the market either as buyers or sellers, and the extent of the accommodation which must be afforded in each case must vary with the circumstances—per Lord Watson. Edinburgh Magistrates v. Blackie, 11 App. Cas. 665—H. L. (Sc.)

The patentees of fairs are justified in removing them to any place within the precinct of their grant; and if the accommodation provided by them is inadequate, or the change so injurious as to amount to an abuse of the franchise, the remedy of those injured is not the setting up of a rival affair. If such a change is productive of public injury, the remedy must be with the crown, who can proceed by indictment or scire facias to repeal the patent; if productive of private injury, the party injured must resort to his action. Midleton (Lord) v. Power, 19 L. R., Ir. 1.

Semble, that a transfer of the market from the old market house and open street to a new building at the end of the same, and partly in another street, is establishing a new market within s. 50 of the 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98. Ellis v. Bridgnorth Corporation, 2 Johns. & H. 67; 4 L. T. 112; 9 W. R. 331.

How Exerciseable—No Change of Privileges.]—B. being entitled to a market in the manor of K., which was held in the public street on B.'s soil, removed it to another site in K., which site he had demised, without demising the franchise, for a term of years:—Held, that the removal was bad, unless the public had the same privilege in the new market as in the old. Rex v. Starkey, 7 A. & E. 95; W. W. & D. 502; 2 N. & P. 169; 6 L. J., K. B. 202.

—— Interference with Existing Rights.]—A corporation was owner of an ancient market, and also lord of the manor in which the borough was situate. The market had from time immemorial been held in and near the High street. A party had a house in that street, and he and the previous owners and occupiers of the houses in which he lived, as well as several other occupiers of houses in the street, had from time immemorial erected, on market days, stalls opposite their houses, and either used the stalls themselves, or let them to others. No tolls were ever taken in respect of the goods sold at these stalls, though they were formerly taken for similar produce exposed in the market elsewhere. In an action against the corporation for removing the market to another place, within the borough:—Held, that the right to the stalls was a right which might reasonably be supposed to have been granted by the owners of the market to the owners and occupiers of the houses, and that it was sufficiently connected with the enjoyment of the houses to be claimed as appurtenant thereto. Ellis v. Bridgnorth Corporation, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 52; 32 L. J., C. P. 273; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1078; 8 L. T. 668; 12 W. R. 56.

Held, also, that if the original grant was presumably to hold the market at any place within the borough, still the corporation could not remove it, as to do so would be in derogation of their own grant of the right claimed. Ib.

—— Corporation acting as Local Board.]—Although there is a clear right at common law for a corporation to change the site of a market held in a borough, yet if the members of the corporation avail themselves of the 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, and, as a local board rather than in their corporate capacity, propose to transfer and regulate the market, they will be held to the provisions of the Local Government Act, and their powers will be limited to that extent.

Ellis v. Bridgnorth Corporation, 2 Johns. & H. 67; 4 L. T. 112; 9 W. R. 331.

Under Authority to Extend and Improve.]—In the Cambridge Market Act, 1850, power was given to the mayor, aldermen, and burgesses in council, to enlarge as well as to improve the market of that borough:—Held, that the meaning of the word was not restricted to merely extending the market to streets theretofore forming parts of its sides, but authorised them to extend the market to other streets in its immediate neighbourhood, even though such streets were not mentioned in the act. Att.-Gen. v. Cambridge Corporation, L. R. 6 H. L. 303; 22 W. R. 37.

The general object of the act being to enlarge and improve the market of the borough, the mayor and aldermen, who had the right to hold markets in the borough, though by the act not authorised to enlarge an existing corn exchange, were authorised to erect a new corn exchange, and to make it adjoin the borough market, such being, in their opinion, a matter of public convenience, and an enlargement and an improvement of the market. Ib.

E. TOLLS.

1. ORIGIN OF RIGHT.

Incident to Grant.]—The grant of a fair, "cum omnibus libertatibus et liberis consuetudinibus ad hujusmodi feriam pertinentibus," does not give a right to take tolls. Egremont (Earl) v. Saul, 6 A. & E. 924; 6 L. J., K. B. 205.

If a grantee of a royal franchise, as toll, grants an immunity thereout, and the franchise of toll afterwards becomes extinct by unity of possession in the crown, the immunity does not thereby cease; and if the crown re-grants the toll, the grantee must take it still subject to the immunity. Tewkesbury (Bailiff) v. Bricknell, 2 Taunt. 120; 11 R. R. 537.

Immemorial User.]—In a high street in a town and manor there was a market-house belonging to the lord. This manor, together with the market belonged to the crown in the reign of Henry 3. As far back as living memory extended, various tolls had been paid for the use of the market, for articles hawked about the town, and for stalls and standings for the sale of articles erected in the street. One of these tolls was a shilling for every cart-load of fish, fruit, and vegetables hawked about the town for which no toll had before been paid in the market:—Held, first, that there was evidence that the toll had been paid from time immemorial, so that a legal origin of the claim would, if possible, be presumed. Lawrence v. Hitch, 37 L. J., Q. B. 209; L. R. 3 Q. B. 521; 9 B. & S. 467; 18 L. T. 483; 16 W. R. 813—Ex. Ch.

Presumed Dedication.]—Held, also, that the claim might be sustained as to a toll granted or reserved within time of memory, by presuming a dedication by the crown of the street to the public since the time of Henry 3, which would be a good consideration for a grant or a reservation of the toll claimed, as it was not toll-thorough, or a toll for the mere use of the way, but imported a licence to rest and stay upon the land for the purpose of selling marketable commodities. Ib.

Transferred by Lease.]—By a private act, passed in 1835, the market of Devonport, belonging to A., was enlarged into a market for cattle, sheep, &c., and A. was empowered to let the erections, buildings, &c., on the ground whereon the market should be held; and to demand and take certain tolls of and from any person or persons bringing any goods or articles to the market. There was also a clause providing, that if the owner should demise or lease the market, or the site, and all or any of the erections or buildings thereon, the lessee should, subject to such exceptions or restrictions as might be expressly contained in the lease, take and enjoy the rents and tolls authorised to be taken by the act, as the owner would have been entitled to do if the lease had not been made:—Held, that a lessee of the market, under a parol demise, was entitled to demand and receive the tolls. Brigland v. Shapter, 5 M. & W. 375; 8 L. J., Ex. 246.

By Statute—Conflict with other Rights.]—The Brecon Markets Act, 1862, vested in the Brecon Markets Company certain tolls, which, under the name of "drift tolls," had been immemorially received by the corporation of Brecon for cattle, goods, and carriages passing to, through or from the borough. A railway company, under the sanction of an act passed in the same session, acquired land, not being a highway, on which they constructed a railway and station within the borough of Brecon, whence passengers, goods, and cattle were conveyed by other lines of railway to other places beyond the limits of the borough. The rights of the corporation and of the Brecon Markets Company were expressly reserved by the Railway Act, but there was no provision either in that or in the Markets Act expressly enabling the Brecon Markets Company to levy tolls on the railway:—Held, that the Brecon Markets Company was not entitled to toll in respect of cattle, goods, or carriages passing along the railway. Brecon Markets Co. v. Neath and Brecon Ry., 42 L. J., C. P. 63; L. R. 8 C. P. 157—Ex. Ch.

2. AMOUNT OF.

Reasonable.]—A grant of a fair or a market, with an express grant of toll, passes reasonable toll, though no amount of toll is specified. Stamford Corporation v. Pawlett, 1 C. & J. 57, 400; 1 Tyr. 291.

If any objection is made to the antiquity of a toll on the score of rankness, it might still be supported as a reasonable toll, the amount varying from time to time according to the varying value of money. Lawrence v. Hitch, 9 B. & S. 467; 37 L. J., Q. B. 209; L. R. 3 Q. B. 521; 18 L. T. 483; 16 W. R. 813—Ex. Ch.

A toll of one penny for every pig brought into a market is not necessarily unreasonable. Wright v. Bruister, 4 B. & Ad. 116; 2 L. J., K. B. 6.

Usual.]—An act for the better regulating a market, enacted, that it should be lawful for the owner thereof to take all such tolls as were usually collected or taken, or which were payable within the market:—Held, that such owner, although not entitled at common law to any toll, might, under that act, recover such tolls as, at the time of passing thereof, were usually paid in any part of the market; although the tolls then usually paid in respect of the same articles were different in other parts of the market. Bedford (Duke) v. Emmett, 3 B. & Ald. 366.

Where a corporation was entitled by a general grant of toll, explained by usage to be due for all commercial goods passing in and out of their city, on horses, or in carts or waggons (that is, at the rate of 1*d.* for every horse load, and 2*d.* for every cart load drawn by one horse, and 2*d.* more for each additional horse):—Held, that any alteration of the carriage by which the goods were so conveyed, as by taking them in stage coaches, instead of carts or waggons, could not vary the right of toll in the proportion of 2*d.* for each horse drawing the coach, although the number of horses was estimated by the weight of passengers rather than of goods. Carlisle Corporation v. Wilson, 5 East, 2; 1 Smith, 297.

Misconduct of Toll Collector.]—Where a toll of corn has been customarily taken by dipping into the sack, so as to bring out a certain quantity, and the collector varied from the proper mode (by sweeping instead of lifting the toll), so as to take more:—Held, that trover lay against him for the excess. Norman v. Bell, 2 B. & Ad. 190.

3. For What Allowed.

Sales by Sample.]—A prescription for toll in respect of goods sold by sample in a market, and afterwards brought into the city to be delivered, cannot be supported. Hill v. Smith, 4 Taunt. 520. But see S. C., 10 East, 476; 10 R. R. 357.

A seller of corn by sample in a market is benefited by the market as well as the seller of corn which is pitched there in bulk and sold; and if he refuses to pay the same toll which is paid by the seller of corn in bulk, an action lies against him for the injury done to the market in selling by sample. Tewkesbury (Bailiff) v. Bricknell, 2 Taunt. 120; 11 R. R. 537.

Milk—Sale from Door to Door.]—By a local act, 15 Vict. c. civ., for the establishment and regulation of markets in the borough of L., it was provided that, after the opening of the market places, every person (with certain specified exceptions) who should sell within the limits of the act, other than in some one of the market places, private legal markets, or in his own dwelling-house, shop, warehouse, yard, or store, anything whatever in respect of which tolls were by the act authorised to be taken, should be subject to a penalty. Milk was not one of the articles specified in the act as subject to tolls; but by a subsequent amending act, 25 Vict. c. 23, the bailiffs and servants of the trustees of the markets were authorised to remove to the markets any articles, and, inter alia, milk, illegally exposed for sale in any street or public thoroughfare within the limits of the former act, and by a further amending act (35 & 36 Vict. c. 96) it was provided that it should be lawful for the trustees, if they should think fit, to demand and receive in respect of certain enumerated articles, and, inter alia, milk, exposed or offered for sale in any of the market places provided by the trustees, certain tolls specified in the schedule to the act. In 1882, the trustees issued a public notice that, for the future, tolls should be paid on all cans, tankards, or other vessels of milk, whether sold from door to door, or otherwise, and whether taken to the market or not. The market trustees contended that they were entitled to toll upon milk within the market limits, and summoned the appellant for so selling milk without payment of toll; the appellant was convicted:—Held, that, under the acts regulating the markets, the trustees were not entitled to levy toll on milk not sold in one of the market places, but sold, as by the appellant, at the dwellings of customers; and that a person delivering milk to customers at their doors, was not liable to a penalty. Quilligan v. Limerick Market Trustees, 14 L. R. Ir. 265.

Evidence of Right.]—A claim of toll to be taken in specie for goods sold in a market, is supported by evidence of a right to toll for goods brought into the market, and there sold, without shewing any right to toll for goods sold in the market without being brought there. Mosley v. Pierson, 4 Term Rep. 104.

Goods brought into a Town.]—A prescription for toll of corn brought into a town to be there sold on a market-day, any part of which is pitched within the market for sale, and which shall be there sold, is bad, as there cannot be any toll in respect of goods not actually brought into the market. Wells v. Miles, 4 B. & Ald. 559; 23 R. R. 393.

Toll-traverse.]—To support a claim of toll-traverse, a special consideration need not be shewn. Richards v. Bennett, 2 D. & R. 389; 1 B. & C. 223; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 97; 25 R. R. 372.

In an action for toll-traverse evidence that a party on a market-day sold forty-one quarters of corn by two sacks pitched in the market, is not sufficient to authorise a verdict against him. Vines v. Reading Corporation, 4 Bing. 8; 12 Moore, 201; 1 Y. & J. 4; 29 R. R. 490.

Toll-thorough.]—A claim of toll-thorough cannot be supported, without shewing a beneficial consideration moving to the person from whom it is claimed. Yarmouth Corporation v. Eaton, 3 Burr. 1402.

Hat-guards.]—The respondent sold hat-guards in a street of a borough which was under a local improvement act. The act required a licence from the corporation to sell in a place other than the market any article for which a toll was leviable. The schedule of tolls mentioned only sheds or stalls for flesh, cheese, butter, "or other thing whatsoever":—Held, that the respondent did not require a licence, as hat-guards were not within the list of tollable things. Loftos v. Gleave, 55 J. P. 149.

Sale of Fish—Amending Act—Repeal.]—The respondent sold fish from a cart in a borough governed by a local improvement act which required a licence from the corporation to sell any goods for which a toll was leviable. A prior act contained an exemption from toll for fish sold in places other than the market. There was no express repeal of the former act and parts of it were recited in the later act:—Held, that the exemption in the former act continued and that no licence was required for selling fish in the streets. Loftos v. Kiggins, 55 J. P. 151.

4. Penalties for Nonpayment.

"Shop"—Vessel Moored to a Wharf.]—By a market act, every person who shall sell or expose for sale at any place within the limits of the act

(other than in any existing market-place, or the market-house and market-places to be established under the act, or in his own dwelling-house, or in any shop attached to and being part of any dwelling-house) any article in respect of which tolls are by the act authorised to be taken, other than eggs, butter and fruit, shall forfeit 40*s.* :— Held, that a vessel moored to a wharf on the old canal, within the limits, was not a shop within the exemption. Wiltshire v. Baker, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 237 ; 31 L. J., M. C. 10, n. ; 5 L. T. 355 ; 10 W. R. 89.

—— Skittle Ground.]—The Exmouth Market Act, 1867, which incorporated the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, by s. 20, enacts that no unlicensed person shall sell in any open place within the limits of the market, not being the new market-place or his own dwelling-house or shop, any articles, &c. A person sold articles of the description mentioned in the act in a skittle-ground let to him for two days. The place where the sale took place was covered with a roof and inclosed, but had a door leading into the street :—Held, that the place of sale was not his shop within the exception in the act. Hooper v. Kenshole, 46 L. J., M. C. 160 ; 2 Q. B. D. 127 ; 36 L. T. 111 ; 25 W. R. 368.

—— Shed affixed to House.]—A. was tenant of a dwelling-house and shop and a piece of ground in front of the shop ; a wooden shed affixed to the house and supported on wooden posts had been erected and continued over the piece of ground for eighteen years, and previously to the erection of the shed there had been stone flags built into and forming part of the house which projected three feet from the house, and the flags helped to support the shed. In 1864 a market was established for the town. A. was convicted under s. 13 of the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, for selling goods in the shed, and the justices stated a case describing the shed and giving their construction of the statute :— Held, that the justices put too narrow a construction on the section, and that the shed was accessory to part of the shop, and therefore within the exception. Ashworth v. Heyworth, 10 B. & S. 309 ; 38 L. J., M. C. 91 ; L. R. 4 Q. B. 316 ; 20 L. T. 439 ; 17 W. R. 668.

Dwelling-house or Shop.]—Where an act enacted that every person who shall sell or expose for sale at any place within the limits of the act (other than his own dwelling-house, or in any shop attached to and being part of any dwelling house) any article in respect of which tolls are by the act authorised to be taken, shall incur a penalty of 40*s.* :—Held, that to bring it within the exemption the shop need not be attached to any part of the dwelling-house of the party himself. Wiltshire v. Willett, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 240 ; 31 L. J., M. C. 8 ; 5 L. T. 355 ; 10 W. R. 44.

Held, also, that a sale by auction in a shop attached to and being part of any dwelling-house was privileged. Ib.

A local board, acting under the powers of the Local Government Act, 1858, and the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, made by-laws, directing that cattle markets and an annual show of horses should be held in prescribed places and appointing a toll for cattle, horses, &c., exposed for sale in such markets. An auctioneer, at the time when these markets were established, was possessed of a building called the Agricultural Hall, which was erected some years before the passing of the by-laws, regulating the market. It was a large building, containing a ring or an area in which was accommodation for about 100 head of cattle. Adjoining to and communicating with it was a yard with pens capable of holding 1,400 sheep. His dwelling-house was separated from the Agricultural Hall by his harness-room and stable. He advertised and held sales by auction in the agricultural hall on market days, the average sale on these days amounting to 100 cattle and 1,000 sheep, and exceeding the sales in the regular market. The cattle and sheep so sold were the property of farmers and others, the auctioneer charging them with a commission : — Held, without expressing any opinion as to whether an auctioneer would have been at liberty to sell horses by auction on his premises, notwithstanding the market, it was evident, having regard to the nature and extent of his premises, that they were not part of his dwelling-place or shop within the meaning of s. 13 of the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, and that the business carried on by him was not a right, power, or privilege which he enjoyed when the market was established, within the meeting of the Local Government Act, s. 50. Fearon v. Mitchell, 41 L. J., M. C. 170 ; L. R. 7 Q. B. 690 ; 27 L. T. 33.

A local act regulating a market prohibited under a penalty, in terms identical with those in the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, s. 13, any person from selling or exposing for sale within the limits of the market, "except in his own dwelling-place or shop," any articles in respect of which tolls were by that act authorised to be taken. A salesman resided within the limits, and occupied a large yard adjoining his residence, in which were sheds for the sale of cattle and sheep. The yard extended back about 160 feet, and the only entrance to it was through double doors from the street, and by passing underneath the small house, which consisted only of upper rooms supported on pillars over the entrance. Stairs led up from this covered entrance, which was thirty feet by twenty, to the house. He was summoned for exposing for sale 200 sheep in this yard, and convicted in a penalty :—Held, that the conviction was right, as the yard did not come within the exception, so as to be either his dwelling-place or his shop. M'Hole v. Davies, 45 L. J., M. C. 30 ; 1 Q. B. D. 59 ; 33 L. T. 502 ; 24 W. R. 343.

A sale by auction of horses by A., a licensed auctioneer, in a yard attached to the dwelling-house of B., within the district, is an offence. Llandaff and Canton Market Co. v. Lyndon, infra.

How Determined.]—By s. 13 of the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, after a market-place is open for public use, every person other than a licensed hawker who shall sell or expose for sale, in any place within the prescribed limits, except in his own dwelling-place or shop, any articles in respect of which tolls are by the special act authorised to be taken in the market, shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty ; and in order to exempt from penalty under this section, a party must be shewn to have sold the marketable articles in what is really his own private shop, and not in any such way as to constitute a different market from the legal one ; and in order to determine this question, all the elements of the case must be taken into consideration, although not one of them alone might be conclusive upon it. Pope v. Whalley, 6 B. & S. 303; 34 L. J., M. C. 76; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 444; 11 L. T. 769; 13 W. R. 402.

Bulk of Goods Outside.]—Upon the construction of a local act establishing a market for corn, &c., in the city of Cork, and its suburbs:—Held, that the market toll was not leviable upon a sale, made in the vendor's own house or premises situate within the city, of corn then being outside the city and its suburbs. Webber v. Adams, Ir. R. 5 C. L. 146—Ex. Ch.

Held, also, that market toll was not leviable upon such a sale, though the corn sold was then actually within the city or its suburbs. Ib.

A sale of goods on a market day, "within the prescribed limits" of a town, is not within s. 13 of the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, unless the bulk of the goods sold is, at the time of such sale, substantially "within the prescribed limits." Newtownards Town Commissioners v. Woods, Ir. R. 11 C. L. 506.

Sale by Sample.] — A person, not being a licensed hawker, was committed and fined under the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, s. 13, for having sold corn by sample in a place, other than his own dwelling-place or shop, within the municipal boundary of the city of Londonderry, the bulk of the corn being at the time of sale within the municipal boundary:—Held, that the conviction was right. Londonderry Corporation v. McElhinney, Ir. R. 9 C. L. 71.

Sale from Door to Door.]—By s. 13 of the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, after the market-place is open for public use, every person other than a licensed hawker who shall sell or expose for sale in any place within the prescribed limits, except in his own dwelling-place or shop, any articles in respect of which tolls are by the special act authorised to be taken in the market, shall forfeit 40*s*. An improvement act, subsequently passed, enacted that the local board and their lessees may from time to time demand and take from any person occupying or using any shop, stall, stand, bench, or ground space in any market-place for the time being under the management of the local board and used as a general market, such tolls as the local board or their lessees from time to time appoint, not exceeding the several tolls specified in the schedule A. annexed; and the schedule in terms imposed the toll on the occupier of every shop, stall, or ground-space in the market, and not upon the commodities sold or exposed for sale there:—Held, that a person who sold fruit and fish, which are marketable articles, from door to door within the prescribed limits, did not thereby become liable to the penalty imposed by 10 & 11 Vict. c. 14, s. 13. Caswell v. Cook, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 637; 31 L. J., M. C. 185.

"Provisions" — Potatoes.] — The Taunton Market Act prohibited the selling within certain limits of the market, corn, grain, fish, meat, poultry, or other provisions, or any bulls, sheep, swine or other live cattle, which are usually sold in public markets:—Held, that a shopkeeper selling potatoes came within the statute, these being "provisions," and also "usually sold within markets." Shepherd v. Folland, 49 J. P. 165.

"Article" includes Horses.]—A market act enacted that every person who shall sell or expose for sale at any place within the limits of the act (other than in his own dwelling-house, or in any shop attached to and being part of any dwelling-house), any article in respect of which tolls are by this act authorised to be taken, shall forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 40*s*. By a schedule a toll was imposed upon horses:—Held, that a horse was an article within this section. Llandaff and Canton Market Co. v. Lyndon, 8 C. B. (N.S.) 515; 30 L. J., M. C. 105; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1344; 2 L. T. 771; 8 W. R. 693.

Fulfilment of Previous Contract.]—H. was charged before the magistrates of a city for having infringed a private market act (6 & 7 Vict. c. cxxii. s. 3), which imposed a fine on any person selling, offering or exposing for sale any carcases or meat within the limits of the city and county, except within the market. It was proved on the 12th January, 1877, H. delivered certain carcases at a door within the limits, and that the carcases were then weighed and paid for, but it was alleged that they were delivered in pursuance of a previous contract, entered into between the same parties at the same place on the 5th of the same month. The summons was taken out for the 12th January, and the magistrates found that there had been a previous sale and purchase on the 5th:—Held, that they should have convicted on the above facts, and that if they had thought it necessary they should have amended the summons by altering the date on which the offence was alleged to have been committed from the 12th to the 5th of the month. Exeter Corporation v. Heaman, 37 L. T. 534.

A greengrocer, within the limits of the T. market, used to order vegetables from B., a farmer, outside the limits, and paid monthly. B. was charged with selling marketable goods without paying toll:—Held, that B. was liable to pay the tolls. Torquay Market Co. v. Burridge, 48 J. P. 71.

Exposure for Sale.]—A baker living outside the limits of a borough, who, in a mutual course of dealing, delivers bread to his customers within the borough from a cart three days in the week, is not guilty of the offence of exposing for sale an article in respect of which tolls are authorised to be taken within prescribed limits. White v. Yeovil Corporation, 61 L. J., M. C. 213.

Toll paid—Re-sale.]—A market for a town was established under a local act. A section, for preventing any encroachment on it, enacted that any person who should sell, or offer or expose to sale (among other things) any roots, fruit, or garden stuff in any other place within the town should be liable to a penalty; with a proviso excepting the sale by inhabitants in their houses, shops or premises. A party bought vegetables from a wholesale dealer in the market who had previously on the same day paid the toll for them; he then offered them for sale in the streets:—Held, an offence within the section. Black v. Sackett, 10 B. & S. 639.

Payment does not Condone.]—The respondent, at nine o'clock in the morning, sold certain marketable vegetables, he not having a licence, nor having previously paid the market tolls, and upon being required to pay the same, he refused. At seven o'clock in the evening of the same day he paid the toll, and was afterwards summoned for the offence of selling these goods without having a licence or having paid the toll; and at the hearing, the justices being of opinion that by the subsequent payment of the toll the offence was condoned, they dismissed the information :—Held, that the justices were wrong, and that the offence was one which could not be condoned. Carter v. Parkhouse, 22 L. T. 788.

"Within a Town."]—By an act passed in 1822 (3 Geo. 4, c. 58), s. 42, any person who sells fish within the town of Rochdale, except in the market-place (unless such sale takes place from a shop or dwelling-house), is liable to a penalty not exceeding 5*l*. N. sold four herrings in an open street, not in the market-place. The street was a main thoroughfare with houses on both sides, in a populous part of the ancient municipal borough of Rochdale, and there was a continuous line of buildings from the market-place to the street where the sale took place. When the act was passed the street in question was not made, and the site of it was in fact green fields. There was no definition in the act of the meaning of the expression "town of Rochdale." The justices refused to convict, being of opinion that the words "town of Rochdale" were limited to the town as it then existed :—Held, that the justices were wrong in refusing to convict, inasmuch as the section was intended to apply to all parts of what might be fairly termed the town of Rochdale, whether in existence at the time of the passing of the act or not. Collier v. Worth, 1 Ex. D. 464; 35 L. T. 345.

The act of 1822 must have contemplated a growing town, and the expression "town of Rochdale" in s. 42 was intended to include not merely the then existing but the increasing town of coming years; and that, under the Rochdale Improvement Act of 1872, the provisions of the act of 1822 apply to and are in force within the extended boundaries so as to make the "town of Rochdale" mentioned in the earlier act comprise, for all the purposes of that act, the whole of the municipal borough as constituted by the later act of 1872. Killmister v. Fitton, 53 L. T. 959.

"Prescribed Limits"—What are.]—By s. 13 of the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, after the market-place is open for public use, every person other than a licensed hawker who shall sell or expose for sale in any place within the prescribed limits, except in his own dwelling-place or shop, any articles in respect of which tolls are by the special act authorised to be taken in the market, shall forfeit 40*s*. An improvement act, subsequently passed, enacted that the local board and their lessees may from time to time demand and take from any person occupying or using any shop, stall, stand, bench or ground space in any market-place for the time being under the management of the local board, and used as a general market, such tolls as the local board or their lessees from time to time appoint, not exceeding the several tolls specified in the schedule A. annexed: and the schedule in terms imposed the toll on the occupier of every shop, stall, or ground space in the market and not upon the commodities sold or exposed for sale there :—Held, that the "prescribed limits" meant the limits to which the local act applied, viz., the boundaries of the borough. Caswell v. Cook, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 637; 31 L. J., M. C. 185.

A corporation granted leases, with covenants for quiet enjoyment, of land within the limits of their borough, to the appellant, who occupied it as a sale-yard, and held periodical sales of cattle upon it. Subsequently the corporation, by their urban sanitary authority, opened a public market in the borough and established tolls. The appellant was convicted in a penalty provided by s. 13 of the Markets and Fairs Act, 1847, for selling bullocks in his sale-yard without payment of toll :—Held, that the words "within their district" in s. 166 of the Public Health Act, constituted the district of the urban sanitary authority "the prescribed limits" within s. 13 of the Markets and Fairs Act, 1847. Spurling v. Bantoft, 60 L. J., Q. B. 745; [1891] 2 Q. B. 384; 65 L. T. 584; 40 W. R. 157; 17 Cox, C. C. 372; 56 J. P. 132.

5. Fraud upon the Toll.

What Amounts to.]—A person brought sheep to a public-house forty yards out of the limits of a market, left them there, went into the market in search of customers, whom he brought back to the public-house, and there sold the sheep to them :—Held, that this was a fraud upon the market, for which the seller was liable to an action on the case by the lessee of the market. Bridgland v. Shapter, 5 M. & W. 375; 8 L. J., Ex. 246.

An action by the owners of a market, who had a prescriptive right of toll on all corn brought into the market to be sold, and there sold, alleging that the defendant, intending to deprive them of their toll, fraudulently bought corn in the market by sample, knowing that the commodity was not there in bulk at the time of the sale, whereby the owners were prevented from taking their toll, is not sustained by evidence of the mere fact of such purchase by sample in the market, though with knowledge of the owners' claim to toll, coupled with the fact of not paying the toll on demand afterwards when the corn was delivered to the defendant in the same borough, but out of the market. Tewkesbury (Bailiff) v. Diston, 6 East, 438; 2 Smith, 508.

Proceedings in Respect of.]—A distress cannot be made for the toll of goods fraudulently sold out of a market to avoid the toll, but the party injured must bring a special action on the case. Blakey v. Dinsdale, Cowp. 661.

6. Liability of Market-owners to Payers of Toll.

Injury to Cattle.]—Defendants, owners of a market for the sale of cattle, had, some three years before action, erected some railings round a statue in the street of the town where the market was held, and near to the site which plaintiff, who was in the habit of bringing cattle to the market, occupied and paid a toll for. A cow of plaintiff's was killed in trying to jump the railings, and in an action brought against defendants to recover damages for her loss, the jury found that the railings were of insufficient height :—Held, that the defendants having received toll from the plaintiffs, and invited them to come to the market with their cattle, a duty was imposed on them to keep the market in a safe condition, and therefore an action would lie against the defendants for the loss sustained by the plaintiffs. Lax v. Darlington Corporation, 49 L. J., Ex. 105 ; 5 Ex. D. 28 ; 41 L. T. 489 ; 28 W. R. 221 ; 44 J. P. 312—C. A.

F. STALLAGE.

1. NATURE OF.

Grant of.]—The word toll in a grant may include stallage. If the crown grants to H. and his heirs that they may have and hold a market in the town of E., with all tolls and profits thence arising, but neither the crown nor H. has any right of soil in the town, if H. afterwards acquires the soil on which the market is held, he may claim stallage by virtue of the grant. Lockwood v. Wood, 6 Q. B. 36 ; 15 L. J., Q. B. 365 ; 10 Jur. 158.

The granting of stallage and piccage by a corporation does not authorise the lessee to occupy the market-place at times when no market is being held. Coleman v. Howard, 2 L. T. 463.

What is.]—Stallage is a payment due to the owner of a market in respect of the exclusive occupation of a portion of the soil. Yarmouth Corporation v. Groom, 1 H. & C. 102 ; 32 L. J., Ex. 74 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 677 ; 7 L. T. 161.

Therefore, where a person used a market with a chair and a ped, that is, a wooden or a wicker basket, four feet long, two feet and a half wide, and two feet high, with a lid, which, being turned back and supported by pieces of wood not fixed in the soil, formed a table on which he exposed his provisions for sale :—Held, that he was liable for stallage. Ib.

The question what constitutes a stall, is a question of fact for a jury. Ib.

Licence for.]—Whoever will have a stall in a market must have a licence for that purpose from the owner of the soil. Northampton Corporation v. Ward, 1 Wils. 107 ; 2 Str. 1238.

Trespass lies for setting tables in a market-place for the sale of goods thereon, without leave of the owner of the soil. Norwich Corporation v. Swan, 2 W. Bl. 1116.

Ejectment cannot be maintained against a person for having a stall in a street : the proper remedy is an action of trespass by the owner of the soil on which the stall was erected. Doe d. St. Julian, Shrewsbury v. Cowley, 1 Car. & P. 123.

2. RIGHT TO RECOVER.

Payment for Sale—Not Stallage.]—Charles 1 granted by letters-patent to the lord of the manor of Swindon, his heirs and assigns, full and absolute licence and authority to hold a market within the town of Swindon, with all liberties and free customs, tolls, stallage, piccage, fines, and all other profits, commodities and emoluments, whatsoever to such market appertaining. In 1866, the lord of the manor of Swindon, being seised of and entitled to the rights granted by Charles 1, demised to a company for twenty-one years all the tolls, rates, dues and duties arising and to be collected and received at the Swindon market. The market was held in the public street, and no stalls or pens had ever been erected for the standing or separation of the cattle. Up to the time that the company acquired their rights in 1866, no payment was ever demanded except upon the sale of cattle, when a small sum was paid per head, either by the buyer or seller. The company made a charge upon the vendors for stallage upon all cattle brought to the market in lieu of the tolls charged on the sale :—Held, in an action against a vendor of cattle to recover this stallage, that the company had no right to make such charge. Swindon Central Market Co. v. Panting, 27 L. T. 578.

Exemption—Evidence for.] — Charles 1. by letters patent, in 1639, granted to H. and his heirs a weekly market at E., with all tolls and profits. By deed in 1646, between H. of the first part, and certain persons on behalf of the inhabitants of E. of the second part, the inhabitants "having considered the great charge H. had been at in procuring the market," and for other considerations did grant unto him the court-house and the waste ground adjoining the market-place, together with the market-place ; and H. covenanted that the inhabitants should have a market toll free :—Held, that in the absence of any evidence of an ancient market, or of any reference to a custom or an exemption from stallage in the charter of 1639, there was no origin to which such exemption could be referred but the deed of 1646. Lockwood v. Wood, 6 Q. B. 31 ; 13 L. J., Q. B. 365 ; 10 Jur. 158.

A modern grant by H., a subject holding under the crown as before mentioned, to which certain persons, styled inhabitants of E., are parties, granting that the inhabitants of E., their heirs and assigns for ever, shall enjoy the market as freely as H. held it of the crown, and containing a covenant by H. that they shall do so, does not exempt from stallage an inhabitant not privy to the parties to such grant. Ib.

Such an exemption for the inhabitants of a town can be only by way of custom, not of grant or prescription. Ib.

Not necessary to shew Contract.]—An action may be maintained by the owner of a market for stallage, and that without shewing any contract in fact between him and the occupier of the stall. Newport Corporation v. Saunders, 3 B. & Ad. 411 ; 1 L. J., K. B. 147.

G. BY-LAWS.

Validity.]—A by-law for regulating a market must not be so restrictive as to prevent, without leave, a frequenter of it from resorting to it. Wortley v. Nottingham Local Board, 21 L. T. 582.

A by-law for the regulation of a market, setting apart different places for the carrying on of wholesale and retail trade, is not unreasonable as being in restraint of trade. Strike v. Collins, 55 L. T. 182 ; 34 W. R. 459 ; 50 J. P. 741.

Exposure contrary to Regulations.]—A local improvement act imposed a penalty for exposing for sale in any of the streets of the town any meat so as to project over or upon any foot- or carriage-way. The act provided that no person should be subject to any penalty for placing any stall, or exposing provisions for sale, so as such stalls be placed in such part of the streets as should be appointed by the commissioners, and that no person should be subject to any penalty for placing any stall, or exposing provisions for sale in such parts of the streets as should have been theretofore used for that purpose at the times of the usual fairs and markets within the town. In 1853 a local board of health was constituted in the township under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 24, who, by by-laws duly allowed and published, appointed certain places for markets for certain descriptions of goods on market days, and imposed penalties for the breach thereof:—Held, that the provisions of the local act did not exempt from such penalties one who violated these by-laws by exposing for sale meat, at a place other than that so appointed by the local board of health, notwithstanding the spot where such meat was so exposed for sale was a place where such articles had for a long series of years been sold by him and others. Savage v. Brook, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 264; 33 L. J., M. C. 42; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 587; 9 L. T. 334; 12 W. R. 81.

H. SALE OF DISEASED ANIMALS.

Action for.]—The Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1869, s. 57, does not render the sending of diseased animals to a public market an actionable wrong, in the absence of any warranty of soundness or of any evidence of fraud or misrepresentation. Ward v. Hobbs, 48 L. J., C. P. 281; 4 App. Cas. 13; 40 L. T. 73; 27 W. R. 114—H. L. (E.)

A number of pigs were sold by auction in a public market, subject to conditions of sale which provided that no warranty would be given, and that the animals should be removed "with all faults." Shortly after the sale it was found that the pigs were infected with typhoid fever, from which the greater part of them died:—Held, that the seller of the pigs had not been guilty of misrepresentation by conduct, and was not liable in an action for misrepresentation at the suit of the purchaser. Ib.

I. SLAUGHTER OF BEASTS.

For Sale—Meaning of.]—By a local act it is enacted, in language similar to s. 19 of the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, that "no person shall slaughter any cattle, or dress any carcase, for sale as human food or food of man, in any places within the limits, other than" such slaughter-house as there described; and that every person who "shall offend by slaughtering any cattle, or dressing for sale any carcase within the limits in any place other than one of such slaughter-houses," shall be liable to a penalty:—Held, that this enactment applies only to the slaughtering of beasts intended by the person slaughtering for sale as human food. Elias v. Nightingale, 8 El. & Bl. 698; 27 L. J., M. C. 151; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 166; 6 W. R. 291.

Slaughter-houses — Consent of Corporation.]—By a local act of 1862 a company was empowered to erect a cattle market at Brecon, and by s. 65 the company from time to time, if and when they should think fit, and with, but not without, the consent of the corporation testified by writing under the hand of the mayor or town-clerk, might provide and maintain slaughter-houses proper and sufficient for the slaughtering of cattle for the supply of the borough and its neighbourhood, upon such sites as they should think expedient. In 1863 the corporation consented to the provision and maintenance by the company of slaughter-houses proper and sufficient for the slaughtering of cattle for the supply of the borough and its neighbourhood, in pursuance of, and in accordance with, the above-mentioned s. 65; the company built slaughter-houses accordingly, but absolutely abandoned the use of them in 1864. The company subsequently built other slaughter-houses a quarter of a mile off; but the corporation had always refused to give any further consent. Justices refused to convict under s. 19 of the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, for slaughtering cattle on premises in the borough other than those leased by the appellant:—Held, that the slaughter-houses occupied by the appellant had not received the consent of the corporation under s. 65 of the local act of 1862, and that the justices were right. Hughes v. Trew, 36 L. T. 585.

—— When Corporation Local Board.]—The Towns Improvement Clauses Act (10 & 11 Vict. c. 34), s. 126, prohibits the use of a slaughter-house without the licence of the commissioners; that is, in certain boroughs, the corporation acting as the local board under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98. The corporation was the local board in Brecon. The Brecon Markets Act, 1862, which incorporated the Brecon Markets Company, empowered the company, with the consent of the corporation to erect slaughter-houses;—Held, that the consent of the corporation under the latter act operated as the licence of the local board under the former act. Anthony v. Brecon Markets Co., 41 L. J., Ex. 201; L. R. 7 Ex. 399; 26 L. T. 979; 21 W. R. 27—Ex. Ch.

J. MARKET OVERT.

1. PRIVILEGE OF.

Nature of.]—The purchaser of a chattel takes it, as a general rule, subject to what may turn out to be informalities in the title. Cundy v. Lindsay, 47 L. J., Q. B. 481; 3 App. Cas. 459; 38 L. T. 573; 26 W. R. 406; 14 Cox, C.C. 93—H. L. (E.).

By a purchase in market overt the title obtained is good against all the world. Ib.

If not so purchased, though purchased bonâ fide, the title obtained may not be good against the real owner. Ib.

Possession is the criterion of title to a personal chattel; the property therefore changed by sale in market overt. Hiern v. Mill, 13 Ves. 122.

Extent of.]—The protection attendant upon a sale in market overt is not confined to ancient markets created by charter or by prescription, but extends to modern markets established under powers conferred by act of parliament. Ganly v. Ledwidge, Ir. R. 10 C. L. 33.

—— Pawning.]—A market overt cannot be for pawning. Hartop v. Hoare, 1 Wils. 8; 2 Stra. 1187.

—— Sale by Sample.]—A sale by sample is not entitled to the privileges of a sale in market overt. Crane v. London Dock Co., 5 B. & S. 313; 33 L. J., Q. B. 224; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 984; 10 L. T. 372; 12 W. R. 745.

—— Ships.]—There is no market overt for ships. Hooper v. Gumm, 36 L. J., Ch. 605; L. R. 2 Ch. 282; 16 L. T. 107; 15 W. R. 464.

2. SALES IN MARKET OVERT—WHAT ARE.

See Sale of Goods Act, 1893, s. 22.

In the Market.] — To constitute a sale in market overt, the goods sold must be present in the market during the whole of the transaction, from the making of the contract to the delivery. Crane v. London Dock Co., supra.

At Wholesale Warehouse.] — A wholesale warehouse in London, used as a shop, and having glazed windows in which articles are exhibited for sale towards the street, is a market overt by the custom of London for goods commonly sold there. The custom is not confined to shops which are literally open to the street. Lyons v. Depass, 3 P. & D. 177; 11 A. & E. 326; 9 Car. & P. 68; 9 L. J., Q. B. 51; 4 Jur. 505.

At Horse Repository.]—A sale by public auction at a horse repository out of the city of London, is not a sale in market overt. Lee v. Bayes or Robinson, 18 C. B. 599; 25 L. J., C. P. 249; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1093.

Of Horse—Effect of.]—The provisions of 31 Eliz. c. 12, extend to the sale as well of horses which are not stolen as of those which are stolen; and the sale of a horse in market overt without complying with the requirements of this statute has merely the effect of a sale out of market overt. Moran v. Pitt, 42 L. J., Q. B. 47; 28 L. T. 554; 21 W. R. 525.

Sale in Showroom above Shop—Sale by Customer to Shopkeeper.]—Jewellery, stolen from the plaintiff, was sold to the defendants, jewellers in the city of London. The sale took place in a showroom above the defendants' shop to which access could only be obtained by their special permission:—Held, that the sale was not a sale in market overt, and that the plaintiff was therefore entitled to recover back the jewellery from the defendants. Semble, that the doctrine as to sales in market overt in the city of London does not apply to a sale by a customer to a shopkeeper. Hargreave v. Spink, 61 L. J., Q. B. 318; [1892] 1 Q. B. 25; 65 L. T. 650; 40 W. R. 254.

Liability of Salemaster.]—A salemaster, who in market overt publicly sells and afterwards delivers a stolen beast, although he does so innocently and in the ordinary course of his business, is responsible, in trover, to the true owner for the value of the beast. Ganly v. Ledwidge, Ir. R. 10 C. L. 33.

The defendants were public sales-masters, and transacted their business in a legally established cattle market, where a market overt for the sale of cattle and sheep was held once a week. A number of sheep, which had been stolen from the plaintiff, were brought on a market day to the stand of the defendants by the thief, who employed the defendants to sell the sheep for him. The defendants, in ignorance of the theft, placed the sheep in their stand, and sold and delivered them to a purchaser, by whom they were removed:—Held, that the defendants were liable to the plaintiff in an action of trover for the value of the sheep. Delaney v. Wallis, 13 L. R., Ir. 31; 15 Cox, C. C. 525—C. A.

Authority of Servant.]—An authority to a servant to sell in market overt is not to be construed as a continuing authority, so as to justify a sale by him elsewhere. Metcalfe v. Lumsden, 1 Car. & K. 309.

3. STOLEN GOODS—RIGHT OF OWNER TO RECOVER.

Contract induced by Fraud — Conviction of Fraudulent Buyer—Revesting of Property.]—The owner of goods, induced by fraud, parted with them under a voluntary contract of sale which vested the property in the fraudulent purchasers. The goods were then sold in market overt to a purchaser without notice of the fraud. The fraudulent purchasers were afterwards, upon the prosecution of the original owner, convicted of obtaining the goods by false pretences. The judge before whom the prisoners were tried refused to make an order of restitution:—Held, that under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 100, the property in the goods revested in the original owner upon conviction, and that he was entitled to recover them from the innocent purchaser. Moyce v. Newington (4 Q. B. D. 32) overruled. Bentley v. Vilmont, 57 L. J., Q. B. 18; 12 App. Cas. 471; 57 L. T. 854; 36 W. R. 481; 52 J. P. 68—H. L. (E.)

Owner not confined to Special Remedy.]—Where goods were stolen, and sold in market overt, and the thief was prosecuted to conviction, and the goods were, after a demand made for them by the original owner, converted by the defendant:—Held, that by virtue of 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 57 [repealed by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 95, but similar provision re-enacted by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 100], the owner might recover them in trover, and was not bound to obtain them only by the means pointed out in that statute, of a writ of restitution, or an order of the judge who tried the thief. Scattergood v. Sylvester, 15 Q. B. 506; 19 L. J., Q. B. 447; 14 Jur. 977.

The effect of 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 57, is, upon conviction of the thief, besides giving to the original owner the summary methods pointed out by the statute, to restore to him the goods which were stolen, the right of property in them, and all the legal remedies incident to that right. Ib.

Of Horses—Evidence.]—The defendant's mare, which he had turned out in a public park, was found out of the park, and was sold at a public auction by the pinner. After an intermediate sale she was sold in market overt to the plaintiff, and was subsequently taken possession of by the defendant. There was no proof that the formalities which the 13 Eliz. c. 12, requires upon the sale of horses at fairs and markets had been observed:—Held, that in the absence of such proof the court would not infer that such formalities had been observed, and that the plaintiff could not maintain an action for the mare against the defendant, the true owner. Moran v. Pitt, 42 L. J., Q. B. 47; 28 L. T. 524; 21 W. R. 554.

Claim by Purchaser against Owner for Cost of keeping Beasts.]—The bonâ fide purchaser of stolen beasts sold in market overt cannot, in answer to a claim for them by the original owner after the conviction of the thief, counterclaim for the cost of their keep while the beasts were in the possession of the purchaser, for they were his own property until, on the conviction, the property re-vested in the original owner. Walker v. Matthews, 51 L. J., Q. B. 243; 8 Q. B. D. 109; 46 L. T. 915; 30 W. R. 338.

K. ENGROSSING, REGRATING AND OTHER OFFENCES.

Offence of.] — The common law offence of engrossing or regrating applies only with respect to the necessaries of life. Pettamberdass v. Thackoorseydass, 7 Moore, P. C. 239; 5 Moore, Ind. App. 109; 15 Jur. 257.

Spreading Rumours to Enhance Price.] — Spreading rumours with intent to enhance the price of hops, in the hearing of hop planters, dealers, and others, that the stock of hops was nearly exhausted, and that there would be a scarcity of hops, with intent to induce them not to bring their hops to market for a long time, and thereby greatly to enhance the price, is an offence at common law, notwithstanding the repeal of the 5 & 6 Edw. 6, c. 14, by 12 Geo. 3, c. 71. Rex v. Waddington, 1 East, 143, 166; 6 R. R. 238.

L. HAWKER AND PEDLAR.

1. LICENCE.

Effect of.]—A hawker's licence does not give the privilege of selling goods in a borough, where, by a by-law made pursuant to a charter and ancient custom, strangers are not permitted to trade. Simson v. Moss, 2 B. & Ad. 543; 9 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 120.

Use by Servant.]—A licensed hawker, who gave his licence to be used by his servant employed to sell goods on his account, was not liable on 29 Geo. 3, c. 26, as for letting to hire or lending the licence. Hodgson v. Flower, 2 Camp. 288.

Trading without.]—A conviction for having traded as a hawker, pedlar, and petty chapman, without having a licence, was held good. Rex v. Smith, 3 Burr. 1475.

A person exposing to sale and selling tea as a hawker, without a licence, is liable to the penalty imposed by 50 Geo. 3, c. 41, s. 17, upon hawkers trading without a licence, although, even with a licence, he would be liable to a penalty for selling tea in an unentered place. Rex v. M'Gill, 2 B. & C. 142; 3 D. & R. 377.

Auction no offence against.]—Where a person duly licensed as a hawker and pedlar, and also as an auctioneer, sells by auction in a public market, and during market hours:—Held, that such sale by auction is not an offence against the tenor of his licence. Reg. v. Henry, 3 W. R. 103.

A licensed hawker opening a room in a place, he not being a householder there, and that not being the usual place of his abode, and selling there by retail, does not thereby commit an offence within 50 Geo. 3, c. 41, s. 7. To constitute such an offence, the selling must be by outcry, &c., or some mode of sale at auction. Allen v. Sparkall, 1 B. & Ald. 100.

When required—Trading from Town to Town.] —A cabinet maker, residing at Leicester, and having a shop there, sending goods to Ashby-de-la-Zouch in a cart, which he accompanied on foot part of the way, and then going to Ashby-de-la-Zouch by the mail, where he employed an auctioneer and sold the goods by auction, is a person travelling from town to town within 50 Geo. 3, c. 41, s. 7. It is not necessary in an information for penalties under 50 Geo. 3, c. 41, s. 7, to state that the defendant sold by auction, by opening a room or a shop, and exposing to sale his goods by retail. Att.-Gen. v. Woolhouse, 1 Y. & J. 463; 12 Price, 65.

A person travelling from town to town, and having packages of books sent after him by public conveyance, and taking rooms at each town, and there selling such books by retail by auction, is a trading person within the meaning of the statute. Dean v. King, 4 B. & Ald. 517. S. P., Rex v. Pease, 8 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 87.

A licensed auctioneer, conveying goods by public stage-waggon from place to place, and selling the same on commission, by retail or auction, at different towns, is a pedlar, or trading person, within 50 Geo. 3, c. 41, s. 6. Rex v. Turner, 4 B. & Ald. 510.

An information charging the defendant under 50 Geo. 3, c. 41, as a trading person, going from town to town, &c., but selling at S. (by sale at auction) goods, &c., is supported by evidence that he lived at B., and was a trader there—that he went to S., and took up a temporary abode at an inn there, and that he employed an auctioneer living at S. to sell for him there goods from B. (part of which was proved to be of his own manufacture), who sold them by the defendant's order, and under his directions and authority, the defendant remaining in S. during the sale—against the objection that the evidence did not establish a going from town to town, so as to bring the defendant within the statute. Att.-Gen. v. Tongue, 12 Price, 51.

A person who goes from a town in which he resides and takes a room at another town, and there sells goods which are brought direct from the town of his residence, is liable to a penalty under 50 Geo. 3, c. 41, s. 17, as a trading person going from town to town trading without a hawker's licence. Manson v. Hope, 2 B. & S. 498; 31 L. J., M. C. 191; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 971; 6 L. T. 326; 10 W. R. 664.

—— What Goods.]—The sale of goods whether in a raw or manufactured state, is a sale of goods within the meaning of the 50 Geo. 3, c. 41. Rex v. Pease, 8 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 87.

—— Barter.]—A person who goes about the country and barters needles, threads and tapes, for bones, rags and other similar articles, is a hawker and pedlar, and requires a licence under 50 Geo. 3, c. 41, s. 6. Druce v. Gabb, 6 W. R. 497.

—— Single Act.]—A single act of selling does not make a man a hawker, so that he ought to take out a licence before he trades as such. Rex v. Little, 1 Burr. 609; 2 Ld. Ken. 317.

—— Householder.]—A person who may not be a bonâ fide householder, but who has taken a house merely to avoid taking out a licence, is a householder within 50 Geo. 3, c. 41, s. 7. Houpe v. Smith, 8 Cox, C. C. 203.

—— Asking for Orders.]—A servant of a licensed tea-dealer was sent by his master round the neighbourhood to ask for orders for tea, and was subsequently sent by his master to deliver small parcels of tea in pursuance of those orders: Held, that this was not a carrying to sell within the meaning of the 50 Geo. 3, c. 41, so as to subject the servant to a penalty for trading as a hawker without a licence. Rex v. M'Knight, 10 B. & C. 734; 8 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 86.

——Selling from Missionary Basket.]—Twelve ladies, having purchased materials and made them up into articles of wearing apparel, each in turn for one month carried these articles about in a basket, called a "missionary basket," from house to house for sale. The ladies did not find the money to purchase the materials, but the money derived from the sales was applied towards the purchase, and the profits of the sales were devoted to a village school and religious purposes:—Held, that none of these ladies came within the definition of a pedlar in the Pedlars Act, 1871, s. 3, and was not liable under s. 4 to a penalty for acting as a pedlar without a certificate. Gregg v. Smith, 42 L. J., M. C. 121; L. R. 8 Q. B. 302; 28 L. T. 555; 21 W. R. 737.

2. EXEMPTIONS.

Servant Living Apart.]—The 50 Geo. 3, c. 41, s. 23, does not extend to an agent or a servant residing in a separate dwelling-house, though solely employed by such worker or maker. Rex v. Mainwaring, 5 M. & Ry. 57; 10 B. & C. 66; 8 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 36.

Non-resident Makers.]—Manufacturers on a large scale, employing workmen on premises where they do not reside, and doing no manual labour themselves, are makers within the exemption. Rex v. Faraday, 1 B. & Ad. 275; 9 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 35.

The servant of such manufacturers, not residing with them, travelled with goods of the manufactory to a town, where he sold in a public room, having advertised the goods as those of his employers, to be disposed of by him according to their instructions: one of the proprietors was present, and noted the purchases and received the money, but nobody was informed who he was:—Held, that the seller, though not licensed, was exempt from penalty, the sale being substantially a sale by the master. Ib.

Hawking in different Places.]—The manufacturer of goods cannot without obtaining a hawker's licence, vend them in any other places than those enumerated in 50 Geo. 3, c. 41, s. 23; and a manufacturer who hawks his goods in a different place, without a licence so to do, can be convicted in a penalty of 10*l.* only, under s. 17, although s. 20 imposes a penalty of 40*l.* for an offence apparently of the same description. Rex v. Websdell, 3 D. & R. 360; 2 B. & C. 136.

Victuals.]—Barm or yeast is victuals within the exempting clause of 50 Geo. 3, c. 41, s. 23, and therefore a person purchasing that article of brewers, and selling the same, is not liable to the penalty imposed by that statute upon hawkers trading without a licence. Rex v. Hodgkinson, 10 B. & C. 74; 5 M. & Ry. 162; 8 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 47.

Made Goods.]—A person buying books in sheets and making them up, and then going from London into the country, and selling them there, is within 50 Geo. 3, c. 41, and is not exempted from penalties as the maker of the goods. Moore v. Edwards, 2 Chit. 213.

Markets—Before 50 Geo. 3, c. 41.]—Before the Hawkers and Pedlars Act, 50 Geo. 3, c. 41, no hawker could expose goods to sale in any part of a market-town but the public market-place, by 29 Geo. 3, c. 26, ss. 16, 17. Rex v. Redfearne, 4 Term Rep. 273.

Nature of Market.]—To entitle a party to exemption from penalties for an offence against 50 Geo. 3, c. 41, on the ground that the place where he exposed his wares for sale was a public market, it must be shewn that it was a legally-established market, by grant from the crown, and not merely a market de facto. Benjamin v. Andrews, 5 C. B. (N.S.) 299; 27 L. J., M. C. 310; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 41; 6 W. R. 692.

Selling tollable Articles within Limits of Market.]—A pedlar holding a pedlar's certificate, which under the Pedlars Act, 1881, authorised him to act as a pedlar within any part of the United Kingdom, employed a horse and cart, and sold tollable articles within the limits of a market prescribed by a special act:—Held, that as he was not then acting as a pedlar according to the definition in s. 3 of the Pedlars Act, 1871, his certificate, notwithstanding s. 6 of that act making a pedlar's certificate to have the same effect as a hawker's licence within the district for which it is granted, did not exempt him from the penalty prescribed by s. 13 of the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, for selling tollable articles within the limits of such a market without a hawker's licence. Howard v. Lupton (L. R. 10 Q. B. 598) not followed. Woolwich Local Board v. Gardiner, 64 L. J., M. C. 248; [1895] 2 Q. B. 497; 15 R. 590; 73 L. T. 218; 44 W. R. 46; 18 Cox, C. C. 173; 59 J. P. 597.

By the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, s. 13, after a market place is opened for public use, every person other than a licensed hawker, selling in a place within the prescribed limits, except in his own dwelling-place or shop, any articles in respect of which tolls are by the special act authorised to be taken in the market, is liable to a penalty. By the Pedlars Act, 1871, s. 6, a certificate under that act is to have the same effect as a hawker's licence for the purpose of the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, and the term "licensed hawker" in such act shall be construed to include a pedlar holding such a certificate. A person holding a pedlar's certificate both sold on foot and with a horse and four-wheeled waggon within the limits of a district formed by the adoption of the Local Government Act, 1858, under which act the local board had provided a market-place for potatoes and other vegetables liable to toll in the market:—Held, that he was exempted by the pedlar's certificate from the penalty imposed by the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, s. 13, though not acting strictly as a pedlar, but rather as a hawker. Howard v. Lupton, 44 L. J., M. C. 150; L. R. 10 Q. B. 598.

Penalty for selling without Licence under Local Act—Exemption—Hawkers Act, 1888.]—It is provided by the Bolton Improvement Act, 1865 (28 Vict. c. xii.), s. 21, that every person (other than a licensed hawker or auctioneer) who shall sell or expose for sale, in any place in the borough, except in his own dwelling-house or shop or in the public-market, any marketable commodity, shall, for every such offence, be liable to a penalty not exceeding 40*s*. The Bolton Improvement Act, 1882, enacts that the corporation may grant licences to any person to sell in a place in the borough other than his own dwelling-house or shop, or other than in the public market, any marketable commodity in respect of the sale whereof a penalty is recoverable under s. 21 of the act of 1865, and that if any person does anything in contravention of that section without having obtained such a licence, he shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding 40*s*. The Hawkers Act, 1888, provides that it shall not be necessary for a licence to be taken out under this act by any person selling fish, fruit, victuals, or coal. The respondent, who had not obtained a licence from the corporation of Bolton, hawked fish, within that borough, and, when summoned for so doing, contended that he was exempt from all licences by the above section of the Hawkers Act, 1888. The justices discharged the respondent:—Held, that the respondent was only exempt under the Hawkers Act, 1888, from having to take out an excise licence, and that he was liable to the penalty provided under the Bolton Improvement Acts for hawking fish without having first obtained a licence from the corporation, and should have been convicted. Openshaw v. Oakeley, 60 L. T. 929; 53 J. P. 740; 16 Cox, C. C. 671.

A. CONTRACT OF HIRING.

1. Nature and Validity of Contract—Generally.

Whether a Partnership.]—C., having contracted with the government for the conveyance of mails by sea, agreed with H. to employ him during the existence of the contract at a fixed yearly salary, payable quarterly, and in addition thereto a sum equivalent to 10 per cent. on the profits:—Held, that the sum was a contract of hiring and service, and not a partnership. Harrington v. Churchward, 29 L. J., Ch. 521; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 576; 2 L. T. 114; 8 W. R. 302. See also Reg. v. Wortley, 2 Den. C. C. 333; T. & M. 636; 21 L. J., M. C. 44; 15 Jur. 1137; 5 Cox C. C. 382.

P., who was engaged as an underwriter at Lloyd's, entered into an agreement, before the passing of 28 & 29 Vict. c 86, with R., who was not a member, that the underwriting account, which commenced on a specified day, should be carried on for three years from that date in the name of P., and that the policies, losses, and averages should be signed and settled by P. or by R. as his agent; that a salary of 150*l.* per annum should be paid to R. by P.; that four-fifths of the net profits of the business should be paid to P., and the remaining one-fifth to R., R. to be exempted from bearing any loss, with a provision for the refunding by R. of all or any part of what he might receive by way of profit in any one year, if it should appear on the taking of the accounts as therein provided that there had been no profit in the business in that year:—Held, that the agreement was not a partnership contract, but a contract for hiring and service. Ross v. Parkyns, 44 L. J., Ch. 610; L. R. 20 Eq. 331; 30 L. T. 331; 24 W. R. 5.

Whether unilateral.]—The plaintiff in May, 1889, entered into agreements with five girls whereby they agreed to perform in the ballet for the plaintiff during the following pantomime season at certain salaries:—Held, that the contract was not unilateral, and could be enforced by the plaintiff. De Francesco v. Barnum, 63 L. T. 514.

Condition Implied from Course of Conduct.]—A written agreement between A. and his traveller provided for the payment of the travelling expenses of the latter, but did not lay down any mode in which they should be ascertained and stated. Before the agreement the traveller had been in the habit of stating after each journey those expenses as a gross sum, omitting all details, and this practice continued for some years after it:—Held, that a contract so to state and accept the amount of those expenses was to be implied from this course of conduct, and that the employer had no power to determine it during the stipulated term. Hunter v. Belcher, 10 L. T. 548—L.JJ.

Implied Covenant—Continuance of Employment.]—A declaration stated that by a deed between the defendant, of the first part; D., of the second part; and the plaintiff, of the third part, the plaintiff covenanted with the defendant that D. should, during the term of five years from the date of the deed, serve, abide, and continue with the defendant as his assistant in the art of a surgeon-dentist, and perform such service as the defendant should order to be done, in the way of his art, with stipulations for working nine hours per day; and that the defendant, in consideration of the services to be performed by D., covenanted with the plaintiff that he, the defendant, during the term of five years (in case D. performed his part of the agreement, and particularly the work of nine hours per day), would pay to D. 35*s.* weekly for the first year of the term; 2*l.* weekly during the second and third years; 2*l.* 2*s.* weekly during the fourth and fifth years of the term, for wages and compensation for the services. The declaration alleged as a breach that the defendant would not permit D. to remain in his service, but dismissed him:—Held, in arrest of judgment, that the breach was ill-assigned, as there was no implied covenant on the part of the defendant to retain D. in his service during the five years. Dunn v. Sayles, D. & M. 579; 5 Q. B. 685; 13 L. J., Q. B. 159; 8 Jur. 358.

By an agreement between A. and B., it was agreed that A. should manufacture cement for the use of B., of a specified quality; that B. should pay A. a weekly sum for two years from the agreement, and another weekly sum for one year after; and should receive A. into partnership in the business of manufacturing cement at the end of three years; and that A. should instruct B. in the art of manufacturing cement:—Held, in an action brought by A., assigning, as a breach of this agreement, that B. wrongfully discharged him (the plaintiff) from his service, and from manufacturing cement for the use of the defendant, and from any longer instructing the plaintiff in the art of manufacturing cement, before the expiration of two years from the agreement, that this agreement did not raise an implied contract of hiring and service for three years between the parties, and therefore the action was not maintainable. Aspdin v. Austin, D. & M. 515; 5 Q. B. 671; 13 L. J., Q. B. 155; 8 Jur. 355.

S., the agent of an insurance company, being indebted to the company and being pressed for payment, it was arranged that the plaintiff should pay the money to the company, and that the company should appoint him and S. as joint agents, with the same rates of payment and remuneration as before. A deed was executed containing a covenant that in case the company should at any time thereafter displace S. from his appointment as agent, then that they should and would forthwith repay to the plaintiff the money so paid by him. Subsequently the company transferred the whole of their business and liabilities to another company, and refused to pay the plaintiff the money so advanced by him:—Held, in an action to recover the amount, that there was an implied covenant on the part of the company that they would not do anything of their own voluntary act by which it should be impossible for them to keep S. in their employ any longer, and therefore they were liable in the action by the plaintiff. Stirling v. Maitland, 5 B. & S. 840; 34 L. J., Q. B. 1; 11 L. T. 337; 13 W. R. 76.

On a contract to employ the plaintiff on board a particular ship on certain specified voyages, it is a breach to sell the ship before those voyages are completed without procuring him similar employment on board that particular vessel; and the mere acceptance of money on account of wages on board another ship, which was to sail for a different voyage, and on board which the plaintiff did not enter, is not conclusive evidence either of accord and satisfaction, or of a substituted contract. Driscoll v. Australian Royal Mail Steam Navigation Co., 1 F. & F. 458.

The plaintiff, a surgeon, engaged the defendant (who was not qualified to practise, but was studying with a view to pass the necessary examination) to assist him in his practice, the engagement being terminable at the will of either party. Subsequently the defendant, previously to going up to pass his examination, executed at the request of the plaintiff a bond which was conditioned to be void if the defendant should not practise within certain limits, but which contained no express agreement on the part of the plaintiff to continue the defendant's employment. The defendant continued in the employment for about three months afterwards and was then dismissed. He subsequently commenced practising within the prescribed limits, and a suit was instituted to restrain him from doing so:—Held, that an agreement by the plaintiff to continue the defendant's employment could be inferred and that there was consideration to support the bond. Gravely v. Barnard, 43 L. J., Ch. 659; L. R. 18 Eq. 518; 30 L. T. 863; 22 W. R. 891.

—— Finding Employment.] — A workman entered into an agreement with a coal company to serve them as a collier, in consideration of wages to be paid to him fortnightly; and the company, in consideration of such service, agreed that he should not be discharged without twenty-eight days' notice in writing, unless in the case of misconduct:—Held, that this contract necessarily implied an obligation on the part of the master to find work for the servant, and to pay him wages every fortnight; and, consequently, was not bad for want of mutuality. Whittle v. Frankland, 2 B. & S. 49; 31 L. J., M. C. 81; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 382; 5 L. T. 639.

By an agreement called a pit-bond, the owners of a coal-pit retained and hired the plaintiff for a year, the plaintiff, "during all the times the pit shall be laid off work, to continue the servant of the owners, subject to their orders and directions, and liable to be employed by them at such work as they shall see fit," and at certain wages:—Held, that the pit-owners were not bound to employ the plaintiff for a reasonable number of working days during the year. Williamson v. Taylor, D. & M. 389; 5 Q. B. 175; 13 L. J., Q. B. 81.

Exclusive Service — Consideration.] — The plaintiffs agreed in writing with L. that he should serve them for seven years as a crown-glass maker; that he should not during that term work for any other person without their licence; that they might deduct from his wages any fine he might incur for breach of their rules; that during any depression of trade he should be paid a moiety of his wages; that if he should be sick or lame the plaintiffs should be at liberty to employ any other person in his stead, without paying him any wages; that the plaintiffs should pay him so long as he should be employed and work as a crown-glass maker certain wages by the piece, and 8*l.* a year in lieu of house-rent and firing, and that the plaintiffs should have the option of dismissing him from their service on giving him a month's notice or a month's wages:—Held, that this agreement bound the plaintiffs to employ L. during the seven years, subject to the power of dismissal; that there was therefore a good consideration for L.'s contract to serve for the seven years, and the agreement was not in unlawful restraint of trade. Pilkington v. Scott, 15 M. & W. 657; 15 L. J., Ex. 329.

Where A. contracts to furnish B. with a reasonable quantity of work at a fixed rate of wages, and B. is bound not to work for any other person or persons for a period of seven years:—Held, that there is a mutuality of contract implied, and that A. would be bound to furnish work for the whole period of seven years. Hartley v. Cummings, 2 Car. & K. 433 ; 5 C. B. 247 ; 17 L. J., C. P. 84 ; 12 Jur. 57.

W. agreed in writing with G., that in consideration of 3*l.* lent to him by G., and of the wages to be paid by G., he would work for and serve G. as a tin-plate worker, and would not work for or serve anyone else without his leave for twelve months, and also until the expiration of three months' notice given by him to G. ; and G., in consideration of the services of W., agreed to pay him on the Saturday night of every week, during the term, all such wages as the articles made by him should amount to, at their usual workmen's prices for similar articles ; provided that after the expiration of twelve months either party might determine the service by three months' notice, and G. was authorised to deduct 10*s.* per week until the loan of 3*l.* was paid :—Held, that the agreement bound G. to employ W. during the period mentioned in it ; that there was, therefore, a good consideration for W. to serve G. ; and the agreement was valid. Reg. v. Welch, 2 El. & Bl. 357 ; 22 L. J., M. C. 145 ; 17 Jur. 1007.

In 1846, the defendant entered into the service of the plaintiff, a solicitor at Amersham, as his clerk, and, in December, 1849, the plaintiff put an end to the service by a notice to expire on the 25th March, 1850. On the 7th January, 1850, the defendant wrote to the plaintiff asking to be paid his salary to Lady-day, and to be at once discharged, in order that he might go to London, and remain there until he could meet with another engagement. To this letter the plaintiff replied, assenting to the defendant's proposal, saying, "of course I should have expected your services if you were in Amersham, but as you request me at once to pay your salary to Lady-day, in order that you may go to town until you meet with another engagement, I consent to your request ;" and on the following day the plaintiff asked the defendant whether, if he paid him up to the 25th March, he intended going to town and remaining there till he got another engagement, to which the defendant answered that he did ; whereupon the plaintiff said, "on these conditions I am prepared to pay your salary at once up to Lady-day ; but if you remain in Amersham, I shall expect your services," and accordingly paid him the full quarter's salary. The defendant went to London, but shortly afterwards, and before Lady-day, returned to Amersham at the request of a client of the plaintiff's, in whose employ he remained giving professional advice :—Held, that there was no evidence of a contract on the part of the defendant to go to London and remain there, or to forbear to give his services in Amersham to any person other than the plaintiff, or to render service to the plaintiff if he should return to Amersham. Daniels v. Charsley, 11 C. B. 739.

Restraint of Trade.]—A. agreed to take B. as his servant "at such wages as might from time to time be agreed on," and B., on his part, agreed to serve A., and not to set up trade for himself within certain limits. B. accordingly entered into and continued in A.'s service at the wages agreed on :—Held, that there was a good and valuable consideration to support the agreement as against B., and a court of equity enforced it. Benwell v. Inns, 24 Beav. 307 ; 26 L. J., Ch. 663.

A legal consideration of any value is sufficient to support a contract in partial restraint of trade and the court will not inquire as to its adequacy. Gravely v. Barnard, 43 L. J., Ch. 659 ; L. R. 18 Eq. 518 ; 30 L. T. 863 ; 22 W. R. 891.

A. agreed by articles under seal to enter the service of B., as assistant to him in his business of a surgeon-dentist, for a period of four years, and the agreement contained a covenant, that after the expiration of that term A. would not, without the consent in writing of the other, carry on the business of a surgeon-dentist in London or any of the towns or places in England or Scotland where B., or A. on his account, might have been practising before the expiration of the above service :—Held, first, that this covenant, so far as it related to London, was not, but as to its other provisions it was, void as imposing an unreasonable restraint of trade ; and secondly, that the covenant was divisible so that the illegality of the second branch did not vitiate the whole. Mallan v. May, 11 M. & W. 853 ; 12 L. J., Ex. 376 ; 7 Jur. 536.

Semble, that in estimating the reasonableness of a contract not to exercise a trade or profession within a particular district, the populousness of the district is not to be taken into account. Ib.

—— Reasonableness — Assignment.] — W. entered the service of C. as a shopman at weekly wages, and covenanted not to carry on business within one mile of the shop at any time thereafter. The business was afterwards moved to another shop close by, and sold by C. to J., together with the goodwill and beneficial interest thereof. W. then left the shop, and set up business within a mile of the old shop :—Held, that the covenant was not unreasonable, and endured for the life of W., though the original covenantee should cease to carry on business altogether, and that the covenant was not affected by the removal of the business to another shop near at hand, though it might have been otherwise, if the business had been removed to quite a different neighbourhood :—Held, also, that such a covenant added to the value of the goodwill, and, therefore, was part of the goodwill and assignable with it, and did, in fact, pass by the sale of the goodwill and beneficial interest to J., so as to give him a right of action. Jacoby v. Whitmore, 49 L. T. 335 ; 32 W. R. 18—C. A.

—— In the Case of Commercial Travellers.]—The plaintiffs, lace merchants, employed travellers to visit certain parts of England, and where they had a business connection, and to each traveller they assigned a separate journey. A vacancy having occurred on the Midland journey, the plaintiffs told the defendant of it, he being at the time in their service in another capacity, and he verbally agreed with them to fill the vacancy, it being understood at the time that the agreement between them should be reduced into writing. The defendant accordingly entered their employ as traveller on the Midland journey ; and after he had been travelling for them about a month, a list of places and of the customers whom he was to visit was sent down to him, and a written contract, which was as follows :—"In consideration of my entering upon your employ at a salary, &c., I herewith agree to do so, with the understanding that, in the event of my wishing to travel and doing so for any other house in the trade, on any part of the same ground, to pay you 50*l.*" This contract the defendant signed, and after having travelled for the plaintiffs about a year, he left them and travelled for a rival house in the same trade over the Midland journey. The plaintiffs having sued him for the 50*l.* penalty under the contract:—Held, first, that a good consideration for the defendant to the agreement appeared, on the face of the contract. Mumford v. Gething, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 305; 29 L. J., C. P. 105; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 428; 1 L. T. 64; 8 W. R. 187.

Held, secondly, that the circumstances under which the defendant entered the plaintiffs' employ as traveller showed a good consideration for his part of the agreement, and that the written contract, therefore, which was drawn up in pursuance of the original understanding, was made on a good consideration. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the contract was for the entire services of the defendant while in the plaintiffs' employ, and that the parties meant, therefore, that the penalty should attach if he travelled for another house, after he left their employ. Ib.

Held, fourthly, that the subject-matter of the contract being identified by the extrinsic evidence, the contract was not unlimited in point of space, and so void, as being in restraint of trade, inasmuch as the evidence showed that the restriction as to the same ground was limited to the ground, i.e. the Midland journey, over which the defendant travelled. Ib.

Held, fifthly, that the written contract, even without the extrinsic evidence limiting the restriction to the Midland journey, was not void, as being in restraint of trade. Ib.

A proviso that a traveller should not solicit orders for Burton ale for two years after the termination of his agreement with his employers, is void on the ground that the proviso is in restraint of trade, and should be limited as to area. Allsopp v. Wheatcroft, 42 L. J., Ch. 12; L. R. 15 Eq. 59; 27 L. T. 372; 21 W. R. 102.

In consideration of the plaintiff employing the defendant as his servant to sell oil in the streets of London, at a weekly salary of 21*s.*, the latter agreed that he would not, for one year from the determination of such agreement, sell oil within a radius of eight miles from the General Post-office. The agreement was determinable on a week's notice on either side. The defendant, having determined the agreement, continued to sell oil in the same way on his own account within the prohibited area. An interim injunction had been granted, but the defendant continued to violate it. On a motion for an order to commit the defendant for breach of the injunction, Malins, V.-C., dissolved the injunction, on the ground that the agreement was a hard and improper bargain:—Held, that the agreement was for valuable consideration, was fairly entered into, and, upon the balance of convenience and inconvenience, ought to be enforced. Middleton v. Brown, 47 L. J., Ch. 411; 38 L. T. 334—C. A.

—— Infant.]—See Evans v. Ware, infra.

See further, CONTRACT.

2. PARTIES.

Infants.]—A contract by an infant, binding him to serve during a certain time for wages, but enabling the master to stop the work whenever he chooses, and to retain the wages during stoppage, is wholly void as not being beneficial to the infant. Reg. v. Lord, 12 Q. B. 757; 3 New Sess. Cas. 246; 17 L. J., M. C. 181; 12 Jur. 1001.

An infant signed an agreement with plaintiffs, that in consideration of their taking him into their service he would not, after leaving, compete in business within a radius of five miles for two years. He left a few weeks after attaining twenty-one:—Held, that the contract was for the benefit of the infant, and an injunction must be granted. Evans v. Ware, [1892] 3 Ch. 502; 67 L. T. 285.

Public Commissioners.]—Commissioners appointed under an act of parliament to pave and light a parish, were empowered to appoint officers at such salaries as they should think reasonable, and to remove such officers and appoint others. In some sections of the act the officers were spoken of as employed by the commissioners. The commissioners were empowered to make rates, which were vested in them, and they were directed to apply the moneys which should come to their hands under the act in paving and lighting the parish, and carrying the several purposes of the act into execution:—Held, that an action did not lie against them by one of their officers for arrears of salary. Bogg v. Pearse, 2 L. M. & P. 21; 10 C. B. 534; 20 L. J., C. P. 99.

Agents.]—Action upon an agreement in writing between the plaintiff and the defendants, as foreign agents resident in London, on behalf of and representing P., resident at Havana, in the island of Cuba, by which the plaintiff agreed to proceed, as fireman or stoker, on board a steamer, about to leave London for Havana, to be placed in the service of P., and to discharge the duty and do the work of fireman or stoker on board, and to obey the orders and follow the directions of the engineers; that he should receive wages monthly, and during the outward voyage rations to be served out to him on account of P.; the contract to be in force for one year from its date, and should he be discharged before that time, three months' wages to be paid in advance, besides finding him a passage home; P. being at liberty to confirm and continue the engagement on the terms heretofore stated, or to discharge him, and find his passage back to England:—Held, that the defendants were personally liable for a breach of the agreement, before the ship reached Havana. Wilson v. Zulueta, 14 Q. B. 405; 19 L. J., Q. B. 49; 14 Jur. 366.

Stewards of Public Meetings.]—The relation existing between the chairman and stewards or managers of a public meeting is not that of master and servant, or principal and general agent, and though it is the duty of the chairman to do his best to preserve order, and the duty of those who are acting as stewards or managers to assist him in so doing, yet the nature and extent of this duty on both sides must arise out of, and in character and extent depend upon, the emergencies which may from time to time arise, and there is no ground for extending by implication an express authority given by the chairman and limited in its term. Lucas v. Mason, 44 L. J., Ex. 145; L. R. 10 Ex. 251; 33 L. T. 13; 23 W. R. 924.

District Delegate of Trade Union.]—A district delegate appointed by the members of a trade union to confer with and advise them in disputes is not the servant or the agent of the officers or of the members of the union. Flood v. Jackson, 64 L. J., Q. B. 665 ; [1895] 2 Q. B. 21 ; 14 R. 397 ; 73 L. T. 161 ; 43 W. R. 453 ; 59 J. P. 388—C. A.

3. REQUISITES OF.

a. Writing.

Under Statute of Frauds—Contract not to be Performed within a Year.]—A contract for a year's service, to commence at a subsequent day, is a contract not to be performed within the year, and must be in writing ; therefore an action cannot be maintained for the breach of a verbal contract made on the 27th of May, for a year's service to commence on the 30th of June following. Bracegirdle v. Heald, 1 B. & Ald. 722 ; 19 R. R. 442.

A contract made on one day to serve for a year from the following day is not within the Statute of Frauds. Banks v. Crossland, 44 L. J., M. C. 8 ; L. R. 10 Q. B. 97 ; 32 L. T. 226 ; 23 W. R. 414.

A., on the 20th of July, made proposals in writing (unsigned) to B., to enter his service as bailiff for a year. B. took the proposals and went away, and entered into the service on the 24th of July :—Held, that this was a contract on the 20th, not to be performed within the space of one year from the making thereof. Snelling v. Huntingfield (Lord), 1 C. M. & R. 20 ; 4 Tyr. 606 ; 3 L. J., Ex. 232.

The plaintiff agreed on a Sunday to serve the defendant for a year, the service to commence on the Monday. On the Monday, the plaintiff, with the knowledge and consent of the defendant, commenced the service, and received 20*l.* on account :—Held, in an action for a wrongful dismissal within the year, in which an objection was taken that this was a contract for a year's service to commence on a future day, that the jury might infer a new implied contract on the Monday for a year's service from that day. Cawthorn v. Cordrey, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 406 ; 32 L. J., C. P. 152.

The plaintiff having been in the defendant's employment as a traveller, entered in October, 1854, into a fresh verbal agreement with the defendant, whereby either party was to be at liberty to determine the agreement by giving to the other three months' notice before the 1st of September. 1855, otherwise the parties were to go on for another twelvemonth from that time :—Held, that this was a contract not to be performed within a year, and therefore was required to be in writing under the Statute of Frauds. Dobson v. Collis, 1 H. & N. 81 ; 25 L. J., Ex. 267 ; 4 W. R. 512.

The statement of claim alleged that in 1866 the defendant entered into the plaintiff's employment as a foreman tailor for three years, on the terms that if he should leave the plaintiff he should not engage in the service of anyone carrying on, or himself carry on, the business of a tailor within five miles of D. ; and that on the expiration of the three years he continued in the plaintiff's employment on the like terms (except as to the period of employment) till 1877. Breach, that in 1877 the defendant left the plaintiff, and carried on business as a tailor in D. The statement of defence alleged that the contract was not in writing as required by the Statute of Frauds :—Held, on demurrer, by Hawkins, J., that the contract amounted to an agreement not to set up the trade during the joint lives of the defendant and the plaintiff ; and was, therefore, primâ facie not to be performed within a year, and therefore fell within s. 4 of the Statute of Frauds. Davey v. Shannon, 48 L. J., Ex. 459 ; 4 Ex. D. 81 ; 40 L. T. 628 ; 27 W. R. 599.

—— Parol Evidence to Explain.]—A. entered the service of B. under a written agreement, as follows : "I agree to receive you as clerk in my establishment, in consideration of your paying me a premium of 300*l.*, and to pay you a salary at the following rates, namely, for the first year 70*l.*, for the second 90*l.*, for the third 110*l.*, for the fourth 140*l.*, and 150*l.* for the fifth and following years that you may remain in my employment" :—Held, that the agreement was one that by the Statute of Frauds was required to be in writing ; that there being a precise stipulation for yearly payments, evidence was not admissible to show, that, at or after the time the letter containing it was sent by B. to A., it was verbally agreed that the salary should be paid quarterly ; and that the fact of the payments having usually been made quarterly, did not vary the rights of the parties under the agreement. Giraud v. Richmond, 2 C. B. 835 ; 15 L. J., C. P. 180 ; 10 Jur. 360.

Part Performance.]—The equitable doctrine of part performance taking contracts out of the operation of s. 4 of the Statute of Frauds cannot be extended by the high court of justice, under s. 24, sub-s. 7, of the Judicature Act, 1873, beyond the limits to which it was confined by the courts of equity. It is, therefore, applicable only to contracts for the sale and purchase of lands, and not to a contract of service. Britain v. Rossiter, 48 L. J., Ex. 362 ; 11 Q. B. D. 123 ; 40 L. T. 240 ; 27 W. R. 482—C. A.

b. Stamps.

Exemption—Labourers and Artificers.]—A. entered into the following agreement with B. : "A. engages to take charge of the glebe lands of B., his wife undertaking the dairy and poultry, at 15*s.* a week till Michaelmas, 1850, and afterwards at a salary of 25*l.* a year, and a third of the clear annual profit, after all expenses of rent and rates, labour, and interest on capital, are paid, on a fair valuation made from Michaelmas to Michaelmas ; three months' notice on either side to be given, at the expiration of which time the cottage to be vacated by A., who occupies it as bailiff, in addition to his salary" :—Held, that this agreement constituted the relation of master and servant between B. and A., and not that of partners ; that A. was not a menial servant, but a labourer ; and that the agreement was admissible, though unstamped, as it fell within the exemption in 55 Geo. 3, c. 184, as an agreement for the hire of a labourer. Reg. v. Wortley, 2 Den. C. C. 333 ; T. & M. 636 ; 21 L. J., M. C. 44 ; 15 Jur. 1137 ; 5 Cox, C. C. 382.

The plaintiff and the defendant being resident in England, and P. at Havana, and the defendant being a foreign agent, a written agreement was entered into by the plaintiff with the defendant, on behalf and representation of P. of Havana, that the plaintiff would proceed as fireman and stoker on board a steamer, about to leave London for Havana, calling at intermediate ports, to be placed in the service of P., and would faithfully do the work of fireman or stoker on board the steamer, and obey the orders of the engineers. In consideration of the service the plaintiff was to receive wages at 5*l.* per month, payable monthly, and 2*l.* per month for providing himself in provisions. During the outward passage, rations were to be served out to the plaintiff on account of P. The contract to be understood to be in force for one year certain from the date; and should the plaintiff be discharged before that time, three months' wages to be paid in advance, besides finding him a passage home; P. being at liberty to confirm and continue the engagement on the terms stated, or to discharge the plaintiff and to find him his passage back to England; the wages to be payable up to the day of the plaintiff's arrival in England, unless he should be discharged for misconduct; one month's pay to be advanced for the plaintiff's outfit for the voyage:—Held, that the agreement did not require a stamp, being within the exemption, of a memorandum or agreement for the hire of any labourer, in 55 Geo. 3, c. 184. Wilson v. Zulueta, 14 Q. B. 405; 19 L. J., Q. B. 49; 14 Jur. 366.

An overseer in a printing office is an artificer, within the exemption in the stamp acts. Bishop v. Letts, 1 F. & F. 401.

4. Proof of.

a. Generally.

Work done after Agreement Rescinded.]—A. engaged B., under an agreement, dated 25th of September, 1865, as a file-forger, for two years, after the rate of the Sheffield list of prices for the time being. On the 24th of February, 1866, the master refused to give him work. On the 16th of March, 1866, B. entered a plaint in a county court against A. his master; and in his particulars alleged that A. "neglected and refused to perform, and had not performed, his agreement, whereby he had sustained damages to the amount of 7*l.* 14*s.*, being four weeks' average wages in lieu of notice." A. paid 7*l.* 14*s.* and the costs into court on the 19th of April, 1866. On the next day, the 20th of April, B. again went to work for A., but was dismissed on the 21st of April. On the 4th of July, 1866, B. entered another plaint against A., and in his particulars alleged that A. "refused to employ him, and illegally discharged him from his service," and claimed 48*l.* 12*s.* At the trial, the jury found a verdict for B. for 33*l.* 12*s.* It was admitted that the agreement sued on in the first plaint was the same agreement as was sued on in the second plaint:—Held, that there was no evidence to go to the jury of such agreement, and that the judge ought to have directed a nonsuit. Barnsley v. Taylor, 37 L. J., Q. B. 39.

The plaintiff was engaged as a clerk by the defendant, a shipbroker, at a yearly salary of 150*l.*, and was paid his wages weekly, and on leaving the service at the defendant's instance, accepted a month's salary instead of notice. He subsequently re-entered the defendant's service at a yearly salary of 250*l.*, nothing being expressly said as to notice, and no time fixed for the duration of the service, but the plaintiff was paid weekly a sum equal to a week's salary. The plaintiff having been dismissed with a month's notice:—Held, that it was properly left to the jury to say whether the last hiring was on the same terms as the first, and whether the terms of the previous hiring were determined by the acceptance of a month's wages instead of notice. Fairman v. Oakford, 5 H. & N. 635; 29 L. J., Ex. 459.

Reference in Documents.]—A. being in want of workmen, applied to the Free Labour Registration Society, and filled up and signed a form sent by them to him, containing the particulars of the employment and terms offered by him, and his address at S. This form was read over to B. by the secretary of the society, and B. then signed an agreement headed "Free Labour Society," by which he stated that he had accepted employment at S., and agreed that one half-day's wages, "being the fee to the society for obtaining him the employment," should be deducted from his wages, and that he would not quit the service of his employer without just cause:—Held, that the documents sufficiently referred to one another, and constituted a contract in writing signed by both parties. Crane v. Powell, 38 L. J., M. C. 43; L. R. 4 C. P. 123; 20 L. T. 703; 17 W. R. 161.

The plaintiff proposed to enter the defendant's service as a salesman, and stated in a letter his willingness to come for a year on trial, and his terms. The defendant, in reply, assented generally, but in the course of his letter said that if some of the terms were defined more clearly it might prevent mistakes, and spoke of a list of customers which he would consider with the plaintiff. He, however, named a day for the plaintiff to enter on his duties, and said he should expect him then:—Held, that this was not an unqualified acceptance of the plaintiff's proposal, and that the two letters were not a complete and binding contract in writing. Johnson v. Appleby, 43 L. J., C. P. 146; L. R. 9 C. P. 158; 30 L. T. 261; 22 W. R. 515.

An agreement to employ the plaintiff in a particular situation cannot be inferred from a direction upon a letter addressed by the defendant to the plaintiff in that character, the letter relating to the quantum of salary only. Chiodi v. Waters, 1 Stark. 335.

Appointment by Resolution of Directors.]—In 1859 R. was owner of a mine which he proposed to sell to a projected company. On the 12th February, 1859, there was a meeting of the promoters, at which it was resolved that the plaintiff should be appointed captain of the mine at a salary, "such salary to commence at the completion of the contract with R.," who was one of the promoters. The resolution was communicated to the plaintiff. On the 9th March the agreement for the sale of the mine to R. was executed. On the 25th March there was a meeting of the promoters, at which the memorandum and articles of association were executed, and a prospectus was approved of, which described the plaintiff as captain and local manager of the mine. On the 28th March the company was registered. On the 31st March there was a meeting of the company, at which the prospectus was submitted and approved. The plaintiff acted as manager, and in an action by him for his salary, the jury found that he acted for the company and not for R. There was no conveyance of the mine to the company:—Held, that there was evidence of the appointment of the plaintiff, by the company, as manager, and that he was entitled to recover. Browning v. Great Mining Central Co., 5 H. & N. 856; 29 L. J., Ex. 399.

b. Parol Evidence to Explain.

By Parol Evidence.]—An agreement for the hiring of a servant may be proved by parol, although the terms of the agreement are, by the direction of the parties, written down by a third person; such writing, though read over to the parties, not being signed by them. Rex v. Wrangle, 4 N. & M. 375; 2 A. & E. 314; 1 H. & W. 41; 4 L. J., M. C. 43.

Verbal Stipulations.]—A. entered the service of B. under a written agreement as follows: "I agree to receive you as clerk in my establishment, in consideration of your paying me a premium of 300*l.*, and to pay you a salary at the following rates, namely, for the first year 70*l.*, for the second 90*l.*, for the third 110*l.*, for the fourth 140*l.*, and 150*l.* for the fifth and following years that you may remain in my employment": —Held, that the agreement was one that, by the Statute of Frauds, was required to be in writing; that there being a precise stipulation for yearly payments, evidence was not admissible to shew that at or after the time the letter containing it was sent by B. to A., it was verbally agreed that the salary should be paid quarterly, and that the fact of the payments having usually been made quarterly did not vary the rights of the agreement. Giraud v. Richmond, 2 C. B. 335; 15 L. J., C. P. 180; 10 Jur. 360. S. P., Evans v. Roe, L. R. 7 C. P. 138; 26 L. T. 70.

P., who was known to be acting in the capacity of a lace buyer, was engaged by M., a lace dealer, under the following memorandum: "M. agrees to engage P. for the term of three years from Monday, the 15th of August, 1859, at the yearly salary of 500*l.*, payable monthly, P. to give the whole of his services, and to be advised and guided by M. if necessary." In an action by P. against M. for wrongful dismissal pending the term, on the alleged ground of disobedience of lawful orders:—Held, that evidence was admissible to shew the capacity in which P. was engaged, viz., as lace buyer; and that it was properly left to the jury to say whether or not the orders which he was alleged to have disobeyed were such as a person in his position was bound to obey. Price v. Mouat, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 508.

The plaintiff proposed to enter the defendant's service as salesman, and stated in a letter his willingness to come for a year on trial, and his terms. The defendant, in reply, assented generally, but in the course of his letter said that if some of the terms were defined more clearly it might prevent mistakes, and spoke of a list of customers which he would consider with the plaintiff. He, however, named a day for the plaintiff to enter on his duties, and said he should expect him then:—Held, that parol evidence of supplementary terms agreed to at a meeting of the parties subsequent to the letters, but prior to the plaintiff entering on the service, was admissible. Johnson v. Appleby, 43 L. J., C. P. 146; L. R. 9 C. P. 158; 30 L. T. 261; 22 W. R. 515.

The plaintiffs, lace merchants, employed travellers to visit certain parts of England and where they had a business connection, and to each traveller they assigned a separate journey. A vacancy having occurred on the Midland journey, the plaintiffs told the defendant of it, he being at the time in their service in another capacity, and he verbally agreed with them to fill the vacancy, it being understood at the time that the agreement between them should be reduced to writing. The defendant accordingly entered their employ as traveller on the Midland journey, and after he had been travelling for them about a month, a list of places and of the customers whom he was to visit was sent down to him, and a written contract which was as follows: "In consideration of my entering upon your employ at a salary, &c., I herewith agree to do so with the understanding that, in the event of my wishing to travel, and doing so for any other in the trade on any part of the same ground, to pay you 50*l.*" This contract the defendant signed, and after having travelled for the plaintiffs for about a year, he left them and travelled for a rival house in the same trade over the Midland journey. The plaintiffs having sued him for the 50*l.* penalty under the contract:—Held, that extrinsic evidence was admissible to identify the particular employment to which the agreement referred, viz., that of traveller, and also to identify the ground over which the defendant agreed to travel, viz., the Midland journey. Mumford v. Gething, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 305; 29 L. J., C. P. 105; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 428; 1 L. T. 64; 8 W. R. 187.

Custom.]—When a workman is hired for a year to work at a particular trade, under a written agreement, which says nothing as to any periods of absence allowed to the workmen, parol evidence may be given that it is the custom of the particular trade for the workmen employed in it to take certain holidays, and to absent themselves on such occasions from their work without the permission of their masters. Reg. v. Stoke-upon-Trent, 5 Q. B. 303; 13 L. J., M. C. 41; 8 Jur. 34.

The rule that an indefinite hiring is a hiring for a year, is not an inflexible rule of law; it must be considered in connection with the circumstances of the particular case. Baxter v. Nurse, 6 Man. & G. 935; 7 Scott (N.R.) 801; 1 Car. & K. 10; 13 L. J., C. P. 82; 8 Jur. 273. S. P., Fairman v. Oakford, 5 H. & N. 635; 29 L. J., Ex. 459.

A. was engaged as editor of a new periodical publication by B., at a salary to be paid weekly. The publication was abandoned by B. soon after its commencement. In an action by A. against B. for dismissing him before the termination of a year, a usage was proved that such a hiring was annual with regard to established periodicals:—Held, that the jury was properly directed to consider whether such usage was applicable to a newly-started publication. Ib.

In an action for wrongfully dismissing the editor of a newspaper, the declaration stated that he was engaged for a year. There was no direct evidence as to the time for which he was engaged:—Held, that he might go into evidence to shew a custom for editors of newspapers to be engaged for a year, unless there was an express stipulation to the contrary. Holcroft v. Barber, 1 Car. & K. 4.

An agreement in writing, by which the plaintiff agreed to serve the defendant as agent, at a yearly salary, contained a proviso that the defendant would, at the end of the year, if he found the plaintiff had done sufficient business, give him 30*l.* more:—Held, that there was nothing in this agreement inconsistent with a custom in the trade to terminate the service by either party giving to the other a month's notice. Parker v. Ibbetson, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 346; 27 L. J., C. P. 236; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 536; 6 W. R. 519.

To an action for wrongfully dismissing the plaintiff from the defendant's service under the above agreement, the defendant pleaded that he determined the service by a month's notice, according to the custom. The judge left it to the jury to say whether, looking at the proviso in the contract, they inferred that the parties meant to exclude the custom: Held, a misdirection. Ib.

When the hiring is expressly for a term certain, a custom of the trade for a master or a servant to determine it at any time without notice is inadmissible to control the contract. Peters v. Staveley, 15 L. T. 275.

In an action for the breach of a contract of hiring, if either party relies upon the existence of a custom authorising him to determine the contract upon a reasonable notice previous to the end of a current year, such custom must be expressly alleged as a fact on the record, and it is not enough to aver simply that a reasonable notice was given. Williams v. Byrne, 2 N. & P. 139; 7 A. & E. 177; W. W. & D. 535; 6 L. J., K. B. 239; 1 Jur. 578.

The custom must be general, of reasonable antiquity and uniformity, and sufficiently notorious that people would make their contracts on the supposition that it exists. Foxall v. International Land Credit Co., 16 L. T. 637.

5. In Special Cases.

a. Yearly.

Evidence of—Generally.]—A hiring at so much per month is a hiring for a year. Fawcett v. Cash, 3 N. & M. 177; 5 B. & Ad. 904; 3 L. J., K. B. 113.

A general hiring, in the absence of any custom to rebut the presumption, is to be presumed to have been a hiring for a year. Ib.

A clerk hired at 12*l.* 10*s.* per month for the first year, to advance 10*l.* per annum until the salary is 180*l.*, is hired for at least one year. Ib.

A general hiring for a year, and so on, particularly of clerks and of respectable servants, can only be put an end to at the end of the current year, where no misconduct is imputed. Beeston v. Collyer, 4 Bing. 309; 12 Moore, 552; 2 Car. & P. 607; 5 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 180; 29 R. R. 576.

Such a hiring is a hiring for a year, and so on from year to year for so long time as the parties should respectively please, and may be so described in pleadings; and such an implied yearly hiring is not destroyed by the salary being paid monthly; nor is it within the Statute of Frauds. Ib.

A clerk's salary paid for some years in quarterly, but afterwards in monthly payments, is evidence of a hiring from year to year. Ib.

A count stated, that in consideration that the plaintiff would enter into the defendant's employ, and serve him as servant in husbandry for a certain time, to wit, from a day named till the service should be determined by reasonable notice on either side, at 10*l.* 10*s.* per annum, the defendant promised to retain the plaintiff and pay him the wages, and continue him in the service till such determination; that the plaintiff entered the service, and was always ready to serve, but the defendant discharged him without reasonable cause, and refused longer to retain him:—Held, that proof that the plaintiff was hired generally as a labourer in husbandry did not support this count, such hiring being in law a hiring from year to year. Lilley v. Elwin, 11 Q. B. 742; 17 L. J., Q. B. 132; 12 Jur. 623.

There is no inflexible rule that an indefinite hiring of a clerk must be construed as a hiring for a year. Fairman v. Oakford, 5 H. & N. 635; 29 L. J., Ex. 459.

On a contract to pay a traveller by commission, no implication arises of a yearly hiring, nor without an express and a clear stipulation is there any obligation to pay the commission on orders from customers originally obtained by the agent, but sent after he has ceased to be so. Nayler v. Yearsley, 2 F. & F. 41.

—— Agreements for a Year certain.]—It was agreed between A. & B. that A. should enter into the service of B. as a traveller, and it was stipulated that the agreement should be binding between them for twelve months certain from the date thereof, and continue from time to time until three months' notice in writing be given by either party to determine the same:—Held, that this was a contract for a year certain only, and that B. was at liberty to put an end to it at the expiration of the year by giving A. three months' previous notice. Brown v. Symons, 8 C. B. (N.S.) 208; 29 L. J., C. P. 251; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1079; 8 W. R. 460.

By an agreement between brewers and their traveller, the latter was engaged at a salary of 200*l.* a year, payable fortnightly, and it was stipulated "that the agreement between the parties shall be for twelve months certain, after which time either party shall be at liberty to terminate this agreement by giving to the other a three months' notice in writing." But if the employers "shall be desirous of terminating this agreement without notice, after twelve months, or before any notice shall have expired, they may do so on payment of 50*l.*":—Held, per Bramwell, B., and Pigott, B. (Kelly, C. B., dissentiente), that the agreement ceased at the end of the first twelve months, unless the parties allowed the engagement to continue beyond that time, in which event only did notice, or payment in lieu thereof, become necessary to determine it. Langton v. Carleton, 43 L. J., Ex. 54; L. R. 9 Ex. 57; 29 L. T. 650.

A contract to serve, as a reporter to a newspaper, one whole year from a certain day, and so from year to year to the end of each year commenced, so long as the parties shall respectively please, is a yearly service so long as it lasts, and cannot be terminated except at the end of any current year. Williams v. Byrne, 2 N. & P. 139; 7 A. & E. 177; W. W. & D. 535; 6 L. J., K. B. 239; 1 Jur. 578.

Where a servant was hired for a year in the capacity of a clerk, and dismissed without notice:—Held, that he was entitled to recover compensation for the year, and that the fact of his wages being payable monthly was not inconsistent with a hiring for a year, short periodical payments being necessary to persons in that position of life. Davis v. Marshall, 4 L. T. 216; 9 W. R. 520.

—— Annual Salary.]—A hiring at a salary of 500*l.* a year is primâ facie, and in the absence of any custom to the contrary, a hiring for a year certain. The plaintiff was employed as engineer to the defendants at a salary of 500*l.* a year, and was dismissed at a three-months' notice:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover salary for the unexpired portion of the year. Buckingham v. Surrey and Hants Canal Co., 46 L. T. 885; 46 J. P. 774.

When a clerk is hired at a certain sum per annum simply, the hiring is a hiring for a year, and in the absence of a custom to the contrary, he cannot be discharged before the end of the year. Foxall v. International Land Credit Co., 16 L. T. 637.

An appointment of clerk to a public company was by a resolution which stated the salary to be 200*l.* per annum, but said nothing as to the period of payment; the clerk acted as such, and was paid several sums of 50*l.* each at periods just after the usual quarter days of the year:—Held, that proof of these facts warranted a declaration in an action for salary, which alleged the contract to be at a salary of 200*l.* per annum payable quarterly on the usual quarter days. Ridgway v. Hungerford Market Co., 4 N. & M. 797; 3 A. & E. 171; 1 H. & W. 244; 4 L. J., K. B. 157.

—— Service for Half a Year.]—In an action by an assistant-surgeon for wages it was proved that he had served the defendant for nearly half a year, and that payments were made, during that time, on account of wages, but not according to any yearly amount or at any definite period of the year. The plaintiff afterwards fell ill and was taken to a hospital, and after his recovery did not return to his employment, nor did the defendant require him to do so:—Held, that there was no evidence of any hiring for a year and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover wages on a quantum meruit for the time he served. Bailey v. Rimmell, 1 M. & W. 506; 2 Gale, 60; 5 L. J., Ex. 192.

b. Weekly.

What is.]—A hiring at two guineas a week for one year, is a hiring by the week and not by the year. Robertson v. Jenner, 15 L. T. 514.

A. entered the service of Messrs. Roe under a written memorandum, as follows: "April 13th, 1871. I agree to accept the situation as foreman of the works of Messrs. Roe, flock and shoddy manufacturers, and to do all that lays in my power to serve them faithfully, and promote the welfare of the firm, on my receiving a salary of 2*l.* per week and house to live in from the 19th of April, 1871":—Held, a weekly hiring from the 19th of April, 1871; and that evidence of a conversation at the time of signing the contract shewing that a hiring for a year was intended, was not admissible. Evans v. Roe, L. R. 7 C. P. 138; 26 L. T. 70.

c. Domestic or Menial Servants.

Contract Generally.]—The contract between a master and a domestic servant is a contract to serve for a year, the service to be determined by a month's warning, or by payment of a month's wages; subject to the implied condition, that the servant will obey all lawful orders of the master. Turner v. Mason, 14 M. & W. 112; 14 L. J., Ex. 311.

Who are.]—A governess engaged at a yearly salary is not within the rule relating to domestic or menial servants, by which the contract of service may be dissolved upon a month's warning or a month's wages. Todd v. Kerrich, 8 Ex. 151; 22 L. J., Ex. 1; 17 Jur. 119.

A head gardener was engaged on an agreement that he should have yearly wages, and a house to live in rent-free. Several inferior gardeners were subject to his directions, and the house he lived in was not under the roof or a part of the master's dwelling-house. The jury having found that he was a menial servant:—Held, that the verdict was right, and that he was consequently liable to be discharged on a month's notice. Nowlan v. Ablett, 2 C. M. & R. 54; 1 Gale, 72; 5 Tyr. 709; 4 L. J., Ex. 155.

So a huntsman is a menial servant, and therefore the hiring of a huntsman, though in terms for a year, and upon conditions which can only be fully carried out by a service enduring for the full period of a year, is subject to the ordinary condition that it may be determined by either party at a month's notice. Nicoll v. Greaves, 17 C. B. (N.S.) 27; 33 L. J., C. P. 259; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 919; 10 L. T. 531; 12 W. R. 961.

The housekeeper of a large hotel is not a menial servant, and cannot be dismissed on a month's notice in the absence of an express agreement. Lawler v. Linden, Ir. R. 10 C. L. 188.

By a written memorandum of agreement, the plaintiff was "to have 6*s.* a week, three bowls of wheat, to set potatoes for his family's use, to have a cow kept, house and firing, to keep the gardens and pleasure grounds in clean and good order, to assist in the stables, and, when required, at hay and corn harvest, and to make himself generally useful. To enter 12th May, 1838." The defendant dismissed the plaintiff upon a month's warning. In an action by the plaintiff to recover a quarter's wages, as being a yearly servant:—Held, that he was a menial servant, and was therefore, by the general rule of law, entitled to a month's notice only; and that the memorandum of agreement contained nothing which showed an intention in the parties to exclude that rule. Johnson v. Blenkensopp, 5 Jur. 870.

—— Effect of subsequent Contract.]—A contract, by which a servant hires himself to a master as a footman and a groom, is not dissolved by a subsequent contract, by which he engages to bind himself to serve in a different character at higher wages and in a foreign country, although the servant accompanies his master into such foreign country; the service performed abroad being the same as that originally contracted for. Rex v. Buckingham, 3 N. & M. 72; 5 B. & Ad. 953; 3 L. J., M. C. 64.

—— Bequests to Servants.]—See WILL.

6. Wages and Remuneration.

a. Right to.

After Termination of a Quarter.]—Where a servant was engaged at a yearly salary, payable quarterly, a month after the termination of one of the years of the service, he tendered his resignation; after another month the resignation was accepted, nothing being said about remuneration for the time elapsed since the termination of the last year's service. The law implies no engagement to pay for the services performed since the last quarter. Lamburn v. Cruden, 2 Man. & G. 253; 2 Scott (N.R.) 533; 10 L. J., C. P. 121.

Held, however, under the circumstances, that it ought to have been left to the jury to say whether the parties had come to an agreement that those services should be paid for. Ib.

Payment in Goods.]—Where by terms of a contract a service to be performed by A. for B. is to be paid for in goods, A. cannot declare for the value of the service, but must sue on the special contract. Keys v. Harwood, 2 C. B. 905; 15 L. J., C. P. 207.

But if B. by his own act renders the delivery of the goods impossible, A. may sue for the value of the service. So, if B. allows the goods to be sold under an execution against him. Ib.

Promise of Present.]—An agreement by which a master promised his servant, in addition to his ordinary wages, a present of 20*l.*, the services to be at all events till the end of one year, was renewed in all its parts from year to year, by the servant having continued several years, and nothing being said to the contrary by either party:—Held, that the 20*l.* was due for every year of service. Mansfield (Earl) v. Scott, 1 Cl. & F. 319.

Share in Profits—Regulation of.]—The defendant, in 1858, agreed that the plaintiff should act as manager of his works, and should receive in each year 7½ per cent. of the profits of the business, to be made up to 500*l.* in any year in which the share of the profits should be less than that sum. In the same year a valuation of the buildings, stock, plant and goodwill was made. In 1864 the defendant sold the buildings, stock and business at an increase over the valuation of 47,916*l.* In taking the accounts under this agreement:—Held, that the defendant was not entitled to charge the profit and loss account in every year with interest on his capital, nor with interest on old debts, nor with 500*l.* in respect of the plaintiff's salary. Rishton v. Grissell, L. R. 5 Eq. 326.

Held, also, that the defendant was entitled to charge the profit and loss account in every year with sums representing the depreciation arising from the running out of the lease, and the waste of plant and machinery. Ib.

Held, also, that the plaintiff was not entitled to treat as profit of the year in which the property was sold, the excess of the amount realised by the sale over the estimated value; but that the estimated value of stock first set down must run through the whole account; the annual depreciations being calculated on that constant quantity. Ib.

Nett Profits, what are.]—The manager of a company was to receive as remuneration for his services a fixed salary and a moiety of the nett profits on all sums realised on certain contracts:—Held, that he was entitled to a moiety of the profits on such contract, deducting only the expenses necessary on account of each contract, but not deducting any of the expenses incidental to the management of the company. British Columbia and Vancouver Island Spar Lumber and Saw Mill Co., In re, Stamp's Claim, 25 L. T. 653.

Contract for—Construction.]—The defendant wrote to the plaintiff, offering to engage him for the command of a steamer destined for an exploring and a trading voyage up the river Niger, paying him at the rate of 50*l.* a month commencing from the 1st December, 1854, and also 20*l.* per cent. on the proceeds of the trade. The plaintiff replied, that he accepted the proposal, "to be paid 50*l.* a month, and 20*l.* per cent. on the nett proceeds of the trade." The plaintiff received 50*l.* a month for seven months, and afterwards proceeded on the voyage in command of the vessel, but before the expiration of the ninth month wrongfully abandoned the vessel:—Held, that the contract, whether taken as constituted by the plaintiff's letter, or by the defendant's letter as explained by the plaintiff's, gave a cause of action at the expiration of each month, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the 50*l.* for the eighth month on an indebitatus count. Taylor v. Laird, 1 H. & N. 266; 25 L. J., Ex. 329.

The plaintiff wrote to the defendant as follows: "I agree to accept the appointment of secretary of the Lancashire Cotton Mill Company, upon the following terms, viz.: first, a salary of 300*l.* per annum, commencing at the present date, if the company be completely registered, and put into operation; if not, I shall be satisfied with any remuneration for my time and labour you may think me deserving of, and your means can afford." The defendant wrote in answer accepting the terms, and adding, "It is distinctly agreed and understood, that if the company is not formed and carried out, that part of your letter which alludes to your salary be null and void, and that at the expiration of three months it is entirely left to me to give unto you such sum of money as I may deem right, as compensation for labour done, in the event of the company not being carried out." The plaintiff rendered some service, but the company was never formed:—Held, that there was no contract upon which the plaintiff could recover any part of the salary. Roberts v. Smith, 4 H. & N. 315; 28 L. J., Ex. 164.

Alteration of Contract—Notice of Change.]—M., a coal miner, was employed by W. to work on terms of fourteen days' notice to leave, and instant dismissal for breach of rules. On engagement, M. was ordered to work on a shift requiring M. to descend shaft at 11 a.m. W. afterwards gave five days' notice that the shift would be altered to 11.30 a.m., and because M. refused to go down at that hour he lost a day's wages, for which he applied under 38 & 39 Vict. c. 90, s. 9:—Held, the justices were right in treating the alteration of contract as material, and that W. was not justified in altering hours without a new contract. Whitehaven Colliery Co. v. M'Court, 57 J. P. 422.

—— Increase of Risk—Refusal to continue Voyage.]—Shipbuilders in this country agreed with a foreign government to build a warship and deliver it at a port in the foreign country for a lump sum. To carry out that agreement they contracted in writing with the defendant to enter their service as captain of the ship at a fixed rate of pay, and, as such captain, to take the ship from this country to the foreign port. The defendant engaged the plaintiff to serve as one of his crew, agreeing to pay him a lump sum for the voyage. During the voyage the foreign government declared war with another foreign government. After the declaration of war, and before the conclusion of the voyage, the plaintiff left the ship, and afterwards sued the defendant for the whole of the agreed sum :—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the whole sum, the defendant having so acted (e.g., by sailing under the foreign flag, and offering to re-engage the men after the declaration of war) as to afford evidence that he was, notwithstanding that his written agreement was with the shipbuilders alone, a captain in the service of the foreign government, and his principals having by their declaration of war altered the risks of the voyage for which the plaintiff had engaged to serve. O'Neil v. Armstrong, 65 L. J., Q. B. 7 ; [1895] 2 Q. B. 418 ; 14 R. 703 ; 73 L. T. 178 ; 8 Asp. M. C. 63—C. A.

When no Amount Fixed.]—If A. agrees to serve B. as an apothecary's assistant at such salary as C. should think reasonable, and it appears that no application has been made to C. to fix any salary, A. cannot recover anything for his services. Owen v. Bowen, 4 Car. & P. 93.

A party entered into the service of another under the following contract : "I hereby agree to enter into your service as a weekly manager, to commence from next Monday. The amount of payment I am to receive I leave entirely to you" :—Held, per Alderson and Maule, dissentiente Parke, that he was entitled to recover a reasonable remuneration for the services performed by him. Bryant v. Flight, 5 M. & W. 114 ; 2 H. & H. 84 ; 8 L. J., Ex. 189 ; 3 Jur. 681.

Service, however long continued, creates no claim for remuneration without a bargain for it, either express or implied, from circumstances showing an understanding on both sides that there should be payment. Reeve v. Reeve, 1 F. & F. 280.

So when services have been rendered without any express contract for wages, but with board and lodging, or other benefits for the party serving, a contract to pay for such services is not to be implied. Foord v. Morley, 1 F. & F. 496.

A servant who comes over from the West Indies, where he has been a slave, and who continues in the service of his master in England without any agreement for wages, is not entitled to any, unless there has been an express promise. Alfred v. Fitzjames (Marquis) 3 Esp. 3.

Gratuitous Service.]—A. having performed gratuitously services for B., received from him a promissory note, with an understanding that he would accept it not only as a gift for what was past, but that it should be a remuneration for future services to be rendered as long as B. should require them. A. continued to perform the services until B.'s death, when he sued B.'s executors upon the note :—Held, that as there was no contract binding A. to perform future services, there was no consideration. Hulse v. Hulse, 17 C. B. 711 ; 25 L. J., C. P. 177 ; 4 W. R. 239.

Claims for—Delay.]—If a servant has left his service for a considerable time, the presumption is that all his wages have been paid. Sellen v. Norman, 4 Car. & P. 80.

—— Statute of Limitations.] — Where it appeared that the course of dealing between master and steward had been to allow the steward to retain his salary from time to time out of money in his hands, the steward was allowed, after the master's death, to claim in account his salary for twenty years, the Statute of Limitations being held not to apply to such a claim. Hawkins, In re, Hawkins v. Hawkins, 28 W. R. 240.

Defences — Validity.] — A master advanced money to his female servant, who was under age, for her to purchase a silk dress and other articles not necessary for her :—Held, that these advances formed no defence to an action for her wages. Hedgeley v. Holt, 4 Car. & P. 104.

Money paid by a master for coach-fares, for the mother of his servant, who was under age, cannot be deducted from the wages of the servant. Ib.

In an action for wages as a female servant, the defendant pleaded non assumpsit, and the plaintiff gave evidence of acts of service. The defendant proposed to go into evidence to show that the plaintiff had cohabited with him :—Held, that he might do so, as this went to show that there was no contract between the parties, and not to invalidate any contract on the ground of illegality. Bradshaw v. Hayward, Car. & M. 591.

—— Certificate of Company's Manager as to amount due.]—The plaintiff became a conductor of the defendant company under a written agreement on the terms, amongst others, that, for a breach by him of the rules of the company, the company's manager might decide that wages owing to him might be retained by the company as liquidated damages for the breach, and that the manager's certificate in writing to that effect should be binding and conclusive evidence between the company and the conductor in all courts of justice. The plaintiff, having been dismissed by the manager for a breach of the rules, brought an action to recover the wages due to him. After the action was brought the manager, without hearing anything that the plaintiff might wish to say, signed a certificate which declared the wages then due to the plaintiff to be forfeited to the company :—Held, that the certificate was no defence to the action, as the manager had not given the plaintiff an opportunity of being heard on the question of forfeiture. Armstrong v. South London Tramways Co., 64 L. T. 96 ; 55 J. P. 340—C. A.

Engagement without Work.]—An action for work and labour will lie if a servant is engaged for a fixed period, and the master, without dismissing him, refuses to supply him with work. Cook v. Sherwood, 11 W. R. 595. And see Bunning v. Lyric Theatre, 71 L. T. 396.

Leaving without Notice.] — A weaver was employed as a weekly servant, his wages being regulated by the number of pieces which he wove and delivered to his masters. The wages of their workmen were ascertained and fixed at noon on Thursday in each week, but were not paid till the next Saturday. By rules embodied in the contract of hiring, the workmen were required to give, before leaving, fourteen days' notice at the time of booking up on Thursday. "Persons leaving without notice will forfeit all wages due." On a Thursday, the sum earned by the weaver in the preceding week, was ascertained and fixed at 15*s.* He commenced another week on the afternoon of the same day, and worked during the morning of Friday, and earned 7*s.* He left during the forenoon of Friday without having given any notice :—Held, that he had forfeited, by leaving before the Saturday, the wages due on the Thursday, but not payable till the Saturday, as well as the wages earned between noon of Thursday and Friday morning. Walsh v. Walley, 43 L. J., Q. B. 102 ; L. R. 9 Q. B. 367 ; 22 W. R. 571.

A painter was hired by the week, his wages to be 7*d*. per hour, payable every Saturday at noon. The full week consisted of fifty-four and a half hours. Overtime was paid for at the same rate. A week's notice from either party was required. He left the service at noon on Friday, before the week was up, and without giving any notice, having worked, including overtime since the previous Friday, fifty-seven hours :—Held, that he was not entitled to recover his wages for the current week of his leaving service. Saunders v. Whittle, 33 L. T. 816 ; 24 W. R. 406.

If a clerk be engaged at a salary of 100*l*. a year and having received his wages up to a certain time serve for some time longer, and then leave the service before the year expires, without due cause and without any notice : whether he is entitled to recover wages up to the time of his quitting, quære. Huttman v. Boulnois, 2 Car. & P. 510.

Servant absenting Himself.]—T. was employed by A., a cotton-spinner, at a weekly wage of 15*s*., ending on Wednesdays ; the rules stated that a workman absenting himself would forfeit his wages. On Tuesday morning at 6 a.m., T. was late, and being refused entrance said he would leave for the day, and went away. After breakfast he came again and went in unobserved, till, being noticed by the overlooker, he was told his work had been distributed, and T. went away again. On suing for the week's wages :—Held, that the county court judge was wrong in finding that T. had not absented himself on those facts, and therefore T. could not recover his wages. Tomlinson v. Ashworth, 50 J. P. 164.

Right to, during Illness.]—A clerk was engaged at 120*l*. per annum, and was to have one month's notice of dismissal. He began his duties on the 2nd July, and served till the 1st August. He was then obliged by illness to be absent till the 2nd September, when he tendered his services, which were refused. He had in the meantime received on the 20th August a letter from his master terminating the engagement. In an action by him for wages from the 1st August to the 20th September :—Held, that he was entitled to wages for that period, and that it was no answer to his claim that the illness was caused by an act of misconduct on his part, which occurred before the contract, and which he did not know, at the time of the contract, would lead to his illness and render him incapable of performing his work. K—— v. Raschen, 38 L. T. 38.

By one of the rules of a cotton-mill, any person absenting himself on account of sickness or any other cause was immediately to give notice to the overlooker ; in default thereof all wages then earned were to be forfeited. A weaver in the mill, in the middle of the day, asked the overlooker for leave of absence for half a day, promising to return to work the next morning at six. The weaver did not return the next day till half-past one in the afternoon :—Held, that the weaver did not forfeit her wages under this rule, as she could not be said to be absent without notice merely by continuing her absence longer than the period which she had mentioned. Taylor v. Carr, 30 L. J., M. C. 201 ; 4 L. T. 414 ; 9 W. R. 699.

b. Payment Contrary to the Truck Acts.

Statute.]—59 & 60 Vict. c. 44, amends the Truck Acts.

Applicable to what Persons.]—The 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 37, is applicable only to those persons who contract as labourers, viz., such as contract to use their personal services, and to receive payment for such services in wages. Riley v. Warden, 2 Ex. 59 ; 18 L. J., Ex. 120.

One who contracts to do work upon a large scale, employing labourers under him, is not an artificer, workman, or labourer within the act, though he superintends the work, and from time to time labours personally therein. Sharman v. Sanders, 13 C. B. 166 ; 3 Car. & K. 298 ; 22 L. J., C. P. 86 ; 17 Jur. (N.S.) 765 ; 1 W. R. 152.

The provisions of the 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 37, apply only to agreements for personal service, and not to agreements for the performance of a certain quantity of work, which the contractor cannot perform except by making use of the labour of others. Weaver v. Floyd, 21 L. J., Q. B. 151 ; 16 Jur. 289.

The mode of paying the wages, as specified in the agreement, will not prevent a case from coming within the act. Ib.

By an agreement with a mine owner, two persons were engaged as butty colliers. These colliers get the produce of the mine at so much a yard ; they employ others under them, to increase the quantity ; but they must work personally, and are treated as workmen :—Held, that these colliers were artificers within the act ; the distinction between contractors and artificers depending on the fact whether, by the engagement, they were labourers. Bowers v. Loveluin, 6 El. & Bl. 584 ; 25 L. J., Q. B. 371 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1187 ; 4 W. R. 600.

A butty collier, who undertakes for the performance of a piece of work by the day, or ton, or yard, and employs others to assist him to whom he pays wages, is not an artificer. Sleeman v. Barrett, 2 H. & C. 934 ; 33 L. J., Ex. 153 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 476 ; 9 L. T. 834 ; 12 W. R. 411.

A workman who works for a coal and iron company, and whose personal skill and labour are of the essence of the contract between him and them, is an artificer within the Truck Act, 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 37, although part of his work for the company was piece work, which he could do at home, and, in fact, get others to do for him, and although he worked sometimes for other people. Pillar v. Llynvi Coal and Iron Co., 38 L. J., C. P. 294 ; L. R. 4. C. P. 752 ; 20 L. T. 923 ; 17 W. R. 1123.

The plaintiff, an illiterate labouring man, attached his mark to a written contract with the defendant, by which he engaged to make as many bricks as the defendant required, in his brickfield, finding all labour, the defendant finding the materials. Payment to be 10*s*. 6*d*. per thousand for the bricks, when complete. The plaintiff, assisted by others, made bricks, having worked at them personally. In payment, he accepted tickets for goods. Afterwards he sued for the full price, contending that he was an artificer, and that, consequently, the payment by ticket was void:—Held, that the plaintiff, not being bound by his contract to do any part of the work personally, was not an artificer under the Truck Act. Ingram v. Barnes, 7 El. & Bl. 132; 26 L. J., Q. B. 319; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 861; 5 W. R. 726—Ex. Ch.

A framework knitter is an artificer. Moorhouse v. Lee, 4 F. & F. 355.

A person employed in loading boats with iron at a private canal, close to ironworks, is an artificer in making iron within the Truck Act, 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 37. Millard v. Kelly, 7 W. R. 12.

The plaintiff was employed as a guard to conduct goods trains on the defendants' railway, and during such employment, from time to time assisted in loading and unloading and coupling and uncoupling trucks:—Held, that the plaintiff was not a workman or person "engaged in manual labour" within the meaning of s. 10 of the Employers and Workmen Act, 1875, and, therefore, not entitled to the benefits of the Truck Acts, 1831 and 1887. Hunt v. G. N. Ry., 60 L. J., Q. B. 216; [1891]1 Q. B. 601; 64 L. T. 418; 55 J. P. 470.

Mode of Calculating.]—The plaintiff was employed by the defendant as a frame-work knitter, or weaver of gloves in frames provided by the defendant, and paid according to the quantity of work he performed, at an agreed price per dozen pairs, subject to certain charges and deductions according to the usage of the trade, which was known to the plaintiff. Those deductions were, charge for frames and standing room, for a boy winding, and a small percentage when the weekly wages of the plaintiff exceeded a certain sum:—Held, first, that they were not within the prohibition in s. 8 of 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 37, being the mode of calculating the amount of wages. Chawner v. Cummings, 8 Q. B. 311; 15 L. J., Q. B. 161; 10 Jur. 454.

Held, secondly, that, if they had been within that prohibition, they would, by virtue of s. 4, be recoverable under a count for work and labour, and, by s. 5, would not be available for the defendant in the shape of a set-off. Ib.

Offence within the Act—Payment with Goods.]—The wife of an artificer received, as his agent, from the master, in payment of wages due to her husband, a written order, which, by the master's direction, she took to his office and exchanged for another, given her by the clerk there; this she presented at a shop close by, named to her by the clerk, and received goods only. The master was convicted for paying wages otherwise than in current coin. The place where the first order was given to her was within the jurisdiction of the justices; but the office where the second order was given, and the shop, were not:—Held, that the conviction was right, and that the offence was complete at the time of the delivery of the first order. Athersmith v. Drury, 1 El. & El. 46; 28 L. J., M. C. 5; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 433; 7 W. R. 14.

W. was a cotton manufacturer, and S. a power-loom weaver in his employ. A complaint was made by W.'s manager to S. of a defect in a piece of cloth woven by him, and he was cautioned; but at the end of the week received his full wages without abatement. In the following week a similar defect was discovered in another piece of cloth woven by S.; and S. was told by W.'s book-keeper, first, that something would have to be deducted from his wages for the defective pieces of cloth, or that he would have to take the pieces of cloth home; and, on a second occasion, that he would have to take one of the pieces of cloth home, and that there were no wages for him. S. ultimately took away one of the damaged pieces of cloth, the value of which in a perfect condition was 1*l.* 1*s.* 3*d.*, and left W.'s employ at the end of the week following that in which the dispute had arisen. The full wages earned by him during that time were 2*s.* 1*s.* 3*d.*, of which amount 1*l.* 2*s.* 6½*d.* was earned during the week in which the last damaged piece was delivered, and 18*s.* 8½*d.* during the last week. On applying for his wages he received 1*l.* in cash and retained the damaged piece of cloth:—Held that the facts disclosed amounted to a payment of wages in goods, and that the Truck Act (1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 37, s. 9) had been infringed. Smith v. Walton, 47 L. J., M. C. 45; 3 C. P. D. 109; 37 L. T. 437.

To constitute an offence against the 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 37, it is not necessary that the payment of wages in goods instead of money should be the result of any contract or understanding between the employer and the workman; the mere payment is enough. Wilson v. Cookson, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 496; 32 L. J., M. C. 177; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 177; 8 L. T. 53; 11 W. R. 426.

The offence is not purged by a subsequent payment in money, whether made voluntarily or compulsorily under an order of justices. Ib.

Deductions—Fines.]—The deduction from their wages of fines incurred by artificers is not a "payment otherwise than in the current coin of the realm," so as to make the employer guilty of an offence under s. 9 of the Truck Act. Redgrave v. Kelly, 37 W. R. 543; 54 J. P. 70.

—— Liquidated Damages.]—A rule of a factory provided that any overlooker engaging a child before having the child's name entered in a register should forfeit 20*s.*:—Held, that there was nothing in the Truck Act to prevent a deduction of this sum from an overlooker's wages, as the forfeiture was not a penalty but liquidated damages. Beetham v. Crewdson, 55 J. P. 55.

—— Supply of Intoxicants.]—The respondent, who carried on the business of a licensed victualler and also of a brickmaker, supplied workmen employed at his brickfield with intoxicating liquors to the amount of 3*s.* 10*d.* on credit, entries being made in the respondent's books as the liquors were supplied. In the evening of the same day, when the workmen were in his public-house, the employer handed across the bar to one of them, on behalf of the others, 4*s.*, which was immediately given back, 2*d.* being returned by the employer as change, and the entries were then crossed off. On the next day the wages then due to the workmen were paid by the employer in coin, the 4*s.* above mentioned being deducted from the sum so paid:—Held, that the employer had committed an offence against the Truck Acts, 1831 and 1887. Gould v. Haynes, 59 L. J., M. C. 9; 61 L. T. 732; 16 Cox, C. C. 732; 54 J. P. 405.

—— Supply of Medicine and Medical Attendance.]—The 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 37, s. 23, permits an employer of an artificer to contract to supply the artificer with medicine, medical attendance and materials to be employed in his occupation, if a miner, and to demise to the artificer a tenement at any rent reserved; and to contract to make stoppages or deductions from the wages in respect of rent, medical attendance, &c., provided the contract for such stoppages is in writing, and signed by the artificer:—Held, that the amount to be deducted in respect of each head of deduction need not be specified in the written contract. Cutts v. Ward, 36 L. J., Q. B. 161; L. R. 2 Q. B. 357; 15 L. T. 614; 15 W. R. 445.

Under a contract in writing, allowing a stoppage to be made for medicine and medical attendance, the employer may deduct 6*d.* a week, which by the practice of the trade was paid by each miner towards a club kept by the employer for the purpose of providing medicine and medical attendance to such miners, as required by them. Ib.

The contract as to the supply of materials, in order to be within s. 23, must be shown to be an absolute contract of sale and not a mere contract of hiring by the artificer. Ib.

An employer stopped part of the wages of an artificer as a contribution to funds established by him to provide medicine and medical attendance for the artificers employed by him, and schools for their children, without any written agreement with the artificer:—Held, that the artificer was entitled to recover the whole of the deductions under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 37, s. 24. Pillar v. Llynri Coal and Iron Co., 38 L. J., C. P. 294; L. R. 4 C. P. 752; 20 L. T. 923; 17 W. R. 1123.

By an arrangement between employers and their workmen, certain deductions were made from the workmen's wages (which were paid monthly) for a doctor's fund, which was established for the purpose of paying doctors, who attended the workmen and their families, and supplied them with medicines in case of illness. The sums thus deducted were handed over by the employers to the doctor from time to time. There was no contract in writing between the employers and workmen, authorising the employers to make the deductions, nor was there any evidence that the doctor had accepted the liability of the employers. The employers filed a liquidation petition, and at this time there stood to the credit of the "doctor's fund," in their books, a sum of 149*l.*, which had arisen from deductions thus made from the workmen's wages, and had not yet been paid over to the doctor:—Held, that there had been no valid payment within the Truck Act, of the 149*l.* to the workmen, and that they were entitled to be paid the 149*l.* in full out of the employers' estate as wages. Cooper, Ex parte, Morris, In re, 26 Ch. D. 693; 51 L. T. 374—C. A.

Quære, whether, if the 149*l.* had been, in pursuance of the agreement, actually paid over by the employers to the doctor, in discharge of a debt for which the workmen were liable, or if the doctor had accepted the liability of the employers, the Truck Act would have applied notwithstanding the absence of a contract in writing, signed by the workmen. Ib.

The plaintiff, upon entering the defendants' service, signed a document containing the conditions of his service. Among these was a condition that the defendants should deduct a certain sum per week from the plaintiff's wages as his contribution to a sick and funeral allowance fund, established for the benefit of the defendants' servants, and administered under certain rules. The specified sums were deducted from the plaintiff's wages during the whole period of his service, and the defendants expended the total amount so deducted upon medicine and medical attendance for the plaintiff and his wife in accordance with the rules. Upon leaving the defendants' service the plaintiff claimed to recover from them the amount deducted by them since the passing of the Truck Act Amendment Act, 1887, as being a deduction in contravention of that Act:—Held, that inasmuch as the Truck Act is incorporated with the Truck Act Amendment Act, 1887, s. 23 of the former act applies to cases under the latter act, and that the sum having been deducted in respect of medicine and medical attendance, in pursuance of a contract in writing, and having been so expended by the defendants, the plaintiff could not recover it back. Lamb v. G. N. Ry., 60 L. J., Q. B. 489; [1891] 2 Q. B. 281; 65 L. T. 225; 39 W. R. 475; 56 J. P. 22.

If s. 2 of the Truck Act, 1831, applies at all to a contract between an employer and employee by which the employee agrees to become a member of a sick and accident club, and impliedly authorises the employer to make a weekly deduction from her wages, and to pay the sum deducted to the treasurer of the fund, semble, its only effect is to render the contract unenforceable by the employer. Hewlett v. Allen, 63 L. J., Q. B. 608; [1894] A. C. 383; 6 R. 175; 71 L. T. 94; 42 W. R. 670; 58 J. P. 700—H. L. (E.)

—— Recovery of Payments.]—A payment in current coin by an employer at the instance or with the authority of his employee to a third person on behalf of the employee is as much a payment to the employee as if current coin had been placed in his or her hands, and money so paid is not recoverable by the employee by virtue of ss. 3 and 4 of the Truck Act of 1831. Cooper, Ex parte, Morris, In re (26 Ch. D. 693) (supra), discussed. Ib.

c. Other Statutes Affecting.

Jurisdiction and Powers of Justices.]—In order to give justices jurisdiction to hear a complaint as to the nonpayment of wages, under 20 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 1, it is only necessary that the relation of master and servant should exist between the parties, and the contract of service need not be for any specific time. Taylor v. Carr, 2 B. & S. 335; 31 L. J., M. C. 111.

Under 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, s. 3, a justice may by his conviction order wages already due and unpaid to be abated. Reg. v. Biggins, 5 L. T. 605.

The provisions of 5 Geo. 4, c. 18, applied only to cases of penalties and forfeitures, and therefore magistrates had no power, under that statute, to commit a party to prison for the nonpayment of a sum of money adjudged by them, under 20 Geo. 2, c. 19; 31 Geo. 2, c. 11; and 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, to be due as wages. Wiles v. Cooper, 6 N. & M. 276; 3 A. & E. 524; 1 H. & W. 560.

In an information before magistrates, under 20 Geo. 2, c. 19; 31 Geo. 2, c. 11; and 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, for nonpayment of wages, it should appear that the relation of master and servant existed in one of the occupations therein specified, between the debtor and the informant. Ib.

—— Appeals.]—There is no appeal to the sessions against an order made under 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, s. 5, for payment of wages, the sum to be levied by distress in case of nonpayment for nineteen days, although the justices, on making the order, may have acted without jurisdiction. Reg. v. Bedwell, 4 El. & Bl. 213; 3 C. L. R. 88; 24 L. J., M. C. 17; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 306.

The 42 Geo. 3, c. 90, s. 61, enabled a magistrate to make an order for payment of servants' wages in certain cases, and directed "that in case of refusal or nonpayment of any sum so ordered for twenty-one days after such determination, he may issue his warrant of distress;" but he gave an appeal to the sessions:—Held, that twenty-one days having elapsed between the making of such order before the appeal, and also twenty-one days after such appeal dismissed, before the warrant of distress issued, the magistrate was warranted in issuing such order of distress without proof of any demand subsequent to the appeal. Wootton v. Harvey, 6 East, 75. S. C., nom. Wood v. Harvey, 2 Smith, 238.

Rights of Master—Deductions.]—A master summoned by a servant, an artificer, under 20 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 1, for wages, is entitled to a deduction in respect of bad workmanship; and the justices, upon satisfactory evidence, should order the payment of so much as shall seem just and reasonable. Sharp v. Hainsworth, 3 B. & S. 139; 32 L. J., M. C. 33; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 353; 7 L. T. 320; 11 W. R. 36.

Deductions or stoppages made from the wages of an artificer in the hosiery trade in respect of frame rent, machine rent, standing of frames and machines, winding the material, fines for irregular attendance, gas for lighting the factory, and fire in the waiting room, amounting to about 3*s.* 9*d.* per week, fixed charges, are not illegal. Archer v. James, 2 B. & S. 61; 31 L. J., Q. B. 153; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 166; 6 L. T. 167; 10 W. R. 489—Ex. Ch.

—— Under 37 & 38 Vict. c. 48.]—The Hosiery Manufacture (Wages) Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 48), s. 3, enacts, "If any employer shall bargain to deduct or shall deduct, directly or indirectly, from the wages of an artificer in his employ any part of such wages for frame-rent or standing or other charges, or shall refuse or neglect to pay the same or any part thereof in the current coin of the realm, he shall forfeit a sum of five pounds for every offence, to be recovered by the artificer, or any other person suing for the same, in the county court in the district where the offence is committed, with full costs of suit. A hand-frame worker was in the employment of hosiery manufacturers. By the regulations of the factory he was liable to a fine of 8*d.* a day for staying away from work without permission. Having been fined for such absence and the amount having been deducted from his wages, he brought an action to recover from his employers the penalty mentioned in s. 3:—Held, that the employers were prohibited from deducting from the wages of the artificer frame-rent and standing or other charges ejusdem generis with rent and standing, but that fines were not charges within the meaning of s. 3, and therefore they had not incurred the penalty under that section. Wallis v. Thorp, 44 L. J., Q. B. 137; L. R. 10 Q. B. 383; 33 L. T. 11; 23 W. R. 730.

Forfeiture of Wages—Women.]—A weaver, a woman, subject to the provisions of the Factory Acts, was employed at a mill in which amongst the rules was rule 15, that no person shall leave his or her work without giving fourteen days' previous notice, such notice to be given on a Saturday, and rule 16, that any person, leaving without giving such notice "shall forfeit all wages then due, or earned or unpaid." She was paid by the piece, and all work done was booked up at three o'clock on the Wednesday afternoon in each week, and paid for on the following Saturday; all work booked after three o'clock on the Wednesday afternoon being carried forward to the following week. She left the mill before three o'clock on a Wednesday afternoon, without giving the required notice, having previously carried in and had booked certain work which she had completed. On the following Saturday she applied for the wages due at the time she left, and when she had completed her work, but payment was refused, on the ground that the same were forfeited by rules 15 and 16. No claim was, however, made for damage sustained by the employer. The 11th section of the Employers and Workmen Act, 1875, enacts, that "in the case of a child, young person or woman, subject to the provisions of the Factory Acts, any forfeiture on the ground of absence or leaving work shall not be deducted from or set off against a claim for wages or other sum due for work done before such absence or leaving work, except to the amount of the damage, if any, which the employer may may sustained by reason of such absence or leaving work:—Held, that the above facts did not shew a weekly hiring at weekly wages, but shewed that the price for the work done and booked when the weaver left on the Wednesday was then earned and due, though not then payable, and that the same would have been forfeited by rr. 15 and 16, but as there was no damage, and the weaver was a woman subject to the Factory Acts she was protected by the said 11th section, and could not be deprived of what she had so earned. Warburton v. Heywood or Heyworth, 50 L. J., Q. B. 137; 6 Q. B. D. 1; 43 L. T. 461; 29 W. R. 91; 45 J. P. 38—C. A.

—— Leaving without Notice.]—A factory winder was paid every Saturday for the number of sets she had wound off during the week ending on the preceding Wednesday. One of the rules of the factory in which she worked was that fourteen days' notice in writing was required previously to leaving the employment, such notice to be given on a Thursday; and all persons leaving without notice would forfeit the whole of the wages to which they would otherwise have been entitled, and also render themselves liable to be proceeded against according to law. She earned 3*s.* 7*d.* on the first two days of one week of her employment, was absent with leave on the Saturday, did not return, and wholly left the service, without leave or notice on Monday. In an action by her for 3*s.* 7*d.* earned, the county court judge held that hers was a weekly hiring, and that although her master's damage by reason of her absence was only 3*s.*, she could not recover anything under the Employers and Workmen Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 90), s. 11:—Held, that, notwithstanding the fortnight's notice required, the facts justified the finding that the service was weekly; that she had no claim for wages or other sum due for work done; and that

Wages Attachment Abolition Act, 1870.]—The salary of a secretary to a company amounting to 200*l.* a year is not "wages" of a "servant" within the Wages Attachment Abolition Act (33 & 34 Vict. c. 30), and is therefore not exempted from attachment by that act. Gordon v. Jennings, 51 L. J., Q. B. 417; 9 Q. B. D. 45; 46 L. T. 534; 30 W. R. 704; 46 J. P. 519.

7. Medical Attendance on Servant.

Although a master is not bound to provide a menial servant with medical attendance and medicine during sickness, if a servant falls ill, and a master calls in his own medical man to attend such servant, the master will not be allowed to deduct the charge for such medical attendance out of the servant's wages, unless there is a special contract between master and servant that he should do so. Sellen v. Norman 4 Car. & P. 80. But see Rex v. Wintersett, Cald. 298.

A master is not liable upon an implied assumpsit to pay for medical attendance on a servant who has met with an accident in his service. Wennall v. Adney, 3 Bos. & P. 247; 6 R. R. 780. S. P., Atkins v. Banwell, 2 East, 505. And see Scarman v. Castell, 1 Esp. 270.

A servant whose limb is fractured by a fall, when sitting on the shafts of his master's waggon, is a casual pauper in the parish in which he falls, and must be supported and cured at their expense, and not at that of his master. Newby v. Wiltshire, Cald. 527; 2 Esp. 739; 4 Dougl. 284; 3 Bos. & P. 247; 5 R. R. 772.

If a servant becomes ill in consequence of a service away from her master's family, and calls in a surgeon, and after this the master sends his own surgeon, and his wife knows of the first surgeon's attendance, and expresses no disapprobation, the master is liable to pay him for his attendance. Cooper v. Phillips, 4 Car. & P. 581.

But where a servant, who hurt her foot in getting over a gate, called in a surgeon, who was not the regular medical attendant of the family, without the knowledge of her master or mistress:—Held, that the master was not liable to pay the surgeon's bill. Ib.

A master is not by the general law bound to provide medical advice for his servant; but the case is different with respect to an apprentice; and a master is bound, during the illness of his apprentice, to provide him with proper medicines. Reg. v. Smith, 8 Car. & P. 153.

8. Other Rights under the Contract.

Soliciting Custom.]—A servant while in his master's service may solicit business from his customers for himself when his service is at an end, and he sets up on his own account. Nichol v. Martyn, 2 Esp. 732; 5 R. R. 770.

Copying List of Master's Customers, with Intention of using after leaving.]—In a contract of service involving confidential relations, there is, in the absence of an express stipulation to the contrary, an implied promise of fidelity and good faith on the part of the servant, which is broken when the latter surreptitiously copies from his master's order book a list of his master's customers, for his own use after he shall have left and shall set up a rival business. The servant who so makes and uses the copy is guilty both of a breach of contract and of a breach of trust, and the master is entitled to (i) damages (ii) delivery up to him of all copies and contracts made from his list by the servant; (iii) an injunction restraining the servant from making use of the information thus improperly obtained. Robb v. Green, 64 L. J., Q. B. 593; [1895] 2 Q. B. 315; 14 R. 580; 73 L. T. 15; 44 W. R. 25; 59 J. P. 695—C. A.

Information or Materials Acquired in Course of Employment.]—The good faith which exists between an employer and those in his employ renders it illegal, even in the absence of any stipulation to the contrary, for the persons so employed to make use after the termination of the employment of any materials or any information acquired by them while they were in that confidential relationship; and the court will grant an injunction to restrain such use, in addition to awarding damages. Louis v. Smellie, 73 L. T. 226—C. A.

A draughtsman in the employ of a firm of manufacturers of fire-engines, a few days before leaving his employer's service, prepared a table of the several dimensions of various types of fire-engines made by the firm, which he took away with him. Upon motion, on behalf of the firm, for an interim injunction to restrain the publication or use of this table:—Held, that a confidence that the servant would use the opportunities of gaining information which his service gave him for the purpose of that service alone rose out of the mere fact of the employment; and that abuse of this confidence was shewn by the preparation of the table at a time when, by the termination of the employment, it could be of no advantage to the employer. Injunction granted. Merryweather v. Moore, 61 L. J., Ch. 505; [1892] 2 Ch. 518; 66 L. T. 719; 40 W. R. 540.

Agents are not entitled to use the materials gained or collected by them in the course of their employment to the detriment of their principal. Reuter's Telegram Co. v. Byron (43 L. J., Ch. 661) doubted. Lamb v. Evans 62 L. J., Ch. 404; [1893] 1 Ch. 218; 2 R. 189; 68 L. T. 131; 41 W. R. 405—C. A.

Inventions.]—If a servant, while in the employ of his master, makes an invention, that invention belongs to the servant, and not to the master. Bloxham v. Elsee, 1 Car. & P. 558; R. & M. 187; 6 B. & C. 169; 9 D. & R. 215; 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 104; 30 R. R. 275.

Occupation of Premises.]—A servant occupying a house cannot be said to hold it as servant, if it is not the master's house. Reg. v. Lynn, 8 A. & E. 379; 3 N. & P. 411.

A servant, who is allowed the use of premises belonging to his master, in order to enable him more effectually to perform the duties of his place, has thereby conferred on him no estate in the premises, and may be turned out at the pleasure of his master. White v. Bayley, 10 C. B. (N.S.) 227; 30 L. J., C. P. 253; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 948.

Agreement, by which, after reciting that the defendant was in possession of a messuage and premises whereon the sale of beer had been for some time past carried on by U. for and on the defendant's account, and that the plaintiff was desirous of carrying on such trade and business for the defendant, it was agreed that the plaintiff should from the date thereof enter upon the premises, and carry on thereon such trade or business for the defendant, in the place and stead, in the same manner, and with and upon the same privileges and terms as U. had theretofore done, until the agreement should be determined by the notice thereinafter mentioned; that all the beer to be sold and consumed on the premises should be had and taken by the plaintiff from the defendant, and that the plaintiff should not part with the trade or the occupation of the premises without the licence of the defendant; and that whenever either party should be desirous of determining the agreement, the plaintiff should on receiving a month's notice in writing, without being paid any sum of money or consideration, quit and deliver up the trade and possession of the premises; and that the plaintiff should be at liberty to leave the trade and quit the occupation of the premises on giving one month's notice in writing:—Held, that the agreement did not create any tenancy between the plaintiff and defendant, but the occupation of the plaintiff was as servant to the defendant. Mayhew v. Suttle, 4 El. & Bl. 347; 3 C. L. R. 59; 24 L. J., Q. B. 54; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 303; 3 W. R. 108—Ex. Ch.

Action for Money had and received.]—Where a servant was in the habit of receiving debts for his master, and paying the same over without any written vouchers, the master must prove that the servant has not paid the money over, as well as that he has received it, in an action against him for money had and received. Evans v. Birch, 3 Camp. 10.

Duty of Servant to Account.]—The managing director was before the formation of the plaintiff company a shareholder in two other companies, and in consequence of employing them to supply ice to the plaintiff company's ships, and to take away the fish from them, he received from those companies certain bonuses paid out of surplus profits after payment of dividends at a fixed rate. Under an agreement with the company he was allowed to engage in any other business or venture not prejudicial to the interests of the company, and the articles provided that the directors might enter into contracts, and do business with the company:—Held, that he must account to the plaintiff company for the bonuses, though the plaintiff company could not have obtained them from the other companies. Boston Deep Sea Fishing Co. v. Ansell, 39 Ch. D. 339; 59 L. T. 345.

Account.]—Where A., the deceased, was clerk and manager in the sheriff's office in the colony of M., and in that capacity received moneys and made payments on the sheriff's account in the course of the business of the office:—Held, that an action against the representatives of A. would not lie, the parties not standing in the relation of principal and agent, but of master and servant, the latter acting under the immediate eye of the former, and subject to his chief control. Ermatinger v. Gugy, 5 Moore, P. C. 1.

A man swears he received money as a menial servant, and paid it over to his master. He shall not account for it again. Anon., 1 Vern. 136. S. P. Potts v. Potts, id. 207. But see id. 95. If a merchant employs his apprentice as a factor beyond sea, and he dies, his administrator shall account. Lee v. Bowler, Rep. t. Finch, 125.

Servant taking by collusion more than belongs to his office must account; so must a stranger upon a bargain with a servant, which is a fraud on the master. East India Co. v. Henchman, 1 Ves. J. 289.

9. Termination of.

a. By Notice—Mode and Time of.

Agreement for Three Years—"At my Option."]—The defendant having established smelting works at Carthagena, in Spain, offered to employ the plaintiff as foreman, by letter, containing these passages: "I should require you to enter into an engagement to remain with me for at least three years, at my option; salary 250*l.* per annum. I should require you to visit some of the best smelting works in England before you come out." The plaintiff accepted the employment, and on the 1st of February, 1850, proceeded to visit smelting works, and was so occupied until the 15th, when he departed for Carthagena, and arrived there on the 6th of March. He continued in the service of the defendant until the 15th of February, 1851, when he was discharged. He had been paid his first year's salary, as commencing on the 1st of February, 1850. In an action to recover the second year's salary:—Held, first, that the term "at my option" did not enable the defendant to put an end to the service at his will, but that it was a yearly hiring, with an option for the defendant to require the plaintiff's service for three years, or to put an end to it at the expiration of the first, second or third year; and, secondly, that the service and salary commenced when the plaintiff first proceeded to visit the smelting works in England. Down v. Pinto, 2 C. L. R. 547; 9 Ex. 327; 23 L. J., Ex. 103; 2 W. R. 202.

Yearly Service — Custom.] — A declaration stated that in consideration that the plaintiff would enter the service of the defendant as a commercial traveller for one year, the defendant agreed to employ him in that capacity at a yearly salary, and to continue him in such service for one year. Breach, that the defendant wrongfully dismissed the plaintiff before the expiration of the year. At the trial it appeared that by the usage of trade such yearly hiring might be put an end to by either party giving three months' notice:—Held, that the contract was incorrectly described, and that the objection was properly raised by non assumpsit. Metzner v. Bolton, 9 Ex. 518; 2 C. L. R. 685; 23 L. J., Ex. 130; 2 W. R. 302. See also Wheeler v. Bavidge, 9 Ex. 668; 2 C. L. R. 1077; 23 L. J., Ex. 221.

An agreement was entered into in the following terms: "A. engages to serve B. as agent or representative, at the salary of 150*l.* per annum, also provided at the end of the year B. finds A. has done sufficient business to justify him in recompensing, by making up his salary to 180*l.*, to do so, being a donation of 30*l.* to his present stipulated amount of 150*l.*" It being proved at the trial, that, by a general custom of the trade, a yearly hiring is determinable by a month's notice at any time:—Held, that there was nothing in the proviso to exclude the application of the custom to the particular case. Parker v. Ibbetson, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 346; 27 L. J., C. P. 236; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 536; 6 W. R. 519.

In an action for the breach of a contract of hiring, if either party relies upon the existence of a custom authorising him to determine the contract upon a reasonable notice previous to the end of a current year, such custom must be expressly alleged as a fact on the record, and it is not enough to aver simply that a reasonable notice was given. Williams v. Byrne, 2 N. & P. 139; 7 A. & E. 177; W. W. & D. 535; 6 L. J., K. B. 239; 1 Jur. 578.

The custom must be general, of reasonable antiquity and uniformity, and sufficiently notorious that people would make their contracts on the supposition that it exists. Foxall v. International Land Credit Co., 16 L. T. 637.

A. was engaged as editor of a new periodical publication by B., at a salary to be paid weekly. The publication was abandoned by B. soon after its commencement. In an action by A. against B. for dismissing him before the termination of a year, a usage was proved that such a hiring was annual with regard to established periodicals:—Held, that the jury was properly directed to consider whether such usage was applicable to a newly-started publication. Baxter v. Nurse, 6 Man. & G. 935; 7 Scott. (N.R.) 801; 1 Car. & K. 10; 13 L. J., C. P. 82; 8 Jur. 273.

In an action for wrongfully dismissing the editor of a newspaper, the declaration stated that he was engaged for a year. There was no direct evidence as to the time for which he was engaged:—Held, that he might go into evidence to show a custom for editors of newspapers to be engaged for a year, unless there was an express stipulation to the contrary. Holcroft v. Barber, 1 Car. & K. 4.

When the hiring is expressly for a term certain, a custom of the trade for a master or a servant to determine it at any time without notice is inadmissible to control the contract. Peters v. Staveley, 15 L. T. 275.

—— Telegraph Clerk.]—A stationery clerk in a telegraph office, at a salary of 135*l.* per annum, is entitled to a month's notice. Vibert v. Eastern Telegraph Co., 1 Cab. & E. 17.

Agreement for a Year certain.]—The defendant agreed with the plaintiff that he should serve him, as his commercial traveller, by a contract which contained these words: "This agreement to be binding between the parties for twelve months certain from the date thereof, and continue from time to time until three months' notice in writing be given to either party to determine the same":—Held, that the employment might be determined by either party by a three months' notice ending with the first twelve months. Brown v. Symons, 8 C. B. (N.S.) 208; 29 L. J., C. P. 251; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1079; 8 W. R. 460.

P., in 1674, devised estates for support of a school for parish children, and directed that the trustees, with consent of the parishioners, should provide and keep an honest schoolmaster; and if at any time the schoolmaster should be idle, negligent, or abuseful of his scholars, the trustees and parishioners should have power to dismiss him. On a vacancy occurring, the trustees resolved that they would give 60*l.* a year to a master, or 55*l.*, he finding certain things; that the appointment was to be for one year, commencing on the 25th of March next, and liable to be terminated by either party giving three months' notice; and that they would recommend the plaintiff for the post. At a vestry meeting of the parishioners, the latter adopted the recommendation, and appointed the plaintiff schoolmaster, subject to the regulations of the trustees. On the 17th of April the trustees wrote to the plaintiff, that they would pay him at the rate of 55*l.* per annum, so long as, by mutual consent, he should retain the office of master; the appointment to be subject to termination by three months' notice from either party. The plaintiff wrote back, assenting to hold on the terms mentioned. The plaintiff had entered into the office in March previously, and performed the duties. On the 1st of March, 1854, at a meeting of the trustees, a resolution was adopted, by a majority, that a notice should be given to the plaintiff to quit his office at the end of three months from the 25th of March, 1854, and a notice to that effect signed by a majority of the trustees, was forthwith served on him. Notwithstanding the notice, he continued to act as schoolmaster until the 25th of March, 1855, and sued a trustee for the three quarters' salary ending at that date:—Held, that the trustees, without the assent of the parishioners, had power to give the notice to determine the appointment, as the plaintiff's contract was with them alone; that the notice need not be one that required the plaintiff to quit at the end of a current year, but that his holding might be terminated by a three months' notice to quit at any period of the year; consequently, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover the three quarters' salary which he claimed. Ryan v. Jenkinson, 25 L. J., Q. B. 11.

When Time uncertain.]—A master mariner accepted the command of a ship under a written agreement, as follows:—"I hereby accept the command of the ship 'City Camp' on the following terms: salary to be at and after the rate of 180*l.* sterling per annum. Should owners require captain to leave the ship abroad, his wages to cease on the day he is required to give up the command, and the owners have the option of paying or not paying his expenses travelling home. Wages to begin when captain joins the ship":—Held, that the mariner could not (except under unusual circumstances) be dismissed without a reasonable notice. Green v. Wright, 1 C. P. D. 591; 35 L. T. 339.

—— Manager allowed to reside on Employer's Premises.]—A. was appointed manager of a voluntary society for the purpose of selling religious books on the society's premises, with a right to reside in part of the premises and to carry on the trade of a bookseller on his own account, and to have six months' notice to quit. Differences having arisen between him and the managing committee, they required him to quit possession, which he refused to do, and maintained himself in the premises by force. The court granted an injunction restraining A. from acting as manager, with liberty for him to reside in the premises for two months, and to remove his property. Spurgin v. White, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 15; 3 L. T. 609; 9 W. R. 266.

defendants, wine and spirit merchants, under an agreement, by which they were to pay a certain commission on sales; a salary of 4*l.* per week; 18*s.* a day travelling expenses; and 15*l.* per annum for an office; the agreement to stand good for six months, and six months' notice from either side to terminate the agreement. The agreement was entered into on the 13th of June, 1866. Shortly afterwards L. died; and the defendants, on the 11th August, 1866, wrote a letter in which they said:—"The death of Mr. L. alters our arrangements altogether. You are at liberty to throw up our agency altogether, if you wish it; and to make all things in order, it would be as well that we hereby give you notice to terminate our agreement in six months from this date; this will give us the power to do so if we wish. We say not we shall do so; time and your own exertions will be the test":—Held, that the engagement could be determined at any time by six months' notice, and that the letter was a sufficient notice to determine the engagement. Keon v. Hart, Ir. R. 2 C. L. 138. Affirmed, 17 W. R. 681—Ex. Ch.

Implied Notice—Employé of Company—Appointment of Manager and Receiver.]—The plaintiff was in the service of the defendant company under a contract which provided that his employment might be determined by six months' notice. A manager and receiver was appointed by order of the chancery division at the instance of holders of debentures of the company. The plaintiff, by the instructions of the manager, continued for more than six months to discharge his former duties at the same salary. The business was then sold to a new company, and the plaintiff was dismissed without notice. In an action for wrongful dismissal:—Held, that the appointment of a manager and receiver operated to discharge the servants of the company and that the plaintiff could not recover. Reid v. Explosives Co., 56 L. J., Q. B. 388; 19 Q. B. D. 264; 57 L. T. 439; 35 W. R. 509—C. A.

—— Resolution to Wind up.]—The passing of a resolution to wind up a company operates as notice of dismissal to the company's servants. Circumstances may exist which would amount to a waiver of such implied notice, or which would be evidence of a new agreement between the liquidator and the servant; but clear and satisfactory evidence is necessary to establish such a case. Schumann, Ex parte, Forster & Co., In re, 19 L. R. Ir. 240.

—— Order for Winding up.]—The rule that an order for winding up a company operates as a notice of discharge to the servants when the business of the company is not continued after the date of the order, applies though the liquidator without continuing the business employs the servants in analogous duties with a view to reconstruction. Chapman's Case (L. R. 1 Eq. 346) followed; Harding, Ex parte (L. R. 3 Eq. 341) distinguished. Oriental Bank Corporation, In re, MacDowall's Case, 55 L. J., Ch. 620; 32 Ch. D. 366; 54 L. T. 667; 34 W. R. 529.

—— Dissolution of Partnership.]—See Brace v. Calder, 64 L. J., Q. B. 582; [1895] 2 Q. B. 253; 14 R. 473; 72 L. T. 829; 59 J. P. 693.

Who entitled to give—Unauthorised Managers of School.]—A schoolmistress appointed by de facto managers of a school, by an agreement made by her with them, under which either party could terminate the engagement by giving three months' notice does not, by remaining in office for thirteen years, acquire such an interest under the trust deed by which the affairs of the school ought to be regulated, that she is no longer liable to be dismissed by the de facto managers, but can insist on receiving notice from properly appointed trustees of the deed. Pottle v. Sharp, 65 L. J., Ch. 908; 75 L. T. 265—C. A.

b. By Death or Bankruptcy.

A contract of service as a farm bailiff is put an end to by the death of the master, unless the contrary is stipulated for by the terms of the contract. Farrow v. Wilson, 38 L. J., C. P. 326; L. R. 4 C. P. 744; 20 L. T. 810; 18 W. R. 43.

When a contract is for personal services, the death of the person who is to render the services determines the contract for the future, but it does not rescind it ab initio, or take away any right of action already vested. Stubbs v. Holywell Railway Co., 36 L. J. Ex. 166; L. R. 2 Ex. 311; 16 L. T. 631; 15 W. R. 869.

A. entered into an agreement with B. and C. to serve them for seven years, at fixed wages, at the rate of three guineas weekly; the party making default to pay to the other 500*l.* by way or in nature of specific damages. A. was dismissed, he became bankrupt, and after his bankruptcy brought an action on the agreement, to which B. and C. pleaded his bankruptcy:—Held, that this plea was an answer to the action, for that the right of action in respect of this breach of the agreement passed to his assignees. Beckham v. Drake, 2 H. L. Cas. 579; 13 Jur. 921.

A commission of bankrupt does not operate as a dissolution of the contract of hiring between the bankrupt and his clerk. Thomas v. Williams, 3 N. & M. 545; 1 A. & E. 685; 3 L. J., K. B. 202.

c. Dismissal without Notice, Grounds for.

Incompetency.]—An artizan who has been engaged for a term to work in the art which he practises, upon his representing himself to possess the requisite skill, may, upon his proving to be incompetent, be discharged by his employer before the end of the term for which he was so engaged. Harmer v. Cornelius, 5 C. B. (N.S.) 236; 28 L. J., C. P. 85; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1110; 6 W. R. 749.

The plaintiff agreed with the defendant to enter the service of the latter, a railway contractor, as general superintendent of station buildings to be erected, and for general works; his salary to be at a fixed yearly sum, to be paid monthly; two months' notice in writing on either side to be given to terminate the agreement. Before the end of the first month the defendant complained of the plaintiff's incompetency and gave him notice in writing under the agreement. During the second month, the defendant obtained further proof of the plaintiff's incompetency and discharged him. The plaintiff sued in a county court and obtained judgment for one month's salary; he afterwards sued again in the same court for a second month's salary: the judge found as a fact that he was incompetent to do the work for which he had contracted, and gave judgment on the second plaint for the defendant:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to more than one month's salary. Searle v. Ridley, 28 L. T. 411.

Temporary Illness.]—A plaintiff agreed to serve the defendant for the term of ten years, in the capacity of a brewer; in consideration of the premises, and of the due, full and complete service of the plaintiff, the defendant agreed to pay him 20*l.* on execution of the agreement, to furnish him with a house and coals during the whole of the term of ten years, and to pay him the weekly sum of 2*l.* 10*s.* during the term of ten years. The plaintiff entered into the service under the agreement. Some years afterwards he fell ill, and was unable to attend personally to business; but during that time he instructed the defendant in the art of brewing. The defendant refused to pay the plaintiff his wages for the period during which he had been ill, but retained him in the service; and after he was able to attend again personally to business paid him as before under the agreement. To an action by the plaintiff to recover wages for the period during which he had been ill, the defendant pleaded that the plaintiff was not, during any part of the time for which such wages were claimed, ready and willing, or able to render, and did not in fact during any part of such time render, the agreed or any service:—Held, a good plea; the readiness and willingness to perform the service being a condition precedent to the right to wages; and the gist of the plea being that the plaintiff wilfully refused or omitted to serve. Cuckson v. Stones, 1 El. & El. 248; 28 L. J., Q. B. 25; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 337; 7 W. R. 134.

On shewing cause against a rule to enter a verdict for the plaintiff on the plea:—Held, that the averment that the plaintiff was not ready and willing, or able, was not supported by his physical inability, for a time only, and not through his own default, to attend personally to the business; and that the contract not having been rescinded, the defendant was not entitled to suspend the weekly payments during that time; and the plaintiff was therefore entitled to the verdict. Ib.

Improper Conduct—Generally.]—To justify a master in dismissing a yearly servant before the expiration of the year, there must be, on the part of the servant, either moral misconduct, or, otherwise, wilful disobedience or habitual neglect. Callo v. Brouncker, 4 Car. & P. 518.

But if a master carpenter sends his men from London to work at a gentleman's house in the country, he may dismiss them for improper conduct, although it does not amount to either moral misconduct, wilful disobedience, or habitual neglect. Read v. Dunsmore, 9 Car. & P. 588.

—— Refusal to obey Orders.]—The messman of a regiment having once distinctly refused to serve up dinner, until threatened with arrest, is rightly dismissed, although it was in a moment of irritation, and, the next day, was followed by an apology. Churchward v. Chambers, 2 F. & F. 229.

If a servant, hired for a year, refuses to obey his master's orders, the latter is justified in dismissing him before the end of the year, and such servant cannot recover his wages for the time he served. Spain v. Arnott, 2 Stark. 256; 19 R. R. 715.

In an action for wrongfully discharging the plaintiff and his wife from the service of the defendant, a plea that the wife of the plaintiff obstinately refused to work for him, wherefore he discharged them, is bad on general demurrer. Jacquot v. Bourra, 7 D. P. C. 348; 3 Jur. 776.

To an action against the proprietors of a manufactory, for refusing to employ the plaintiff as manager, pursuant to agreement, and discharging him from their service before the period mentioned in the agreement, they pleaded, that the plaintiff so wrongfully, disobediently and unskilfully conducted himself as such manager, that they suffered and sustained great loss:—Held, that in order to support such a plea, it was necessary to shew not only disobedience, but such disobedience as occasioned a loss; and, there being no evidence of any loss, that the plea was not supported. Cussons v. Skinner, 11 M. & W. 161; 12 L. J., Ex. 347.

—— Absence without Leave.]—Action by a domestic servant, for discharging her without a month's notice or a month's wages. Plea, that the plaintiff requested the defendant to give her leave to absent herself from his house during the night; that the defendant refused such leave, and the plaintiff, against his will, absented herself. Replication, that the mother of the plaintiff was seized with sudden and violent sickness, and believing herself in imminent peril of death, had requested the plaintiff to visit her; whereupon the plaintiff requested the defendant to allow her to absent herself from his house until the following day, for the purpose of enabling her to visit her mother in her sickness; and, because the defendant, without any reasonable cause, refused such assent, the plaintiff, for the purpose of visiting her mother, left his house:—Held, that the plea was good, and the replication bad. Turner v. Mason, 2 D. & L. 898; 14 M. & W. 112; 14 L. J., Ex. 311.

—— Impertinence.]—If a person, hired on an annual service as a clerk, to conduct an establishment for his master, sets up a claim to be a partner, although in a respectful manner and bonâ fide, it is a sufficient cause for the master to dismiss him without notice. Amor v. Fearon, 1 P. & D. 398; 9 A. & E. 548; 2 W. W. & H. 81; 8 L. J., Q. B. 95.

A clerk to a public company, who was hired at a yearly salary, having received on the 29th March a communication that it was the intention of the directors to make a new appointment to the situation of clerk, entered, on the 11th of April, on the minutes, a protest to an entry of that communication, together with an order for calling a special court on the 17th of April, for the purpose of appointing a fit person to be clerk. On the 17th April the directors, by a resolution, declared the clerk to be displaced from his situation. It was put as a question to the jury, in an action for his salary, whether the entry of the protest was a sufficient ground to justify the dismissal, and they found that it was. A verdict having been found for the plaintiff, the court made absolute a rule for entering a nonsuit. Ridgway v. Hungerford Market Co., 4 N. & M. 797; 3 A. & E. 171; 1 H. & W. 244; 4 L. J., K. B. 157.

In an action for the wrongful dismissal of a newspaper critic engaged for a year:—Held, that mere angry expressions, which neither support a plea of justification nor of rescission by mutual assent, and that an isolated instance of neglect or insolence would be no ground of dismissal; at all events, unless the insolence was such as to be incompatible with the continuance of the employment. Edwards v. Levy, 2 F. & F. 94.

—— Immorality.]—A clerk and traveller, hired by the year, assaulted his employer's maid-servant, with intent to ravish her:—Held, to be good cause for his dismissal without any notice. Athin v. Acton, 4 Car. & P. 208.

Being the father of a bastard child is a good cause of discharge by a master. Rex v. Welford, Cald. 57.

The defendant pleaded to an action for dismissing a governess contrary to a contract between them, that she, intending thereby to induce the defendant to enter into the contract, concealed from him a fact material to her qualification as such governess, and material to be known by him in engaging her as such governess, and entering into such contract, viz. that she was a divorced woman, and she thereby induced the defendant to enter into the contract:—Held, that this plea was bad. Fletcher v. Krell, 42 L. J., Q. B. 55; 28 L. T. 105.

—— Misconduct under Contract of Service.]—A. was engaged by B. as clerk, under a contract of hiring for two years, to conduct the business of a shipping agent at Southampton. In the course of such employ it was the duty of A. to pay freight, dock dues, &c., to meet which B. remitted the necessary funds. A. wrote to B. for a remittance of 140*l.*, inclosing an account of the purpose for which it was required, one of them being the payment of 30*l.* for salary due to himself. Ten days afterwards B. sent A. 100*l.*, inclosed in a letter, directing him to apply the money for business purposes. A. having appropriated 30*l.* of the money in satisfaction of his salary, B. discharged him. In an action by A. against B. for breach of the contract of hiring, B. pleaded a plea justifying the discharge of A. on the ground of his having wrongfully and improperly misappropriated the money remitted, and wrongfully and improperly disobeyed B.'s orders to apply the money to business purposes. The judge left it to the jury to say whether the plaintiff had been guilty of any wrongful and improper misappropriation of the moneys entrusted to him by the defendant, or of any wrongful or improper disobedience of orders:—Held, that this was a proper direction, and that the judge was not bound to tell the jury that it was not necessary to justify the dismissal of the plaintiff that he should have been guilty of any moral delinquency. Smith v. Thompson, 8 C. B. 44; 18 L. J., C. P. 314.

A person was employed as a traveller to a distillery company at a yearly salary, being bound by the terms of his agreement to remit immediately all sums collected. He sold some of the company's wines to a brothel-keeper, and neglected to remit immediately sums of money collected by him:—Held, that either circumstance was sufficient to justify his dismissal without notice. Blencarn v. Hodges' Distillery Co., 16 L. T. 608.

A. was appointed surveyor or agent of B. for two years and a half, at a salary of 200*l.* per annum, payable quarterly, and he was, in addition, to receive a commission of 5 per cent. upon the first year's rent for every house which he should let on B.'s estate. The agreement contained a stipulation "that under no pretence whatever should A. contract any debt in the name of B., or be considered as his agent to receive any money on his account," and a proviso, that, in the event of a breach, the agreement should immediately cease and determine. To an action against B. for dismissing A. before the expiration of the term, he pleaded that A., whilst he was such surveyor, contrary to the agreement, and without his knowledge and authority, and against his will, received from divers persons divers sums of money then due and payable from them to B., as and under the pretence of being his agent in that behalf:—Held, that the receipt by A. of deposit money from persons to whom he had agreed to let houses on account of B., was a breach of the agreement, and a cause of dismissal, and that proof that he had done so sustained the plea. Bray v. Chandler, 18 C. B. 718; 4 W. R. 518.

A declaration stated that it was agreed between the plaintiff and the defendant that the plaintiff should serve the defendant faithfully for three years in his business of a manufacturer of lard, and alleged as a breach the wrongful dismissal of the plaintiff before the expiration of that period:—Plea, that the plaintiff did not serve the defendant faithfully, as in the agreement stipulated. At the trial it appeared that bladders are essential in the business of a manufacturer of lard; and that the plaintiff, without the knowledge of the defendant, entered into a contract with C. for the purchase of several thousand bladders, which were invoiced and delivered to G., who allowed the plaintiff, from time to time, to have as many as were required for the defendant's business. C. having made a claim upon the defendant in respect of the bladders, he dismissed the plaintiff:—Held, first, that there was no misdirection in telling the jury that, so far as it was matter of law, the defendant was justified in dismissing the plaintiff. Horton v. M'Murtry, 5 H. & N. 667; 29 L. J., Ex. 260; 2 L. T. 297; 8 W. R. 285.

Held, secondly, that the facts were admissible in support of the plea, that the plaintiff did not serve the defendant faithfully. Ib.

Where defendants pleaded that they made certain promises to plaintiff, as accountant of a company through fraud and collusion of the plaintiff with others, but gave no evidence of the fraudulent inception of the company, nor of any effort made by plaintiff to induce them to become members:—Held, that such plea was not an answer to an action for dismissing the plaintiff from their service in violation of a contract. Baillie v. Kell, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 638; 6 Sc. 379; 7 L. J., C. P. 249.

The plaintiff had been employed as clerk for many years by the defendants, who were merchants, and ultimately they agreed to retain him in their employment for a term of ten years. Before the expiration of that period the defendants discovered that the plaintiff had for many years previously been engaged in speculating in "differences" upon the Stock Exchange to the extent of many hundreds of thousands of pounds, and they thereupon dismissed him from their service:—Held, that the dismissal of the plaintiff was justifiable. Pearce v. Foster, 55 L. J., Q. B. 306; 17 Q. B. D. 536; 54 L. T. 664; 34 W. R. 602; 51 J. P. 213—C. A.

—— Master's Knowledge of Facts—Necessity of.]—Where there has been disobedience, or an act of misconduct by a servant, known to the master at the time he discharges him, although the master does not mention that as the precise ground of discharge, he may afterwards, by shewing that the fact existed, and that he knew it, justify such discharge: but, semble, that it is otherwise where the act of misconduct was not known to the master at the time of the discharge, as it could not then be the cause of it. Cussons v. Skinner, 11 M. & W. 161; 12 L. J., Ex. 347. See Spotswood v. Barrow, 5 Ex. 110; 19 L. J., Ex. 226.

If an employer discharges a servant, and at the time of the discharge a good cause of discharge in fact exists, the employer is justified in discharging the servant, although at the time of the discharge the employer did not know of that cause. Willets v. Green, 3 Car. & K. 59.

To an action for breach of an agreement to continue to employ the plaintiff as an accountant, the defendants pleaded, in one plea, that the plaintiff received money for which he did not account; that he made improper payments with the defendants' money; that he made false entries and representations, and refused to obey his employers' commands; wherefore they discharged him:—Held, that the defendants were entitled to a verdict on the plea, though they proved only that the plaintiff had made a false entry and representation, and though the reason assigned for his discharge was disrespect towards his employers. Baillie v. Kell, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 638; 6 Scott, 379; 1 Arn. 245; 7 L. J., C. P. 249.

Charges of misconduct having been made against a managing director of a company, he was dismissed, and an action was commenced against him by the company, alleging the misconduct, and claiming damages and certain accounts. The defendant counter-claimed for damages for wrongful dismissal. At the trial of the action the company failed to prove the original charges, but proved that he had received a commission from a firm of shipbuilders on the price of some ships built for the company. This was only discovered after the commencement of the action. It appeared that he had superintended the building of the ships, and given advice concerning their construction:—Held, that the receipt of the commission entitled the company to dismiss him, and they were therefore not liable for damages, though they had dismissed him on other grounds which they had failed to prove, and the commission had been received some time before his dismissal, and was an isolated case of misconduct. Boston Deep Sea Fishing Co. v. Ansell, 39 Ch. D. 339; 59 L. T. 345—C. A.

—— Without Cause.]—A first count alleged an agreement by a company to retain and employ the plaintiff as their permanent solicitor, and assigned, as a breach, the discharging of the plaintiff without just cause from being such solicitor. The evidence was, that, by a resolution of a committee, the plaintiff was appointed permanent solicitor to a company, which afterwards amalgamated with another company; and the plaintiff then acted as solicitor to such company until his dismissal:—Held, that, even assuming the amalgamated company had adopted the resolution appointing the plaintiff, the appointment was only meant to be as the ordinary, and not as the permanent, solicitor of the company, so that he might be dismissed without cause; and that such, therefore, was not evidence to support the count. Elderton v. Emmens, 4 C. B. 498; 16 L. J., C. P. 209; 11 Jur. 612.

A second count stated an agreement, by which the plaintiff was to receive from the company a salary in lieu of rendering a bill of costs for general business done by him as their attorney and solicitor, and alleged, that, in consideration that the plaintiff promised the company to perform the agreement in all things on his part, the company promised the plaintiff to perform the same in all things on their part, and to retain and employ him as attorney and solicitor of the company. The count assigned, as a breach, the dismissal of the plaintiff from such employment; alleging also, that the company had, since such dismissal, refused to retain or employ him as such attorney or to pay him the salary:—Held, in conformity with the opinions of eight out of nine of the judges who gave their opinions, that the plaintiff was entitled, after verdict, to judgment upon the count, for that it sufficiently alleged a consideration for the company to retain and employ the plaintiff as attorney and solicitor, and that the consideration was not exhausted by the promise on the part of the company to perform the agreement. Emmens v. Elderton 4 H. L. Cas. 624; 13 C. B. 495; 18 Jur. 21. See S. C. in Ex. Ch. 6 C. B. 160; 17 L. J., C. P. 307.

d. Giving into Custody.

If a servant in the house of his master, at a late hour of the night, is violent in his manner and is making a great noise and abuses his master, and lays hold of him and struggles with him, the master will be justified in giving the servant into the custody of a policeman, to be dealt with according to law. Shaw v. Chairitie, 2 Car. & K. 21.

A domestic servant entered into the defendant's service on the 19th November. On the 15th January, her mistress caused her to be taken before a magistrate, on a charge of stealing some small articles of plate. The magistrate remanded her till the 20th, when she was again brought up and discharged. On the 22nd she went to demand her clothes and wages, including 1*l.* 1*s.*, in lieu of a month's warning. The defendant tendered 2*l.* 2*s.* for the two months' actual service, but refused to pay the additional guinea:—Held, that inasmuch as the placing her in custody, on a charge that was afterwards abandoned, was no dissolution of the contract of hiring, she was, under the circumstances, entitled to wages for the third month, which had been entered upon; and that the whole might be recovered under the common count for work and labour. Smith v. Kingsford or Gainsford, 3 Scott, 279; 2 Hodges, 109; 5 L. J., C. P. 271.

e. Right of Servant to Compensation.

i. Wages or Salary.

Menial or Domestic Servants.]—If a master turns away a servant without a previous notice or warning, the servant is entitled to a month's wages. Robinson v. Hindman, 3 Esp. 235.

Except where there is some fault or misconduct to warrant it. Ib.

If the contract between master and servant is the usual one for a year, determinable at a month, the servant, if turned away improperly, cannot recover on a count stating the contract to have been for an entire year; and he cannot, on the common count for wages, recover for any further period than that during which he has served. Archard v. Horner, 3 Car. & P. 349.

A domestic servant discharged without reason is entitled to the wages accruing up to the time of her discharge, and to a calendar month's wages in addition, but not to board wages for the month. Gordon v. Potter, 1 F. & F. 644.

The custom of putting an end to a service by giving a month's warning, or paying a month's wages, only holds in the case of menial servants. Broxham v. Wagstaffe, 5 Jur. 845.

The law founded upon usage, which justifies the discharge of domestic servants on giving a month's notice, though there was a yearly hiring, does not apply to a person in the situation of a clerk to an army agent, receiving a salary of 500*l.* a year. Beeston v. Collyer, 4 Bing. 309; 12 Moore, 552; 2 Car. & P. 607; 5 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 180; 29 R. R. 576.

The additional month's wages to which a menial servant, hired by the year, is entitled if discharged without cause and without a month's warning, cannot be recovered under a common count, but must be declared for specially. Fewings v. Tisdal, 1 Ex. 295; 5 D. & L. 196; 17 L. J., Ex. 18; 11 Jur. 977.

Yearly Servants.]—Where a yearly servant is dismissed by his master before the year is expired, for a cause which in law is sufficient to justify such dismissal, he cannot recover any wages; even pro ratâ for such a period as has elapsed before his dismissal. Ridgway v. Hungerford Market Co., 4 N. & M. 797; 3 A. & E. 171; 1 H. & W. 244; 4 L. J., K. B. 157.

Where a justifiable cause of dismissal exists, it is sufficient to prevent the recovering of wages, though the servant might not in fact have been dismissed upon that ground; and it is not necessary that the cause relied on in answer to an action for wages should have been stated at the time of the dismissal. Ib.

The plaintiff was employed as engineer to the defendants at a salary of 500*l.* a year, and was dismissed at a three months' notice:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover salary for the unexpired portion of the year. Buckingham v. Surrey and Hants Canal Co., 46 L. T. 885; 46 J. P. 774.

—— Termination by Mutual Consent.]—Where a contract for a service at a yearly salary is by mutual consent put an end to in the middle of a quarter, the servant may recover salary pro ratâ; but whether he is so entitled or not is a question for the jury upon the whole of the circumstances. Lamburn v. Cruden, 2 Scott, (N.R.) 533; 2 Man. & G. 253; 10 L. J., C. P. 121; 5 Jur. 151.

A clerk hired generally by the year at a certain salary may, upon a dissolution of the contract by mutual consent within the year, recover salary pro ratâ, without any express agreement to that effect. Thomas v. Williams, 3 N. & M. 545; 1 A. & E. 685; 3 L. J., K. B. 202.

So, also, he may recover pro ratâ where the contract has been dissolved by mutual consent within the year, but after the issuing of a commission of bankruptcy. Ib.

Dismissal without Cause during Term.]—A waiter at a tavern who has contracted to serve by the week and has been dismissed without cause after he has entered upon but before he has completed the third week of his service, cannot under the common indebitatus count, recover his wages for such third week. Where the wages for the week so entered upon formed part of the damages awarded by a jury, the damages were reduced by that amount. Wood v. Moyes, 1 W. R. 166.

Travellers.]—A person having been retained as a traveller on an oral contract for more than a year at a quarter's salary, and his employer at the end of a quarter having given up his business, but not having expressly dismissed him, is entitled to recover the next quarter's salary under an indebitatus count. Cook v. Sherwood, 3 F. & F. 729. Ruling upheld by the court, 1 N. R. 28; 11 W. R. 595.

Under Special Agreement.]—A defendant by deed appointed the plaintiff auditor of his estates at a yearly salary, and in consideration the plaintiff covenanted to give up his practice as a barrister, if required so to do, and not to accept any other office or employment whatever so long as he should hold the office. The defendant covenanted to pay the plaintiff the salary so long as he should hold the office; and in case the defendant should revoke the appointment without adequate and just cause (to be determined as thereinafter mentioned), that the defendant should pay him a retiring pension of 1,000*l.*; and the adequacy and justice of the cause of any revocation by the defendant of the appointment should be determined by W.:—Held, that the defendant had no power of dismissing the plaintiff without giving him a right to the pension of 1,000*l.* a year, until the defendant had previously ascertained, by a reference to W., that he had adequate and just cause to revoke the appointment. Lowndes v. Stamford and Warrington (Earl), 18 Q. B. 425; 21 L. J., Q. B. 371; 16 Jur. 903. S. C., in Ex. Ch. 16 Jur. 973.

Held, also, that the jurisdiction of the court to enforce payment of the retiring pension was not ousted, and that the plaintiff might declare for it without shewing that there had been any determination by W., or any excuse for his not having obtained such determination, or that a reasonable time for obtaining such determination had elapsed. Ib.

Arrears of Salary, how Recoverable.]—Where a declaration stated a contract of service for certain wages per annum, subject to be determined at a month's notice, and alleged that the defendant dismissed the plaintiff without a month's notice, by means whereof the plaintiff lost all the wages, profits, &c., he might have acquired from being continued in the service:—Held, that he was only entitled to recover, as damages, wages for one month, and that the arrears of salary due to him at the time of dismissal could only be recovered in an action for work and labour. Hartley v. Harman, 3 P. & D. 567; 11 A. & E. 798; 9 L. J., Q. B. 179.

—— Quarterly Payments.]—A. being employed by B. as a clerk, at a salary of 200*l.* per annum, payable quarterly, is discharged in the middle of a quarter, and paid proportionably; he is entitled to recover his salary for the remainder of the quarter, under a count for work and labour. Gandall v. Pontigny, 1 Stark. 198; 4 Camp. 375.

A party working under a yearly contract at wages payable quarterly, having been discharged for misconduct after the commencement of the quarter, agreed to finish his month's work:—Held, that, although he could not recover a quarter's wages, still he was entitled to a month's wages under the common count, although the particulars of demand stated that he sought to recover under those counts for a quarter's work. Hercum v. Stericker, 10 M. & W. 553; 12 L. J., Ex. 17.

Servant Guilty of Disobedience—No Recovery for Time of Actual Service.]—A count was framed on a contract of hiring determinable on reasonable notice, alleging a breach in discharging the plaintiff without such notice. There was a count for work and labour, to which the only plea was non assumpsit. Third plea stated a discharge by the defendant for disobedience of orders in not working during harvest till eight o'clock at night. Fourth plea stated that the plaintiff unlawfully quitted his work, and a discharge by a magistrate under 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, s. 3:—Held, that the plaintiff, having been guilty of disobedience of orders, and unlawfully absenting himself from his work, so as to justify his discharge, he could not recover for the time of his actual service on the common count; and that the discharge by the magistrate was sufficiently the act of the defendant to entitle him to a verdict on the third plea, and on the plea of non assumpsit to the common count. Lilly v. Elwin, 11 Q. B. 742; 17 L. J., Q. B. 132; 12 Jur. 623.

Where a servant under a general hiring, at the rate of so much per annum, is dismissed for misconduct, he is not entitled to any portion of the wages of the current year. Turner v. Robinson, 2 N. & M. 829; 6 Car. & P. 15; 5 B. & Ad. 789.

So, although the master has previously recovered damages against him for the same act of misconduct. Ib. S. P., Ridgway v. Hungerford Market Co., 4 N. & M. 797; 3 A. & E. 171; 1 H. & W. 244; 4 L. J., K. B. 157.

Previous to the registration of a company, A., as trustee for the company, entered into an agreement with B., by which, amongst other things, it was agreed that he should be managing director of the company when formed, with a salary at the rate of 800*l.* per annum. The articles of association provided that B. should be the first managing director of the company, and that his salary should be 800*l.* per annum, payable quarterly. B. afterwards entered into an agreement with the company, by which, after reciting the former agreement with A., the company adopted the former agreement, and it was agreed that it should "be binding on the company in the same manner, and be read and construed in all respects as if the company had been in existence at the date thereof, and had by these presents ratified the same":—Held, that the salary being under the agreement payable annually, B. was not entitled to the salary for the quarter which had accrued due previous to his dismissal for misconduct, as the article was an agreement only between the shareholders and the company, and regulated the way in which the payment should be made, and the way in which the accounts should be kept. Boston Deep Sea Fishing Co. v. Ansell, 39 Ch. D. 339; 59 L. T. 345—C. A.

Illness of Servant.]—The plaintiff agreed to serve the defendant for ten years in the capacity of a brewer, and to do all his lawful commands. The defendant agreed to pay the plaintiff 20*l.* on the execution of the agreement, to find him a home, to supply him with coals, and to pay him weekly 2*l.* 10*s.* during the term. The plaintiff entered upon the service of the defendant, did work for him in pursuance of the agreement, and was duly paid for such work, but falling ill, he was unable to continue his work. After he recovered his health, he returned to the service of the defendant, who employed him and paid him as before:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover his wages for the weeks during which he was unable to work, for, as the contract was not rescinded there was no suspension of the weekly payments. Cuckson v. Stones, 1 El. & El. 248; 28 L. J., Q. B. 25; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 337; 7 W. R. 134.

To a declaration upon the agreement, to recover the wages which had not been paid, the defendant pleaded that the plaintiff was not during any part of the time for or in respect of which such wages were claimed, ready, willing, or able, to render, and did not, in fact, during any part of such time render the agreed, or any service, as alleged:—Held, a good plea. Ib.

Apportionable under 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22, s. 2.]—The salary of an auditor and a superintending manager of an estate, holding office during the joint lives of the employer and himself, is not a payment apportionable under 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22, s. 2. Lowndes v. Stamford and Warrington (Earl), 18 Q. B. 425; 21 L. J., Q. B. 371; 16 Jur. 903.

When Action to be Commenced.]—A servant was retained for a year, his wages to be paid quarterly; he was dismissed at the end of a month from the commencement of the second quarter; he then, before the expiration of the quarter, brought an action for work and labour; money was paid into court sufficient to satisfy for the work done:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to a verdict, as, at all events, the plaintiff could not maintain an action until the end of the quarter. Smith v. Haward, 2 N. & P. 432; 7 A. & E. 544; W. W. & D. 635; 7 L. J., Q. B. 3; 2 Jur. 232.

Under the plea of non assumpsit to a count on a quantum meruit for services, the defendant may shew what the services were worth, and the jury give damages accordingly. Ib.

If an agreement is entered into for the employment of a clerk for four years from the 1st of January, 1823, at a salary of 400*l.* a year, and the salary is paid up to the 1st of January, 1825; the clerk, upon being dismissed in July, 1825, may commence an action in Michaelmas term, 1825, though at that time, according to the agreement, a year's salary would not be due. Pagani v. Gandolfi, 2 Car. & P. 370; 31 R. R. 671.

Claims against Companies—On Winding-up.]—A person entered into an agreement with an insurance company to act as their agent for five years, and to transact no business except for the company, in consideration of which he was to receive a fixed salary and also a commission of 10*l.* per cent. on all business transacted. Before the five years were expired, the company was wound up voluntarily:—Held, that the agent was not entitled to prove against the

By the articles of association of a company a manager was appointed; and it was provided that if he should at any time be deprived of or removed from his office for any other cause than gross misconduct the directors should pay to him a certain sum within one month from the time of his removal. The company was ordered to be wound up:—Held, that he was entitled to prove in the winding-up for the sum specified by the articles without any such deduction being made. London and Scottish Bank, In re, Logan, Ex parte, L. R. 9 Eq. 149; 21 L. T. 742; 18 W. R. 273.

A company engaged D. and G. to act as their commercial travellers for three years in a certain district, at a commission upon goods ordered. The company was wound up before the termination of the three years:—Held, that they were entitled to compensation in respect of commission for the unexpired portion of the term, the amount to be ascertained by the chief clerk in chambers. Patent Floor Cloth Co., In re, Dean and Gilbert's Claim, 41 L. J., Ch. 476; 26 L. T. 467.

By articles of association of a company it was provided that, in case of the dismissal of the manager, he should be paid the full amount of money paid upon his shares. A resolution was passed to wind up the company, and he was appointed liquidator. He had paid 2,000*l.* on his shares, and received 400*l.* for remuneration as liquidator:—Held, that the winding-up was equivalent to his dismissal, and that he was entitled to prove in the winding-up for 2,000*l.*, subject to a set-off of the 400*l.* Imperial Wine Co., In re, Shirreff's Case, 42 L. J., Ch. 5; L. R. 14 Eq. 417; 20 W. R. 966.

—— Effect of s. 10 of Judicature Act, 1875.]—The rule in bankruptcy that servants' wages shall be paid in priority to all other debts, is by s. 10 of the Judicature Act, 1875, extended to windings-up. Albion Steel and Wire Co., In re, (7 Ch. D. 547) followed. Association of Land Financiers, In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 201; 16 Ch. D. 373; 43 L. T. 753; 29 W. R. 277.

ii. Damages.

Accrual and Nature of Right.]—A declaration stated, that in consideration that the plaintiff would agree to enter into the service of the defendant as a courier on the 1st June, and travel with him on the continent of Europe as a courier for three months, and to be ready to start with him on such travels on that day, for a monthly salary, the defendant agreed to employ the plaintiff on and from the 1st June, for three months, to travel with him on the continent of Europe, and to start on such travels with the plaintiff on that day, and to pay him the monthly salary during the continuance of such service. Averment of readiness and willingness of the plaintiff to perform the agreement. Breach, that the defendant, before the 1st June, refused to employ the plaintiff, and wholly discharged the plaintiff from his agreement, and from being ready and willing to perform it; and the defendant broke, put an end to, and determined his promise and engagement:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to commence an action before the 1st June, to recover damages for breach of the agreement. Hochster v. De Latour, 2 El. & Bl. 678; 22 L. J., Q. B. 455; 17 Jur. 972; 1 W. R. 469.

In assessing the damages the jury would be justified in looking to all that had happened, or was likely to happen, to increase or mitigate the loss of the plaintiff down to the day of the trial. Ib.

An agreement contained in letters was entered into between the plaintiff and the defendant, by which the former was to be employed by the latter as "commission agent, at a salary of 50*l.* a year, the engagement to be terminated at the expiration of any year, on giving three clear months' notice." The terms as to the duration of the engagement and the mode of terminating it, were settled in the earlier letters: the amount of salary was agreed to in the later letters of the series, which later letters contained no mention of the three months' notice. The plaintiff entered on his duties on 1st April, 1860, and was discharged on 25th March, 1861, without any previous notice, receiving only one year's salary. In an action for a wrongful dismissal, in which he claimed to recover 50*l.*, the amount of a second year's salary:—Held, first, that the arrangement as to notice which had been previously agreed to, ran through all the subsequent letters, although it was not mentioned in them, and that all terms which had been previously settled were unaffected by the subsequent letters about the amount of remuneration. M'Kean v. Cowley, 7 L. T. 828.

Held, secondly, that the damages were unliquidated, and the plaintiff was not entitled to recover the whole of the second year's salary, but so much as would compensate him for the loss of an opportunity of earning 50*l.*, against which should be set something for the saving of his time and labour by his not having to earn it. Ib.

Mode of Assessing.]—The plaintiff was engaged by the defendant to superintend draining operations upon his estate, at a salary of 2*l.* per week and a house to live in, or 13*l.* per annum in lieu of it, and was also to receive a gift of 20*l.* if he remained till Lady-day. Before the expiration of the term the plaintiff was wrongfully dismissed, and ordered to leave the house; but he refused, and the defendant accordingly removed his goods into a barn. The barn was broken into, and some of the goods damaged, and 70*l.* taken from a bureau. In an action for a wrongful dismissal:—Held, that in assessing the damages, the jury had a right to take into consideration the gift of 20*l.* which the plaintiff might have earned, but not the damage to the goods, or the money lost, as there was no relationship of landlord and tenant existing, and therefore that the defendant had a right to remove the goods. Lake v. Campbell, 5 L. T. 582.

In estimating damages for the wrongful dismissal of a servant, the jury should take into account the salary and not any commission obtained by him. Hartland v. General Exchange Bank, 14 L. T. 863.

A servant is not entitled to his full salary for the unexpired period of the contract for service, but that is to be reduced by the probabilities of his having other employment during that period. Ib.

The employer being a company afterwards ordered to be wound up, that fact also should be taken into consideration in estimating the loss sustained by the servant through his dismissal. Ib.

By a deed of apprenticeship the plaintiff bound himself as apprentice to the defendants to learn the business of a draper for the term of four years from May, 1887, and the defendants covenanted to instruct the plaintiff and provide him with food and lodging during that term. It was provided by the deed that, if during the term the plaintiff shewed want of interest in his work, it should be lawful for the defendants to cancel the deed upon giving him a week's notice. In October, 1888, the defendants summarily and without any notice dismissed the plaintiff, assigning as the reason of his dismissal that he had been guilty of frequent acts of insubordination, and had gone out at night without permission. The plaintiff having brought an action for wrongful dismissal in breach of the apprenticeship deed, the jury found that he had not been guilty of the misconduct imputed, and that no grounds existed justifying the defendants in dismissing him without notice, but that grounds did exist which would have justified them in dismissing him with a week's notice. On the question of the measure of the damages to which the plaintiff was entitled under those circumstances, the judge directed the jury that, although they might take into consideration as an element in the case the fact that the defendants would have been justified in dismissing the plaintiff with a week's notice, they were not bound to limit the damages to the value of the week's notice which he had lost:—Held, that this was no misdirection. Maw v. Jones, 59 L. J., Q. B. 542; 25 Q. B. D. 107; 63 L. T. 347; 38 W. R. 718; 54 J. P. 727.

—— Salary and Expenses.]—The directors of a mining company in South America agreed to employ the plaintiff as superintendent of mines, for three years, at a salary increasing yearly; and the directors were at liberty to dissolve the agreement at any time, on giving him twelve months' notice, or paying him twelve months' salary in lieu of such notice, and a reasonable sum towards defraying his expenses to England; and, if he served the three years, he should be entitled to the expenses attending the return of himself and family. The directors dismissed him before the expiration of the second year, without giving him notice or paying him the year's salary:—Held, that he was only entitled to one year's salary from the date of his dismissal, and to his own expenses for his return to England; and the jury having found for those sums only, the court refused to increase the verdict by adding expenses incurred by the plaintiff for the return of his family, or for the salary which would have accrued from the time of his dismissal to the end of the third year when his service would have terminated. French v. Brooke, 4 M. & P. 11; 6 Bing. 354; 8 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 91.

Where in an action by a servant for a wrongful dismissal, the jury awarded a sum equal to twelve months' salary, the plaintiff having been discharged after about one quarter's service:—Held, not excessive. Smith v. Thompson, 8 C. B. 44; 18 L. J., C. P. 314.

—— When Nominal.]—Only nominal damages are recoverable for breach by the employer of a contract of hiring, if the person hired could have at once obtained other employment of a precisely similar kind, which a reasonable man would have accepted. Macdonnell v. Marsden, 1 Cab. & E. 281.

The plaintiff entered into a contract by which he became for a fixed period of two years manager to a firm consisting of four partners. The agreement provided that he could be discharged on a month's written notice, in which case the employers were to pay him the salary for the remainder of the fixed period. Before the two years expired the partnership of the employers was dissolved, two members leaving the firm. No notice was given to the plaintiff, who, on hearing of the dissolution, refused the offer of the new firm to continue his employment on the old terms, and claimed the salary for the remainder of the two years:—Held (Lord Esher, M.R., dissenting), that there had been a breach of agreement in respect of which the plaintiff was entitled to recover, but the damages must be nominal only, because, by reason of the offer of the new firm, he need not have suffered any damage at all. Brace v. Calder, 64 L. J., Q. B. 582; [1895] 2 Q. B. 253; 14 R. 473; 72 L. T. 829; 59 J. P. 693—C. A.

By an agreement of August 18, 1892, the defendant company engaged the plaintiff as musical director of their theatre until October 1, 1895, upon certain terms as to salary, with a provision that the plaintiff's name should be announced in certain daily newspapers, and on bills and programmes. It appeared that the most important duty of a musical director is to conduct the orchestra. The plaintiff had conducted three pieces at the defendants' theatre with perfect success, when a piece was brought out which was conducted by the composer. Since that time the plaintiff had not been called on to conduct or perform the duties of his office, but his salary had been paid under the agreement, and it was common ground that he was still musical director of the theatre:—Held, that the stipulation that the plaintiff's name should appear as musical director meant, that such a state of things should exist that the defendants should be in a position truly to make such an announcement; or, in other words that they should employ him in that capacity, and the plaintiff, though it had not been shewn that his non-employment had interfered with his obtaining another post, was entitled to more than nominal damages. Bunning v. Lyric Theatre, 71 L. T. 396.

Dismissal of Collector—Property in Collecting Books — Expenses.] — The defendants were a friendly society, and the plaintiff was one of some 1,300 persons employed by them, at a remuneration fixed by the committee of management, to collect the weekly premiums of the members of the society. Rule 16 of the society's enrolled rules provides (inter alia) as follows: "The society shall have an unlimited number of collectors. The collectors shall be furnished with books at the society's expense (the said books to be the property of the society), in which they shall enter the names, ages, residences, date of entrance and premiums of all the members they may collect from. . . . If any collector resign or be dismissed, he shall deliver up all . . . . collecting books . . . . being the property of or belonging to the society to the treasurer, agent or any other person or persons duly authorised to receive the same." It was the usual practice for a person desiring to become a collector of the society to purchase the collecting book of a collector desiring to resign, and the bargain between them for the sale and purchase of the book, though made outside the society, was recognised by the society. In accordance with the said practice the plaintiff purchased for 135*l.*, the collecting book of one J., a collector, and paid that sum to J. with the knowledge and approval of the society's secretary, and was thereupon appointed a collector in J.'s place and district. A few months afterwards, with their knowledge and approval, he purchased and paid 50*l.* for the collecting book of K., another collector. In the first page of each book was the usual printed notice, "The collector shall be furnished with books at the society's expense. Such books to be the society's property," and on the back of each book, as was the usual practice, there was printed the plaintiff's name, "M. Ellwood," and also the defendants' name. The plaintiff was subsequently dismissed from his office of collector, and in an action by him in the Liverpool Passage Court to recover damages from the defendants for wrongful dismissal and the detention of his collecting books, the jury found that he was rightfully dismissed and that he had an interest in the books amounting to 50*l.*, whereupon judgment was entered for the defendants on the claim for wrongful dismissal, and for the plaintiff as to the books for 50*l.*, damages 1*s.* On appeal from the finding and judgment in favour of the plaintiff, it was held, by the Exchequer Division (Kelly, C.B., and Stephen, J.), overruling that finding and judgment, that the books were the property of the society, and that the plaintiff had never had any property or any interest whatever in them recognisable by law or giving him any right of action against the defendants, and that the question of his interest in the books ought not to have been left to the jury. Ellwood v. Liverpool Victoria Legal Friendly Society, 42 L. T. 694; 44 J. P. 508.

Per Stephen, J.: Had the plaintiff been wrongfully dismissed, the fact of his having paid money for the books, in order to obtain the appointment of collector, might have been a matter to go to the jury for their consideration with regard to the amount of damages for wrongful dismissal. Ib.

Under Master and Servant Act.]—A workman dismissed without notice, contrary to the contract of service could recover compensation before two justices under the Master and Servant Act, 1867 (repealed). Shaw v. Alderson, 44 L. J., M. C. 160; 32 L. T. 724; 23 W. R. 730.

f. Proceedings.

i. Pleadings.

Actions by Servants—Claim.]—A declaration stated, that, on the 15th October, 1845, in consideration that the plaintiff would enter into the service of the defendant, and serve him for a certain time, to wit, from the day and year aforesaid, until the service should be determined by reasonable notice in that behalf on either side, the defendant promised the plaintiff to retain and employ him, and to continue him in such service until such service should be determined, to wit, by reasonable notice in that behalf as aforesaid. Averment, that the plaintiff afterwards entered into the service of the defendant, and has always, from the commencement thereof, been ready and willing to remain and continue in his service; and during all that time tendered and offered himself to serve the defendant. Breach, that he did not nor would continue the plaintiff in his service, but, on the contrary thereof, did afterwards refuse to suffer him to continue any longer in his service, and wrongfully discharged him therefrom without previous notice in that behalf:—Held, first, that it was not necessary for the plaintiff to shew that he gave no notice to determine the service. Wilkinson v. Gaston, 9 Q. B. 137; 15 L. J., Q. B. 339; 10 Jur. 804.

Held, secondly, that the discharge sufficiently appeared to have been after the commencement of the service. Ib.

Defences.]—A plaintiff declared upon a breach of contract, by which the defendant agreed to make her an annual allowance for her maintenance and instruction, until he should require her services as a governess of his children. The defendant pleaded, that he entered into the agreement in the belief and on the representation by the plaintiff that she was an honest and moral person, and a fit and proper person for the situation; that the defendant had discovered that she had become and was an immoral and dishonest person, and wholly unfit and improper for the situation, and a person whom it would have been very improper and wrong to employ as governess of his children; and that he therefore rescinded the contract, and gave her notice:—Held, that the plea was bad, as being too general and uncertain. Burgess v. Beaumont, 2 D. & L. 590; 8 Scott (N.R.) 669; 7 Man. & G. 962; 14 L. J., C. P. 13; 9 Jur. 14.

To an action for work and services, the defendants pleaded that the claim was in respect of wages for work done by the plaintiff, as master of a boat used by the defendants for the carriage of goods, they being common carriers, and that it was agreed that the plaintiff, as master of the boat, should be chargeable for all pilferings, losses, and damages to goods under his charge, and that the amount should be deducted from his wages, and might be pleaded as a set-off. The plea alleged the pilferage of a pipe of wine, while under the plaintiff's charge, and claimed to set off the damages sustained by the defendants in consequence against the plaintiff's claim:—Held, that the plea was bad, as amounting to the general issue. Cleworth v. Pickford, 8 D. P. C. 873.

The plaintiff sued for commission and wages due to him on a contract, whereby he agreed with the defendants to sail for them to Bonny River, and purchase for them 1,200 tons of palm oil, and ship it on board of their ships; that he would faithfully abide by their instructions, and would not aid or assist, directly or indirectly, the trading of any other ships or cargoes, by giving advice for the purpose of selling or bartering such cargoes for palm oil, except so far as it might be rendered necessary for carrying the agreement into effect, and for the defendants' benefit, under the penalty of the forfeiture of his commission and wages. The defendants pleaded, that they were merchants in Liverpool, trading to the coast of Africa, and having trading establishments there; that they were desirous of sending out an agent there, to purchase and ship for them palm oil, and to conduct exclusively their trading and take charge of their property there, which the plaintiff and H. and A. well knew; and that he and those persons, contriving to defraud the defendants, fraudulently conspired and agreed together that H. and A. should fit out two ships for the coast of Africa, and that the plaintiff should obtain the employment as agent for the defendants, and under colour and by means of such employment, and without the defendants' knowledge, and in fraud of his agreement with them, should assist and advise H. and A. in the trading of their ships, and the selling and bartering the cargoes for palm oil, and should assist the ships by employing workmen and servants of the defendants upon them, and endeavour to establish a trade for H. and A., in competition with and to the prejudice of the defendants; that, in pursuance of such conspiracy, they fitted out ships, and the plaintiff obtained the employment as agent, and induced the defendants to enter into the agreement, for the purposes before stated; and that he did, under the colour of his employment, and without the defendants' knowledge, and in fraud of his agreement, aid and assist H. and A. in the trading of their ships, and supplied them with palm oil, by employing the defendants' workmen and servants upon them, and in other ways assisted them in the bartering their cargoes for palm oil, and in establishing a rival trade to the defendants:—Held, that the plea was bad; for that the mere conspiracy to enter into the agreement, for the purposes therein stated, could not vitiate the agreement itself when carried into effect; and the actual aiding and assisting of H. and A., which was charged against the plaintiff, was not such as was specified in the agreement. Hemingway v. Hamilton, 4 M. & W. 115.

To a declaration which stated that the plaintiff agreed with the defendants to act as their salesman for one year, and not to be connected with any other house in disposing of their goods, and that they agreed to pay the plaintiff 200*l.* for such servitude; that the plaintiff entered into the defendants' employ and continued therein, and was not connected with any other house, and had always, until the expiration of one year from the agreement, been ready and willing and offered to remain in such employ, and not to be connected with any other house. Breach, that the defendant would not suffer the plaintiff to act as salesman for the remainder of the year, but discharged the plaintiff, and had not paid the 200*l.* The defendants pleaded, as to the non-payment of the 200*l.*, that after the plaintiff ceased to be in their employ, and during the year, the plaintiff entered into the service of the house of other persons, and became connected with it in disposing of their goods:—Held, bad on special demurrer, as an argumentative denial of the plaintiff's readiness and willingness to remain in defendants' employ. Spotswood v. Barrow, 1 Ex. 804; 5 D. & L. 373; 17 L. J., Ex. 98.

Replication.]—Debt for wages. Plea, that if plaintiff became intoxicated at any time during the service he should lose the wages then due; and that plaintiff became intoxicated and thereby forfeited the wages. Replication that defendant exonerated plaintiff from the forfeiture, and agreed to pay plaintiff for the service already performed, and continued to employ him as such servant; and that part only of the wages in the declaration mentioned accrued before he became drunk, and the residue afterwards:—Held, on demurrer, that the replication was bad as disclosing no consideration for the agreement therein stated, the future services affording no valuable consideration and no moral consideration being issuable from the situation of the parties. Monkton or Monkman v. Shepherdson, 11 Ad. & E. 411; 3 P. & D. 182; 9 L. J., Q. B. 134.

Amendments.]—A declaration stated an agreement whereby the defendant agreed to employ the plaintiff, as a journeyman baker, for four years, and to pay him weekly wages, and also additional sums in the three last years of the term. Breaches, that the defendant, before the expiration of the term, wrongfully discharged the plaintiff from his employ; that the defendant did not pay the plaintiff the weekly wages for the remainder of the term, and that the defendant did not pay the plaintiff the additional sums which he would have been entitled to, if he had continued in the employ of the defendant. General demurrer, and joinder therein, to the two last breaches:—Held, that the proper course was to have applied to a judge to strike out those breaches, and that, upon this record, they could not be treated as surplusage. Lush v. Russell, 4 Ex. 637.

Issues raised.]—To an action for wrongfully discharging the plaintiff from the defendants' service, as a traveller and salesman, the defendants pleaded that the plaintiff refused to obey their lawful and reasonable commands with reference to the plaintiff's conduct and proceedings in the employ, and that the plaintiff received from customers of the defendants moneys which he wrongfully appropriated to his own use, wherefore the defendants did, by reason of the premises, refuse to continue the plaintiff in their employ, and therefore discharged him. At the trial it was proved that the plaintiff had misappropriated the defendants' moneys, but the fact of such misappropriation was not known to the defendants until after they had discharged him:—Held, that, the defendants having justifiable cause for discharging the plaintiff, the judge was wrong in leaving it to the jury to say whether they discharged him for that cause, for that their motive and intention were not in issue under the replication de injuriâ. Spotswood v. Barrow, 5 Ex. 110; 19 L. J., Ex. 226.

In an action for a breach of the contract to employ the plaintiff for a given time, charging the defendant for having wrongfully and without reasonable and probable cause dismissed the plaintiff, the defendant pleaded that he did not wrongfully, without reasonable or probable cause, dismiss the plaintiff as alleged:—Held, that this merely put in issue the fact of the dismissal, the rest being immaterial. Powell v. Bradbury, 7 C. B. 201; 18 L. J., C. P. 116; 13 Jur. 349.

The defendant had been the clerk of the plaintiffs, under an agreement for 140*l.* a year, determinable by three months' notice or payment of three months' salary, and had been dismissed without notice. In a plaint in a county court for money had and received, he claimed to set off three months' salary, which claim was disputed on the ground that his conduct to the plaintiffs justified his immediate dismissal:—Held, first, that whether his conduct justified his immediate dismissal was a question of fact. East Anglian

Held, secondly, that the dismissal, for whatever cause, was not wrongful, inasmuch as it was authorised by the terms of the agreement. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that as the plaintiffs, upon such dismissal, became liable immediately to pay the defendant three months' salary, his claim for such salary was the proper subject of a set-off. Ib.

In an action for a wrongful dismissal from an employment, the dismissal being justified, it is for the jury to say not only whether matter of fact existed which would be a valid ground of dismissal, but whether the dismissal was bonâ fide and really on such a ground. Smith v. Allen, 3 F. & F. 157.

In an action for a wrongful dismissal of a servant who had been retained under an annual salary, but had assented to a proposal not to be paid further salary until works should be resumed which had not in fact been resumed :—Held, that it was for the jury to say whether the original contract had been put an end to, and if so, the defence arose under a plea of rescission. Hopkins v. Wanostrocht, 2 F. & F. 368.

—— Allegation of Knowledge.]—In an action by an attorney's clerk for improperly dismissing him, plea, that he conspired with A., and, in pursuance of that conspiracy, was guilty of acts of misconduct which came to the defendant's knowledge, who thereupon dismissed him :—Held, that, to support the plea, it was necessary for the defendant to shew that he knew and acted upon the knowledge of the misconduct when he dismissed the plaintiff. Mercer v. Whall, 5 Q. B. 447 ; 14 L. J., Q. B. 267 ; 9 Jur. 576.

—— Breach of Special Agreements.]—Where, in a declaration, it was stated that by agreement, after reciting that the defendant had requested the plaintiff to enter into his employment, it was witnessed that the parties mutually agreed as follows : first, the plaintiff agreed to serve the defendant for seven years, at a salary of 100*l.* a year ; secondly, the defendant agreed, during the continuance of the term, that he would pay the salary, and if the defendant should, from any cause whatever, give up the business, or not require the plaintiff's services, then he would use his best endeavours to procure for him employment in some similar business, at an equal salary, or, in case he should be unable to do so, the defendant would pay to the plaintiff 100*l.* a year during the residue of the term ; and the declaration averred general performance, and that the plaintiff entered the service ; and that, although the plaintiff was ready and willing to continue, yet the defendant would not continue the plaintiff in his employ until the expiration of the term, but during the term wrongfully discharged him, without reasonable or probable cause ; and although the defendant, during the term, did not nor would continue the plaintiff in his employ, but discharged him, yet the defendant did not use his best or any endeavours to procure, nor did he procure, the plaintiff employment in some similar business, at an equal salary, but had wholly failed :—Held, first, that it was a breach well assigned to say that the defendant had not used his best endeavours to procure for the plaintiff employment in some similar business, and that it was not necessary to negative that the defendant had paid a salary of 100*l.* a year, for that the undertaking to use his best endeavours was absolute and independent, and that there was not merely an alternative undertaking either to use his best endeavours or to pay 100*l.* a year. Rust v. Nottidge, 1 El. & Bl. 99 ; 22 L. J., Q. B. 73 ; 17 Jur. 278.

Held, secondly, that it was not necessary to aver a request by the plaintiff to the defendant to use his best endeavours, nor that he was ready and willing to accept a situation. Ib.

Held, that a plea, that when the plaintiff was discharged the defendant was, and thence hitherto had been, wholly unable to procure for the plaintiff any such employment, was bad on general demurrer, for it tendered an immaterial issue, assuming a breach of the agreement to be charged in the declaration which was wholly different from the breach actually there assigned. Ib.

A declaration alleged that, in consideration that the plaintiff would enter into the employ of the defendant in the capacity of European correspondent of a newspaper called the "New York Courier and Inquirer" until the service should be determined by due and customary notice on either side, and for a salary, the defendant promised to retain the plaintiff and to pay the salary, and to continue him in such service until determined as aforesaid. Breach, the wrongful discharge of the plaintiff without notice, and without reasonable or probable cause. Plea, that the engagement and promise were upon the terms and condition that the plaintiff should by every steamer from Liverpool to New York forward a letter to the newspaper office containing European news ; and that whilst so employed the plaintiff wrongfully neglected to forward any letter containing such news by several steamers, wherefore the defendant discharged him. And a second plea alleged the engagement to have been upon the terms and condition, that the plaintiff might draw and negotiate bills of exchange upon the defendant for his salary when due, but not for any sum not due or before it was due ; and that he wrongfully drew and negotiated divers bills of exchange for sums of money not due, which bills were dishonoured, to the damage of the defendant's credit, wherefore he discharged him :—Held, that the pleas shewed only a breach by the plaintiff of stipulations in the contract for which he might be liable in a cross action for damages, and were therefore no bar to the action. Gould v. Webb, 4 El. & Bl. 933 ; 24 L. J., Q. B. 205 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 821 ; 3 W. R. 399.

A declaration stated that the plaintiff entered into the service of the defendant for three years under an agreement that he (the plaintiff) would during that time use his best endeavours to promote the interests of the defendant, and would attend to and carry out all reasonable requests :—Held, in an action for a wrongful dismissal before the end of the term, that a plea that the plaintiff did not whilst in the defendant's employ use his best endeavours to promote the interests of the defendant, according to the contract, wherefore he was dismissed, disclosed a good defence. Arding v. Lomax, 10 Ex. 734 ; 24 L. J., Ex. 80.

Justification.]—In an action for a wrongful dismissal, there being a plea of justification, the plaintiff is entitled to have a verdict taken on that plea, even although he would, on the declaration alone, be liable to a nonsuit, and the defendant was held to be precluded from taking advantage, on the plea of justification, of a special contract, which he had himself succeeded in excluding, as not being in writing. Brett v. Philips, 1 F. & F. 398.

—— Onus of proving Misconduct.]—In an action by a servant for dismissing him during the period for which he was hired, the declaration stated that the defendant refused to permit the plaintiff to continue in his service during the term, and wrongfully dismissed him therefrom. Plea, that before the discharge and dismissal the plaintiff conducted himself in an improper and a disobedient manner, and disobeyed the defendant's lawful orders; without this, that he wrongfully dismissed and discharged the plaintiff without reasonable cause: — Held, that although the plea might be bad on special demurrer, as putting in issue an immaterial allegation in the declaration, yet, as issue had been taken on the plea, the plaintiff's misconduct as well as the fact of his dismissal was in issue, and consequently that evidence of such misconduct offered at the trial by the defendant was improperly rejected, and that the onus of such proof lay on the defendant. Lush v. Russell, 1 L., M. & P. 369; 5 Ex. 203; 7 D. & L. 228; 19 L. J., Ex. 244; 14 Jur. 435.

Action by Master.]—A servant is liable to an action for leaving his service without notice. Huttman v. Boulnois, 2 Car. & P. 510.

—— Servant absenting Himself — Trade Union — Non-unionists — Preconcerted Notice —Damages.]—A miner entered into a contract of service with the owners of a coal mine determinable by fourteen days' notice on either side, subject to regulations under which he was liable to be dismissed or suspended for disobedience to the manager's orders. A notice was sent to the owners by the trade union of which the miner was a member that at the expiration of fourteen days all non-unionists must descend and ascend the mine by themselves. After this notice had expired the miner refused to go into the cage with a non-unionist. The miner was willing to go down in the next cage that came up a few seconds later, but the manager would not allow him to do so. The same thing happened on the two following mornings:—Held, that the miner had, but the owners had not, committed a breach of contract, and that, having regard to the preconcerted notice and the absence of all right on the part of the men, the owners were entitled to substantial, and not merely to nominal, damages. Bowes v. Press, 63 L. J., Q. B. 165; [1894] 1 Q. B. 202; 9 R. 302; 70 L. T. 116; 42 W. R. 340; 58 J. P. 280—C. A.

—— Sufficiency of Allegations.]—A declaration stated that on the 7th July, 1848, it was agreed between the plaintiff and the defendant that the defendant and his wife should from that day, for the term of three months, appear and perform as equestrians on the stage, and in the ring, in all performances and entertainments which might be produced at Astley's amphitheatre, or elsewhere, under the direction of the plaintiff, in such parts and manner as the plaintiff should require, and should attend all rehearsals and calls when so required, for a certain weekly salary stated; and alleged for breach, that, although the plaintiff had an establishment at Peebles, in Scotland, under his direction, for equestrian performances and entertainments, and although, under and in pursuance of the agreement, and during the subsistence of it, and before the expiration of the term of three months, the plaintiff gave notice to the defendant that he (the plaintiff) required the defendant and his wife to join the plaintiff's establishment at Peebles, and although a reasonable time had elapsed after the giving of the notice, and before the commencement of the suit, for the defendant and his wife to join the establishment at Peebles, for the purpose aforesaid, yet that the defendant and his wife would not, when required, or at any time afterwards, join the establishment of the plaintiff at Peebles, or appear or assist in the performances and entertainments to be produced there, but refused and neglected so to do:—Held, that the promise to appear in any place under the direction of the plaintiff, in the performances described, in such parts and manner as the plaintiff should require, and to attend all calls and rehearsals, involved an engagement so to join an establishment of the plaintiff for equestrian performances as to be ready to accomplish the objects of the requisition, and a refusal to assist in such performances was sufficiently alleged to shew a breach of the defendant's contract. Batty v. Melillo, 10 C. B. 282.

Held, also, that it sufficiently appeared that the performances at which the defendant and his wife were required to assist were performances of the description contracted for; that the absence of an averment that a reasonable time had elapsed after the notice, and before the expiration of the three months, was obviated by the statement of the declaration that the writ issued on the 23rd August, 1848, and by the averment that such time had elapsed before the suit; and that the breach, substantially shewing an entire refusal of the defendant to perform his contract, disclosed a good cause of action. Ib.

ii. Jurisdiction.

Arbitration—By Consent—Bar to Summary Proceedings between Master and Servant.]—B. became conductor of a tramway company under an agreement by which he was to pay them 5*l.*, to be retained, together with his wages for the current week, as security for the discharge of his duties and the observance of the rules of the company, the company to have power, in case of any breach by the conductor of the rules, to retain the 5*l.* and his wages for the current week as liquidated damages for such breach; and it was provided that "the manager of the company should be the sole judge between the company and the conductor whether the company was entitled to retain the whole or any part of the 5*l.* and wages for the current week as liquidated damages; and that the certificate should be binding and conclusive evidence in all courts of justice, civil and criminal, and before all stipendiary and police magistrates, that the amount thereby certified as the amount to be retained was the true amount to be retained, and should bar the conductor of all right to recover it." B. having summoned the company before a police magistrate, under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 86, to recover his deposit and wages:—Held, that the agreement was not illegal, and the complaint being substantially a civil proceeding, the manager's certificate that the deposit and wages had been forfeited was conclusive evidence of the fact, precluding the magistrate from making any further inquiry. London Tramway Co. v. Bailey, 47 L. J., M. C. 3; 3 Q. B. D. 217; 37 L. T. 499; 26 W. R. 494.

—— Reference by Order.]—The plaintiff brought an action against the defendants for damages for wrongful dismissal, for balance of account for money paid to the defendants' use, and for an account of profits on sales on which the plaintiff claimed commission. The defendants justified the dismissal, on the ground that the plaintiff had misconducted himself by wilfully disobeying the reasonable orders of defendants, and by habitually neglecting his duties, and by converting to his own use money which he had received to the use of the defendants. By order of a judge at chambers, the issues in the action were referred to an official referee pursuant to s. 57 of the Judicature Act, 1873, the statement of defence being amended by omitting the allegations that the plaintiff converted money to his own use:—Held, that the order of the learned judge at chambers was right. Sacker v. Ragozine, 44 L. T. 308.

—— Award a Bar to Future Action.]—A declaration stated, that, in consideration that the plaintiff would enter into the employ of the defendant, in a certain capacity for a year, at the rate of five guineas per week throughout the year, the defendant undertook to employ him for a year, and alleged as a breach that he dismissed the plaintiff from his employ before the end of the year without any reasonable or probable cause. The action, which was commenced before the expiration of the year, was referred to an arbitrator, who awarded to the plaintiff a sum of money equivalent in amount to the wages which he would have been entitled to receive from the defendant on the day the action was commenced. No claim was made before the arbitrator for any compensation in damages for the dismissal, except so far as the special count in the declaration, and the evidence of the employment and the dismissal, might amount to such a claim. The plaintiff having afterwards brought an action to recover a compensation in damages in consequence of the dismissal from the defendant's employ before the end of the year:—Held, that the award was a bar to such action. Dunn v. Murray, 9 B. & C. 780; 4 M. & Ry. 571; 7 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 320.

Two Actions on the same Ground.]—A clerk dismissed in the middle of a quarter brought an action for a wrongful dismissal, the declaration containing a special count for such dismissal. The jury was directed not to take into account the services actually rendered during the broken quarter, as they were not recoverable except under a common count, and they gave damages accordingly. The plaintiff then brought a second action to recover under a common count for his services during the broken quarter:—Held, that the action was not maintainable, because the plaintiff by his former action on the special contract had treated it as an open contract, and he could not afterwards recover under the common count as for services under a rescinded contract. Goodman v. Pocock, 15 Q. B. 576; 19 L. J., Q. B. 410; 14 Jur. 1042. S. P., Lilly v. Elwin, 11 Q. B. 742; 17 L. J., Q. B. 132; 12 Jur. 623.

Held, also, that in the former action the jury ought to have been directed to take the services rendered during the broken quarter into account in awarding damages under the special count for the wrongful dismissal. Ib.

Summary Proceedings after Action.]—A servant in husbandry being hired for a quarter of a year, entered the service, and was discharged before the end of the quarter; she immediately sued her master in a county court for discharging her without reasonable cause; and a verdict was given for her master. After the quarter had elapsed she took out a summons before justices against the master to recover the quarter's wages:—Held, that the question to be decided was essentially the same in the two courts, viz. whether the discharge was wrongful, and that the decision in the county court was conclusive between the parties. Routledge v. Hislop, 2 El. & El. 549; 29 L. J., M. C. 90; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 398; 2 L. T. 53; 8 W. R. 363.

Action after Summary Proceedings.]—Two journeymen painters took out a summons returnable before a justice of the peace for the recovery of a sum of money alleged to be due to them for wages from C., claiming also a further sum as damages for the detention of such wages. The justice heard the summons under the Master and Servant Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 141), s. 9, and dismissed the same upon the merits. They afterwards issued plaints in the county court against C. to recover the wages alone, but judgment was given for C. on the ground that the case was res judicata:—Held, that the county court judge was right, and that, the justice of the peace having jurisdiction under the Master and Servant Act, 1867, ss. 4 and 9, and having exercised that jurisdiction, the matter was res judicata. Millett v. Coleman, 44 L. J., Q. B. 194; 33 L. T. 204.

Summary Remedy of Master excludes Civil Proceedings.]—The Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 104), s. 243—which enables a seaman who neglects without reasonable cause to join his ship to be punished upon proceedings before a court of summary jurisdiction with imprisonment and forfeiture of part of his wages—by implication takes away any other remedy against the seaman for the breach of contract, and the shipowner cannot, where the amount which he claims does not exceed 10*l.*, take proceedings for the recovery of damages under the Employers and Workmen Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 90), s. 4. Great Northern Steamship Fishing Co. v. Edgehill, 11 Q. B. D. 225.

Disputes under 38 & 39 Vict. c. 90—When Matter not raised by Counter-claim.]—By the Employers and Workmen Act (38 & 39 Vict. c. 90), s. 3, in any proceeding before a county court in relation to any dispute between an employer and a workman arising out of or incidental to their relation as such, the court may . . . adjust and set off, the one against the other, all such claims on the part either of the employer or of the workman, arising out of or incidental to the relation between them, as the court may find to be subsisting, whether such claims are liquidated or unliquidated and are for wages, damages, or otherwise. By s. 4, a dispute under the act between an employer and a workman may be heard and determined by a court of summary jurisdiction, and such court for the purposes of the act shall be deemed to be a court of civil jurisdiction, and in a proceeding in relation to any such dispute the court may order payment of any sum which it may find to be due as wages or damages . . . provided that . . . the court shall not exercise jurisdiction when the amount exceeds 10*l*. A person was employed as a spinner, and was discharged for neglecting his work, the employers refusing to pay him wages in lieu of notice. He took proceedings against them in the county court. At the hearing no counter-claim or set-off was filed or set up, but evidence was produced to shew that he had been guilty of negligence. A verdict for 3*l*. 10*s*. was given in his favour:—Held, that the employers were not precluded from preferring a claim before justices against him for wrongfully and negligently damaging their materials, for the only matter decided by the county court was whether there was such negligence on his part as would justify his dismissal without notice. Hindley v. Haslam, 3 Q. B. D. 481; 27 W. R. 61.

—— "Dispute"—Six Months' Limitation not Applicable.]—By the Employers and Workmen Act, 1875, s. 4, "A dispute under this act between an employer and a workman may be heard and determined by a court of summary jurisdiction: and such court, for the purpose of this act, shall be deemed to be a court of summary jurisdiction":—Held, that the word "dispute" is not limited to strictly legal causes of action. Clemson v. Hubbard (1 Ex. D. 179) followed. The time for bringing a complaint under the above act before the court is not limited to six months from the time when such complaint arose within the terms of s. 11 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848, nor does the latter act apply to a court of summary jurisdiction sitting as a court of civil jurisdiction under the Employers and Workmen Act, 1875. Charles v. Plymouth Waterworks, 60 L. J., M. C. 20; 64 L. T. 466; 39 W. R. 122; 55 J. P. 469.

B. CHARACTER OF SERVANT.

Right of Refusal.]—No action lies at common law against a master for refusing to give a menial servant a certificate of discharge. Handley v. Moffat, Ir. R. 7 C. L. 104; 21 W. R. 231.

An action will not lie at the suit of the servant against his master for not giving him a character. Carrol v. Bird, 3 Esp. 201; 6 R. R. 824.

Privileged Communications.]—If a servant obtains a place upon the strength of a character given by his master, and the master afterwards discovers circumstances which induce him to believe that the character was undeserved, he is morally bound to inform the new master of those circumstances, and the communication made concerning them is a privileged communication. Gardner v. Slade, 13 Q. B. 796; 18 L. J., Q. B. 334; 13 Jur. 826.

If a servant, when he is taken into a service, brings a written character, and is afterwards dismissed for ill behaviour:—Semble, that the master does no wrong, if before he returns the character to the servant he writes upon it that the person was afterwards in his service and dismissed for ill behaviour. Taylor v. Rowan, 7 Car. & P. 70; 1 M. & Rob. 490. See Hurrell v. Ellis, 2 C. B. 295; 15 L. J., C. P. 18; and Rogers v. Macnamara, 14 C. B. 27; 2 C. L. R. 569; 23 L. J., C. P. 1; 17 Jur. 1166; 2 W. R. 19.

A letter written in answer to inquiries about the character of a servant is privileged in this sense only, that although it contains defamatory statements, it will not support an action for libel, unless malice is shewn; but it is not privileged in the sense of being privileged from production, such privilege being confined to communications with the legal advisers of the party. Webb v. East, 49 L. J., Ex. 250; 5 Ex. D. 108; 41 L. T. 715; 28 W. R. 336; 44 J. P. 300—C. A.

—— Evidence of Malice.]—A master in giving the character of his late servant to a person intending to take her, charged her with theft, and in support of that charge stated that she had borrowed money when she came into his service and repaid it before she received any wages. In reply to an inquiry made afterwards by a relation of the servant, he admitted that the time when he paid the wages was entered in a book, which he produced, but refused to state what the time was; and on the same party remonstrating, and observing that the servant in consequence of her loss of character might have gone upon the town, he answered, "What is that to us?":—Held, slight evidence that the communication was made maliciously. Kelly v. Partington, 4 B. & Ad. 700.

Written Character defaced by Master.]—In an action for maliciously defacing the written character of a servant by writing upon it a disparaging statement, the plaintiff may recover substantial damages. Wennhak v. Morgan, 57 L. J., Q. B. 241; 20 Q. B. D. 635; 59 L. T. 28; 36 W. R. 697; 52 J. P. 470.

C. INJURIES TO SERVANTS IN COURSE OF EMPLOYMENT.

1. General Principles.

Reasonable Precautions—Necessity of.]—A master is bound to take all reasonable precautions to secure the safety of his workmen. Brydon v. Stewart, 2 Macq. H. L. 30. S. P., Paterson v. Wallace, 1 Macq. H. L. 748.

It is no answer to a claim of damages by the surviving relatives of a workman accidentally killed in a mine, "which was not in a safe and sufficient state," to say that he was at that moment of time in the act of leaving the work for a purpose of his own. Ib.

A master who lets a workman down his mine is bound to bring him up safely, even though he comes up on his own business, and not for that of his master. Ib.

From the mere relation of master and servant no contract can be implied on the part of the master to take due and ordinary care not to expose the servant to extraordinary danger and risk in the course of his employment. Riley v. Baxendale, 6 H. & N. 445; 30 L. J., Ex. 87; 9 W. R. 347.

Proper Machinery.]—A master of dangerous works is bound to be careful to prevent accidents to those employed by him. If his machinery or apparatus is not staunch and appropriate, or if he permits it to be used without proper guards, and mischief consequently arises, he will be responsible. Weems v. Mathieson, 4 Macq. H. L. 215.

All that a master is bound to do is to provide machinery fit and proper for the work, and to have it superintended by himself or by his workmen in a fit and proper manner. Ib.

In order to render a master liable for an injury to his servant, caused by the breaking of a machine belonging to the master, it is not sufficient to shew that the machine was defectively constructed, but there must also be evidence that the master employed incompetent persons to construct the machine. Potts v. Port Carlisle Dock Co., 2 L. T. 283; 8 W. R. 524.

—— Testing of.]—A chain broke, partly from wear and partly from bad welding, and injured the servant using it. His master had not had it examined or tested, although there are well known methods for doing so:—Held, that the master was liable for the injury caused to the servant. Murphy v. Phillips, 35 L. T. 477; 24 W. R. 647.

A declaration by the administratrix of W. stating that the defendant was owner of a factory and machine, and W. was employed by him to work therein, and in the course of his employment it was necessary for him to enter the machine to clean it; that by the negligence of the defendant it was unsafely constructed and in a defective condition, and was, by reason of not being sufficiently guarded, unfit to be used and entered, as the defendant well knew; and by reason of the premises, and also by reason, as he well knew, of no sufficient apparatus having been provided by them to protect W., it was suddenly put in motion whilst he was at work in the machine, and he thereby sustained injuries from which he afterwards died, sufficiently shews that the machine was set in motion by the defendant's negligence, and it therefore discloses a cause of action, although there was no allegation that W. was ignorant of the dangerous and defective character of the machine. Watling v. Oastler, 40 L. J., Ex. 43; L. R. 6 Ex. 73; 23 L. T. 815; 19 W. R. 388.

H., while in the employment of the defendant company as a second mate on board one of their steamers, sustained injuries, resulting in his death from the fall of a derrick while the vessel was discharging cargo. At the time the accident occurred the derrick was, in accordance with the usual custom on the vessel, and for the discharge of the cargo, being hoisted from the deck to its proper place in the mast by a rope which worked through an iron bolt fixed in a trestle-tree. The greater part of the bolt was concealed, and could not be examined without being drawn out of the trestle-tree. The bolt broke while the derrick was being hoisted, and it fell upon H. In an action by H.'s widow, under Lord Campbell's Act, it was proved that the bolt, to the extent of two-thirds of its thickness, was in a defective state and incapable of bearing a strain, and it was the common case of both parties that there was no skilled person on board whose duty it was to examine the screws and bolts. It was not shewn that the defendants or their officers were in fact aware of the defective condition of the bolt, and no evidence was given as to the usual practice of inspection of vessels of the class, or for what time a bolt of the kind in question would in the ordinary course remain in repair and adequate to its work:—Held, that there was no evidence of negligence on the part of the defendant company, and that the judge at the trial was right in directing a verdict for them. Hanrahan v. Ardnamult Steamship Co., 22 L. R. Ir. 55.

Competency of Servants.]—The liability or non-liability of a master to his workmen cannot depend upon the question whether the author of the accident is or is not in any technical sense the fellow-workman or collaborateur of the sufferer. The case of the fellow-workman is an example of the rule, not the rule itself; the rule stands on broader grounds. The master is not, and cannot be liable to his servant unless there is negligence on the part of the master in that in which he, the master, has contracted or undertaken with the servant to do. A master does not contract or undertake with his servant to execute in person the works connected with his business. What the master is bound to his servant to do in the event of his not personally superintending the work, is to select proper and competent persons to do so, and to furnish them with adequate materials and resources for the work. When he has done this, he has done all that he is bound to do; and if the persons so selected are guilty of negligence, it is not the negligence of the master; and if an accident occurs to a workman to-day in consequence of the negligence of another workman, skilful and competent, who was formerly, but is no longer, in the service of the master, the master is not liable, though the two workmen cannot technically be described as fellow-workmen. A master cannot warrant the competency of his servants. Wilson v. Merry, L. R. 1 H. L. Sc. 326; 19 L. T. 30.

Risk Incidental to Service.]—The plaintiff was employed by the defendant as a dressmaker. It was no part of her duty to go down into the kitchen, but on one occasion she went there, at the request of the defendant, to fetch something up. As she was leaving the kitchen a savage dog, which was generally tied up, rushed from under the table and bit her leg. The plaintiff was aware that a dog of this kind was kept on the premises. The judge at the trial nonsuited the plaintiff on the ground that as she was a servant, and knew the disposition of the dog, no action was maintainable:]—Held, that the nonsuit was wrong, inasmuch as the risk was not incidental to the service, and that there was evidence to go to the jury of the liability of the defendant for the injury sustained by the plaintiff. Mansfield v. Baddeley, 34 L. T. 696.

2. Under Employers' Liability Act.

a. Workman—Who is.

Driver of Tramcar.]—The driver of a tramcar is not "a person to whom the Employers and Workmen Act, 1875, applies," and therefore is not entitled to the benefit of the Employers' Liability Act, 1880. Cook v. North Metropolitan Tramways Co., 56 L. J., Q. B. 309; 18 Q. B. D. 683; 56 L. T. 448; 57 L. T. 476; 35 W. R. 577; 51 J. P. 630.

Omnibus Conductor.]—An omnibus conductor is not a "workman" or person "engaged in manual labour" within the meaning of s. 10 of the Employers and Workmen Act, 1875, and therefore is not entitled to the benefit of the Employers' Liability Act, 1880. Morgan v. London General Omnibus Co., 53 L. J., Q. B. 352; 13 Q. B. D. 832; 51 L. T. 213; 32 W. R. 759; 48 J. P. 503—C. A.

Driver of Cart.]—The driver of a cart in the employment of a wharfinger who, for the purposes of his business, is the owner of carts and horses, is a "workman" within the act. Yarmouth v. France, 57 L. J., Q. B. 7; 19 Q. B. D. 647; 36 W. R. 281.

Potman in Public-House—"Domestic or Menial Servant."]—Where the duties of a potman in a public-house, although manual, are substantially of a menial or domestic nature, he is not a workman within the Employers' Liability Act. Pearce v. Lansdowne, 62 L. J., Q. B. 441; 69 L. T. 316; 57 J. P, 760.

Although the facts of the case were admitted, yet it was the duty of the judge to leave to the jury the question whether the plaintiff was a workman and not a domestic servant. Ib.

Practical Mechanic—Originative Work.]—By an agreement in writing between H. & Co., manufacturers, and J., reciting that J. having a knowledge of mechanics, and H. & Co. requiring the services of a person having such knowledge "to assist the firm as a practical working mechanic in developing ideas they (the firm) might wish to carry out, and to himself originate and carry out ideas and inventions suitable to the business of such firm, if such inventions were approved by them," it was mutually agreed that J. should be employed by the firm "for the purpose above specified":—Held, that J. was not "a mechanic or workman" within the Employers and Workmen Act, 1875. Jackson v. Hill, 13 Q. B. D. 618; 49 J. P. 118.

J. agreed with H., a frilling manufacturer, to serve for seven years at 5*l.* per week during the ordinary hours. He was described in the agreement as having a knowledge of mechanics, and to assist as a practical working mechanic in developing ideas. He in fact drew designs, and had workmen to assist in carrying them out:—Held, that J. was a workman within the meaning of the Employers and Workmen Act, 1875. Jackson v. Hill, 48 J. P. 7.

Slater — Contributory Negligence.] — The plaintiff's husband S. was a slater; the defendant was a builder and had on several occasions employed S. to slate houses for him. The defendant provided the slates, poles and scaffolding, but S. had his own tools, and was paid by the piece. On the occasion of the accident the scaffolding erected by the defendant was in a manifestly unsafe state, and the defect in it was known to the defendant or his superintendent, and S. knew that it was so known to them. S., notwithstanding the defect, ascended a ladder to finish the slating, but the scaffolding gave way, and S., who was on the ladder at the time, fell to the ground, sustaining injuries from which he died:—Held, that the deceased was a workman within the meaning of s. 8 of the Employers' Liability Act; and that, although the deceased was aware of the defect in the scaffolding, yet, as he knew that the defendant or his superintendent was aware of it also, sub-s. 3 of s. 2 of the act would enable the plaintiff to recover compensation for his death. Stuart v. Evans, 49 L. T. 138; 31 W. R. 706.

Workman employed by "butty" Men—Liability of Owners of Mine.] — The defendants were owners of a coal mine worked under the "butty" system. In mines so worked "butty" men contract with the owners of the mine to bring coal up at so much per ton, and for this purpose employ men under them. The deceased had been so employed, and had been killed by an explosion while working in the mine:—Held, that the deceased had been a workman in the employ of the owners of the mine within the meaning of the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, and that his wife would be entitled to damages if the case came within the terms of sub-s. 3 of s. 1 of that act. Brown v. Butterley Coal Co., 53 L. T. 964; 50 J. P. 230.

Grocers' Assistant—Real and Substantial Occupation.]—The test of whether an employé is engaged in manual labour, within the meaning of the Employers and Workmen Act, 1875, is—whether such labour is his real and substantial employment, or whether it is incidental and accessory to such employment. The appellant, a grocer's assistant, whose duty it was to serve customers in a shop, had also other duties involving manual labour, such as making up parcels for customers, carrying parcels from the shop to the cart at the door, and bringing up goods from the cellar to the shop:—Held, that such occupations were incidental to his real and substantial employment as a salesman, and that he was not engaged in manual labour within the meaning of the Employers and Workmen Act, 1875. Bound v. Lawrence, 61 L. J., M. C. 21; [1892] 1 Q. B. 226; 65 L. T. 844; 40 W. R. 1; 56 J. P. 118—C. A.

Employé ordered to work for another Firm.] —Where a joiner, employed by a firm of lift contractors in the construction of a lift in a house in the course of erection, with the sanction of his employers borrowed a workman from a firm of builders engaged on the premises, it was held that the workman was in the service of the lift contractors. Wild v. Waygood, 61 L. J., Q. B. 391; [1892] 1 Q. B. 783; 66 L. T. 309; 40 W. R. 501; 56 J. P. 389—C. A.

b. Notice of Injury.

In Writing.]—By the Employers' Liability Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 42), s. 4, an action for the recovery under this act of compensation for an injury shall not be maintainable, unless "notice that injury has been sustained" is given within six weeks. By s. 7, notice in respect of an injury under this act shall give the name and address of the person injured, and shall state in ordinary language the cause of the injury and the date, and shall be served on the employer, and may be served by delivery or by post:—Held, that notice under the act must be in writing. Moyle v. Jenkins, 51 L. J., Q. B. 112; 8 Q. B. D. 116; 46 L. T. 472; 30 W. R. 324.

Contents of.]—The notice of injury sustained by a workman which is to be given to an employer under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 42), must contain in writing all the particulars required by s. 7, in order to fulfil the condition precedent to bringing an action enacted by s. 4. Keen v. Millwall Dock Co., 51 L. J., Q. B. 277 ; 8 Q. B. D. 482 ; 46 L. T. 472 ; 30 W. R. 503 ; 46 J. P. 435—C. A.

Reference to another Document.]—Query, if such notice can be made by one writing referring to another writing. Ib.

Omissions and Defects In.]—Sect. 4 of the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, provides that an action to recover compensation under the act shall not be maintainable unless notice of injury is given as provided by the act. By s. 7, the notice shall state (inter alia) the date of the injury ; and "a notice under this section shall not be deemed invalid by reason of any defect or inaccuracy therein" unless the judge who tries the action shall be of opinion that the defendant is prejudiced in his defence by such defect or inaccuracy, and that it was for the purpose of misleading. A notice of injury given under s. 4 omitted to state the date of the injury, and the judge at the trial found that the defendant was not prejudiced in his defence by the omission, and that it was not for the purpose of misleading :—Held, that the omission of the date was a "defect or inaccuracy" in the notice within the meaning of s. 7, and therefore did not render the notice invalid. Carter v. Drysdale, 53 L. J., Q. B. 557 ; 12 Q. B. D. 91 ; 32 W. R. 171.

It is not a fatal objection to an action brought by a servant under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, against his employer to omit the address and date in the notice required to be given to the employer under s. 7. Beckett v. Manchester Corporation, 52 J. P. 346.

A notice given to an employer under ss. 4 and 7 of the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, omitted to give the address of the person injured, or to state the cause of the injury, and the date at which the injury was sustained was wrongly given. The accident occurred on the 9th August. The letter giving notice was served on the defendants by post by an unregistered letter on the 19th September, and to this letter the defendants replied on the 23rd September. The county court judge, before whom the action was tried, found that the defendants had not been prejudiced in their defence by the defects and inaccuracy in the notice, and that such defects and inaccuracy were not for the purpose of misleading. It was proved that the notice was posted on the 19th September :—Held, that the county court judge having found that the defendants were not prejudiced in their defence by the said defects and inaccuracy in the notice, and that they were not for the purpose of misleading, the notice was good within the meaning of ss. 4 and 7 of the Employers' Liability Act, 1880. Held also, that it having been proved that the letter containing the notice was posted on the 19th September, and a reply to it having been received from the defendants, there was sufficient evidence that the notice had been received by the defendants within the time specified in s. 4 of the act, although the letter containing the notice was not registered. Previdi v. Gatti, 58 L. T. 762 ; 36 W. R. 670 ; 52 J. P. 646.

—— "Cause of Injury."]—In an action to recover compensation for injuries under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, the plaintiff's notice of action stated that she was injured in consequence of the defendants' negligence in leaving a certain hoist in their warehouse unprotected, whereby her foot was caught in the casement of the hoist and crushed. At the trial, the jury found that the accident occurred through the negligence of a superintendent in the warehouse, in allowing the plaintiff, a young girl, to go in the hoist alone :—Held, that the notice of action sufficiently stated "the cause of the injury" within s. 7 of the Employers' Liability Act, 1880. Clarkson v. Musgrave, 51 L. J., Q. B. 525 ; 9 Q. B. D. 386 ; 31 W. R. 47.

Amendment.]—The notice of action under s. 7 of the Employers' Liability Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 42), need not be expressed in strictly technical language ; it is enough if it substantially conveys to the mind of the person to whom it is given, the name and address of the person injured, and the cause and date of the injury. A letter from the plaintiff's solicitor gave only the date of the injury, and stated that the plaintiff was and had for some time past been under treatment at a hospital "for injury to his leg" :—Held, that having regard to the proviso at the end of s. 7, the defect in the notice did not render it invalid. Stone v. Hyde, 51 L. J., Q. B. 452 ; 9 Q. B. D. 76 ; 46 L. T. 421 ; 30 W. R. 816 ; 46 J. P. 788.

c. Acts of what Servants.

"Person intrusted with Superintendence."]—In an action to recover compensation under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, it appeared that the plaintiff, with other workmen, was employed by the defendant to stow bales of wool in the hold of a ship. The workmen were divided into gangs, the foreman of the plaintiff's gang being B. B. was himself a labourer, working on deck, and he gave the signal to the men below when the bales were being dropped down the hatchway into the hold. The plaintiff, who was below, was injured by a bale which, according to his statement, was dropped down without sufficient warning being given by B. to enable him to get out of the way :—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover, as B. was not a person who had superintendence intrusted to him within s. 1, sub-s. 2, as defined by s. 8, nor was there any evidence that the injury resulted from the plaintiff having conformed to any order of B. within s. 1, sub-s. 3, assuming that B. was a person to whose orders the plaintiff was bound to conform. Kellard v. Rooke, 57 L. J., Q. B. 599 ; 21 Q. B. D. 367 ; 36 W. R. 875 ; 52 J. P. 820—C. A.

The plaintiff and one J. were employed with others by the defendants in loading sacks of corn into the hold of a ship. J.'s duty was to guide the beam of the crane by means of a guy-rope, and to give directions when to lower and hoist the chain. He neglected to use the guy-rope, and the sacks in consequence fell down the hatchway, and hurt the plaintiff, who was working in the hold :—Held, that J. was "engaged in manual labour," and was not "a person having superintendence intrusted to him," within the meaning of the Employers' Liability Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 42), s. 1, sub-s. 2, as defined by s. 8. Shaffers v. General Steam Navigation Co., 52 L. J., Q. B. 260 ; 10 Q. B. D. 356 ; 48 L. T. 228 ; 31 W. R. 656 ; 47 J. P. 327.

—— Sufficiency of Machinery or Plant.]—The defendants, a firm of builders, were erecting a building in Leicester Square, and the plaintiff was a bricklayer's labourer employed on the work in carrying mortar to and fro along the outside of the basement of the building for the use of the bricklayers. A part of the machinery or plant, used in the building work for raising and lowering a pail with materials from the ground to the upper floor where the bricklayers were at work, was what is called a "gin wheel and fall," consisting of a pulley, over or through which ran a rope to the end of which were attached two short pieces of rope of equal length, with an open hook at the end of each, which hooks clipped the handle of the pail, "one in and one out," on opposite sides. Two men were employed to work this machinery, one at the top of the building and the other at the bottom, it being the duty of the man at the bottom to hold the rope so as to steady the pail. On the occasion in question the bottom man was temporarily absent, without leave and unknown to the foreman of the works; and, in consequence of his absence, a pail of cement, which was being lowered, swayed from side to side in its descent, and, striking against a cross timber, became unhooked and fell, knocking down and injuring the plaintiff, who, in the ordinary course of his employment, was passing with mortar underneath it:—Held, that the jury having found that there was no defect in the defendants' machinery, and that the accident was caused by the negligence or default of the men employed in lowering the pail, who were not persons "intrusted with any superintendence," but ordinary workmen, like the plaintiff himself, the case did not fall within either of the two sub-ss. 1 and 2 of s. 1 of the act, which were the only ones applicable to it, and that, consequently, the defendants were not liable to the plaintiff for the consequences of the accident. Robins v. Cubitt, 46 L. T. 535.

—— Voluntarily assisting in Manual Labour.]—An employer may be liable under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 42), s. 1, where personal injury is caused to a workman (sub-s. 2), "by reason of the negligence of any person in the service of the employer who has any superintendence intrusted to him whilst in the exercise of such superintendence," although the superintendent, when negligent, is voluntarily assisting in manual labour. Osborne v. Jackson, 11 Q. B. D. 619; 48 L. T. 642.

An employer may be liable under s. 1 of the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, where personal injury is caused to a workman, within s. 2, "by reason of the negligence of any person in the service of the employer who has any superintendence intrusted to him whilst in the exercise of such superintendence," although the superintendent, when negligent, is voluntarily assisting in manual labour; the superintendent need not of necessity have actual superintendence over the workman injured. Ray v. Wallis, 51 J. P. 519.

"Person to whose Orders Plaintiff bound to conform."]—The 1st section of the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, provides that where personal injury is caused to a workman (3) by reason of the negligence of any person in the service of the employer to whose orders or directions the workman at the time of the injury was bound to conform, and did conform, where such injury resulted from his having so conformed, the workman, or, in case the injury results in death, his legal personal representatives, shall have the same right of compensation against the employer as if the workman had not been a workman of nor in the service of the employer nor engaged in his work. The plaintiff, a boy employed by the defendants, a railway company, was assisting a carman of the defendants, under whose directions he was, in unloading from a van three large iron window frames. The frames were standing upright in the van, secured at each end to the hoops of the van by a string. The carman untied the string at one end of the frames, and the plaintiff untied the string at the other end. The carman did not expressly order the plaintiff to untie the string, but the plaintiff stated that he did so without orders because he had done so on previous occasions, and that the carman saw him untie the string and made no objection. The carman then removed one of the frames without retying the two remaining frames, leaving them standing unsecured. They directly afterwards fell on the plaintiff, causing him injuries in respect of which he sued the defendants for compensation under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880:—Held, that there was on the above facts evidence of an injury to the plaintiff by reason of the negligence of a fellow-workman to whose orders he was bound to conform, and did conform, and which resulted from his having so conformed. Millward v. Midland Ry., 54 L. J., Q. B. 202; 14 Q. B. D. 68; 52 L. T. 255; 33 W. R. 366; 49 J. P. 453. And see Kellard v. Rooke, supra.

In an action to recover compensation under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, it appeared that the plaintiff with another workman was employed by the defendants to work a calico-printing machine. Each machine required two men — the back-tenter, who kept the calico straight as it passed through, and the printer who, amongst other things, started it and regulated the speed. The plaintiff was a back-tenter. The printer having told the plaintiff to do something which necessitated his placing his hands between the rollers and the cylinder, before he had time to withdraw them started the machine without warning, and the plaintiff's fingers were cut off:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover, the direction by the printer not being an order or direction within the 3rd sub-section of s. 1 of the act, and the injury having been caused by the printer starting the machine too soon. Howard v. Bennett, 58 L. J., Q. B. 129; 60 L. T. 152; 53 J. P. 359.

The plaintiff, in an action under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, to recover compensation for personal injury, was employed by the defendant as a machinist, and was accustomed to work at a particular machine in a particular shed. A carpenter, also in the employ of the defendant, used to receive directions from the defendant as to the work to be done, and give orders to the plaintiff as to what work he should do. The plaintiff was bound to conform to these orders, but the authority of the carpenter went no further, and in the performance of the work the plaintiff received no directions from him, and was in no way under his control. On one day, when work was proceeding in this way, the plaintiff, whose regular time was up at half-past five, by his own doing elected to work overtime. While he was so doing the carpenter came into the shed in which he was working, and which was not a safe place for two people to work in at once, and began to work, and by admitted negligence caused injury to the plaintiff:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover, as the injury did not result from his having conformed to the orders of a person in the service of the employer, to whose orders at the time of the injury he was bound to conform, and did conform, and therefore s. 1, sub-s. 3, of the act did not apply. Snowden v. Baynes, 59 L. J., Q. B. 325; 25 Q. B. D. 193; 38 W. R. 744; 55 J. P. 133—C. A.

The plaintiff (by next friend) sued the defendants under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, for damages sustained through the negligence of their foreman. The plaintiff, a van guard in the service of the defendants, was at the time of the accident under the age of fifteen. There was a rule of the company, known to the plaintiff, that no van guard under the age of fifteen was ever to drive a van. The defendant's foreman on the occasion in question ordered the plaintiff to drive a van load of fish to B. market, and he would be paid extra money for so doing. The boy did drive the van, and in consequence was thrown down from his seat and seriously injured. The plaintiff at the trial was nonsuited on the ground that he was offered and accepted extra money to drive, and was not obliged to obey in that respect the foreman who offered the money. The plaintiff obtained a rule nisi for a new trial:—Held, on cause shewn, that the plaintiff had been rightly nonsuited, for the foreman was not a person to whose orders he was bound to conform; and that he had been guilty of contributory negligence disentitling him to recover. Bunker v. Midland Ry., 47 L. T. 476; 31 W. R. 231.

—— Workman ordered to Work for another Firm.]—A joiner, employed by a firm of lift contractors in the construction of a lift in a house in the course of erection, having with the sanction of his employers borrowed a workman from a firm of builders engaged on the premises, ordered him to put a plank across the well of the lift and stand upon it, and then started the lift, whereby the plank was upset and the workman was injured. The workman sued the lift contractors under the Employer's Liability Act, and obtained a verdict:—Held, that there was evidence to go to the jury, first, that the plaintiff was, at the time of the injury, a workman in the service of the defendants; secondly, that the order to stand upon the plank was given by a person to whose orders the plaintiff was bound to conform:—Held, further, that the injury resulted from the plaintiff having so conformed. Wild v. Waygood, 61 L. J., Q. B. 391; [1892] 1 Q. B. 783; 66 L. T. 309; 40 W. R. 501; 56 J. P. 389—C. A.

—— Negligence of.]—The negligence referred to in s. 1, sub-s. 3, of the Employers' Liability Act is not confined to negligence in the order itself; and in order to establish liability under that sub-section it is not necessary that conformity to the order should be the causa causans of the injury, though, semble, there must be an intimate connection between the negligence, the injury, and the conformity to the order. Ib.

"Act or Omission done or made in Obedience to Rules of Employer."]—The plaintiff was employed by the defendant, the owner of a saw-mill, containing saws driven by steam power, and on a certain day he was told by the defendant's foreman to cut some wood in specified lengths with the circular saw. This work was generally performed by two men, one "feeding" the saw and the other taking the wood out from it. A. was engaged by the defendant to attend to the engine and boiler, and to assist generally in the saw-mill, and was also told "not to neglect the engine." At the time in question the plaintiff was at one end of the saw-frame pushing the wood through it, and A. was at the other end receiving the wood coming out from the saw. Hearing steam blowing off, A. suddenly, and without notice to the plaintiff, let go the wood and ran to the engine-room, whereupon the wood, becoming unsteady, shook the plaintiff's hand against the saw, which cut and injured his fingers. In an action in the county court, under sub-s. 4 of s. 1 of the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, the plaintiff recovered damages:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover, on the ground that, although the injury was caused by "the act or omission" of A. in leaving the saw without notice to the plaintiff, there was no evidence that such act or omission was "done or made in obedience to any rule or by-law of the employer, or to instructions by any delegate of his." Whatley v. Holloway, 62 L. T. 639; 54 J. P. 645.

Negligence of Person having "Charge or Control" of Points.]—In an action for compensation under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, the evidence shewed that it was the duty of F., a workman employed in the signal department of the defendants' railway, to clean, oil and adjust the points and wires of the locking apparatus at various places along a portion of the line, and to do slight repairs; that for these purposes he was, with several other men, subject to the orders of an inspector in the same department, who was responsible for the points and locking gear, which were moved and worked by men in the signal boxes, being kept in proper condition; and that F. having taken the cover off some points and locking gear, in order to oil them, negligently left it projecting over the metals of the line, whereby injury was caused to a fellow-workman:—Held, that there was no evidence for the jury that F. had "charge or control" of the points within the meaning of s. 1, sub-s. 5, of the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, so as to make the defendants liable for his negligence. Gibbs v. G. W. Ry., 53 L. J., Q. B. 543; 12 Q. B. D. 208; 50 L. T. 7; 32 W. R. 329; 48 J. P. 230—C. A.

Negligence of a Person "in Charge of a Train upon a Railway."]—H., who was in the employ of a railway company as a "capstan-man," without giving the usual warning, propelled a series of trucks along a line of rails in a goods station, and injured the plaintiff, who was engaged in similar work at the other end of the line about 100 yards off. The capstan was set in motion by hydraulic power communicated to it by H. from a stationary engine at a distance:—Held, that there was evidence to warrant the jury in finding that H. was a person who had the charge or control of "a train upon a railway" under s. 1, sub-s. 5, of the Employers' Liability Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 42). Cox v. G. W. Ry., 9 Q. B. D. 106; 30 W. R. 816; 47 J. P. 116.

For the purpose of the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, s. 1, sub-s. 5, by which an employer is made liable for the negligence "of any person" in his service "who has the charge or control of any . . . train upon a railway," the word "train" includes either a locomotive engine by itself or anything drawn along the railway, and does not necessarily import a plurality of vehicles; and the words "the person having charge or control" do not of necessity point to a person in charge of the whole train. Different duties and different parts of the train may be assigned to different persons, each of whom is charged with the conduct of the train, and by his negligence may make the employer liable. McCord v. Cammell & Co., 65 L. J., Q. B. 202; [1896] A. C. 57; 73 L. T. 634; 60 J. P. 180—H. L. (E.)

"Railway," what is.]—The meaning of the term "railway" as used in the 5th sub-section of the 1st section of the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, is not confined to railways belonging to railway companies such as are subject to the provisions of the Railway Regulation Acts; but the sub-section applies to a temporary railway laid down by a contractor for the purposes of the construction of works. Doughty v. Firbank, 52 L. J., Q. B. 480; 10 Q. B. D. 358; 48 L. T. 530; 48 J. P. 55.

"Locomotive Engine"—Steam Crane fixed on a Trolly.]—A steam crane fixed on a trolly, and propelled by steam along a set of rails when it is desired to move it, is not a "locomotive engine," within the Employers' Liability Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 42), s. 1, sub-s. 5. Murphy v. Wilson, 52 L. J., Q. B. 524; 48 L. T. 788; 47 J. P. 565; 48 J. P. 24.

Defect in Works insufficiently Remedied.]—The plaintiff, a workman among others in the defendants' employ, was injured by the fall of a wall. The foreman of the works had observed that the wall was unsafe, and having placed the workmen out of danger, ordered a contractor employed in repairing the buildings at the time to bring his whole staff of workmen and shore up the wall. This was done, and the foreman, having been assured by the contractor that the wall was safe, sent the workmen back to their work. Shortly afterwards the wall fell. The foreman trusted to the assurance of the builder that the wall was safe, and did not personally inspect its condition after it had been shored up: —Held, that there was no evidence of negligence on the part of the defendants or of their foreman. Moore v. Gimson, 58 L. J., Q. B. 169.

Defect in Condition of Way.]—A defect in the condition of a way within the meaning of the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, s. 1, sub-s. 1, must be some defect or alteration in the permanent condition of the way itself; and obstacles lying on the way which do not in any degree alter the fitness for the purpose for which it is generally employed, and cannot be said to be incorporated with it, do not make it defective within the meaning of the section. McGiffin v. Palmer's Shipbuilding and Iron Co., 52 L. J., Q. B. 25; 10 Q. B. D. 1; 47 L. T. 346; 31 W. R. 118; 47 J. P. 70.

During the building of a house the workmen obtained access to the upper part by ladders placed in a well intended for a staircase. There was another well through the house intended for a lift, down which rubbish had been thrown during the building. Upon the staircase being completed, it was closed to the workmen as a means of access, and the ladders were transferred to the lift-well. No precautions had been taken to prevent workmen from throwing rubbish down the lift-well after the ladders had been so transferred. The plaintiff was ascending one of the ladders when a boy threw a plank down from the third floor which struck the plaintiff and broke his collar-bone:—Held, that this was not a "defect in the condition of the way" within the meaning of sub-s. 1 of s. 1 of the act; and that the fact of no notice or warning being given to stop the practice of throwing materials down the lift-hole did not have the effect of bringing the case within that sub-section. Pegram v. Dixon, 55 L. J., Q. B. 447; 51 J. P. 198.

—— By Negligent User.]—By s. 1, sub-s. 1, of the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, a right of compensation is given to a workman for personal injury caused to him by reason of any defect in the condition of the ways connected with or used in the business of the employer. The plaintiff was employed as a steam-hammerman in the service of the defendants, a firm of engineers, upon whose premises was a large covered workshop about 150 feet long and 50 feet wide, over the floor of which were scattered certain machinery and other appliances used in their business. Near the centre of the workshop was a well with a cover which had not been used for about seven years. The plaintiff, who worked at one end of the workshop, whilst walking across it to make some inquiry of a workman at the other end with regard to the steam-power, fell into the well, which had been uncovered by the defendant's foreman for the purpose of emptying water from an iron cylinder into it. There was no defined way where the plaintiff crossed, but he went the most direct line across the workshop. The defendants' workmen also used to pass up and down the workshop. No warning was given by the foreman that the well had been uncovered. In an action under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, to recover damages for the injury sustained:—Held, that the place where the accident happened was a "way" within s. 1 of the act; that the accident was not caused by "any defect in the condition of the way" within sub-s. 1 of s. 1, but was caused by the negligence of the defendants' foreman in the user of the way within sub-s. 2 of s. 1. Willetts v. Watt, 61 L. J., Q. B. 540; [1892] 2 Q. B. 92; 66 L. T. 818; 40 W. R. 497; 56 J. P. 772—C. A.

Defect in Condition of Works — Permanent Premises.]—The term "works" in s. 1, sub-s. 1, of the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, is not confined to factories, workshops, or permanent premises of an employer. A plot of ground, in the course of being cleared of old buildings in order to form a site for new building operations, is the "works" of the employer of labour who has contracted to clear it, and whose business it is to perform such contracts. Brannigan v. Robinson, 61 L. J., Q. B. 202; [1892] 1 Q. B. 344; 66 L. T. 647; 56 J. P. 328.

—— Wall in course of Construction.]—In the Employers' Liability Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 42), s. 1—defining the liability of employers for personal injury caused to their workmen (1) "by reason of any defect in the condition of the ways, works, machinery, or plant connected with or used in the business of the employed"—the expression "works" must be taken to mean works already completed, and not works in course of construction, which are on completion to be connected with or used in the business of the employer. Howe v. Finch, 17 Q. B. D. 187; 34 W. R. 593; 51 J. P. 276.

Defect in Condition of Machinery.]—Defect in the condition of machinery for the purposes of s. 1, sub-s. 1, of the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, includes the absence of proper means to secure safety in the operation for which the machinery is used. Stanton v. Scrutton, 62 L. J., Q. B. 405; 5 R. 244.

A defect in the condition of the machinery or plant of the employer within s. 1, sub-s. 1, of the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, includes unsuitability of the machinery for the purpose for which it is used, and is not confined to cases where the machinery has become defective. Heske v. Samuelson, 53 L. J., Q. B. 45; 12 Q. B. D. 30; 49 L. T. 474.

The Employers' Liability Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 42), which gives a workman a right of action against his employer for personal injury by reason of any defect in the condition of the machinery used in the business of the employer, applies to a case where the machine, though not defective in its construction was, under the circumstances in which it was used, calculated to cause injury to those using it. The deceased, a workman in the employment of the defendants, was killed by a piece of coke falling from a lift used at a blast furnace belonging to them. The lift consisted of two platforms which ascended and descended alternately, and at the time when the deceased was injured he was removing empty barrows from the platform which was at rest at the bottom of the lift. There was evidence that the accident arose either from the sides of the lift not being fenced so as to prevent coke from falling over, or from the lower platform not being roofed so as to protect those working on it from falling coke:—Held, that under the circumstances there was a "defect in the condition" of the lift for which the defendants were liable. Ib.

The plaintiff, a lad of nineteen, was employed in the defendants' paper mill at a machine for cutting jute. The material passed under a roller which conveyed it to the cutter; but the roller being in several pieces or sections, with interstices between them into which the jute sometimes got, and so impeded the action of the machine, it was necessary (or usual) to remove it by the hand. In doing this the plaintiff lost three fingers. The defect had been pointed out to the defendants, who, to remedy it, procured a roller in one piece; but the accident happened before the new roller was placed. The maker swore that with care both rollers were equally safe. The jury having found that the injury to the plaintiff was caused by a defect in the machine known to the defendants, and not remedied by them:—Held, that this finding was warranted by the evidence. Paley v. Garnett, 16 Q. B. D. 52; 34 W. R. 295; 50 J. P. 469.

A leather-pressing machine, in every way perfect and in no way defective for the simple purpose of pressing leather, had at its side a wheel and cogs unguarded. The unguarded condition of this wheel and the possible danger likely to arise from it was within the knowledge of the employers. A boy who fed the machine with leather by some means entangled his hand in this wheel and received injuries:—Held, that, taking sub-s. 1 of s. 1, and sub-s. 1 of s. 2, of the Employers' Liability Act together, the danger caused by this wheel was a defect in the condition of the machine within the first of these sub-sections, since, the danger being within the knowledge of the employers, they were negligent in allowing the wheel to remain unguarded. Morgan v. Hutchins, 59 L. J., Q. B. 197; 38 W. R. 412.

The mere fact that a machine is dangerous to a workman employed to work with it does not shew that there is a defect in the condition of the machine within the meaning of the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, s. 1, sub-s. 1, inasmuch as by s. 2, sub-s. 1, of the act, the only defects in respect of which the employer is liable are defects implying negligence of the employer or some one in his service intrusted by him with the duty of seeing that the machine is in proper condition. Walsh v. Whiteley, 57 L. J., Q. B. 586; 21 Q. B. D. 371; 36 W. R. 876; 53 J. P. 38—C. A.

The plaintiff in an action under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, was employed by the defendants to work at a carding machine. Part of the machine consisted of a wheel or pulley upon which, while in motion, the plaintiff had to place a band. The disc of the wheel had holes in it, and, while the plaintiff was putting on the band, his thumb slipped through one of these holes, the result being that it was caught between the wheel and the bed-plate of the machine and cut off. It was proved that, though these wheels were sometimes made without such holes, they were very commonly made with them, the object being to reduce the weight of the wheel and consequent friction. In the defendants' mill there were machines of both sorts, and it did not appear that any complaint had previously arisen with regard to the wheels with holes, the plaintiff himself stating that he had never complained of the machine, because it had never entered into his head that it was dangerous:—Held (Lord Esher, M.R., dissenting), that there was no evidence of any defect in the machine implying negligence in the defendants or anyone in their service, and therefore that the defendants were not liable. Ib.

The plaintiff was employed by the defendants to assist in the working of a circular saw. The saw bench was provided with a side guard, which was removable for the purpose of taking away the sawdust from under the bench. While the saw was in motion, the plaintiff, in assisting to lift a plank, slipped and, the guard being absent, fell under the bench and was injured by the saw. It was proved that the workman in charge of the saw, whose duty it was to see that the guard was in its place, had on the previous day removed it because it was in his way, and that it had not been replaced:—Held, that the absence of the side guard constituted a defect in the condition of the machinery within the meaning of s. 1, sub-s. 1, of the Employers' Liability Act, 1880. Willetts v. Watt (61 L. J., Q. B. 540; [1892] 2 Q. B. 92) distinguished. Tate v. Latham, 66 L. J., Q. B. 349; [1897] 1 Q. B. 502; 76 L. T. 336; 45 W. R. 400—C. A.

"Condition of Plant."] — The Employers' Liability Act, 1880, which gives a workman a right of action against his employer for personal injury by reason of any defect in the condition of the plant used in the business of the employer, applies to a case where the plant is unfit for the purpose for which it is used, though no part of it is shewn to be unsound. Plaintiff, a workman in defendants' employment, was injured by reason of the breaking of a ladder, which was being used to support a scaffold. The ladder was insufficient for the purpose for which it was being used, and the scaffold and ladder had been placed and were being used under the directions of one of the defendants:—Held, that, under the above circumstances, there was evidence that the plaintiff had been injured by reason of a defect in the condition of the plant, owing to the negligence of his employer, within the meaning of the Employers' Liability Act, 1880. Cripps v. Judge, 53 L. J., Q. B. 517; 13 Q. B. D. 583; 51 L. T. 182; 33 W. R. 35; 49 J. P. 100—C. A.

A wharfinger who for the purposes of his business was the owner of carts and horses, owned one horse of a vicious nature, that was unfit to be driven by a careful driver. The plaintiff was in the wharfinger's employ, and had to drive the carts and to load and unload the goods carried in them. In an action for injury by reason of the viciousness of the horse:—Held, that the horse was "plant" used in the business of the wharfinger, and that the vice in the horse was a "defect" in the condition of such plant within the meaning of s. 1 of the act. Yarmouth v. France, 57 L. J., Q. B. 7; 19 Q. B. D. 647; 36 W. R. 281.

Where a boy was engaged in moving certain iron stanchions on a trolly, and the stanchions were not packed or protected from falling off, and, by reason of their not being so packed or protected, one of them fell and injured one of the boy's fingers so that it had to be amputated:—Held, that the neglect to pack or to protect from falling off did not constitute such a defect in plant as would render his employer liable within the meaning of the Employers' Liability Act, s. 1, sub-s. 1. Corcoran v. East Surrey Ironworks Co., 58 L. J., Q. B. 145.

See also Weblin v. Ballard, infra, col. 874.

—— "Volenti non fit injuria"—Knowledge of Employer.]—Where a workman was employed on a staging in the middle of the river Thames, which was protected on one side only, and it was part of his duty to work on the unprotected side, and in the course of his employment he fell over at night and was drowned, the jury found that the structure was defective, and that the deceased lost his life in consequence of the defect; but they also found that he knew of the defect, and was willing to incur the risk:—Held, that his widow could not recover damages from his employer. Church v. Appleby, 58 L. J., Q. B. 144; 60 L. T. 542.

e. Contributory Negligence.

As a Defence.]—A defence of contributory negligence may be relied on in an action under the Employers' Liability Act. McEvoy v. Waterford Steamship Co., 18 L. R., Ir. 159.

Disobeying Employer's Rules.]—See Bunker v. Midland Railway Co., ante, col. 867.

Working in Dangerous Mode.]—If machinery can be worked by a servant in a reasonable manner without danger to himself, no instruction being given to him to work it in a mode which would endanger his safety, where the safe mode, as well as the dangerous mode, of working are known to him, the danger of the latter mode being apparent, the employers are not liable under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, for damages for the death of the servant, caused by working the machine in a dangerous way. Noonan v. Dublin Distillery Co., 32 L. R., Ir. 399.

Knowledge of Defect.]—An employer, when sued under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, for personal injury to a workman caused by any of the matters mentioned in s. 1 of the act, cannot avail himself of the defence that the injury was caused by the negligence of a fellow servant, or that the workman had contracted to take upon himself the risks incident to the employment; but he may avail himself of the defence of contributory negligence on the part of the workman, and also, under s. 2, sub-s. 3, of his failure to give notice of the defect or negligence which caused the injury. The deceased was employed as fireman at the defendant's brewery. In the engine-room, at some distance from the floor, was a valve to turn on steam to a donkey-engine. This valve was only reached by means of a ladder placed against a lower pipe, but, by reason of a bend in the last-mentioned pipe, the ladder (though in itself perfect), being without hooks or stays, was unsafe for the purpose for which it was used. The defendant had himself seen the ladder so used. The deceased was found dead in the engine-room, having been apparently killed by the ladder slipping while he was upon it. In an action by his personal representative under the Employers' Liability Act, the county court judge found that there was a defect in the condition of the plant within the meaning of s. 1, sub-s. 1, of the act, and that, although the deceased knew of the defect, he was excused from informing the defendant of it, because he was aware that the latter knew of it:—Held, that this finding was warranted by the evidence, and that contributory negligence on the part of the deceased was not necessarily proved by the mere fact that he knew that the work was of itself dangerous. Weblin v. Ballard, 55 L. J., Q. B. 395; 17 Q. B. D. 122; 54 L. T. 532; 34 W. R. 455; 50 J. P. 597.

Where a waggon was in a defective state, of which a workman was aware, and he used it in such a way as to cause injury to himself, when he knew how to use and might have used it so as not to cause injury to himself, he cannot recover under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, s. 1. Martin v. Connah's Quay Alkali Co., 33 W. R. 216.

f. Risk Voluntarily Incurred.

"Volenti non fit injuria."]—The plaintiff was employed in a cooling room in the defendant's brewery. In the room were a boiling vat and a cooling vat, and between them ran a passage which was in part only three feet wide. The cooling vat had a rim raised sixteen inches above the level of the passage, but it was not fenced or railed in. The plaintiff went along this passage to pull a board from under the boiling vat. This board stuck fast and then came away suddenly, so that he fell back into the cooling vat and was scalded. In an action under the Employers'

Liability Act, 1880:—Held (Lord Esher, M.R., dissenting), that the defence arising from the maxim volenti non fit injuria had not been affected by the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, and applied to the present case, and that there was therefore no evidence of negligence arising from a breach of duty on the part of the defendant towards the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover. Thomas v. Quartermaine, 56 L. J., Q. B. 340; 18 Q. B. D. 685; 57 L. T. 537; 35 W. R. 555; 51 J. P. 516—C. A.

In an action to recover compensation under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, it appeared that the plaintiff was in the employment of the defendant, who was a wharfinger, and for the purposes of his business the owner of carts and horses. It was the duty of the plaintiff to drive the carts and to load and unload the goods which were carried in them. Among the horses was one of a vicious nature and unfit to be driven even by a careful driver. The plaintiff objected to drive this horse, and told the foreman of the stable that it was unfit to be driven, to which the foreman replied that the plaintiff must go on driving it, and that if any accident happened his employer would be responsible. The plaintiff continued to drive the horse, and while sitting on his proper place in the cart was kicked by the animal and his leg was broken:—Held (Lopes, L.J., dissenting), that upon the facts a jury might find the defendant to be liable, for there was evidence of negligence on the part of his foreman, and the circumstances did not conclusively show that the risk was voluntarily incurred by the plaintiff. Thomas v. Quartermaine (18 Q. B. D. 685) distinguished. Per Lopes, L.J., that there was no evidence for the jury of the defendant's liability, inasmuch as the facts showed that the plaintiff, with full knowledge of the risk to which he was exposed, had elected to continue in the defendant's employment. Yarmouth v. France, 57 L. J., Q. B. 7; 19 Q. B. D. 647; 36 W. R. 281.

The appellant, a workman in the employment of the respondents, was working in a railway cutting with hammer and drills, when a stone, fastened by a chain to another chain hanging from a crane which was being "jibbed" over his head, slipped from its fastenings, struck and seriously injured him. In the county court the jury found that the machinery used for lifting the stone was not reasonably fit for its purpose: that the omission to supply special means of warning when the stones were being "jibbed" was a defect in the "ways, works, machinery, and plant" within the Employers' Liability Act; that the employers were guilty of negligence, and that the appellant was not guilty of contributory negligence; and they awarded 100*l.* damages, for which the judge entered judgment for the plaintiff. The notice of appeal to the divisional court, and subsequently to the court of appeal, was based solely on the ground that the plaintiff had voluntarily undertaken the risk. The court of appeal decided in favour of the defendants both on this ground and also on the ground that there was no evidence of negligence:—Held, that the appeal must be allowed on the ground that the appellant had not voluntarily undertaken the risk, and that it was not competent to the house to enter into the question of negligence, as the point was not taken in the county court:—Held, also, that there was negligence in that the machinery was not reasonably fit for its purpose, and no special warning was supplied to the men imperilled by the operation. Smith v. Baker, 60 L. J., Q. B. 683; [1891] A. C. 325; 65 L. T. 467; 40 W. R. 392; 55 J. P. 660—H. L. (E.)

A person who relies on the maxim volenti non fit injuria must show a consent to the particular thing done, though such consent may be inferred from the course of conduct as well as expressed in terms; but mere knowledge of a risk does not necessarily involve consent. A negligent system or a negligent mode of using perfectly sound machinery may make the employer liable, quite apart from the Employers' Liability Act. Ib.

The maxim volenti non fit injuria explained and illustrated. Ib.

The contract between employer and employed involves on the part of the former the duty of taking reasonable care to provide proper appliances and to maintain them in a proper condition, and so to carry on his operations as not to subject those employed by him to unnecessary risk. Ib.

—— Breach of Statutory Duty.]—The plaintiff's husband had been employed in the defendant's coal mine. One of the rules established in the mine under s. 52 of the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1872, required a banksman to be constantly present while the men were going up or down the shaft; but it was the regular practice of the mine, as the plaintiff's husband well knew, not to have a banksman in attendance during the night. The plaintiff's husband was killed in coming out of the mine at night by an accident arising through the absence of a banksman. In an action under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880:—Held, that the defence arising from the maxim volenti non fit injuria was not applicable in cases where the injury arose from the breach of a statutory duty on the part of the employer, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Thomas v. Quartermaine (supra) discussed. Baddeley v. Granville (Earl), 56 L. J., Q. B. 501; 19 Q. B. D. 423; 57 L. T. 268; 36 W. R. 63; 51 J. P. 822. See also Church v. Appleby, supra, col. 873.

g. Contracting Out.

Contract not to claim Compensation—Widow bound by.]—It is competent to a workman to contract with his employer not to claim compensation for personal injuries under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880. By s. 1 of the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, where personal injury is caused to a workman in certain specified cases, the workman, or in case the injury results in death, his legal personal representatives, and any person entitled in case of death, "shall have the same right of compensation and remedies against the employer as if the workman had not been a workman of, nor in the service of, the employer, nor engaged in his work." A workman having contracted with his employer for himself and his representatives, and any person entitled in case of death, not to claim any compensation under the act for personal injury, whether resulting in death or not:—Held, that s. 1 only affected the contract of service so far as to negative the implication of an agreement by the workman to bear the risks of the employment, and therefore did not render the workman's express contract not to claim compensation invalid. Griffiths v. Dudley (Earl), 51 L. J., Q. B. 543; 9 Q. B. D. 357; 47 L. T. 10; 30 W. R. 797; 46 J. P. 711.

Held, also, that the contract was not against public policy, and that the workman's widow, suing for damages under Lord Campbell's Act, was bound by it. Ib.

h. Proceedings.

Reviewing Verdict of Jury.]—Upon an appeal from the judgment of a county court awarding compensation under the act, the high court is not entitled to consider whether the findings are such as the high court would have arrived at, but can only consider whether or not there was reasonable evidence to support them. Weblin v. Ballard, supra, col. 874.

Damages—"Earnings"—Tuition.]—In s. 3 of the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, the word "earnings" means money or things capable of being turned into money by accurate estimation, such as rent, food, and clothes; but it does not include a thing so vague as tuition which an apprentice receives from his master. Noel v. Redruth Foundry Co., 65 L. J., Q. B. 330; [1896] 1 Q. B. 453; 74 L. T. 196; 44 W. R. 407.

—— Limit of—Overtime Wages.]—The plaintiff, in an action brought under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, proved as damages loss of wages in respect both of his employment with the defendants, and also in respect of certain overtime labour under another employer. The jury awarded damages under both heads, but the county court judge held that the plaintiff was only entitled to receive damages in respect of his estimated earnings under the defendants. The amount of damages awarded was less than the amount he might have been awarded in respect of his estimated earnings for three years in the defendants' service:—Held, that s. 3 of the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, does not give a measure of damages, but only a limit within which the jury may award damages, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover in respect of both employments. Borlick or Bortick v. Head, 53 L. T. 909; 34 W. R. 102; 50 J. P. 327.

3. Acts of Fellow-Servants.

Immunity.]—A master is not in general liable to his servant for damage resulting from the negligence of a fellow-servant, in the course of their common employment. Wigmore v. Jay, 5 Ex. 354; 19 L. J., Ex. 300; 14 Jur. 837. S. P., Hutchinson v. York, Newcastle, and Berwick Ry. Co., 6 Railw. Cas. 580; 5 Ex. 343; 19 L. J., Ex. 296.

A servant has no right of action against his master for injury done to him in the course of his employ by the acts of his fellow-servants; and if killed, no action can be maintained by his representative. Vose v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Ry., 2 H. & N. 728; 27 L. J., Ex. 249; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 364; 6 W. R. 295.

Competency of Servant.]—A master is not responsible to one servant for an injury occasioned to him by the negligence of a fellow-servant whilst they are acting in one common service; but this rule does not hold where the person doing the injury is not a person of ordinary skill and care. Wiggett v. Fox, 11 Ex. 832; 25 L. J., Ex. 188; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 955; 4 W. R. 254.

Certain persons, having contracted with the Crystal Palace Company to build a tower there employed a sub-contractor to do the earthwork, who employed workmen under him. While one of these was at his work at the foot of the tower, a workman, employed by the contractors to work at the top of it, negligently let fall a heavy substance upon him, whereby he was killed:—Held, that in the absence of proof that the workman who caused the death was not a person of ordinary skill and care, no action could be maintained against the contractors by the personal representatives of the person killed. Ib.

A master is not generally responsible for an injury to a servant from the negligence of a fellow-servant, but the rule is subject to this qualification, that the master uses reasonable care in the selection of the servant. Tarrant v. Webb, 18 C. B. 797; 25 L. J., C. P. 261; 4 W. R. 640.

He is not bound to warrant the competency of his servants; and in an action against him for an injury done by one of his servants to another, the question for the jury is, not whether the servant was incompetent, but whether the master did not exercise due care in employing him. Ib.

If in the selection of the servant who caused the injury the master has not taken reasonable care to choose a person of ordinary skill and care, or if the servant injured was not at the time of the injury acting in the service of his master, the master is liable. Wigmore v. Jay, 5 Ex. 354; 19 L. J., Ex. 300; 14 Jur. 837.

Where workmen are engaged in a common work, and an injury happens to one of them through the negligence of another engaged in the same work, the master is not responsible unless the servant causing the injury was incompetent to discharge his duty. Barton's Hill Coal Co. v. Reid, 3 Macq. H. L. 266; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 767; 6 W. R. 664.

—— Onus of Proof.]—The deceased was employed, with others, to shift a cargo on the defendants' vessel. Upon going on board the names of the men employed were taken down by one of the officers, who told them to go down between decks to have supper. In going below it was necessary to pass round an open hatchway, which was insufficiently lighted, and the passage round which was obstructed by some obstacles. The deceased, when returning from supper, fell through the open hatchway, and was killed:—Held, upon these facts, that, even assuming negligence, it was the negligence of a fellow-servant of the deceased, and that, as there was no evidence of the negligent employment by the defendants of the incompetent fellow-servant, the plaintiff suing for damages for the death of the deceased was rightly nonsuited. M'Carthy v. Bristol Shipowners' Co., 10 L. R., Ir. 384. S. P., Byrne v. Fennell, 10 L. R., Ir. 397, n.

It is not true, as a general proposition of law, that a negligent act or default on the part of a servant is in itself evidence of the incompetence of such servant. Upon the plea traversing negligence by the defendant, the defence that the injury complained of was caused by the negligence of a fellow servant is open. Ib.

Negligence of Fellow-Servant.]—Where servants are engaged in one common object, an injury sustained by one servant, in consequence of the negligence of another servant, does not give a right of action against the master. Waller v. S. E. Ry. Co., 2 H. & C. 102; 32 L. J., Ex. 205; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 501; 8 L. T. 325; 11 W. R. 731.

Where a servant of a railway company, who was proceeding in the discharge of his duty in a train belonging to the company, and guided by their servants, was killed by a collision between it and another of their trains guided by others of their servants:—Held, that no action was maintainable by his personal representative against the company, and that it made no difference in this respect whether the accident was occasioned by the negligence of the servants guiding the train in which the deceased was, or of those guiding the other train, or of both. Hutchinson v. York, Newcastle and Berwick Ry., 5 Ex. 343; 6 Railw. Cas. 580; 19 L. J., Ex. 296.

A company having begun sinking a shaft in their colliery, for which purpose they had fixed an engine near the mouth of the shaft, agreed with W. to do the sinking and excavating at a certain price per yard. W. to find all labour, the company to provide and place at the disposal of W. the necessary engine power, ropes and hoppets, with an engineer to work the engine (who was employed and paid by the company), the engine and engineer to be under the control of W. One of the men employed and paid by W., while working at the bottom of the shaft, was injured by the negligence of the engineer:—Held, that though the engineer remained the general servant of the company, yet being under the orders and control of W. at the time of the accident, he was acting as the servant of W., and not of the company, which was therefore not liable for his negligence. Rourke v. White Moss Colliery Co., 2 C. P. D. 205; 46 L. J., C. P. 283: 36 L. T. 49; 25 W. R. 263—C. A.

A master is not responsible for an injury occasioned to a servant by tackle defective through the neglect of a fellow-servant, if there is no negligence or want of care on the part of the master, either as respects the providing of proper machinery or the competency of the servant. Searle v. Lindsay, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 429; 31 L. J., C. P. 106; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 746; 5 L. T. 427; 10 W. R. 89.

A workman employed with others in sinking a pit, being at the bottom, was injured by the fall of a tub of water, which was being drawn up by machinery. Evidence was given that the tackle was imperfect, not being pulled with a safe hook, and that a jiddy should have been used. He worked with the hook, making no complaint of it; a jiddy had been provided by the master, who had directed that it should be used when earth was raised. In his master's presence he had complained that the jiddy was not used for water:—Held, that the master was not liable, because assuming the injury to have arisen from neglect to use the jiddy, the master, having provided a proper apparatus, was not liable for the neglect of the fellow-workmen in omitting to use it. Griffiths v. Gidlow, 3 H. & N. 648; 27 L. J., Ex. 404.

Plaintiff was employed by defendant to work at a steam saw. It was necessary that he should have an assistant in the performance of his work, and M., defendant's foreman, engaged a boy for this purpose, who proved to be incompetent, and who, although plaintiff complained to M. of his incompetency, was retained in his service. It was M.'s duty as foreman to engage or discharge the person employed for the purpose of assisting plaintiff. An accident happened to plaintiff while working at the saw through the incompetence of the boy, and he brought his action against defendant. Held, that in the absence of any evidence to shew that M. was incompetent for the position of foreman, the plaintiff could not recover; it being M.'s duty to engage and discharge the boy, his retaining him after knowing of his incompetence was merely an act of negligence by plaintiff's fellow-servant for which defendant was not responsible. Smith v. Howard, 22 L. T. 130.

A company had on its premises gates which were safe when open and wedged up, but liable to fall when closed. The attention of the manager had been directed to the unsafe condition of the gates, and orders had been given, but not carried out, to remedy this. A workman in the employ of the company passed through the gates when open, but on his return one of them was closed, and shortly afterwards, while he was working near the gates, they fell on and injured him. There was no evidence to shew how this happened, nor any evidence that the manager and other persons employed by the company were incompetent:—Held, that the company was not liable, as the plaintiff had not shewn that the persons employed by the company were incompetent, and the negligence, if any, which caused the accident was that of a fellow-workman. Allen v. New Gas Co., 45 L. J., Ex. 668; 1 Ex. D. 251; 34 L. T. 541.

—— Where Servant placed in Authority.]—To render a master liable for an injury to one in his employ, through the negligence of another person also in his employ, it must be shewn that the latter was placed by the master in such a position of trust and authority as to be fairly considered as his representative in the establishment. Murphy v. Smith, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 361; 12 L. T. 605.

In the absence of evidence to shew that the general traffic manager of a railway company occupies, towards the company, a position superior to that of fellow-servant with a milesman employed by the same company, they are to be taken to be fellow-servants, and the company is not liable for injuries caused to the milesman by the negligence of the traffic manager. Conway v. Belfast and Northern Counties Ry., Ir. R. 11, C. L. 345—Ex. Ch.

A servant cannot recover against his master for injuries sustained in his service from the negligence of the foreman or manager, whose lawful directions the servant was bound to obey. Feltham v. England, 7 B. & S. 676; 36 L. J., Q. B. 14; L. R. 2 Q. B. 33; 15 W. R. 151.

A person who is injured by the negligence of another's servant cannot be a fellow-servant with the servant whose negligence causes the injury, so as to exempt the master from liability, unless he is under the control and orders of the master. Swainson v. N. E. Ry., 47 L. J., Ex. 372; 3 Ex. D. 341; 38 L. T. 201; 26 W. R. 413—C. A.

The plaintiff was engaged as a scaffolder for the defendants, who were builders, and they employed a general manager of works, through whose negligence in not furnishing proper materials the plaintiff fell and was injured:—Held, that the defendants were not liable for the injuries to the plaintiff. Gallagher v. Piper, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 669; 33 L. J., C. P. 329; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 879; 10 L. T. 718; 12 W. R. 988.

Common Employment, what is—Generally.]—When two persons are working for the same master for a common general object, there is no liability upon the master to answer to either of them for damage resulting from the negligence of the other, although the actual piece of work on which they are engaged is not the same. Charles v. Taylor, 3 C. P. D. 492 ; 38 L. T. 773 ; 27 W. R. 32—C. A.

Where servants are engaged in a common employment, and with a common object, injury sustained by one servant in consequence of the negligence of a fellow-servant gives no right of action against the master, although the servants are not engaged in effecting the same common immediate object, but are occupied in different departments of duty. Morgan v. Vale of Neath Ry., 5 B. & S. 736 ; 35 L. J., Q. B. 23 ; L. R. 1 Q. B. 149 ; 13 L. T. 564 ; 14 W. R. 144—Ex. Ch.

To constitute fellow-labourers within the meaning of the doctrine which protects the master from responsibility for injuries sustained by one servant through the wrongful act or carelessness of another, it is not necessary that the servant causing and the servant sustaining the injury should both be engaged in precisely the same, or even similar acts. Thus, the driver and guard of a stage-coach, the steersman and rowers of a boat, the man who draws the red-hot iron from the forge and those who hammer it into shape, the engine-man and the switcher, the man who lets the miners down into and who afterwards brings them up from the mine, and the miners themselves ; all these are fellow-labourers or collaborateurs within the meaning of the doctrine in question. Barton's Hill Coal Co. v. Reid, 3 Macq. H. L. 266 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 767 ; 6 W. R. 664.

In an action to recover damages for injury caused by the negligence of the defendant's servant, the defence of common employment is not applicable unless the injured person and the servant whose negligence caused the injury were not only engaged in a common employment but were in the service of a common master. Johnson v. Lindsay, 61 L. J., Q. B. 90 ; [1891] A. C. 371 ; 65 L. T. 97 ; 40 W. R. 405 ; 55 J. P. 644—H. L. (E.)

The rule, that a master is not liable to a servant for injuries sustained from the negligence of a fellow-servant in their common employment, is not altered by the fact that the servant guilty of negligence is a servant of superior authority, whose lawful directions the other is bound to obey. Feltham v. England, 7 B. & S. 676 ; 36 L. J., Q. B. 14 ; L. R. 2 Q. B. 33 ; 15 W. R. 151.

—— In Particular Cases.]—The plaintiff was employed to work in a mine of the defendants. The defendants employed an underlooker, whose duty it was to see that the roof of the mine was propped as required when the mineral was withdrawn. The underlooker omitted to see that the roof was propped, and thereby a stone fell and injured the plaintiff :—Held, that the underlooker was a fellow-servant of the plaintiff, and that as there was no evidence to shew that the defendants were negligent in selecting a proper underlooker, or in putting the mine in proper order, the defendants were not liable. Hall v. Johnson, 3 H. & C. 589 ; 34 L. J., Ex. 222 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 80 ; 11 L. T. 779 ; 13 W. R. 411—Ex. Ch.

Where a workman in the employ of one railway company was engaged in repairing their carriages upon a siding belonging to another company, but in the joint occupation of both companies, and he was placed between carriages, so that he could not see what might be coming, and was necessarily making a noise at his work so that he could not hear, and an engine belonging to the other company came up into the siding, and drove the carriages together, so that he was crushed between them and killed, and the jury found that the company to whom the engine belonged was guilty of negligence, by reason that their rails were defective, and that neither the deceased was nor his fellow-servants were so :—Held, that his representatives could maintain an action against that company for compensation. Vose v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Ry., 2 H. & N. 728 ; 27 L. J., Ex. 249 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 364 ; 6 W. R. 295.

The defendants were brewers, having upon the Thames a wharf, where coals were discharged to be used in their business. The plaintiff was hired by A., to assist in unloading a barge at the wharf of the defendants. The plaintiff and A., with other men, formed a gang, the members of which were paid by the defendants at the rate of 1*s.* 9*d.* for every ton of coals discharged ; one of the men was to receive from the defendants the money due for unloading the barge and to distribute payment amongst them ; the defendants alone had power to dismiss the plaintiff. Whilst the plaintiff was engaged in unloading the barge, a servant of the defendants, who was engaged in moving some barrels, negligently let one of them slip upon an upraised flap, which fell and caused the plaintiff injury. The plaintiff had frequently been at the spot when the barrels were being moved :—Held, that the defendants were not liable to compensate the plaintiff for the injury sustained by him ; for A. held the position of a foreman and not of a contractor, and the plaintiff was servant to the defendants, and he was engaged in a common employment with the servant by whose negligence the injury happened, and there was no concealed danger. Charles v. Taylor, 3 C. P. D. 492 ; 38 L. T. 773 ; 27 W. R. 32.

The guard of a train and the platelayers, whose duty it is to attend to the rails over which the train passes, are engaged in one common object, the safe conduct and transit of the train, and therefore no action can be maintained against the company by the representative of a guard of a train killed by the train running off the line, in consequence of the neglect of the ganger of the platelayers to renew the decayed metals which fasten the chairs to the sleepers of the railway. Waller v. S. E. Ry., 2 H. & C. 102 ; 32 L. J., Ex. 205 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 501 ; 8 L. T. 325 ; 11 W. R. 731.

A labourer was employed to do ballasting for a railway company, and a fellow-servant was employed to lay tram-plates for the company, and whilst they were so employed, the labourer, through the negligence of the fellow-servant, was injured :—Held, that they were engaged in a common employment, and that the company was not liable for the damage. Lovegrove v. L. B. & S. C. Ry., 16 C. B. (N.S.) 669 ; 33 L. J., C. P. 329 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 879 ; 10 L. T. 718 ; 12 W. R. 988.

Whenever the employment of a railway servant is such as necessarily to bring the person accepting it into contact with the traffic of the line, risk of injury from the carelessness of those managing that traffic is one of the risks necessarily and naturally incident to such an employment; and in case the servant suffers injury from the carelessness of the servants managing the traffic, the company is not liable. Morgan v. Vale of Neath Ry., 5 B. & S. 736; 35 L. J., Q B. 23; L. R. 1 Q. B. 149; 13 L. T. 564; 14 W. R. 144—Ex. Ch.

A person was in the employment of a railway company as a carpenter, to do any carpenter's work for the general purposes of the company. He was standing on a scaffolding at work on a shed close to the line of railway, and some porters in the service of the company carelessly shifted an engine on a turn-table so that it struck a ladder supporting the scaffold, by which means he was thrown down and injured:—Held, on the above principle, that the company was not liable. Ib.

A railway station, which was used both by the Great Western Company and the London and North Western Company, was under the charge of a servant of the London and North Western Company. A train belonging to the Great Western Company, and driven by one of their drivers, having been improperly and negligently shunted into a siding, injured a servant of the London and North Western Company, who was there engaged in cleaning carriages:—Held, that the injury was caused by the negligence of the driver in the discharge of his ordinary duty to the Great Western Company alone, and not in the course of any common employment with the plaintiff; and that, therefore, he could maintain an action for damages against the Great Western Company. Warburton v. G. W. Ry., 4 H. & C. 695; 36 L. J., Ex. 9; L. R. 2 Ex. 30; 15 L. T. 361; 15 W. R. 108.

B. was employed by a railway company as a labourer, to assist in loading what is called a pick-up train with materials left by platelayers and others upon the lines. One of the terms of his engagement was, that he should be carried by the train from Birmingham (where he resided, and whence the train started) to the spot at which his work for the day was to be done, and be brought back to Birmingham at the end of each day. As he was returning to Birmingham, after his day's work was done, the train in which B. was, through the negligence of the guard who had charge of it, came into collision with another train, and he was injured:—Held, that inasmuch as he was being carried, not as a passenger, but in the course of his contract of service, there was nothing to take the case out of the ordinary rule, which exempts a master from responsibility for an injury to a servant through the negligence of a fellow-servant, when both are acting in pursuance of a common employment. Tunney v. Midland Ry., L. R. 1 C. P. 291; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 691.

A railway company employed a contractor to unload their coal trucks at shoots on sidings constructed for the purpose. The contractor employed his own labourers, among whom was the plaintiff, whom he engaged and paid, and over whom he had entire control. The plaintiff, while engaged in the work, was injured by the negligent shunting of an engine managed by the servants of the company which was bringing coal trucks on to the sidings to the shoots:—Held, that there was no such common employment between the plaintiff and the shunter as would disentitle the former from bringing an action against the company for the negligence of their servants. Turner v. G. E. Ry., 33 L. T. 431.

In an action for negligence by the servants of the defendant in hauling timber so that it struck the plaintiff, who was passing at the time, the evidence being that the hauler was not in the defendant's general service, but was engaged for that particular piece of work, and brought his own horses for it; and that although it was being performed with the assistance of the defendant's workmen, and under the general superintendence of his foreman, the only mode in which the latter had interfered was by telling the men to make the horses go on dragging the timber, which, on their moving, casually swerved and so struck the plaintiff; Willes, J., directed a nonsuit, which the court only set aside because the point was not taken that both parties might be liable if there was evidence of negligence; but the court, doubting if there was any such evidence, and on a second trial the jury, under the direction of Channell, B., found for the defendant. Dalton v. Bachelor, 1 F. & F. 15.

Builders contracted to build a block of houses under a specification prepared by the owners' architect, certain fire-proof portions of the houses to be executed by the respondents, who were ironfounders. The respondents contracted with the architect to do their portion of the work, and had no contract with the builders and were not under their direction or control. While the respondents were carrying out their contract workmen employed by them in raising concrete to the upper storey of the building negligently let a bucket fall on the appellant, who was working in the lower storey in the employment of the builders. In respect of the injury thus caused the appellant brought an action against the respondents:—Held, that since the relation of master and servant did not exist between the respondents and the appellant the doctrine of collaborateurs did not apply and the action was maintainable. Wiggett v. Fox (11 Ex. 832) commented on. Lord Cairns' observations in Wilson v. Merry (L. R. 1 H. L. (Sc.) 331, 332) (ante, col. 860) explained. Johnson v. Lindsay, 16 L. J., Q. B. 90; [1891] A. C. 371; 65 L. T. 97; 40 W. R. 405; 55 J. P. 644—H. L. (E.)

The master of a ship is engaged in common employment with the seamen on board, and, therefore (the case not being within the Employers' Liability Act), the owner of the vessel is not liable for injury caused to a seaman through the master's negligence. Wilson v. Merry (L. R. 1 H. L. (Sc.) 326) followed. Johnson v. Lindsay ([1891] A. C. 371) approved. Hedley v. Pinkney & Sons' Steamship Co., 63 L. J., Q. B. 419; [1894] A. C. 222; 6 R. 106; 70 L. T. 630; 42 W. R. 497; 7 Asp. M. C. 483—H. L. (E.)

Where a shipping company employ a contractor to unload their ship, and appoint certain of the crew to assist in the unlading, it is a question of fact whether members of the crew were under the orders and control of the contractor's foreman or not, and whether, therefore, the company are liable to one of the contractor's workmen, who receives injuries through the negligence of such members of the crew. Union Steamship Co. v. Claridge, 63 L. J., P. C. 56; [1894] A. C. 185; 6 R. 434; 70 L. T. 177; 7 Asp. M. C. 412; 58 J. P. 366—P. C.

Where two vessels come into collision with each other, belonging to the same owners and the same line, and frequent the same port and river in which the collision occurred, the master and crew of one vessel are not in a common employment with the master and crew of the other vessel. The Petrel, 62 L. J., P. 92 ; [1893] P. 230 ; 1 R. 651 ; 70 L. T. 417 ; 7 Asp. M. C. 434.

A firm of stevedores was employed by the master of a ship to discharge her cargo at a certain rate per ton. The ship was to supply the discharging gear, but the stevedores brought their own men to effect the discharge. The discharging gear had been fixed in an improper and negligent manner by the stevedores' foreman, and its being so fixed was the cause of injury to the plaintiff, a seaman employed on board the vessel. The placing of the plaintiff where he was working at the time of the accident was, in the circumstances, an act of negligence :—Held, that the stevedores were liable for the injury to the plaintiff caused through the negligence of their servants. Johnson v. Lindsay (supra) approved and followed. Cameron v. Nystrom, 62 L. J., P. C. 85 ; [1893] A. C. 308 ; 1 R. 362 ; 68 L. T. 772 ; 7 Asp. M. C. 320 ; 57 J. P. 550—P. C.

A stevedore contracted to load a ship and hired an engine from P., who sent his servant N. to work it. M., a servant of the stevedore, gave the signals to N., and by N.'s negligence a sack fell and killed M. The wages of M. were paid by P. :—Held, that N. was the servant of P., and that P. was liable to M.'s representatives for compensation. Moore v. Palmer, 51 J. P. 196—C. A.

The plaintiff, employed as foreman of a stevedore to unload a ship with the assistance of the crew, was injured by the negligence of one of the crew in the quasi-employment of the stevedore : —Held, that the shipowners were not liable. Manning v. Adams, 32 W. R. 430.

—— Ordinary Risks.]—The principle which exempts a master from liability to his servant for injury caused by the negligent act of a fellow-servant or fellow-workman, is, that the servant must be assumed to have contemplated and tacitly assented to encounter the ordinary risks incident to the service or employment, at the time of entering into the contract. Lovell v. Howell, 45 L. J., C. P. 387 ; 1 C. P. D. 161 ; 34 L. T. 183 ; 24 W. R. 672.

The plaintiff (who was a licensed waterman and lighterman) was in the employ at weekly wages of the defendant, a corn merchant and warehouse keeper ; his ordinary duty being to attend at the waterside of the premises every tide for about an hour and a half before and after high water, for the purpose of bringing barges to and from the wharf and there mooring and unmooring them. It was no part of his duty to load or unload the barges or to assist in any way in the work of the warehouse ; but it was his habit to go to the office on the land side of the warehouse for orders, or when sent for by the defendant's manager. There were two ways of going there, viz. by landing from his boat at stairs at the end of the street next adjoining the warehouse, or by stepping from the barges into and going through the warehouse and out by a door to the street. He usually went by this latter way. Being on the barges at a time when his actual duty did not require him to be there, he was sent for to the office, and was proceeding thither by his accustomed route, when, in passing out from the warehouse door to the street, he was knocked down and injured by a sack of grain which another of the defendant's men was in a negligent manner hoisting by means of a crane from a waggon :—Held, that this was an injury caused by the negligence of a fellow-workman, within the above-mentioned exception, and consequently that the master was not liable. Ib.

—— Persons assisting with Consent of Master.]—A railway company contracted to carry a heifer by train to Penrith station on their line. The plaintiff travelled by the same train, and on arriving at Penrith he, with the assent of the station-master, assisted to shunt the horse-box, in which the heifer was, in order to hasten delivery, and while so doing was injured by the servants of the company :—Held, that the company was liable. Wright v. L. & N. W. Ry., 45 L. J., Q. B. 570 ; 1 Q. B. D. 252 ; 33 L. T. 830—C. A.

—— Two Railway Companies using same Rails.]—At Leeds there are two railway stations adjoining one another, one belonging to the Great Northern Railway Company and the other to the North Eastern Railway Company. Part of the lines running into the two stations is used in common by the two companies for the interchange of traffic between the two lines. This part is under the management of a joint station staff in the employment of the Great Northern Railway Company. Half of the wages of the joint station staff is paid by the North Eastern to the Great Northern Railway Company. While S., a signalman on that staff, was employed in his ordinary duties, he was struck and killed by a passing engine of the North Eastern Railway Company, which at the time he was not engaged in signalling, through the negligence of the driver. In an action against the North Eastern Railway Company by his widow, under Lord Campbell's Act :—Held, that the deceased was not, at the time of his death, engaged in a common employment or service with the engine-driver so as to take away the liability of that company for the negligence of their servant ; and that the widow was entitled to recover. Swainson v. N. E. Ry., 47 L. J., Ex. 372 ; 3 Ex. D. 341 ; 38 L. T. 201 ; 26 W. R. 413—C. A.

—— Under Mines Regulation Act.] — The owners of a colliery within the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 76), appointed a certificated manager as required by s. 26. A miner employed in the colliery was killed by an explosion of fire-damp, the death being caused by the negligence of the manager : —Held, that the fact that the manager was appointed pursuant to the act did not put him in any different position from that which he would have held had he been simply appointed manager ; and that he was a fellow-servant with the deceased ; and that the owners were, therefore, not liable to his representatives for his death. Howells v. Landore Steel Co., 44 L. J., Q. B. 25 ; L. R. 10 Q. B. 62 ; 32 L. T. 19 ; 23 W. R. 335.

4. Master's Negligence.

Personal Interference.]—A master is responsible to his servant for an injury received in the course of his service, if it is shewn to have been occasioned by the personal negligence of the master. Such negligence may be brought home to the master, by shewing either his personal interference to be the cause of the accident, or that he negligently retained incompetent servants whose incompetency was the cause of the accident; but, in the absence of a special contract, the master is not liable for an accident not proved to have been occasioned by his personal negligence. Ormond v. Holland, El. Bl. & El. 102.

The principle that a servant sustaining an injury from the negligence of a fellow-servant while engaged in the common employment cannot recover in an action against the common master does not exempt from liability a master who himself takes part in the servant's work, and whilst so doing injures the servant through negligence. Ashworth v. Stanwix, 3 El. & El. 701; 30 L. J., Q. B. 183; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 467; 4 L. T. 85.

Employment of Agent or Foreman.]—A workman cannot recover damages from his employers for injury sustained by him while at work in their mill, and resulting from the building having been originally negligently constructed, unless personal negligence is proved against his employers themselves (or against some person acting by their orders), either in having given directions how the building should be constructed, or in having knowingly entrusted the execution of the work to an incompetent person. Brown v. Accrington Cotton Spinning and Manufacturing Co., 3 H. & C. 511; 34 L. J., Ex. 208; 13 L. T. 94.

A master builder, having contracted to build a certain building, employed A. as a bricklayer. The scaffolding was erected under the superintendence of the master's foreman, he not being present, and was constructed by men in his employ, who used an unsound ledger pole, in consequence of which the scaffold broke while A. was at work upon it, and he was thrown to the ground and killed. The unsoundness of the pole had been previously pointed out to the foreman:—Held, that no action could be maintained against the master builder, there being no evidence that the foreman was an improper person to employ for that purpose. Wigmore v. Jay, 5 Ex. 354; 19 L. J., Ex. 296; 14 Jur. 837. And see Ormond v. Holland, supra.

Master's Knowledge of Risk.]—A master cannot be rendered liable on the ground of negligence by shewing that the work was essential to the safety of a ship on which the servant was employed by the master, and that he permitted the ship to leave port without its being done, and without having on board a skilled machinist to do it, and that it was outside the scope of the servant's employment, and that he was unfit to do it, unless it is also shewn that the work was dangerous, and that the master knew or ought to know that it was so. Smyly v. Glasgow and Londonderry Steam Packet Co., 16 W. R. 483.

In an action by a widow of a labouring man, who had been employed, with others, by the defendant, to shore up an arch, which had sunk, and was killed by its falling upon him:—Held, that the question was not as to the original construction of the arch, but as to the knowledge of the danger at the time of the accident, and whether the defendant had any better means of knowing of it than the deceased; and if not, then the jury should find for the defendant. Ogden v. Rummens, 3 F. & F. 751.

Where a master builder personally interferes, and directs his workmen to make a scaffolding out of poles which he knows to be unsound, he is liable to make compensation if the scaffolding gives way, and a workman upon it, in his employ, who has notice of the unsoundness, is injured thereby. Roberts v. Smith, 2 H. & N. 213; 26 L. J., Ex. 319; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 469; 5 W. R. 581—Ex. Ch.

A master builder, being engaged to repair a house, employed one of his workmen, A., to erect the scaffolding for that purpose. A. knew how to build scaffoldings. The materials which were supplied to him by the builder were in bad condition. The workmen broke several of the putlogs (the pieces of wood between the wall and the upright poles), but was ordered by the builder not to break any more, as they would do very well. The scaffolding having been erected by A. of the materials which were furnished to him, an accident happened to another workman, B., in consequence of the bad condition of the putlogs:—Held, in an action by B. against the builder, to recover compensation for the injuries received, that there was evidence to go to the jury in support of B.'s case, and that such evidence ought to have been left to the jury. Ib.

A declaration stated that the defendant was possessed of a granary, and a ladder leading up to it; that the ladder was wholly unfit and unsafe for use; that the plaintiff was a servant for hire of the defendant; that the defendant, knowing the premises, wrongfully and deceitfully ordered the plaintiff to carry corn up the ladder into the granary; that the plaintiff, believing the ladder to be fit for use, and not knowing the contrary, did carry corn up the ladder into the granary, and by reason of the ladder being unsafe he fell from it:—Held, that the declaration, without an averment that the plaintiff had no notice that the ladder was unsafe, was sufficient. Williams v. Clough, 3 H. & N. 258; 27 L. J., Ex. 325.

The plaintiff was employed by the defendant to oil dangerous machinery. At the time the plaintiff entered upon the service the machinery was fenced, but the fencing became broken by accident. The plaintiff complained of the dangerous state of the machinery, and the defendant promised him that the fencing should be restored. The plaintiff, without any negligence on his part, was severely injured in consequence of the machinery remaining unfenced:—Held, that the defendant was liable for the injury. Clarke v. Holmes, 7 H. & N. 937; 31 L. J., Ex. 356; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 992; 10 W. R. 405—Ex. Ch.

Where a master of a coal-mine authorised his workmen to use the shaft while it was in an unsafe condition to his knowledge, and an injury resulted therefrom to one of the workmen who was using the shaft without knowledge of the danger:—Held, that the master was liable for personal negligence. Mellors v. Shaw, 1 B. & S. 437; 30 L. J., Q. B. 333; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 845; 9 W. R. 748.

Held, also, that where one of two partners in a coal-mine acts as manager, and is guilty of personal negligence, his co-partner is jointly liable for the injury resulting from such negligence. Ib.

Where an employer, the owner of premises, allows them to remain and be used for the purpose for which they were erected and designed in a state unsafe and insufficient for that purpose, and an accident occurs in the use of them, not through the particular manner of user, but by reason of such unsafe and insufficient state, he is liable for any injury thus caused to his servants using them. Thus where an engineer had a crane worked on a tramway, supported on piers of brickwork, which were of insufficient strength, and which gave way, and thus caused an accident to one of the men engaged in working the crane :—Held, that there was evidence of negligence, for which the employer was liable. Feltham v. England, 4 F. & F. 460.

In an action by a labourer against his employers for an injury caused by the fall of a scaffold-pole proved to have fallen through the rottenness of the end put into the earth, it appeared that it had been in the earth two years, and that though some poles might last as long without being rotten, others would not, and that no one was employed from time to time to take up the poles to see if they were sound : —Held, that if the jury thought the pole was left in the ground an unreasonable time without examination, there was evidence of negligence to sustain the action. Webb v. Rennie, 4 F. & F. 608.

Where a cab proprietor sent out a restive horse, he was held liable for injuries resulting to driver. Fowler v. Lock, 30 L. T. 810—Ex. Ch.

A master is not liable to an action, at the suit of his servant, for an injury sustained by the latter caused by the breaking down of a carriage in which the servant was riding on his master's business, through a defect in the carriage of which the master was not aware. Priestly v. Fowler, 3 M. & W. 1 ; M. & H. 305 ; 7 L. J., Ex. 42 ; 1 Jur. 987.

A declaration stated that the plaintiff was a servant of the defendant in his trade of a butcher ; that the defendant desired and directed the plaintiff to go with and take goods of the defendant in a van of the defendant then used by him, and conducted by another of his servants, in carrying goods for him upon a certain journey ; that the plaintiff, in pursuance of such desire and direction, accordingly commenced and was proceeding and being carried and conveyed by the van with the goods : and it became the defendant's duty to use proper care that the van should be in a proper state of repair, and should not be overloaded, and that the plaintiff should be safely and securely carried thereby ; nevertheless, that the defendant did not use proper care that the van should not be overloaded, or that the plaintiff should be safely and securely carried, in consequence of the neglect of which duties the van gave way and broke down, and the plaintiff was thrown on the ground and his thigh fractured :—Held, first, that it was sufficiently to be collected from the declaration that the defendant directed the plaintiff to go in the van ; but, secondly, that, even in that case, the action was not maintainable. Ib.

—— Sufficiency of Allegations.]—A count alleged that one of the defendants was a contractor for the supply of beef to the navy, and the other his foreman, having the control and management of the supply of cattle, and of the slaughter of the same ; that it was the duty of the defendants to take care that sound and healthy beasts should be supplied and slaughtered, and that none others should be supplied for the purpose ; yet that they supplied and slaughtered diseased cattle, whereby the plaintiff, who was employed to cut up the carcases of the cattle, became infected with the disease of the cattle. A second count alleged, that the defendants, by representing slaughtered carcases of cattle to be sound, caused and procured the plaintiff to cut up the same ; that the beasts were unsound and diseased, whereby he contracted the disease and was permanently injured :—Held, that the counts were bad. Davies v. England, 33 L. J., Q. B. 321 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1235.

A third count stating that the defendants, well knowing that certain carcases of slaughtered cattle were diseased and dangerous to persons cutting up the same, invited and employed the plaintiff, who was ignorant of the diseased state of the carcases, to cut up the same ; that he, not knowing the premises, did, on the invitation and request, and on the employment of the defendants, cut up the carcases, whereby he became infected and was injured, is a good count. Ib.

5. Servant's own Negligence or Knowledge of Danger.

Knowledge of Danger—Contributory Negligence.]—When a servant is injured or killed, while in the employ of his master, by an accident resulting from the habitual negligence of his fellow-servants, known to and acquiesced in by the master, the master is not liable to an action by the servant, or, if killed, by his representative, if the servant has by his own negligence at the time, in knowing and disregarding the danger, materially contributed to the accident. Unless there is such contributory negligence by the servant, the master is liable. Senior v. Ward, 1 El. & El. 385 ; 28 L. J., Q. B. 139 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 172 ; 7 W. R. 261.

A., who was in the employ of a railway company, his duty being to attach carriages of the luggage trains to the locomotive engine, was thrown under the carriages, and severely injured. There was evidence that the company's staff for the performance of this work was not sufficient ; but A. had been employed in this particular service for several months prior to the accident, and had not made any complaint on the subject to the company :—Held, that the company was not liable. Skipp v. Eastern Counties Ry., 9 Ex. 223 ; 2 C. L. R. 185 ; 23 L. J., Ex. 23.

In such circumstances, it is not a question for the jury whether the number of servants employed by the company is sufficient for the performance of the work. Ib.

Where an injury happens to a servant while in the actual use of an instrument, an engine, or a machine, in the course of his employment, of the nature of which he is as much aware as his master, and the use of which is therefore the proximate cause of the injury, he cannot, at all events if the evidence is consistent with his own negligence in the use of it being the real cause, nor, in case of his dying from the injury, can his representative, recover against his master, there being no evidence that the injury arose through the personal negligence of his master ; nor is it any evidence of such personal negligence of the master that he has in use in his works an engine or a machine less safe than some other which is in general use. Dynen v. Leach, 26 L. J., Ex. 221 ; 5 W. R. 490.

Therefore, where a labourer was killed through the fall of a weight which he was raising by means of an engine to which he attached it by fastening on it a clip, and the clip had slipped off it:—Held, that there was no case to go to the jury in an action by his representative against the master, although it appeared that another and safer mode of raising the weight was usual, and had been discarded by the orders of the master. Ib.

A railway company employed a contractor to do work upon a side wall of a dark tunnel at a point where the line was on a curve, so that workmen could not see a train approaching till it was within twenty or thirty yards of them. The space between the rail and the wall was just sufficient for a workman to keep clear of a train if sensible of its approach. Trains passed the spot every ten minutes, and when a train passed on the further line the noise would prevent a workman from hearing the approach of a train upon the line nearest to him. There was no light at the spot in question; no one was stationed to give notice of an approaching train, nor was the speed of trains slackened on approaching the spot, nor was any signal given by whistling or otherwise. The plaintiff was a workman in the service of the contractor so employed, and had been working in the tunnel, though not at precisely the same spot, for a fortnight, when he was struck by a train while reaching across the rails to find a tool which he had laid upon the ground. The jury found that there was negligence on the part of the company in not providing a look-out man or altering the usual mode of conduct in the traffic:—Held, that the plaintiff, having continued the work with full knowledge of its dangerous nature, had no remedy against the company. Woodley v. Metropolitan Ry., 46 L. J., Ex. 521; 2 Ex. D. 384; 36 L. T. 419—C. A.

A workman, whose duty it was to attend to and work at a machine that was defective and of which defect he had knowledge, continued to work at the machine, notwithstanding the master's refusal to repair it when the defect was brought to his notice by the workman. In consequence of the defect the workman was obliged to stand upon the "bed" or plate of the machine to adjust a part of it, and whilst doing so received injuries:—Held, that the plaintiff's knowledge of the defect did not amount to that thorough comprehension of the risk incurred which alone would justify the case being withdrawn from the jury. Brooke v. Ramsden, 63 L. T. 287; 55 J. P. 262.

—— Risk not voluntarily incurred.]—The plaintiff was a workman, who was directed by his employer to work in a particular place. The defendants were contractors engaged in work above the place where the plaintiff was working. The defendants' work was of such a nature as to be dangerous to persons working below unless proper precautions were taken for their safety. The plaintiff was aware of the danger. The plaintiff, while working where he was directed by his employer, was injured by a piece of iron dropped by the defendants' workmen, and brought an action to recover damages for the injury. The jury found that the defendants had been guilty of negligence in not taking proper precautions for those below, that there was no contributory negligence on the part of the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff did not voluntarily incur the risk:—Held, that the case was rightly left to the jury; that although the plaintiff was aware of the danger, yet, as he was compelled by the orders of his employer to work where he was working when the accident happened, the maxim volenti non fit injuria did not apply, and he was entitled to recover. Woodley v. Metropolitan District Ry. (2 Ex. D. 384) distinguished. Thrussell v. Handyside, 57 L. J., Q. B. 347; 20 Q. B. D. 359; 58 L. T. 344; 52 J. P. 279.

See also cases supra, cols. 873, 874.

Complaint by Servant—Continuing Work.]—A declaration against a master alleged that he knowingly, carelessly, and negligently erected a hoarding in a street, and left a machine in a position in which it was likely to cause danger to the workmen, and that a cart accidentally ran against the hoarding, and knocked down the machine against the plaintiff. The hoarding, which had been erected by the defendant, a builder, projected too far into the street, but sufficient room was left for carts to pass; a heavy machine was placed inside the hoarding, and close to it. A cart in passing struck against the hoarding, and knocked down the machine against the plaintiff, a workman employed by the defendant. The plaintiff had previously made some complaint of the position of the machine to his master, but voluntarily continued to work, though the machine was not moved:—Held, that there was no evidence to go to the jury of the master's liability. Alsop v. Yates, 2 H. & N. 768; 27 L. J., Ex. 156

A workman employed with others in sinking a pit, being at the bottom, was injured by the fall of a tub of water, which was being drawn up by machinery. Evidence was given that the tackle was imperfect, not being pulled with a safe hook, and that a jiddy should have been used. He worked with the hook, making no complaint of it; a jiddy had been provided by the master, who had directed that it should be used when earth was raised. In his master's presence he had complained that the jiddy was not used for water. The master was at the workings several times each day:—Held, that the master was not liable, first, because, assuming the injury to have arisen from the defect of the hook, the workman himself voluntarily used it, and it was not shewn that the injury was not caused by his own rashness. Griffiths v. Gidlow, 3 H. & N. 648; 27 L. J., Ex. 404.

—— Expectation of Repair.]—When a servant, knowing of a defect in machinery which he has to work in his master's employ, complains of it to him, but continues in the use of it in the reasonable expectation of its being repaired, and an accident happens through its defective condition, he is not precluded from recovering against his master. Holmes v. Worthington, 2 F. & F. 533.

Where work is being carried on part of which is unsafe without certain precautions which the employer promises to provide, and he goes away leaving general directions to get on with the work, and in his absence the dangerous work is carried on before the precautions have been taken, and an injury results to a workman engaged on another part of the work while knowing of the danger, the latter cannot recover against the employer. Smith v. Dowell, 3 F. & F. 238. S. P., Holmes v. Clarke, post, col. 900.

Dangers Incidental to Employment.]—S. was a sheet-roller in the service of the defendants at their steel works, and had been so for three years. Five steam engines properly constructed were used in the factory. Some stood at a distance from the other, but two men only were employed to attend to them all, as S. always well knew. During the necessary absence of both the engine tenters, without negligence on their part, an engine ran away, or revolved too fast, and caused a drum connected with it to fly to pieces, one of which, passing through a yard, entered the mill where S. worked, and hurt him. The runaway engine might have been stopped in time to prevent mischief if an attendant had been near it:—Held, that S., being aware of the dangers incidental to his employment, contracted to take the risks, and therefore could not recover compensation for the injuries against the defendants. Saxton v. Hawksworth, 26 L. T. 851—Ex. Ch.

If a party, whether a servant or not, undertakes an employment which involves danger of accident, and an accident occur, he cannot sue his employer for damages, although such accident might have been avoided by additional care on the part of the master. Brooks v. Courtney, 20 L. T. 440.

Knowledge of Fellow-workman's Incompetence.]—In an action by a workman against his employer for negligence in the construction of scaffolding, the insecurity of which it was alleged was known to the defendant, but not to the plaintiff, the defendant simply traversed negligence; it appeared that the scaffolding was made by a fellow-workman, also in the employment of the defendant. The jury having found that the scaffolding was not constructed of unsound materials supplied by the defendant, and that he did not know that the materials were unsound; that the scaffolding was insecurely constructed, but that the defendant did not know it, and that the plaintiff did know it; that the fellow-workman was incompetent to make the scaffolding, but that the defendant was not aware of his incompetency; the judge, upon these findings, directed a verdict for the defendant:—Held, first, that the verdict so directed could not be upheld, inasmuch as the question whether the plaintiff knew that the scaffolding was insecure was not put in issue by the mere traverse of negligence; and, secondly, that the verdict should be set aside for misdirection and a new trial awarded, upon the ground that the question whether the defendant had used due care in the selection of the fellow-workman had not been submitted to the jury. Sherritt v. Scallan, Ir. R. 11 C. L. 389.

When it is shewn that a servant is incompetent, and that through his incompetency injury results to his fellow-servant, the mere fact of his incompetency throws the onus on the master of shewing that he exercised due and reasonable care in selecting him. Absence of knowledge of the fellow-servant's incompetency is not, per se, an answer to the action, the master's true obligation being to use due care in selecting the servant. Ib.

To an action by a servant against his employer for negligence in choosing a fellow-servant owing to whose incompetency he suffered an injury, it is not a sufficient answer that he previously to the injury, for a reasonable time in that behalf, was aware of the fellow-servant's incompetence. Hoey v. Dublin and Belfast Junction Ry., Ir. R. 5 C. L. 206; 18 W. R. 930.

Negligence on the part of the plaintiff would disentitle him to recover; but knowledge of the incompetence of the fellow-servant is only evidence of negligence on the plaintiff's part to be submitted to the jury. Ib.

Injury by Dog.]—C. owned a mischievous dog, which was kept at his stables under the care and control of his coachman, who knew the dog to be mischievous. C. supposed the dog to be quite harmless. B. having been bitten by the dog, and having brought an action for the injuries, the judge directed the jury that there was evidence of the scienter, since the knowledge of such a servant was enough to make the master liable:—Held, that the direction was right. Baldwin v. Casella, 41 L. J., Ex. 167; L. R. 7 Ex. 325; 26 L. T. 707; 21 W. R. 16.

The plaintiff was employed by the defendant as a dressmaker. It was no part of her duty to go down into the kitchen, but on one occasion she went there, at the request of the defendant, to fetch something up. As she was leaving the kitchen a savage dog, which was generally tied up, rushed from under the table and bit her leg. The plaintiff was aware that a dog of this kind was kept on the premises. The judge at the trial nonsuited the plaintiff, on the ground that, as she was a servant and knew the disposition of the dog, no action was maintainable:—Held, that the nonsuit was wrong, inasmuch as the risk was not incidental to the service, and that there was evidence to go to the jury of the liability of the defendant for the injury sustained by the plaintiff. Mansfield v. Baddeley, 34 L. T. 696.

Pleading—Allegation of Ignorance.]—In an action of negligence brought by a servant against his master for personal injury resulting from the unsafe state of the premises upon which the servant was employed, the statement of claim must allege not only that the master knew, but that the servant was ignorant of the danger. Griffiths v. London and St. Katharine Dock Co., 53 L. J., Q. B. 504; 13 Q. B. D. 259; 51 L. T. 533; 33 W. R. 35; 49 J. P. 100—C. A.

D. UNDER THE FACTORY ACTS.

1. Definition of Factory and Manufacturing Process.

Particular Department of Large Works.]—A company carried on works which formed one trade establishment, comprising the business of blast furnaces, iron rolling mills, engine-building, and iron ship building in all its branches. The whole of the several branches communicated and were open from one end to the other, and were confined within one common boundary. Steam machinery was used for the purposes of the company, and in each department more than fifty persons were employed. A child under eleven was employed as a rivet boy, and in the department where he worked steam machinery was in use for cutting and shaping iron plates, and rivets were heated. Both plates and rivets were used in the building of iron ships:—Held, that the department in which the child was employed was a factory within the 30 & 31 Vict. c. 103, sub-s. 5 (b) (repealed). Palmer's Shipbuilding and Iron Co. v. Chaytor, 10 B. & S. 177; 38 L. J., M. C. 63; L. R. 4 Q. B. 209; 19 L. T. 638; 17 W. R. 401.

Where no Large Building used.]—Premises, consisting of ten acres, in which the manufacture of cement from chalk and mud is carried on chiefly in the open air, and in which 200 people are employed in grinding and washing in mills, but in which there is no great building in which men and women are employed under cover, are not a factory within 30 & 31 Vict. c. 103 (repealed), s. 3, sub-s. 7. Redgrave v. Lee, 43 L. J., M. C. 105 ; L. R. 9 Q. B. 363 ; 30 L. T. 519 ; 22 W. R. 857.

—— Slate Quarry—Manufacturing Process.]—In a slate quarry, which was a large open space extending over about 400 acres, hundreds of men and boys were employed in getting large blocks of slate which were drawn to other parts of the quarry, and split with hammers and chisels into laminæ or slates ; these were edged square or dressed with an iron knife by hand into separate articles, and divided into quantities for sale. Tombstones, chimney-pieces, &c., were made out of the blocks, and ornamented according to order. A boy fourteen years old was employed with other boys in a shed on an open bank in shaping the slates. Covered sheds where the splitters worked were erected in different parts of the quarry :—Held, that the process of shaping the slate was a "manufacturing process" within 30 & 31 Vict. c. 103 (repealed), s. 3 ; and that the quarry was not a factory within s. 3, sub-s. 7 ; and that in respect of the making of the roofing slates it was not a "trade establishment." Kent v. Astley, 10 B. & S. 802 ; 39 L. J., M. C. 3 ; L. R. 5 Q. B. 19 ; 21 L. T. 425 ; 18 W. R. 185.

Finishing of Cotton Fabrics.]—One whose sole business consists in the finishing of cotton fabrics, but who neither bleaches nor dyes, is not within 23 & 24 Vict. c. 78. Howarth v. Coles, 12 C. B. (N.S.) 139 ; 31 L. J., M. C. 262 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 251 ; 6 L. T. 785.

Weaving of Cotton Thread.]—The weaving or plaiting by steam or other mechanical power of cotton thread into a covering for strips of steel to be used for making crinoline skirts is a manufacture or a process incidental to the manufacture of a cotton fabric within 7 & 8 Vict. c. 15, s. 73. Whymper v. Harney, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 243 ; 34 L. J., M. C. 113 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 269 ; 11 L. T. 711 ; 13 W. R. 440.

Business in Different Places.]—Parties carried on the business of calico printers at two places distant from each other seven miles. The business of a calico printer consists of four processes, viz. bleaching, printing (by impressing the pattern on the bleached cloth by means of mordants), dyeing, and finishing. Three of these processes, viz. the bleaching, dyeing, and finishing, were performed at one branch of the establishment, and the fourth, viz. the printing, at the other :—Held, that a child employed on the premises where the bleaching, dyeing, and finishing were performed, was employed in an incidental printing process within 8 & 9 Vict. c. 29, s. 2, and that the place where he was so employed formed part of the establishment where the chief process of printing was carried on within that act ; and, consequently, that the parties were not liable to be convicted of an offence against the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 78 in employing him without a schoolmaster's certificate. Hoyle v. Oram, 12 C. B. (N.S.) 124 ; 31 L. J., M. C. 213 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1154.

A factory used for the manufacture of waste cotton into half-stuff, which is afterwards conveyed to another factory to be converted into paper, is a factory used solely for the manufacture of paper within 7 & 8 Vict. c. 15, s. 73, and the distance between the two factories is immaterial. Coles v. Dickinson, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 604 ; 33 L. J., M. C. 235 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 802 ; 10 L. T. 616 ; 12 W. R. 918.

A. was a manufacturer of cotton sewing thread, and owner of a factory at M., and of premises in L. At the factory at M., he doubled cotton yarns into sewing thread, in hanks ready for the wholesale market ; for the retail dealers and small consumers, it was sent to the premises in L. in hanks, and there wound by machinery moved by steam power on to bobbins :—Held, that the winding at the premises in L. was within 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 103, s. 1, and 7 & 8 Vict. c. 15, s. 73, so as to render A. liable for not keeping a register of young persons employed in his factory in L., according to the form prescribed in schedule (B.) by 7 & 8 Vict. c. 15, s. 27. Haydon v. Taylor, 4 B. & S. 519 ; 33 L. J., M. C. 30 ; 9 L. T. 382 ; 12 W. R. 103.

2. Offences under the Acts.

Employment of Child—Room near to, but without Machinery.]—A child under thirteen was employed in a room in a building within the precincts of which there was a quantity of machinery moved by steam, and devoted to the manufacture of an article composed of wool and cotton mixed, but the child was not employed in any respect upon, or in attendance to, the machinery, nor was there any machinery in the room in which he was employed in pricking pieces of leather with an awl, to fit them for adaptation to form parts of the thing manufactured in the building :—Held, not to be a case within the exception in the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 103, and 7 & 8 Vict. c. 15, s. 73. Taylor v. Hickes, 12 C. B. (N.S.) 152 : 31 L. J., M. C. 242 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 21 ; 6 L. T. 784.

—— Cleaning Fixed Part of Machinery in Motion.]—By s. 9 of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1878, "a child shall not be allowed to clean any part of machinery in a factory while the same is in motion . . . ." :—Held, that the word "same" referred to machinery as a whole, whether fixed or in motion, and not merely to the part in motion ; so that to employ a child under fourteen to clean the fixed part of machinery was to infringe the act. Pearson v. Belgian Mills Co., 65 L. J., M. C. 48 ; [1896] 1 Q. B. 244 ; 74 L. T. 101 ; 44 W. R. 334 ; 18 Cox, C. C. 241 ; 60 J. P. 151.

—— In Print Work.]—A child employed in finishing goods in a shed in which finishing alone is carried on, but which communicates internally with other buildings in which printing is carried on, is employed in a print works within 8 & 9 Vict. c. 29, s. 2, whether the particular finishing is incidental to the process of printing or not ; and a surgeon's certificate of its health is therefore necessary under s. 20. Hardcastle v. Jones, 3 B. & S. 153 ; 32 L. J., M. C. 49 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 19 ; 7 L. T. 322 ; 11 W. R. 36.

—— For more than Ten Hours.]—It is no offence against 7 & 8 Vict. c. 15, to employ a young person or female for ten hours in any one day, such ten hours ending at a period which is more than ten hours (in addition to the hour and a half allowed for meal-times) from the period another child or young person or female began to work. Ryder v. Mills, 3 Ex. 853; 19 L. J., M. C. 82.

—— Substitution of other Days for Saturday Half-holiday.]—A half-holiday of equal length may, under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 146 (repealed), sched. 1, s. 9, by permission of the secretary of state, be substituted on some other day of the week for the half-holiday required by the act to be given on Saturday to children, young persons and women employed in workshops coming within the act. Permission having been given to substitute Wednesday for Saturday afternoon in a particular workshop, an information was preferred against the proprietor for employing a young person after two p.m. on Wednesday:—Held, that it could not be sustained. Cameron v. Foy, 30 L. T. 517.

—— Under Age.]—A child under eight years was sent to a workshop to be taught to make straw plait and to read: the child was kept in a room making straw plait under the owner or occupier of the workshop's superintendence. The straw was provided by the child's mother, and the plait was taken home to her, and she sold it. She paid the occupier 3*d.* a week, but he had no interest in the proceeds of the sale of the work:—Held, that he had committed the offence of employing a child under eight years of age, within 30 & 31 Vict. c. 146, ss. 6, 7 (repealed), as read by the aid of the interpretation clause. Beadon v. Parrott, 40 L. J., M. C. 200; L. R. 6 Q. B. 718; 19 W. R. 1144.

A person was the occupier of and rated for a brickyard, and had sole control over the sale of the bricks. He received a sum per annum for the use of the yard from a contractor, who gave his exclusive services in making bricks at a certain price per thousand; he also found the coal, but exercised no control over the management of the brickyard or of the manufacturing process, nor was he party or privy to any contract with any other person employed in the yard:—Held, that he was not liable, as an occupier of a workshop who has employed a child, for neglecting the provisions of s. 16 of the Workshops Regulation Act, 1867, 30 & 31 Vict. c. 146 (repealed), with respect to a child employed by the contractor. Fitton v. Wood, 32 L. T. 554.

Report of Accidents.]—By 7 & 8 Vict. c. 15, s. 22, if any accident shall occur in a factory which shall cause bodily injury to any person employed therein of such a nature as to prevent him from returning to his work in the factory before nine o'clock the following morning, the occupier of the factory shall, within twenty-four hours of such absence, send notice to the certifying surgeon of the district:—Held, first, that a returning to the factory before nine a.m. on the following morning without the capacity to work, and soon afterwards leaving, was not "returning to work" within the section. Lakeman v. Stephenson, 9 B. & S. 54; 37 L. J., M. C. 57; L. R. 3 Q. B. 192; 18 L. T. 539; 16 W. R. 509.

Held, secondly, that every accident causing bodily injury, whether connected with the machinery or not, is within the section. Ib.

Dangerous Machinery — Fencing.]— Sect. 5, sub-s. 3, of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1878, as amended by s. 6, sub-s. 2, of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1891, applies to all dangerous machinery in a factory without distinction. It is for the magistrate before whom a case arising under these acts is heard to decide as to the alleged dangerous nature of the machinery. Redgrave v. Lloyd, 64 L. J., M. C. 155; [1895] 1 Q. B. 876; 15 R. 403; 72 L. T. 565; 43 W. R. 527; 18 Cox, C. C. 149; 59 J. P. 293.

The provision in s. 5, sub-s. 3, of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1878 (as amended by s. 6, sub-s. 2, of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1891), that "all dangerous parts of the machinery" in a factory shall be securely fenced, applies to all machinery from which, in the ordinary course of working it, danger may reasonably be anticipated, although such danger may arise by reason only of careless working or of external causes. Birtwistle v. Hindle, 66 L. J., Q. B. 173; [1897] 1 Q. B. 192; 76 L. T. 159; 45 W. R. 207; 18 Cox, C. C. 508; 61 J. P. 70.

Workshop "Open for Traffic on Sunday"—Exception in favour of Jews.]—The appellant, who is of the Jewish religion, was the occupier of a workshop. He made arrangements with his customers to do certain work at certain prices upon certain articles sent to him. The workshop was closed on Saturday, and was open on Sunday in order that the articles might be sent to and fetched from his workshop in pursuance of such prior arrangements, and for no other purpose whatever:—Held, that the appellant did not keep his workshop "open for traffic on Sunday" within s. 51 of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1878. Goldstein v. Vaughan, 66 L. J. Q. B. 380; [1897] 1 Q. B. 549; 76 L. T. 262; 45 W. R. 399; 18 Cox, C. C. 523; 61 J. P. 277.

Attendance at School — By-Laws of School Board.]—A school board is not entitled to enforce the provisions of its by-laws, with regard to the hours of attendance of children at school, in the case of children employed in factories who are attending efficient elementary schools pursuant to the factory acts. The elementary education acts do not control the provisions of the factory acts regulating the education of children employed in accordance with those acts. Mellor v. Denham, 48 L. J., M. C. 113; 4 Q. B. D. 241; 40 L. T. 395; 27 W. R. 496.

A by-law made by a school board, with the approval of the education department, under the Elementary Education Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 75), s. 74, provided that all children in the district subject to the act should attend school for thirty hours a week. The justices refused to convict a father for neglecting to cause his son, between five and thirteen years of age, to attend school as required by that by-law, because the son was employed in a boot manufactory, and attending school more than ten hours a week, pursuant to the Workshops Regulation Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 146), s. 14:—Held, that this by-law was not contrary to the section of the Workshops Act, which requires every child who is employed in a workshop to attend school for at least ten hours a week; and that the father ought to have been convicted. Bury v. Cherrybohn, 1 Ex. D. 457; 35 L. T. 403.

Steam Whistle—Use of Compressed Air.]—L. formerly used a steam whistle directly connected with an engine boiler, but discontinued it and used other means to produce the same noise:—Held, that this was a steam whistle and required the consent of the sanitary authority under s. 2 of the Factories Steam Whistle Act, 1872. Herbert v. Leigh Mills Co., 53 J. P. 679.

3. Convictions.

Fine—Discretion of Justices.]—Where by s. 13 of the Cotton Cloth Factories Act, 1889, a fine of "not less than 5*l.* shall be imposed" for the first offence, which offence is to be dealt with by a court of summary jurisdiction, the general discretion to reduce fines given by s. 4 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, must be taken to be limited in this particular instance to that extent. Osborn v. Wood, 66 L. J., Q. B. 178; [1897] 1 Q. B. 197; 45 W. R. 319; 18 Cox, C. C. 494; 61 J. P. 118.

Appeal—Question of Fact—Engagement by Piece—Not supplying Particulars as to Rate of Wages.]—B., a woollen weaver by the piece, employed by N., had a card given to her with particulars as to rate of payment. The card was incorrect, though B. might have discovered the error by counting, or by applying to the manager of the machine. The justices convicted N. under s. 24 of the Factory Act, 1891:—Held, it being a question of fact, the court could not interfere with the conviction. Nussey v. Birtwhistle, 58 J. P. 735.

Removal.]—The 7 & 8 Vict. c. 15, s. 69, takes away certiorari in certain cases of conviction under the act:—Held, that a conviction cannot in such cases be removed on the suggestion that the party was convicted on summons of justices under s. 47, giving unreasonable short notice, and in the absence of himself, or any one appearing on his behalf, except an attorney authorised only to apply for an adjournment, and that the conviction took place without proof of service of summons, and without any evidence of the facts charged; such objections not going to the jurisdiction. Hopwood, Ex parte, 15 Q. B. 121; 4 New Sess. Cas. 174; 19 L. J., M. C. 197.

4. Liability to Actions.

Injuries from Machinery.]—In an action for an injury caused to a child by machinery in a factory, the declaration averred, that at the time of the accident the machinery was not securely fenced:—Held, that the declaration was insufficient, in not alleging that the machinery was in motion for a manufacturing process, no offence being committed under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 15, s. 21, unless the machinery at the time of the accident was in motion for a manufacturing process. Coe v. Platt, 7 Ex. 460; 21 L. J., Ex. 146; 16 Jur. 174—Ex. Ch. Affirming 2 L. M. & P. 488.

The machinery of a cotton factory was worked by a steam-engine, which drove a horizontal shaft, passing along the lower floor of the factory. This horizontal shaft moved several vertical shafts which passed through the upper floors, and worked the machinery by which the cotton was manufactured in the different rooms of the factory. One of these vertical shafts had its fencing removed for the purpose of repair, and all the machines which were worked by this shaft were at rest; but the vertical shaft itself revolved, and the process of manufacture continued to be carried on in the other rooms of the factory:—Held, that the master of the factory was not liable, under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 15, s. 21, for an accidental injury occasioned to a little girl, in the room where no manufacturing process was being carried on, by the revolution of the vertical shaft. Coe v. Platt, 7 Ex. 923; 22 L. J., Ex. 164.

—— Contributory Negligence.]—The 7 & 8 Vict. c. 15, s. 21, enacts, that all parts of a mill-gearing in a factory shall be securely fenced while in motion for any manufacturing process, and ss. 59 and 60 impose penalties for not fencing. A declaration against the occupier of a mill for compensation for injury sustained from a shaft, alleged a breach of duty by the defendant in not securely fencing the shaft, contrary to the statute. Plea, that the driving-strap, by which the plaintiff was entangled, was not in motion for any manufacturing process, but was at rest, and that he wilfully and wrongfully, contrary to the express command of the defendant, set in motion the strap, well knowing that it was dangerous, and contrary to the express command of the defendant, to meddle with it, and thereby the plaintiff received the injury:—Held, that, assuming the common-law right to bring an action for an injury occasioned by the alleged unlawful act, it was subject to the principle that the plaintiff did not by his own negligence or misconduct contribute to the injury, and therefore that the plea was an answer to the action. Caswell v. Worth, 5 El. & Bl. 849; 25 L. J., Q. B. 121; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 116; 4 W. R. 231.

The provisions in the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 15, ss. 24, 25, respecting the bringing actions under the authority of the secretary of state, in the name of any person injured by the machinery in a factory, do not take away the right of the party injured to sue for damages in person. Nor does the imposition of penalties in s. 60. Ib.

—— Improbability of Accident.]—Declaration for not securely fencing a shaft while in motion, contrary to 7 & 8 Vict. c. 15, s. 21, whereby the plaintiff was injured. A plea, that the shaft was not near to where children or young persons were liable to pass or be employed and was so placed and situated in the factory that there did not exist any liability to injury from the same as to require such fencing as in the declaration mentioned, whilst in motion, and that all such liability was sufficiently guarded against by such position and situation of the shaft, is a bad plea. Doel v. Sheppard, 5 El. & Bl. 856; 25 L. J., Q. B. 124; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 218; 4 W. R. 232.

—— Servant remaining with Machinery Unfenced.]—Where machinery is required by statute to be fenced, and a servant enters into the employment of the owner whilst it is protected, and continues in the service after the protection is removed by decay or otherwise, but complains of the danger, and is promised that the protection shall be restored, the master is liable for injury to the servant arising from the want of such protection. Holmes v. Clarke, 6 H. & N. 349; 30 L. J., Ex. 135; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 397; 3 L. T. 675; 9 W. R. 419. Affirmed 7 H. & N. 937; 9 L. T. 178; 10 W. R. 405—Ex. Ch.

The mill-gearing which under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 15, ss. 21, 73, and 19 & 20 Vict. c. 38, s. 4, must be

—— For Negligent Instruction by Foreman.]—The owners of dangerous machinery, who by their foreman employ a young person about it unacquainted with its nature and use, are bound to take due care that such person is duly instructed therein; and if they either neglect this, or if express directions are given by the foreman to use the machinery in a manner that must lead to danger, of which the young person is not likely to be fully aware, they are liable for any injury sustained by such person in the use of the machinery in that manner. Grizzle v. Frost, 3 F. & F. 622.

—— Right of Administratrix to Sue.]—A company for the manufacture of cotton employed a servant to grease the bearings between the fly-wheel and the spur-wheel of a steam-engine in their factory. The fly-wheel revolved in a wheel race parallel to a wall and on one side of it, and the spur-wheel revolved parallel on the other side. The extreme distance between the two wheels was two feet ten inches, and the wall was two feet three inches thick. In a hole made in this wall the servant stood or sat while he greased the bearings. The wheel race was one which ought to have been fenced or otherwise secured within 7 & 8 Vict. c. 15, s. 21 (repealed). The fly-wheel on the side next the wall and the edge of the wheel race on that side were not fenced. The servant having been at this work for five days, was found on the sixth lying dead on the bearings, and it was not disputed that he must have been caught and killed by the fly-wheel. His administratrix having brought an action, on behalf of herself and child, against the company for negligence in not fencing the wheel race as required by the statute:—Held, assuming that the deceased was not guilty of contributory negligence, either in undertaking the employment or conducting it, that the action was maintainable. Britton v. Great Western Cotton Co., 41 L. J., Ex. 99; L. R. 7 Ex. 130; 27 L. T. 125; 20 W. R. 525.

E. UNDER THE EMPLOYERS AND WORKMEN ACT.

1. Summary Jurisdiction of Justices—Generally.

a. Applicable to what Servant.

Agricultural.]—The 20 Geo. 2, c. 19, extends to labourers of all descriptions, and not merely in the particular trades or businesses there enumerated; and consequently, includes wages earned by a labourer who contracted to dig and stein a well for cattle, to be paid for by the foot, and who employed another to assist him in the work. Lowther v. Radnor (Earl), 8 East, 113.

Upon a rule calling upon justices to issue their warrant of distress to enforce an order made by two justices for the payment of wages to H., it appeared that she was hired to serve at a farm for a year as a dairy-maid, and to assist in the harvesting of the hay and corn, if required, and, according to the affidavit of the master, as a servant of all work necessary to be done in housekeeping, and to cook for the servants and labourers, and make their beds, and also to attend upon him and his family on their occasional visits to the farm, their residence being two miles off:—Held, that there was evidence from which the justices might find that H. was a servant in husbandry, within 20 Geo. 2, c. 19; and therefore the court made the rule absolute. Hughes, Ex parte, 2 C. L. R. 1542; 23 L. J., M. C. 138; 18 Jur. 447; 2 W. R. 465.

A. contracted with B. to keep the general accounts belonging to his farm, to weigh out food for cattle, and set the men to work, to lend a hand to anything if wanted, and especially at all times to carry out the orders of B. He was convicted, for refusing to obey the order of B. to go through the whole of the cattle stock under his charge:—Held, that he was not a servant in husbandry within 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, s. 3. Davies v. Berwick (Lord), 3 El. & El. 549; 30 L. J., M. C. 84; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 410; 3 L. T. 697; 9 W. R. 334.

Domestic.]—A magistrate has no authority by 6 Geo. 3, c. 25, s. 4, to determine disputes between domestic servants and their masters, relative to their contracts of hiring. Kitchen v. Shaw, 1 N. & P. 791; 6 A. & E. 729; W. W. & D. 278; 7 L. J., M. C. 14.

Manufacturing.]—A contract to weave certain goods at the house of the weaver is not a contract to serve within 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, s. 3, so as to give jurisdiction to a magistrate to commit the weaver, for neglecting his work after commencing upon the same. Hardy v. Ryle, 4 M. & Ry. 295; 9 B. & C. 603; 7 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 118.

The summary jurisdiction given to justices by the 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, s. 3, extends only to cases where the relation of master and servant exists; and, therefore, where A. had contracted with B. to build a wall for a certain price, within a certain time, and having performed part of the work, refused to complete it:—Held, not to be within the statute. Lancaster v. Greaves, 9 B. & C. 628; 7 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 116.

So a contract "to print certain pieces of woollen cotton goods," is not within 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, s. 3, and consequently a breach of such contract is not punishable under that statute. Johnson, Ex parte, 7 D. P. C. 702; 3 Jur. 481.

But a contract to serve H. & Co., calico printers, as a designer for a term of years, is an employment within 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, s. 3. Ormerod, Ex parte, 1 D. & L. 825; 1 New Sess. Cas. 38; 13 L. J., M. C. 73; 8 Jur. 495.

By agreement in writing, A. agreed to serve B. and C., potters, as a biscuit-oven placer, at daily wages for twelve months. By another agreement of the same date, R. agreed to serve B. and C. for the same period as a biscuit-oven fireman, to be paid by piece-work, he paying A. wages out of what he earned:—Held, that the relation of master and servant subsisted between B. and C. and A., notwithstanding his wages were paid by R., and consequently that he was properly convicted for absenting himself from B. and C.'s service. Willett v. Boote, 6 H. & N. 26; 30 L. J., M. C. 6; 3 L. T. 276.

An iron-shipbuilder contracted in writing with six skilled handicraftsmen to plate a vessel; they agreed exclusively to serve him subject to the rules and regulations of the yard, and to execute the whole of the skilled and unskilled labour requisite to complete the entire hull of the vessel, of the best workmanship, and to the entire satisfaction of their employer (they employing and paying such skilled and unskilled assistants as might be requisite to complete the vessel with all dispatch), and to be paid 5*l.* per ton for the work so done by them :—Held, that the contracting parties were handicraftsmen or artificers within 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, s. 3. Lawrence v. Todd, 14 C. B. (N.S.) 554 ; 32 L. J., M. C. 238 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 179 ; 8 L. T. 505 ; 11 W. R. 835.

So a person working manually at weekly wages and a commission, and superintending other workmen, is an artificer. Whiteley v. Armitage, 13 W. R. 144.

A journeyman tailor was employed to do any particular piece of work his master might set him upon. There was no contract to serve for any specific time, but he was to work exclusively for the master upon his premises till he had finished any particular job which he had undertaken. He was convicted by a justice for neglecting to go on with the making of a waistcoat which he had in hand :—Held, that such employment created the relation of master and servant, and the justice had jurisdiction to convict. Gordon, Ex parte, 25 L. J., M. C. 12 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 683 ; 3 W. R. 568.

—— "Workman."]—By the Employers and Workmen Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 90), s. 4, "a dispute under this act, between an employer and a workman may be heard and determined by a court of summary jurisdiction, and such court, for the purposes of this act, shall be deemed to be a court of civil jurisdiction" limited to 10*l.* By s. 10, "In this act the expression 'workman,' . . . means any person who, being a labourer, servant in husbandry, journeyman, artificer, handicraftsman, miner, or otherwise engaged in manual labour, . . . has entered into works under a contract with an employer, whether the contract be . . . a contract of service or a contract personally to execute any work or labour." The expression "court of summary jurisdiction" means (inter alia) a stipendiary magistrate :—Held, that a potter's printer, under a contract with his employers to do work in which he was assisted by "transferers," whom he himself engaged and paid, was a "workman" within the act, and liable in proceedings before a magistrate to pay damages for a breach of his contract with his employers, caused by his transferer's refusal to do the work, although he was ready and willing to do it. Grainger v. Aynsley, Bromley v. Tams, 50 L. J., M. C. 48 ; 6 Q. B. D. 182 ; 43 L. T. 608 ; 29 W. R. 242 ; 45 J. P. 142. See further cases, ante, cols. 860, et seq.

Bailiff.]—Where a person employed by an attorney to keep possession of goods seized under a fi. fa. made complaint to a magistrate that he could not obtain payment for his services, and the magistrate having summoned the attorney, and heard the complaint, proceeded under 20 Geo. 2, c. 19, and made an order upon the attorney for payment of a certain sum, which was afterwards levied on his goods :—Held, that the magistrate was liable to an action of trespass, for that the service performed was not of such a nature as to give him jurisdiction under the 20 Geo. 2, c. 19. Bramwell v. Pennock, 1 M. & Ry. 409 ; 7 B. & C. 536 ; 6 L. J. (O.S.) M.C. 47.

Under Special Contract—Mutuality.]—By an agreement between W. and B., on behalf of himself and his partners, constituting a coal company, W., in consideration of wages to be paid to him fortnightly by the company, contracted to serve them faithfully and exclusively as their servant as a collier, and not to quit the service of the company without twenty-eight days' notice ; and in consideration of such faithful service, and of the proper performance of the stipulations therein mentioned, the company agreed that W. should not be discharged without twenty-eight days' notice in writing. An information was afterwards laid, under 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, s. 3, by F., "agent to B. and his partners," alleging the contract to be with "B. and his partners" :—Held, first, that the contract, although the amount of wages was not thereby expressly and definitely fixed, was not void for want of mutuality, but was to be understood, by necessary implication, as binding upon the employers to find work and pay wages, after a reasonable rate, fortnightly. Whittle v. Frankland, 2 B. & S. 49 ; 31 L. J., M. C. 81 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 382 ; 5 L. T. 639.

Justices under 3 & 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, s. 3, have power to entertain an information arising out of an agreement, from the term of which a contract to employ, i.e., to furnish reasonable work, and to pay for the same, may be implied on the part of the employers, and the contract on the part of the employed to do the work being express. Reg. v. Birmingham JJ., 1 W. R. 368.

—— Posting up of Rules—Custom.]—The proprietors of a mill had a weaver in their employ who was paid by the piece. Rules were posted so that the workpeople passed them on going to their work, and one required fourteen days' notice before termination of employment. The weaver left his work without notice, but it was not proved that his attention had been called to the rules or that he had seen them or assented to them, or was able to read. The justices held that there was not sufficient evidence of a contract to justify a conviction of the respondent under the Master and Servant Act, 1867, s. 9 (repealed), and they refused to admit evidence of custom :—Held, that the rules as they were posted, or a well-known custom in the district, might be sufficient to establish a contract, if found as a fact to exist. Carus v. Eastwood, 32 L. T. 855.

—— Contract not in Writing.]—When a contract for service in husbandry was not in writing, and had not been entered upon, no proceedings could be taken to enforce it under the Master and Servant Act, 1867, s. 3 (repealed). Banks v. Crossland, 44 L. J., M. C. 8 ; L. R. 10 Q. B. 97 ; 32 L. T. 226 ; 23 W. R. 414.

When such parol contract is not to be performed within a year from the making thereof, s. 4 of the Statute of Frauds, also prevents its being enforced by any means. Ib.

A contract which is not enforceable by reason of the provisions of the Statute of Frauds, s. 4, nevertheless is an existing contract and is not void altogether, and a fresh contract cannot be implied from acts done in pursuance of it. Britain v. Rossiter, 48 L. J., Ex. 362 ; 11 Q. B. D. 123 ; 40 L. T. 240 ; 27 W. R. 482—C. A.

—— By Wife independently of Husband.]—A wife could not enter into a contract of service within the meaning of the Master and Servants Act, 1867, s. 2 (repealed), independently of her husband. Tomkinson v. West, 32 L. T. 462.

—— By Infant.]—By 38 & 39 Vict. c. 90, s. 4, disputes between an employer and a workman may be heard and determined by a court of summary jurisdiction, who may order payment of any sum not exceeding 10*l.* which it may find to be due as wages or damages. A master, under the above section, sought to recover from an infant a sum of money, as damages for breach of contract in absenting himself from service. By the contract the infant undertook to serve the master for five years, at a certain scale of wages therein specified, power being reserved to the master, in case he should cease to carry on business, or find it necessary to reduce the operation of his works from want of materials, strikes, &c., to terminate the contract on giving fourteen days' notice of his intention so to do. The justices held that the contract was invalid as against the infant, and accordingly dismissed the summons:—Held, that if the provisions contained in the agreement were common to labour contracts, or were such as the master was reasonably justified in imposing, and if the wages were a fair compensation for the services, the contract was beneficial and therefore binding, and the case was accordingly remitted to the justices for further consideration. Leslie v. Fitzpatrick, 47 L. J., M. C. 22; 3 Q. B. D. 229; 37 L. T. 446.

An agreement in writing was entered into by an infant to serve a master, and no one else, for twelve months. The infant entered into the service. By the terms of the agreement the master was authorised to stop the wages of the infant at any time during which the master's steam-engine should, for any reason, stop working; but the master was not compelled to provide employment for the infant during such time:—Held, that the agreement was inequitable and void, and the court quashed a conviction of the infant for absenting himself without leave. Reg. v. Lord, 12 Q. B. 757; 3 New Sess. Cas. 246; 17 L. J., M. C. 181; 12 Jur. 1001.

b. For what Misconduct.

Absence without Leave or Lawful Excuse.]—To render an artificer liable for absenting himself from service, it is necessary not only that he should absent himself without a lawful excuse, but that he should have a guilty knowledge that he has no lawful excuse. Rider v. Wood, 2 El. & El. 338; 29 L. J., M. C. 1; 5 Jur (N.S.) 1354; 1 L. T. 30; 8 W. R. 23.

On 5th of July, 1858, A., an artificer, made a written contract with P., signed by A. and P., to serve P. for five years from that date, and then entered into the service. On 15th of October, 1858, A., so being in P.'s service, made a written contract with H., signed by them both, to serve H. for five years from this latter date. On the next day A. refused to enter into H.'s service, giving as a reason that P. insisted on his remaining in his (P.'s) service:—Held, that A. could not be convicted for not entering into H.'s service, if he had a lawful excuse for not entering into it; and that the fact that he could not do so without committing the criminal offence of absenting himself from P.'s service was sufficient to constitute such an excuse. Ashmore v. Horton, 2 El. & El. 360; 29 L. J., M. C. 13; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 15; 1 L. T. 58; 8 W. R. 43.

The absenting himself from a weekly employment without notice and without assigning cause by a workman, and a complaint thereon to justices, shews a dispute arising out of, or incidental to, their relation as employer and workman, so as to give justices jurisdiction under the Employers and Workmen Act, s. 4, notwithstanding that the workman had not expressly had notice that a week's notice was necessary before leaving the service, and that he said nothing to dispute that fact. Clemson v. Hubbard, 45 L. J., M. C. 69; 1 Ex. D. 179; 33 L. T. 814; 24 W. R. 312.

Where a servant leaves his employment bonâ fide believing that he has a right to go, he is not guilty of an offence under the statute 4 Geo. 4, c. 34; but other facts must reasonably shew that the desertion complained of was in pursuance of that supposed right, and it is not sufficient that it was merely possible he acted under it. Willett v. Boote, 6 H. & N. 26; 30 L. J., M. C. 6; 3 L. T. 276.

—— Absence through Illness.]—P. was by deed apprenticed in 1881 for seven years to W., and in the fifth year W. covenanted to pay 14*s.* a week. In that year P. had a tumour in his hand and was in hospital; he claimed wages while so absent and incapable of work under s. 5 of the Employers and Workmen Act, 1875:—Held, that W. was liable to pay the wages during the illness of P. Patten v. Wood, 51 J. P. 549.

—— Conviction for.]—A coal miner had been convicted by a justice, under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 141 (repealed), of neglecting to fulfil a contract of service with his employers, and absenting himself without just cause or lawful excuse. The contract was to give and take fourteen days' notice, and the employers had received notice of that length from one of their workmen that the whole of the men employed by them would leave unless two non-union men were discharged. No evidence was given of any authority from the miner to his fellow-workman to give the notice; and when the period elapsed the non-union men were not discharged. The miner and some others left work, and the remainder continued in the employ:—Held, that the conviction way right. Smart v. Pessol, 30 L. T. 632.

A fire-iron forger, in 1871, agreed to serve five years. On the 1st of April, 1873, he was summoned under the Master and Servant Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 141) (repealed), for absenting himself from his employers' service, and was, on the 13th of May, ordered to pay 11*l.* 8*s.* to his employers as compensation for the breach of contract, which sum was paid. Not having returned to his employment, he was again summoned, and, on the 7th of July, ordered to fulfil his contract and to give security for its fulfilment, and in default to be imprisoned for a term not exceeding three months. He did not comply with the order, and underwent three months' imprisonment. On his liberation he continued to absent himself, and was again summoned for absenting himself from his employers' service, and ordered, on the 18th of November, to pay 11*l.* 14*s.* to his employers as compensation:—Held, that the orders did not annul the contract of service, and were no bar to the subsequent summons and order of the 18th of November; and that that order was rightly made. Cutler v. Turner, 43 L. J., M. C. 124; L. R. 9 Q. B. 502; 30 L. T. 706; 22 W. R. 840.

By a memorandum in writing, Y. agreed to serve M. as a cutler for three years, and M. agreed to employ him and pay him for his work according to a schedule of prices. Having quitted his service during the term, he was convicted and imprisoned for twenty-one days, for unlawfully absenting himself from his service. After his discharge from prison, he did not return to the service of M., but went and worked elsewhere. On a second information laid against him for unlawfully absenting himself from the service, it was proved to the satisfaction of the justices that on the first occasion he absented himself on account of a difference with his master as to the scale of prices; that when, after his discharge from prison, he refused to return, he was advised by his attorney that he was not bound to do so; and the justices stated that they thought it very probable that he bonâ fide believed what his attorney told him. The justices convicted him under the 6 Geo. 3, c. 25, for unlawfully absenting himself, and sentenced him to one month's imprisonment:—Held, that the conviction could not be sustained: first, because the servant in refusing to return appeared to have been acting bonâ fide in the exercise of a supposed right; secondly, because the provisions of the 6 Geo. 3, c. 25, s. 4, relating to this matter, are repealed or superseded by the 4 Geo. 4, c. 34; and thirdly, because the servant having been once convicted for a departure, with intent to leave his service altogether, could not be convicted a second time under the 6 Geo. 3, c. 25, s. 4. Reg. v. Youle, 6 H. & N. 753; 30 L. J., M. C. 234; 4 L. T. 299; 9 W. R. 637.

A servant having been convicted, under 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, s. 3, for absenting himself without leave or lawful excuse from his service, and imprisoned, and still refusing to return after his imprisonment to the service, the term of which is incomplete, may be again convicted; and it is immaterial that he intended in the first instance to break the contract once for all, or bonâ fide believed that in point of law the first imprisonment put an end to the contract. Unwin v. Clarke, 35 L. J., M. C. 193; L. R. 1 Q. B. 417; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 429; 14 L. T. 356; 14 W. R. 688.

A potter was convicted and sentenced to imprisonment for leaving his service before the time of contract was expired. After the imprisonment had expired, but before the original time of contract had expired, he, not having returned to the service, was again convicted for absenting himself:—Held, that the second conviction was good, as the contract, notwithstanding the first conviction and imprisonment, was not dissolved. Baker, Ex parte, 7 El. & Bl. 697; 26 L. J., M. C. 193; 3 Jur (N.S.) 514; 5 W. R. 623. S. C. and S. P., 2 H. & N. 219; 26 L. J., M. C. 155; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 937.

Non-fulfilment of Contract.]—A magistrate has a jurisdiction under 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, to discharge, unless it shall appear to him that the servant "shall not have fulfilled such contract, or hath been guilty of any other misconduct or misdemeanor as aforesaid." Lilly v. Elwin, 11 Q. B. 742; 17 L. J., Q. B. 132; 12 Jur. 623.

An information by a master under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 85, claimed a fulfilment of the contract, but not payment of damages in the alternative:—Held, that it was not invalid to sustain an order for fulfilment. Crane v. Powell, 38 L. J., M. C. 43; L. R. 4 C. P. 123; 20 L. T. 703; 17 W. R. 161.

The justices on the information ordered that the servant should fulfil the contract; and they adjudged that if, upon a copy of a minute of the order being served on him, he should neglect or refuse to comply with the same, he should, for such his disobedience, be imprisoned for one calendar month:—Held, that if the justices had not jurisdiction to imprison the servant, except on a fresh summons after he had disobeyed the order, the latter part of the order might be rejected as surplusage, and the order itself was still good. Ib.

D. was employed by B. under a contract, by the terms of which he was to keep the general accounts belonging to a farm of B., to weigh out food for cattle, to set the men to work, to lend a hand to anything if wanted, and in all things to carry out his orders. He entered upon the employment, and in the course of it was ordered by B. to go through the whole of the cattle stock under his charge on the farm, and to give particulars of all the animals which had died under his care, and all bullings and calvings which had taken place. Having refused to obey the order, he was summoned before justices and convicted under 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, s. 3, for such refusal. On appeal against this conviction:—Held, that it was bad; because, assuming that he was such a servant, he had not been guilty of any misconduct or misdemeanor in the execution of his contract to serve in that capacity. Davies v. Berwick (Lord), 3 El. & El. 549; 30 L. J., M. C. 84; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 410; 3 L. T. 697; 9 W. R. 334.

Felony.]—The 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, s. 1, does not authorise magistrates to punish misconduct on the part of a servant which amounts to a felony. Jacklin, Ex parte, 2 D. & L. 103; 1 New Sess. Cas. 280; 13 L. J., M. C. 139; 8 Jur. 576.

c. Procedure.

Information.]—The return to a habeas corpus stated that S. T. was detained under a warrant of commitment and conviction by a justice, which, after reciting a complaint by R. T., agent of J. D., that S. T. had contracted with J. D. to serve J. D. in the capacity of a miner, and had entered into such service and did, before the term of his contract was completed, absent himself from his service, and did thereby neglect to fulfil the same contrary to the form of the statute in such case made and provided, set forth the contract of service, and evidence of S. T. having left the service without the consent of J. D., and convicted S. T. of the offence charged in the information and complaint:—Held, that no offence was laid in the information, though it followed the words of the 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, s. 3, inasmuch as it did not appear that the absence of S. T. was without lawful excuse; and the prisoner was discharged. Reg. v. Turner, 2 New Sess. Cas. 403; 9 Q. B. 80; 15 L. J., M. C. 140; 10 Jur. 522.

Convictions.]—In a commitment in execution, under the 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, s. 3, which is intended by the statute to operate as a conviction, the warrant must shew that the magistrate has done all that is necessary to make the conviction lawful. Reg. v. Tordoff, D. & M. 693; 5 Q. B. 933; 1 New Sess. Cas. 171; 13 L. J., M. C. 145; 8 Jur. 772.

A conviction did not expressly state that the servant had entered the service, but it found that he did "misconduct himself in his said service":—Held, that this was a sufficient finding of his having entered into the service. Baker, Ex parte, 7 El. & Bl. 697; 26 L. J., M. C. 193; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 514; 5 W. R. 623. S. P. and S. C., 2 H. & N. 219; 26 L. J., M. C. 155; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 987; 5 W. R. 661.

The conviction stated that it appeared to the magistrate, as well on the examination on oath of M., in presence of the party charged, "as otherwise," that the party had absented himself:—Held, that it was not to be inferred from this that the justice had proceeded upon evidence not given in the presence of the party. Ib.

The conviction stated that the party misconducted himself, &c., "by neglecting and absenting himself from his master's service":—Held, that this was not a finding of two statutable offences, but only of the absenting. Ib.

In an action for false imprisonment, it appeared that the plaintiff had been committed to prison by warrant of a justice, under 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, s. 3. The warrant alleged that the plaintiff, a collier, had been guilty of divers misdemeanors, particularly that he had absented himself from the service of his masters before the term of his contract with them was completed, contrary to the form of the statute:—Held, that no conviction was necessary under the statute; and that the warrant, whether it was an order or in the nature of a conviction, was the only instrument contemplated by the legislature, and the legality of the imprisonment depended upon the sufficiency of that instrument alone. Lindsay v. Leigh, 11 Q. B. 455; 3 New Sess. Cas. 99; 17 L. J., M. C. 50; 12 Jur. 286—Ex. Ch.

Held, also, that whether the warrant was to be construed with less strictness as being in the nature of an order, or with greater strictness as being in the nature of a conviction, it was bad, as it did not bring the case within the statute, by averring either that the contract was in writing, or else that the service had been entered upon. Ib.

—— Under 17 Geo. 3, c. 56, s. 10—Theft of Manufacturing Materials.]—A conviction under 17 Geo. 3, c. 56, s. 10, stated, that materials used in woollen manufactures, suspected to have been purloined, had been found in the house of A., and that he had given no satisfactory account thereof to the convicting justices:—Held, that it was not necessary that the conviction should state that they were found concealed in the house, nor that they were found under a search-warrant. Reg. v. Wilcock or Wilcocks, 7 Q. B. 317; 1 New Sess. Cas. 651; 14 L. J., M. C. 104; 9 Jur. 729.

The 17 Geo. 3, c. 56, so far as regards the distribution of the penalties thereby imposed, is repealed by 58 Geo. 3, c. 57. Ib.

Where the information under 17 Geo. 3, c. 56, s. 10, has been laid before two justices, and the conviction has taken place before two other justices, this fact must appear on the face of the conviction (unnecessary since 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 36). Ib.

The offence created by 17 Geo. 3, c. 56, s. 10, consists in the accused party not giving, when brought before the justices, a satisfactory explanation of how he came by the goods suspected to have been purloined or embezzled. Boothroyd, In re, 2 New Sess. Cas. 251; 15 M. & W. 1; 15 L. J., M. C. 57; 10 Jur. 117.

Therefore, where a party was convicted under that section:—Held to be no objection, first, that the conviction purported to be founded on the information of A. and the oaths of him and other credible witnesses, whose names were set out; and, secondly, that the warrant on which the premises of the defendant had been searched for the suspected materials was granted on an affidavit of A., in which he only stated that he had cause to suspect that there were purloined or embezzled materials on the premises of the defendant, and did not shew the offence to have been committed within the jurisdiction of the justices. Ib.

A conviction under 17 Geo. 3, c. 56, s. 10, and 58 Geo. 3, c. 51, for having in possession articles suspected to be purloined or embezzled, was not in the form given by the schedule to the latter statute, and purported to be made on the information of the informer and the oaths of him and certain other credible witnesses, whose names were set out, and concluded by awarding the penalty to be paid as the law directs:—Held, first, that it was not necessary that the conviction should state—1, the value of the materials; 2, to whom they belonged; 3, that the defendant knew them to be purloined or embezzled; 4, that the informer or witnesses were sworn in the presence of the accused; 5, that the accused, when before the magistrates, had not applied for time to produce the parties from whom he received the suspected materials. Ib.

If yarn, of a description liable to be condemned, is found in the house of a party, magistrates have jurisdiction to condemn it under 17 Geo. 3, c. 56, and to convict the party, although the yarn was not found on the execution of a search-warrant previously granted. Davis v. Nest, 6 Car. & P. 167.

A conviction on this statute, stating that A. was convicted before the magistrates upon the oath of a credible witness, of having in his possession, in his dwelling-house, certain materials used in woollen manufacture, suspected to be embezzled and purloined, he not producing the party from whom he bought the same, or giving a satisfactory account, and then going on to adjudicate, is good. Ib.

By 17 Geo. 3, c. 56, s. 10, it shall be lawful for any two justices, upon complaint made to them upon oath that there is cause to suspect that purloined or embezzled materials, used in certain manufactures, are concealed in any dwelling-house, outhouse, yard, garden or other place or places, to issue a search-warrant for the search, in the daytime, of every such dwelling-house, &c.; and if any such materials, suspected to be purloined or embezzled, are found therein, to cause the same, and the person in whose house, outhouse, yard, garden or other place they are found, to be brought before two justices, and if the person shall not give an account to their satisfaction of how he came by the same, he shall be adjudged guilty of a misdemeanor:—Held, that a warehouse occupied for business purposes only, and not within the curtilage of or connected with any dwelling-house, was a "place" within the meaning of the above section. Reg. v. Edmundson, 2 El. & El. 77; 28 L. J., M. C. 213; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1351: 7 W. R. 565; 8 Cox, C. C. 212.

Appeals—Under 17 Geo. 3, c. 56.]—Under 17 Geo. 3, c. 56, ss. 1, 2, 20, 22, two justices may convict and sentence to imprisonment; and the party convicted may appeal to the sessions, giving notice to the justices at the time of conviction, and at the same time entering into recognizance with sufficient sureties to try the appeal and abide the judgment of the sessions; but if he does not at such time enter into such recognisance, the convicting justices are to commit him till the sessions, unless such recognizance be sooner entered into, and are to transmit the conviction to the sessions, and the sessions, on proof of notice of appeal, and on receiving the conviction, are to hear the appeal; and if the conviction be affirmed, the party is to suffer the punishment originally adjudged, the time of imprisonment, if inflicted, being computed from the time of affirmance, unless the party has been imprisoned under the original conviction, in which case the time for which he has been so confined is to be included in the order of confirmation. Reg. v. Twyford, 5 A. & E. 430; 6 N. & M. 836.

By 17 Geo. 3, c. 56, s. 20, an appeal is given to the sessions against certain convictions, the party giving notice in writing to the justices convicting, and entering into a recognizance to try the appeal, and those justices are required to give notice to the party of his right to appeal; if those justices do inform him of such right, without saying anything about the notice, and he enters into the recognizance, the sessions are bound to receive the appeal, though he did not give the notice in writing. Rex v. Leeds JJ., 4 Term Rep. 583.

Or if the justices at the time of such conviction make known to the party convicted his right to appeal, and he declines appealing, they need not go on to inform him of the necessary steps to be taken in order to appeal. Rex v. W. R. Yorkshire JJ., 3 M. & S. 493.

Damages—Subsequent Proceedings in respect of Continuing Breach—Jurisdiction.]—Where an employer recovers before a magistrate a sum of 10*l.* against a workman as damages for a breach of contract under s. 4 of the Employers and Workmen Act, 1875, the jurisdiction of the magistrate under that section is exhausted, and the employer is not entitled in subsequent proceedings in the police court to recover any further damages in respect of a continuing breach of the contract. James v. Evans & Co., 66 L. J., Q. B. 742; [1897] 2 Q. B. 180; 77 L. T. 78; 45 W. R. 654; 61 J. P. 631.

Punishments.]—Under 20 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 2, if a justice of the peace upon a complaint made to him of misconduct, sentences the offender to be committed to the house of correction for a time not exceeding one calendar month, he must, if he intends to proceed upon that statute, also sentence him there to be corrected and held to hard labour; but the statute gives the justice an option to punish the offender in that manner, or otherwise, by abating part of his wages, or by discharging him from his employment. And the meaning of the terms "there to be corrected" is to be understood of a correction by whipping. But this latter punishment cannot be inflicted upon the like offender under 6 Geo. 3, c. 25, which enables the justice to commit the offenders to the house of correction for any time not exceeding three months, nor less than one month; nor can the punishments inflicted by the two acts be blended. Rex v. Hoseason, 14 East, 605.

Commitment Warrants—Validity.]—A commitment under 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, s. 2, which states that the defendant, a miner, had contracted to serve A., but omits the words "in the employment of a miner," is ill. Reg. v. Jones or Lewis, 1 New Sess. Cas. 3; 1 D. & L. 822; 13 L. J., M. C. 46; 8 Jur. 470.

So a commitment, stating that complaint had been made against E., servant to G., for misconduct in his said service, is insufficient, for not stating the nature of the service. Copestick, In re, 1 New Sess. Cas. 181; 13 L. J., M. C. 161.

A warrant of committal stated that A. contracted to serve H. & Co., calico printers, "as a designer," and that, whilst he was in such service, and in the execution of the said contract, he was guilty of, &c.:—Held, that it was not necessary to state under which of the various classes of employment enumerated in the 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, s. 3, that of a designer came, and that it was sufficient, if the court should be of opinion that a designer was a service or employment within that section. Ormerod, Ex parte, 1 D. & L. 825; 1 New Sess. Cas. 38; 13 L. J., M. C. 73; 8 Jur. 495.

Upon a complaint against a servant for absenting himself from his service, the conviction adjudged that he should be imprisoned in the house of correction, there to remain and be held to hard labour for one month. The commitment required the keeper to receive him into custody, there to remain and be corrected, and held to hard labour for one month (following the words of 20 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 2):—Held, that the "correction" therein mentioned must be understood to mean something beyond the hard labour, and therefore that the commitment was bad, as varying in this respect from the conviction, and authorising a punishment not warranted by the statute. Wood v. Fenwick, 10 M. & W. 195; 11 L. J., M. C. 127.

A party was committed by a magistrate, under 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, s. 3, by warrant of commitment, which was in the following form:—"To the constable of M., Surrey, &c. Whereas, information and complaint hath been made unto me, one &c., upon the oaths of J. H. and S. M., both of M., in the said county of S., calico printers, that W. J., of M. aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, calico printer, did, on Wednesday, the 8th of May inst., contract with the said S. M. to print certain pieces of woollen cotton goods, and that the said W. J. had adopted such contract, and entered into the service of the said S. M., under such contract, and that the said W. J. hath, in his said service, been guilty of divers misdemeanors, miscarriages, and ill behaviour towards the said S. M., and particularly with having, on the 9th of May inst., refused to perform such contract, and left his said work unfinished, and the service of the said S. M., without his licence or consent. And whereas, in pursuance of the statute in that case made and provided, I have duly examined the proofs and allegations of both the parties, touching the matter of the complaint, and, upon due consideration had thereof, have adjudged and determined, and do hereby adjudge and determine, the said complaint to be true." It then commanded the constable to convey the party to the house of correction, and deliver him to the keeper thereof who was ordered to detain him in custody:—Held, that this was a commitment in execution, and that it was bad, because it did not shew, either that the contract was entered into, or the work refused to be done or the party found within the jurisdiction of the magistrate. Johnson v. Reid, 6 M. & W. 124; 9 L. J., M. C. 25.

A warrant of commitment of a servant for leaving his master's employment is bad, if it does not aver either that the contract was in writing, or that the service had been entered upon. Askew, Ex parte and In re, 2 L. M. & P. 429; 20 L. J., M. C. 241; 15 Jur. 705.

A warrant of commitment under 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, ss. 1, 3, should state that the examination was on oath, and taken in the presence of the defendant. Gray, Ex parte and In re, 1 New Sess. Cas. 354; 2 D. & L. 539; 14 L. J., M. C. 26; 8 Jur. 1049. S. P., Reg. v. Jones, 1 New Sess. Cas. 3; 1 D. & L. 822; 13 L. J., M. C. 46; 8 Jur. 470.

A commitment of a servant under 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, s. 3, for absenting himself, need not set forth the evidence on which the conviction proceeded; but it must shew on the face of it that the servant has been convicted of an offence within the meaning of the act. It is therefore not sufficient that it shews that the servant absented himself without assigning any sufficient reason. Geswood, In re, 2 El. & Bl. 952; 2 C. L. R. 269; 23 L. J., M. C. 35; 17 Jur. 1163; 2 W. R. 94.

A return to a habeas corpus set forth a warrant, which recited that the prisoner had been on the same day convicted before a justice of an offence against the 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, s. 3, and that the justice had adjudged that he should be committed for two months, and commanded the constable to take and the gaoler to receive him:—Held, that the conviction and warrant of commitment might be in separate instruments; that this instrument was a warrant of commitment, and therefore it was no objection that it did not set forth the evidence before the justice, nor state that it was taken in the presence of the prisoner or upon oath. Bailey, In re, 3 El. & Bl. 607; 2 C. L. R. 1645; 23 L. J., M. C. 161; 18 Jur. 930; 2 W. R. 422.

Held, also, that it might be shewn by affidavits that there was no evidence before the justice of such a contract to serve as would give him jurisdiction; but that if there was any evidence to justify the finding of the justice, the court could not interfere. Ib.

The return to a habeas corpus stated, that the prisoner was committed for three months by warrant of a justice set forth in the return, reciting a conviction by the justice, on which the warrant purported to proceed, for an offence under the 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, s. 3. The recited conviction was, on the face of it, bad. The return then stated, that, a week after such commitment, the prisoner being still in custody, the same justice delivered to the gaoler another warrant of commitment, reciting and grounded upon a conviction of the same date as the first, by the same justice, setting forth the same offence, and imposing the same punishment. In this conviction no material defect appeared:—Held, that the prisoner was not entitled to be discharged, the return shewing a good warrant, under which he was in custody. Reg. v. Richards, 5 Q. B. 926; D. & M. 777; 13 L. J., M. C. 147; 8 Jur. 752.

A habeas corpus having issued, directed to the keeper of a house of correction in the borough of Kingston-upon-Hull, to bring up S., a prisoner, detained in his custody; he made a return, setting out a warrant of commitment by a magistrate of the borough, stating that S. did unlawfully aid and abet T., a handicraftsman, who had contracted in writing to serve H., a shipbuilder, in neglecting and refusing to commence his service with H., according to his contract. The return then stated that whilst S. was in the keeper's custody, the same magistrate delivered to him another warrant of commitment, which stated that S. was duly convicted "for that T., a handicraftsman, did, at the parish of Holy Trinity, in the borough, contract with H., a shipbuilder, to serve him in the capacity of a shipwright, for a period not then expired, the contract being in writing and signed by the contracting parties; and that T. did not then and there, or at any day since then, enter into his service, according to his contract, and that he had not the consent of H. nor any lawful excuse for such his default in not entering into his service; and that S., before the committing of the offence by T., unlawfully did aid, abet, counsel and procure T. the said offence in manner and form aforesaid to commit; that is to say, S. did then and there aid, abet, counsel and procure T. so as aforesaid not to enter his service according to the said contract"; and it was thereby adjudged that S., for his offence, should be imprisoned in the house of correction in the borough, &c. The first warrant of commitment was bad on the face of it:—Held, first, that the defect in the first warrant was cured by the second, it appearing by the return that the second was substituted by the same magistrate as an amendment of the first. Smith, In re, 3 H. & N. 227; 27 L. J., M. C. 186; 6 W. R. 440.

Held, secondly, that the second warrant sufficiently stated that S. aided T., "knowing that he had not the consent of H., or any lawful excuse for not entering into his service." Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the warrant was not bad, because it stated that S. "did aid, abet, counsel, and procure," without stating of which offence he was convicted. Ib.

Held, fourthly, that an affidavit could not be received for the purpose of shewing that T. did not, in fact, contract within the borough, as stated in the warrant. Ib.

A warrant of commitment stating that A. had contracted in writing, to serve two persons for a certain time, but had absented himself without leave of his "said master," and not stating that at the hearing of the complaint by the magistrate the evidence of the said A. himself had been heard:—Held, sufficient. Price, In re, 2 W. R. 473.

Examinations on Oath—Necessity for.]—Where the Statute of Labourers gives a magistrate jurisdiction to examine upon oath any servant, and to make order for payment of wages to such servant, and a magistrate, in his adjudication on this act, avers a complaint made on oath, and an examination on oath, it is not competent in replevin for taking the plaintiff's goods, for the plaintiff to plead in bar of a recognizance made under a warrant of distress and sale founded on that adjudication, that the servant did not duly make oath before the magistrate that the sum claimed was justly due to him for wages; nor can he plead that the sum claimed was not due. Wilson v. Weller, 1 Br. & B. 57; 3 Moore, 294.

Order of Discharge.]—An order of a justice for discharging a servant from her master's services under 5 Eliz. c. 4, was void, and not merely voidable, because it did not appear on the order itself, that "she was a servant in husbandry." Rex v. Hullcott, 6 Term Rep. 583

F. UNDER THE SHOP HOURS ACTS.

Hours of Employment—Young Persons—"In or about a Shop."]—The period of seventy-four hours a week limited by s. 3 of the Shop Hours Act, 1892, for the employment of a young person in or about a shop, is inclusive of time occupied upon the employer's business elsewhere than in the shop. Collman v. Roberts, 65 L. J., M. C. 63; [1896] 1 Q. B. 457; 74 L. T. 198; 44 W. R. 445; 18 Cox, C. C. 273; 60 J. P. 184.

—— Failure to exhibit Notice—Penalty.]—The fine imposed by s. 5 of the Shop Hours Act, 1892, does not apply to a failure to exhibit the notice required by s. 4 of the act. No penalty is provided by the act for the contravention of s. 4. Hammond v. Pulsford, 64 L. J., M. C. 63; [1895] 1 Q. B. 223; 15 R. 95; 71 L. T. 767; 43 W. R. 236; 18 Cox, C. C. 58; 59 J. P. 533. See 58 & 59 Vict. c. 5.

II. RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF MASTER AND THIRD PARTIES.

A. RIGHTS OF MASTER.

1. Injuries to Servants.

a. Accidents.

Damages.]—If the plaintiff's son, who was in fact his servant, in delivering parcels from a stage-coach, receives an injury, by which the father is deprived of his services, the father is not entitled, as part of the damages, for loss of his son's services, to have compensation for the injury done to his parental feelings. Flemington v. Smithers, 2 Car. & P. 292.

The plaintiffs sued the defendant in case for loss of services of their traveller from an accidental collision with the defendant:—Held, that the action was maintainable, and the damages not too remote, though case and not trespass would have been the proper remedy had the servant been the plaintiff. Martinez v. Gerber, 3 Scott (N.R.) 386; 3 Man. & G. 88; 10 L. J., C. P. 314; 5 Jur. 463.

Held, also, that the plaintiffs need not allege in their declaration that the servant was hired at wages or salary. Ib.

To young Child.]—A boy two and a half years old was run over by a carriage and much injured. The parent, having expended some money in his cure, sued the owner of the carriage for loss of the services of his son as his servant:—Held, that the plaintiff could not maintain the action, because it was impossible that such a boy could render any services to him; and because the expenses incurred were not the gist of the action. Hall v. Hollander, 1 B. & C. 660; 7 D. & R. 133; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 39.

Action against Railway Company—Contract.]—A master cannot maintain an action per quod servitium amisit against a railway company for an injury to his servant, whilst a passenger on the railway, caused by neglect of their duty to safely carry the servant according to their contract with him as such passenger, unless the master was a party to the contract. Alton v. Midland Ry., 19 C. B. (N.S.) 213; 34 L. J., C. P. 292; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 672; 12 L. T. 703; 13 W. R. 918.

Claim alleged that the servant of the plaintiff took a ticket and travelled by the L. T. & S. Railway; that the defendants, the Great Eastern Railway Company, supplied the engines, drivers, and firemen for working the traffic of the L. T. & S. Railway, and also the signalmen for working the said traffic at the S. Junction; that the L. T. & S. train in which the servant travelled came into collision with a train of the defendant company at the junction, through the negligence of the defendants' signalman there; that the servant was hurt, whereby the plaintiff lost his services and was damnified. On demurrer:—Held, that the claim was independent of the contract of carriage for a pure tort, and could therefore be maintained. Berringer v. G. E. Ry., 48 L. J., C. P. 400; 4 C. P. D. 163; 27 W. R. 681.

Death of Servant.]—A master cannot maintain an action for injuries which cause the immediate death of his servant. Osborn v. Gillett, 42 L. J., Ex. 53; L. R. 8 Ex. 88; 28 L. T. 197; 21 W. R. 409.

To a declaration against the defendant for injuries caused to the plaintiff's daughter and servant, by the negligent driving of the defendant's servant, by reason whereof she afterwards died; claiming as special damage the loss of her services, and her burial expenses. A plea that she was killed on the spot; and a second plea that the acts complained of amounted to a felonious act, and that the person committing them had not been prosecuted:—Held (by Kelly, C.B., and Pigott, B.; Bramwell, B., dissentiente), that the first plea was good; and (by the whole court) that the second plea was bad. Ib.

b. Assault.

Proof of Service.]—In an action for beating the son of the plaintiff, stating him as the servant of the father, per quod servitium amisit, it is not necessary to shew that the son did any material business for the father; it is sufficient that he lives in his house and is part of his family. Jones v. Brown, 1 Esp. 217; Peake, 233.

Damages—Medical Expenses.]—In an action for wounding the plaintiff's son per quod servitium amisit, the plaintiff is entitled to recover the amount of the surgeon's bill, although it has not been paid; but he cannot recover physician's fees, which have not been paid. Dixon v. Bell, 5 M. & S. 198; 1 Stark. 287.

c. Seduction.

Action for.]—A master may maintain an action for debauching his servant, though he is in no way related to her in blood. Fores v. Wilson, Peake, 55; 3 R. R. 652.

—— Right of Master's Assignee.]—The right of action for the seduction of a servant does not pass to the master's assignees on his bankruptcy. Howard v. Crowther, 8 M. & W. 601; 10 L. J., Ex. 355; 5 Jur. 91.

—— Right of Parent.]—A father may bring an action for entering his house and debauching his daughter, per quod servitium amisit, though the daughter is above twenty-one, where acts of service are proved, though there is no contract for service. Bennett v. Allcott, 2 Term Rep. 166.

A father may maintain an action for the seduction of his daughter, who was a married woman, but living with him as his servant, being separated from her husband. Harper v.

Luffkin, 7 B. & C. 387; 1 M. & Ry. 166; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 23; 31 R. R. 236.

A father, who permits a married man to visit his daughter as a suitor, cannot maintain an action against him for seducing her. Reddie v. Scoolt, Peake, 240.

If the daughter of a person, who, performs all the duties of a servant and domestic offices in her father's house, though she does not actually sleep in the house, is seduced, the father may support an action per quod servitium amisit. Mann v. Barret, 6 Esp. 32; 9 R. R. 804.

Where it appeared that the defendant debauched the plaintiff's daughter, and that she was delivered of a child, but the jury found that the child was not the defendant's:—Held, that the jury was rightly directed to find a verdict for the defendant. Eager v. Grimwood, 1 Ex. 61; 16 L. J., Ex. 236.

No action will lie for debauching a daughter, though the mother maintains her and her child during her lying-in, unless on the ground of the loss of service. Satterthwaite v. Dewhurst, 4 Dougl. 315; 5 East, 47, n.; 7 R. R. 654, n.

But an action will lie for enticing away the plaintiff's daughter, though there is no allegation that the defendant debauched her, or that there was any binding contract of service between her and the plaintiff. Evans v. Walton, 36 L. J., C. P. 307; L. R. 2 C. P. 615; 17 L. T. 92; 15 W. R. 1062.

A defendant intending to seduce the servant, being the daughter of the plaintiff, hired her as his servant, and thereby obtained possession of her person:—Held, that the father might maintain an action against him for such seduction. Speight v. Oliviera, 2 Stark. 493; 20 R. R. 728.

Loss of Service—Necessity and Proof of.]—In order to sustain the action for seduction, some service, either actual or constructive, rendered by the daughter to the plaintiff, must be shewn. Blaymire v. Hayley, 6 M. & W. 55; 9 L. J., Ex. 147; 4 Jur. 107.

An action is not maintained by evidence that the daughter, though under age, was living in another person's family in the capacity of housekeeper, and had no intention at the time of the seduction to return to her father's house, though she afterwards did return there while within age, in consequence of the seduction, and was maintained by her father. Dean v. Peel, 5 East, 45; 1 Smith, 333; 7 R. R. 653.

A. occupied two farms seven miles distant from each other; A. resided at one and his son and daughter at the other. The daughter acted as mistress of the house of the latter, and had the poultry for her benefit:—Held, that she was sufficiently the servant of A. for him to maintain an action for her seduction. Holloway v. Abell, 7 Car. & P. 528.

Evidence that a niece, being about sixteen years of age, occasionally assisted in the household work, no servant being kept in the family, is sufficient to constitute the relation of master and servant between the uncle and niece, and such relation is not destroyed by the circumstance of the niece's being entitled, on her coming of age, to a sum of nearly 500*l.*, of which the interest is applied in the meantime for her benefit. Manvell v. Thomson, 2 Car. & P. 303; 31 R. R. 666.

It is not necessary to shew any acts of service done by the daughter, it is enough that she lived in the father's family under such circumstances that he had a right to her service. Maunder v. Venn, M. & M. 323; 31 R. R. 734.

A father cannot maintain an action for the seduction of his daughter, when he is unable to allege in his declaration the loss of his daughter's services by reason of the wrongful act of the defendant. Grinnell v. Wells, 7 Man. & G. 1033; 8 Scott (N.R.) 741; 2 D. & L. 610; 14 L. J., C. P. 19; 8 Jur. 1101.

When a daughter has been seduced while out at service, and had left her service in a state of pregnancy, and returned home, where she was supported by the plaintiff until and after her confinement:—Held, that as the implied relation of mistress and servant did not subsist between the plaintiff and the daughter at the time of the seduction, the action was not maintainable. Davies v. Williams, 10 Q. B. 725; 16 L. J., Q. B. 369; 11 Jur. 750.

A daughter, who was living with her father, at the defendant's request, went and resided at his house to assist in his shop during the temporary absence of his wife; she was to be paid for doing so, but no sum was fixed; she remained three or four weeks, and received 8*s.* when she left and returned to her father's; while she was at the defendant's he seduced her:—Held, that there was nothing in the position which the daughter held at the defendant's house inconsistent with the subsistence of the relation of servant to her father, and that he could, therefore, maintain the action. Griffiths v. Teetgen, 15 C. B. 344; 24 L. J., C. P. 35; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 426; 3 W. R. 11.

A daughter was employed by the defendant as an out-door farm servant from February to November, being absent during the usual working hours from her father's house, where she passed the remainder of her time, sleeping there and assisting in the household duties. In April of the following year she gave birth to a child, of which the defendant was the father:—Held, that these facts constituted a sufficient service to the father to support an action at his suit. Rist v. Faux, 4 B. & S. 409; 32 L. J., Q. B. 386; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 202; 8 L. T. 737; 11 W. R. 918—Ex. Ch.

A daughter lived in her father's house, but worked during the day at the defendant's mill, receiving wages. She did washing and other domestic duties for her father:—Held, sufficient evidence of service to entitle the father to maintain the action. Ogden v. Lancashire, 15 W. R. 158.

The plaintiff's daughter, aged twenty-four years, was seduced in the house and service of the plaintiff, and the day after left this country, pursuant to prior arrangements, for America, but, while in service there, finding herself pregnant, she returned to this country and went to her sister's house, where she was confined, and after her confinement she returned to the house of the plaintiff:—Held, that there was evidence of loss of service sufficient to sustain the plaintiff's action. Long v. Keightley, Ir. R. 11 C. L. 221.

An action for seduction is supported by evidence that the daughter, who was under the age of twenty-one, being discharged from service, was returning home at the time of the seduction, and was on her return received into her father's house. Terry v. Hutchinson, 9 B. & S. 487; 37 L. J., Q. B. 257; L. R. 3 Q. B. 599; 18 L. T. 521; 16 W. R. 932.

A parent cannot maintain an action for the seduction of a daughter, not residing in the house of such parent, but being a domestic servant, living in the house of her master, though with the permission of her master she had been in the habit, during any leisure time, of assisting in the work by which her parent earned a livelihood. Thompson v. Ross, 5 H. & N. 16; 29 L. J., Ex. 1; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1133; 1 L. T. 43; 8 W. R. 44.

It is necessary to shew something like the relation of master and servant, however slight the degree. Manley v. Field, 7 C. B. (N.S) 96; 29 L. J., C. P. 79; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 300.

Where a daughter rented a house, and carried on the business of a milliner at the time of her seduction:—Held, that the circumstance of her mother and the younger branches of the family residing with her, and receiving part of their support from the proceeds of her business (the father lodging elsewhere) did not constitute such services as to entitle the father to maintain the action. Ib.

A daughter was in service as a governess, and was seduced whilst on a three days' visit, with her employer's permission, to her mother. During her visit she gave some assistance in household duties. At the time of her confinement she was in the service of another employer, and afterwards returned home to her mother. In an action for her seduction brought by the mother:—Held (by Kelly, C.B., Martin, Bramwell and Channell, BB.), that there was no evidence of service at the time of the seduction; and that, therefore, the action was not maintainable. Hedges v. Tagg, 41 L. J., Ex. 169; L. R. 7 Ex. 283; 20 W. R. 976.

Held, by Kelly, C.B., and Martin and Bramwell, BB., that the action must also fail on the ground that the confinement did not take place whilst the daughter was in her mother's service. Ib.

Where a girl under age was seduced by her master whilst his hired servant, and rendering no service to her parents, and afterwards, having quitted his service, gave birth to a child in her parents' home:—Held, that her father could not maintain an action for seduction, although the girl intended to return home at the termination of her service. Gladney v. Murphy, 26 L. R., Ir. 651.

In an action for the seduction of her daughter, evidence that the daughter was a widow, that she was in employment of a third party, which occupied her time each week day from 9.30 a.m. to 8 p.m., that she resided in lodgings rented by herself, but was in the habit during the time which remained at her disposal of coming to her mother's house and helping her by the discharge of household duties, which were of such a nature as would be usually performed by a servant, is evidence proper to be submitted to the jury in support of the plaintiff's case. O'Reilly v. Glavey, 32 L. R. Ir. 316.

Damages.]—A master may recover special damages for debauching his servant, though not related to her in blood. Fores v. Wilson, Peake, 55; 3 R. R. 652.

Damages ultra the mere loss of service may be given against a defendant for debauching and getting with child the adopted daughter and servant of the plaintiff. Irwin v. Dearman, 11 East, 23; 10 R. R. 423.

In an action by a widow, the jury is not confined to the mere loss of service of her daughter, but may give some damages for the distress and anxiety of mind which the mother has felt; and it is for the jury to say, taking into consideration the situation in life of the parties, what they think is a reasonable compensation to be given to her. Andrews v. Askey, 8 Car. & P. 7.

On an inquisition of damages for seduction, where 1,000*l.* had been awarded by the jury, although the parties were in a moderate sphere of life, the court refused to set it aside on the ground of the damages being excessive. Elliott v. Nicklin, 5 Price, 641.

Where the loss of service has been established, further damages may be conceded for the loss which the father or master has sustained by being deprived of the society and comfort of his child, and for the dishonour he receives. Bedford v. M'Kowl, 3 Esp. 119.

So, in the case of an aunt. Chambers v. Irwin. Ib.

In estimating the damages the jury may take into account the expense of maintaining a bastard child, and the dishonour done to the parent and his daughter. Terry v. Hutchinson, 9 B. & S. 487; 37 L. J., Q. B. 257; L. R. 3 Q. B. 599; 18 L. T. 521; 16 W. R. 932.

Pleadings and Evidence—Claim.]—A declaration stating that M., being the daughter and servant of the plaintiff, with the consent of the plaintiff became the apprentice of A., the wife of the defendant, for the term of two years, for the purpose of learning the business of a milliner, in consideration of 29*l.* paid by the plaintiff, and in consideration that A., with the consent of the defendant, should find and provide M. with meat, drink, and lodging, nevertheless the defendant debauched her, whereby she became ill, and incapable of serving A., and of learning the business, is bad on demurrer, as not shewing any duty arising out of the contract, for the defendant to take care of M.'s morals. Harris v. Butler, 2 M. & W. 539; M. & H. 117; 6 L. J., Ex. 133; 1 Jur. 608.

The ordinary count for seduction, and a special count framed on the authority of Speight v. Oliveira (2 Stark. 495), are substantially the same. Morgan v. Malony, Ir. R. 7 C. L. 101.

A count for debauching the plaintiff's daughter may be joined with a count for breaking into and entering the house. Woodward v. Walton, 2 Bos. & P. (N.R.) 476.

—— Defence.]—The defendant may shew that the daughter is not a servant of the father under the general issue, without pleading specially the fact. Holloway v. Abell, 7 Car. & P. 528.

In an action for the seduction of the plaintiff's daughter and servant, the plea of not guilty puts in issue the fact of seduction only, and not the fact of service. Torrence v. Gibbins, D. & M. 226; 5 Q. B. 297; 13 L. J., Q. B. 36; 7 Jur. 1158.

To a declaration, complaining that the defendant debauched J., being daughter and servant of the plaintiff, and alleging damage by loss of service, a plea that she was not the servant of the plaintiff is a good plea, on special demurrer, assigning for cause that it amounted to not guilty. Ib.

In an action for seduction the plea of not guilty does not put in issue the relationship of master and servant. If, therefore, it is intended to dispute the existence of this relationship it must be specially pleaded. Salter v. Walker, 21 L. T. 360; 18 W. R. 65.

To a special count for seduction, framed on the authority of Speight v. Oliveira (2 Stark. 495; 20 R. R. 728), a plea, that at the time of the seduction the girl was the servant of the defendant and not of the plaintiff, is bad, as traversing an inference of law. Morgan v. Malony, Ir. R. 7 C. L. 240.

—— Evidence.]—It is not necessary to sustain the action that the daughter should be produced as a witness at the trial. Farmer v. Joseph, Holt, 451.

General evidence of the defendant's condition in life, though not of his specific pecuniary means, is admissible in support of damages. Salter v. Walter, 21 L. T. 360; 18 W. R. 65.

The father cannot examine witnesses to the daughter's general character, except in answer to evidence of general bad character adduced on the part of the defendant. Bamfield v. Massey, 1 Camp. 460. S. P., Bate v. Hill, 1 Car. & P. 100; 28 R. R. 766.

The daughter is not bound to answer in cross-examination, whether she had not previously been criminal with other men. Dodd v. Norris, 3 Camp. 519; 14 R. R. 832.

Nor does the mere cross-examination of the daughter, to shew that she had been guilty of improper conduct, entitle the plaintiff to call other witnesses to her character. Ib.

Evidence cannot be admitted that the defendant accomplished the seduction by means of a promise of marriage. Ib.

The defendant may examine witnesses to prove particular acts of sexual intercourse between the plaintiff's daughter and those witnesses, who may each be asked as to the fact, and the time and place of its occurrence; but if the jury is of opinion that the defendant had such intercourse with the plaintiff's daughter as caused him to be the father of the child, the plaintiff is entitled to the verdict; and the evidence of her unchastity with others is only to be considered in mitigation of damages. Verry v. Watkins, 7 Car. & P. 308.

If the daughter is called as a witness, she cannot be contradicted by evidence of statements to which she was not cross-examined; but she may be called up again and asked the questions, though they should tend to charge her with having had connection with another person. Andrews v. Askey, 8 Car. & P. 7.

The daughter was called and asked on cross-examination if she knew one A., which she denied. In defence, it was sought to contradict her, by proving that she had stated that A. was the father of her illegitimate child, and that he had deserted her:—Held, that the evidence was inadmissible as a contradiction, the witness not having been cross-examined as to these statements; but semble, that the evidence might have been given to prove her loose character. Carpenter v. Wahl, 3 P. & D. 457; 11 A. & E. 803; 9 L. J., Q. B. 217; 4 Jur. 964.

Evidence may be given on an inquisition of damages, that the defendant visited at the plaintiff's house for the purpose of paying his addresses to the daughter with an intention of marriage. Elliott v. Nicklin, 5 Price, 641.

It is no ground for a new trial that evidence of a promise of marriage has been given. Tullidge v. Wade, 3 Wils. 18.

To prove that her connection with the defendant (which happened but once) was against her consent, the daughter can be asked only as to circumstances occurring immediately after the event. Colyer v. Mayne, 2 Car. & K. 1011.

—— Particulars.]—In an action for seduction, to entitle the defendant to an order for particulars, he must shew special circumstances other than those which would tend to a mere restriction of the proof necessarily incident to such an action. Lagan v. Gibson, Ir. R. 9 C. L. 507.

The defendant sought to obtain particulars of the times and places at which the alleged connection took place:—Held, that under the circumstances the defendant, without denying the seduction on oath, was not entitled to an order. Thompson v. Birkley, 47 L. T. 700; 31 W. R. 230.

In an action for seduction, particulars of the time and place of the alleged seduction will not be ordered on the application of the defendant before delivering his defence, unless the application is accompanied by an affidavit stating his intention to deny the seduction. Knight v. Engle, 61 L. T. 780.

—— Interrogatories.]—In an action for the seduction of a daughter, interrogatories as to the defendant's pecuniary means cannot be administered to the defendant; but interrogatories as to whether the defendant had had sexual intercourse with the daughter, and had stated that he believed that she had not had such intercourse with any other man, are allowable. Hodsoll v. Taylor, 43 L. J., Q. B. 14; L. R. 9 Q. B. 79; 29 L. T. 53; 22 W. R. 89.

2. Enticing from Service.

Action for—In what Cases.]—Trespass lies by a master for seducing his journeyman away. Hart v. Aldridge, Cowp. 54.

Although only hired by the piece, and not for any certain time. Anon., Lofft, 493.

An action will lie for continuing to employ the servant of another after notice, though the person so continuing to employ the servant did not procure him to leave his master, or know, when he employed him that he was the servant of another. Blake v. Lanyon, 6 Term Rep. 221; 3 R. R. 162.

No action lies for seducing a servant from his master, who has paid the penalties stipulated by his articles for leaving him. Bird v. Randall, 3 Burr. 1345; 1 W. Bl. 373, 387.

Nor for inducing a servant to leave his master's service at the expiration of the time for which the servant had hired himself, although the servant had no intention, at the time, of quitting his master's service. Nichol v. Martyn, 2 Esp. 734; 5 R. R. 770.

A declaration by the lessee of a theatre, alleged in the first and second counts that W. contracted with the plaintiff to sing at his theatre, and not elsewhere, during a certain term, without the plaintiff's consent, and that the defendant during the term, maliciously enticed and procured W. to depart from her contract against the will of the plaintiff, whereby W. refused to sing for the plaintiff at his theatre during the term. A third count alleged that W. had been hired by the plaintiff as and was his dramatic artiste for a term, and that the defendant maliciously enticed and procured her to depart from her employment during the term:—Held (by Wightman, J., Erle, J., and Crompton, J.), that the action was maintainable at common law, as the maliciously procuring W. to break her contract was a wrongful act, from which damage accrued to the plaintiff; that the rule of law giving a remedy for enticing away servants is not confined to menial servants, or to such as fall within the Statute of Labourers (23 Edw. 3), but extends to all cases where there is an unlawful or a malicious enticing away of a person employed to give his exclusive personal service for a given time, under the direction of the employer, who is injured by the wrongful act, and that the action for maliciously persuading a servant to quit his service is maintainable wherever there is, at the time of the persuading, a binding contract of hiring and service existing between the two parties, whether the service is then actually subsisting or not. Lumley v. Gye, 2 El. & Bl. 216 ; 22 L. J., Q. B. 463 ; 17 Jur. 827 ; 1 W. R. 432.

Semble, per Crompton, J., that the contract need not be for exclusive service, and that an action will lie for maliciously inducing another to break a contract of any description whereby damage accrues to the party with whom the contract has been made. Ib.

But, by Coleridge, J., that the persuading or procuring, whether maliciously or not, a free contracting party to break his contract, to the damage of the party with whom he has contracted, is not actionable ; the general rule of the law being to confine the remedy for breaches of contract to the contracting parties. That between master and servant there is an exception to this law, founded solely on the Statute of Labourers, and limited by it, and that W. not falling within the class of persons provided for in that statute, the action was not maintainable. Ib.

An action lies against a third person who maliciously induces another to break his contract of exclusive personal service with an employer which thereby would naturally cause, and did in fact cause, an injury to such employer, although the relation of master and servant may not strictly exist between the employer and employed. Lumley v. Gye (2 El. & Bl. 216), approved. Bowen v. Hall, 50 L. J., Q. B. 305 ; 6 Q. B. D. 333 ; 44 L. T. 75 ; 29 W. R. 367 ; 45 J. P. 373—C. A.

In order to support an action for enticing away the plaintiff's servant, it is sufficient if a contract of service can be implied from the position in which the plaintiff stood towards the person enticed away. Therefore, where the plaintiff was a publican, and his daughter lived with him, and acted in the capacity of barmaid, but without any express contract of service, and was induced by the defendant to leave the plaintiff's house :—Held, that it might be inferred from the circumstances of the case that the relation of master and servant existed between the plaintiff and his daughter, and that therefore the plaintiff was entitled to sue the defendant for enticing his daughter away. Evans v. Walton, 36 L. J., C. P. 307 ; L. R. 2 C. P. 615 ; 17 L. T. 92 ; 15 W. R. 1062.

—— Employment after Notice of Prior Contract.]—An action will lie against a person who continues to employ the servant of another after notice of a prior contract of service, and in order to maintain such an action it is not necessary that the employer and employed should stand in the strict relation of master and servant. De Francesco v. Barnum, 63 L. T. 514.

—— Service under a Void Contract.]—B., by a memorandum of agreement signed by himself only, agreed to work for the plaintiff, "manufacturer of powder flasks, and for no other person whatsoever, from the 17th August, 1833, during and until the expiration of twelve months, and so on from twelve months' end to twelve months, and until I shall give J. S. (plaintiff) twelve months' notice in writing to quit" :—Held, that, as this agreement contained nothing binding on the plaintiff, it was nudum pactum ; and therefore, although B. served under the agreement till April, 1836, when he left the service and worked for the defendant, who was shewn the agreement in question, and warned that B. was the plaintiff's hired servant, that in an action against the defendant for harbouring the plaintiff's servant, it was competent to the defendant to shew that the contract of hiring was altogether void, under 29 Car. 2, c. 3, s. 4. Sykes v. Dixon, 1 P. & D. 463 ; 9 A. & E. 693 ; 1 W. W. & H. 120 ; 8 L. J., Q. B. 102.

—— Evidence.]—In an action against A., for seducing the servant of B. from his service, it is sufficient evidence that A. asked the servant to enlist in the army, and afterwards gave him money. Keane v. Boycott, 2 H. Bl. 511 ; 3 R. R. 494.

Damages where Injunction only Claimed.]—Where in such an action the employed was also a defendant, but as against him the plaintiff claimed only an injunction, and not damages, it was held that damages might, in the discretion of the court, be given under Lord Cairns' Act (21 & 22 Vict. c. 27), and that the jury, therefore, should be directed by the judge, in the event of a verdict for the plaintiff, to find such damages as should be awarded ; first, if the court should think it a proper case both for injunction and damages ; and secondly, if the court should think it a proper case for damages only, and not for an injunction. Bowen v. Hall, 50 L. J., Q. B. 305 ; 6 Q. B. D. 333 ; 44 L. T. 75 ; 29 W. R. 367 ; 45 J. P. 373—C. A.

Measure of Damages.]—In an action for enticing away the plaintiff's servants, the measure of damages is not to be ascertained at the actual loss which he sustained at the time, but for the injury done him by causing them to leave his employment. Gunter v. Astor, 4 Moore, 12 ; 21 R. R. 733. S. P., Dixon v. Bell, 1 Stark. 287 ; 5 M. & S. 198 ; 17 R. R. 308.

3. Right to Defend Servant.

Against Assault.]—A master may justify an assault in preventing his servant from being beaten. Tickell v. Read, Lofft, 215.

Against Legal Proceedings.]—Where a master and his servant are both liable to an action for libel in respect of matter published by the servant in the master's newspaper, and the action is brought against the servant only, the master is entitled to undertake the defence of the servant. Breay v. Royal British Nurses Association, 66 L. J., Ch. 587 ; [1897] 2 Ch. 272 ; 76 L. T. 735 ; 46 W. R. 86—C. A.

B. Liability of Master.

1. On Contracts of Servants.

a. Goods Supplied.

For Use of Master.]—Where articles are furnished for the use of a master, though the servant was by agreement to provide them, the master is liable to the tradesman who furnishes them. Precious v. Abel, 1 Esp. 350.

If a coachman goes in his master's livery to the plaintiff, and hires horses, which his master afterwards uses, he is bound to pay for the hire of the horses, although he has previously agreed with the coachman that he would pay him a large salary to provide horses, unless the person of whom the horses were hired had some notice that the coachman hired them on his own account and not for his master. Rimell v. Sampayo, 1 Car. & P. 254.

—— New Tradesman.]—If a servant employs a tradesman to do any work who has not been employed before by the master, and the tradesman does the work without communication with the master, though the thing to which the work was done was the property of the master, he is not liable. Hiscox v. Greenwood, 4 Esp. 174.

—— Ready Money Transactions.]—If a person who has been in the habit of paying ready money gives his servant money to buy meat for the use of the family, and the servant, instead of paying ready money, orders the meat on credit and embezzles the money, the master is not liable. Stubbing v. Heintz, Peake, 47; 3 R. R. 651.

And so where the master gives the servant money beforehand to pay for goods. Rusby v. Scarlett, 5 Esp. 76.

But where he authorises his servant to take up goods, and afterwards gives him money to pay, if the servant embezzles the money, the master is liable for the goods. Ib.

Where the master of a family is in the habit of paying ready money for articles furnished in certain quantities to his family, if the tradesman suffers other goods of the same sort to be delivered without informing the master, or satisfying himself that they were for his use, when in fact they were not, the master will not be liable. Pearce v. Rogers, 3 Esp. 214.

—— Weekly Bills—Negligence.]—A baker delivered bread from week to week, and was paid many sums by the housekeeper of his customer, and receipted weekly bills for a period of time subsequent to a time for which the housekeeper had not paid:—Held, in an action by him to recover from his customer the amount of the unpaid bills, that the question of negligence was not raised, and that the plaintiff was entitled to the verdict, as the defendant did not prove that he had given the housekeeper money for the purpose of paying the bills in question. Miller v. Hamilton, 5 Car. & P. 433.

—— Servant altering Master's Order.]—A. ordered of B. two suits of livery a year for her coachman. B. supplied one suit of livery, and at the desire of the coachman supplied plain clothes instead of the other:—Held that B. could only recover from A. the price of the livery actually supplied. Hunter v. Berkeley (Countess Dowager), 7 Car. & P. 413.

B. had, on a previous bill delivered, been paid for a livery suit which he had furnished and immediately taken back from the coachman:—Held, that A. was entitled to be allowed the amount paid for this suit, on a plea of set-off for money had and received pleaded in an action for the amount of a subsequent account for clothes. Ib.

B., who was a tailor, put lace, with the arms of A., his customer, wrought in it, on the livery suits he made for A. B. had the lace made in pieces of fifty yards each at a certain price, but when he made a livery suit he charged A. with the quantity of lace used on that suit, but at a higher price per yard than he gave for it:—Held, than when A. ceased dealing with B., she was not bound to pay for any of this lace that B. then had in his hands. Ib.

—— Scope of Authority.]—A master is not liable for spirituous liquors ordered by his butler in the name of the master, unless he has on former occasions paid for goods so ordered, or there is evidence to shew that the butler had authority from the master for so doing. Maunder v. Conyers, 2 Stark. 281.

Evidence of Authority.]—The defendant's shopman had on various occasions ordered goods on credit for the shop and these orders had been ratified by the defendant; but on every occasion the goods had been ordered by the shopman at the shop, and had also been delivered there:—Held, that this afforded evidence of authority in the shopman to purchase goods on credit from the shopman at another place, and to carry them away himself. Summers v. Solomon, 7 El. & Bl. 879; 26 L. J., Q. B. 301; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 962; 5 W. R. 660.

Notice to Tradesman.]—Where a party has dealt with a tradesman on credit, it is not sufficient to give notice to the tradesman's servant that he means to pay ready money in future; it must be given to the tradesman himself. Gratland v. Freeman, 3 Esp. 85.

A gentleman is liable for corn ordered in his name by a livery stable-keeper, who had been his coachman, and continued to wear his livery, not having given notice to the tradesmen of the employment being at an end. Aste v. Montague, 1 F. & F. 264.

Although, where a servant has once been held out by his master as having authority to pledge his credit, that authority cannot be withdrawn merely by orders to the servant, but there must be notice to the tradesmen; yet, without express evidence of actual notice, there may be evidence from all the circumstances, as lapse of time, or the not sending in accounts, from which it may be inferred that the tradesmen must have known that there was no such authority, and that he did not contract on the credit of the master. Stavely v. Uzielli, 2 F. & F. 30.

b. Other Contracts.

Implied Authority—Railway Servants.]—A servant of a railway company was injured by an accident on the railway. The general manager of the company engaged a medical man to attend upon him, not having any express authority from the company to do so:—Held, in an action against the company by the medical man to recover for his services, that the general manager had an implied authority to engage him, and that the company was therefore liable. Walker v. G. W. Ry., 36 L. J., Ex. 123; L. R. 2 Ex. 228; 16 L. T. 327; 15 W. R. 769.

After a railway company was incorporated by statute, an accident occurred to a passenger on the line in consequence of the negligence of one of the servants of the company:—Held, that neither the engine-driver, the railway guard at the station where this took place, nor the superintendent of the traffic department had implied authority to make contracts obligatory on the company with medical men called in to assist the injured person. Cox v. Midland Counties Ry., 3 Ex. 268 ; 18 L. J., Ex. 65 ; 13 Jur. 65.

But such an authority might be inferred from the conduct of the directors of the company on former occasions in recognising similar contracts made by their officers, or perhaps from evidence that such powers were usually exercised by similar agents of similar companies. Ib.

The person injured by a collision on a railway were carried into an inn, partly by the help of the station-master of the station where the collision took place. A sub-inspector of railway police for the district within which the collision took place, whose duty it was to attend on the spot where an accident occurred, being at such place and time the superior of all station-masters and other servants of the railway company, ordered some brandy to be given to the injured persons, and, in reply to a question of the innkeeper's, as to who would pay for the maintenance of the injured persons, replied, "Don't trouble yourself about that, we'll see that all is right." The innkeeper having brought an action against the railway company for board, lodging, necessaries and goods supplied to the injured persons :—Held, that there was sufficient evidence in support of his claim, and to prove the authority of the sub-inspector to pledge the credit of the company for the items in question supplied to the persons injured. Langan v. G. W. Ry., 30 L. T. 173—Ex. Ch.

Continuing Authority.]—An authority to a servant to sell in market overt is not to be construed as a continuing authority, so as to justify a sale by him elsewhere. Metcalfe v. Lumsden, 1 Car. & K. 309.

Warranty.]—The servant of a private owner, intrusted to sell and deliver a horse on one particular occasion, is not by law authorised to bind his master by a warranty ; the buyer therefore, taking such a warranty, takes it at the risk of being able to prove that the servant had in fact his master's authority for giving it. Brady v. Todd, 9 C. B. (N.S.) 592 ; 30 L. J., C. P. 223 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 827 ; 4 L. T. 212 ; 9 W. R. 483.

But if a servant of a horsedealer warrants his employer's horse on sale without authority, his master is bound thereby. Howard v. Sheward, 36 L. J., C. P. 42 ; L. R. 2 C. P. 148 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 1015 ; 15 L. T. 183 ; 15 W. R. 45.

Evidence of Agency.]—The foreman of a contractor attended a public auction in the neighbourhood for the sale of hay ; the owner, the foreman and contractor were well known to each other, and all were present at the auction, but the owner did not in any way interfere. The foreman bid, lots were knocked down to him as the highest bidder ; he was asked by the auctioneer, who neither knew him nor his master, for his name ; he gave his own, and it was written down by the auctioneer as being declared the purchaser. The goods were afterwards delivered to the master's carts, taken to the master's premises, and consumed by the master's horses, and were in truth bought for the master :—Held, per Pollock, C.B., and Bramwell, B., that there was evidence to go to the jury that the defendant was buying for his master (the contractor), and that the plaintiff knew it, and the jury having found a verdict for the defendant, such verdict should remain :—Held, per Channell and Wilde, BB., that the defendant had made himself personally liable ; that the jury should have been told that if they believed the plaintiff's evidence, although they equally believed the defendant's evidence, that the defendant had made himself a contracting party at the sale, and was liable, though in fact he was only an agent. Williamson v. Barton, 7 H. & N. 899 ; 31 L. J., Ex. 170 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 341 ; 5 L. T. 800 ; 10 W. R. 321.

2. For Wrongful Acts of Servants.

a. General Principles.

Acts within Scope of Authority.]—A master is liable for all the acts of his servant within the scope of his authority, whatever may be the extent to which the servant, acting as such, may abuse that authority. Bayley v. Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Ry., 42 L. J., C. P. 78 ; L. R. 8 C. P. 148 ; 28 L. T. 366—Ex. Ch.

—— Where Criminal.]—The defence that the act complained of amounted to a felony does not apply to an action against a master for damages sustained through the wrongful act of a servant. Osborn v. Gillett, 42 L. J., Ex. 53 ; L. R. 8 Ex. 88 ; 28 L. T. 197 ; 21 W. R. 409.

The master is liable for an act of his servant done in the course of his employment in furtherance of that employment and in his master's interest, and not for purposes of his own, even though a criminal offence may be involved and the master's authority be exceeded. The master's liability is not restricted to the tortious, though non-criminal, acts of his servant. Dyer v. Munday, 64 L. J., Q. B. 448 ; [1895] 1 Q. B. 742 ; 14 R. 306 ; 72 L. T. 448 ; 43 W. R. 440 ; 59 J. P. 276—C. A.

Act contrary to Orders.]—A master is not liable for the wilful act of his servant done contrary to his orders. Green v. Macnamara, 1 L. T. 9.

Unlawful Act.]—A master is answerable in trespass for damage occasioned by his servant's negligence in doing a lawful act in the course of his service ; but not so if the act is in itself unlawful, and if not proved to have been authorised by the master. Lyons v. Martin, 8 A. & E. 512 ; 3 N. & P. 509 ; 7 L. J., Q. B. 214.

As if a servant authorised merely to distrain cattle, damage feasant, drives cattle from the highway into his master's close and there distrains them. Ib.

A master is not liable in trespass for an injury done, without his knowledge, by his servant, though in the course of his employ. Gordon v. Rolt, 4 Ex. 365 ; 7 D. & L. 87 ; 18 L. J., Ex. 432.

—— Servant Employed to Commit.]—Though a person employing a contractor to do a lawful act is not responsible for the negligence or misconduct of the contractor or his servants in executing that act, yet if the act itself is wrongful the employer is responsible for the wrong so done by the contractor or his servants, and is liable to third persons who sustain damage from the doing of that wrong. Ellis v. Sheffield Gas Consumers' Co., 2 El. & Bl. 767; 2 C. L. R. 249; 23 L. J., Q. B. 42; 18 Jur. 146; 2 W. R. 19.

b. Assault.

By Servant of Railway.]—If a servant of a railway company commits an assault by the authority of the company, an action for assault and battery may be maintained against the company. Eastern Counties Ry. v. Broom, 6 Ex. 314; 20 L. J., Ex. 196; 15 Jur. 297—Ex. Ch.

It is not necessary that the servant should be authorised to do the act by an instrument under the seal of the company. Ib.

But where the plaintiff came to the station of a railway company when a passenger train was shortly about to start, and having entered the compartment of the ticket-office where the clerk was then issuing tickets, approached the ticket-press and asked for a ticket, but did not get or pay for one, and a person outside the office called the plaintiff out as the train was about to leave the platform, and, as the plaintiff was leaving the ticket-office, the ticket-clerk, erroneously believing that he had seen a ticket in plaintiff's hand, detained him, asked him for the ticket, and searched him, and subsequently charged the plaintiff, in the presence of the station-master, with having stolen a ticket, whereupon the plaintiff was also searched by the station-master, in an action by the plaintiff against the railway company for assault and false imprisonment:—Held, that there was evidence of their liability for the acts of the ticket-clerk and station-master. Van den Eynde v. Ulster Ry., Ir. R. 5 C. L. 6. Affirmed on appeal, Ir. R. 5 C. L. 328—Ex. Ch.

—— Removing Person from Carriage.]—A passenger sustained injuries in consequence of being violently pulled out of a railway carriage, just after the train had started, by one of the porters, who acted under an erroneous impression that the passenger was not in the right train for the place to which he had booked. The rules of the railway company, a copy of which was given to each porter in their employ, assigned various specific duties to the porters, among others that of not suffering passengers to get in or out of trains in motion, and concluded with a general direction that they were to do all in their power to promote the comfort of the passengers and the interests of the company. It was the duty of the porters to prevent passengers going by wrong trains as far as they could do so, but it was not their duty to remove passengers from the wrong train or carriage:—Held, that there was evidence on which a jury might find that the act of the porter in pulling the passenger out of the carriage was an act done within the course of his employment as the servant of the company, and one for which the company was therefore responsible. Bayley v. Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Ry., 42 L. J., C. P. 78; L. R. 8 C. P. 148; 28 L. T. 366.

A passenger was ejected from a railway carriage by the railway company's servants without excessive violence under an erroneous supposition that he was travelling wrongfully in the carriage:—Held, that there was evidence that what was done was within the scope of the servants' authority. Lowe v. G. N. Ry., 62 L. J., Q. B. 524; 5 R. 535.

By Conductor of Omnibus.]—A passenger by an omnibus, while being forcibly removed from it by a conductor in charge, was thrown on the ground and seriously injured. The proprietor of the omnibus, on being applied to for compensation, stated that the passenger was drunk and had refused to pay his fare. On cross-examination he did not deny that he had been drinking:—Held, that if the conductor intended to put him safely out of the omnibus there was evidence that in so doing he was executing the commands of the proprietor, his master; and that if the injury was caused by the conductor acting without due care in executing such command, the proprietor was responsible. Seymour v. Greenwood, 6 H. & N. 359; 30 L. J., Ex. 189; 9 W. R. 518. Affirmed on appeal, 7 H. & N. 355; 30 L. J., Ex. 327; 4 L. T. 833; 9 W. R. 785—Ex. Ch.

A conductor of a tramcar had by the company's by-laws power to collect fares which were payable on demand, and to prevent people travelling without paying. A passenger refused to pay his fare, and thereupon the conductor took him by the collar and pushed him off the car:—Held, that the company were liable in respect of the assault upon and injuries sustained by the passenger. Smith v. North Metropolitan Tramways Co., 55 J. P. 630—C. A.

Removing Person from House.]—A person who requests another, his servant in that behalf, to remove one making a disturbance in his house, is not responsible for excess of force or violence in carrying out his command. Pidgeon v. Legge, 5 W. R. 649.

Semble, that he may be answerable for a negligent performance of his order. Ib.

By Servant levying Distress.]—The defendant delivered a warrant to bailiffs to levy a distress for rent. The tenant and others resisted the distress, and in the affray one K. was killed by the bailiffs or those assisting them. There was no evidence that the defendant authorised the bailiffs to distrain in an illegal manner:—Held, that the illegal manner in which the distress was effected did not render the defendant liable in an action under Lord Campbell's Act; that K.'s death was caused by an act collateral to the distress, and was not expressly or impliedly the result of the authority given to the bailiffs. Kinsella v. Hamilton, 26 L. R., Ir. 671.

A servant who commits an unnecessary assault in levying a distress is not acting within the scope of his employment. Richards v. West Middlesex Waterworks Co., 54 L. J., Q. B. 551; 15 Q. B. D. 660; 33 W. R. 902; 49 J. P. 631.

Effect of Conviction of Servant.]—Where an assault is committed by a servant acting in the course of his employment, the liability of the master is not affected by the fact that the servant has been released from all further proceedings for the same cause under the provisions of s. 45 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861. Dyer v. Munday, 64 L. J., Q. B. 448; [1895] 1 Q. B. 742; 14 R. 306; 72 L. T. 448; 43 W. R. 440; 59 J. P. 276—C. A.

c. False Imprisonment and Arrest.

Liability of Railway Company.]—A railway company, though a corporation, is liable to an action for false imprisonment if the act is committed by the authority of the company; the authority need not be under seal, but it lies on the plaintiff to give evidence justifying the jury in finding that the company's servants who imprisoned him or some of them had authority from the company to do so. Goff v. G. N. Ry. 3 El. & El. 672 ; 30 L. J., Q. B. 148 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 286 ; 3 L. T. 850.

An action for a malicious prosecution will lie against a company. Stevens v. Midland Ry. (10 Ex. 352) not followed. The employment of policemen by a railway company to protect their property is an act within the scope of the incorporation of the company. Edwards v. Midland Ry., 50 L. J., Q. B. 281 ; 6 Q. B. D. 287 ; 43 L. T. 694 ; 29 W. R. 609 ; 45 J. P. 374.

A constable, who was a servant also of the railway company, after the conclusion of a scuffle in a station-yard between some of the company's servants and other persons, wrongfully gave A. into custody on a charge of assaulting the servants of the company. By the regulations of the company their constables were authorised to take into custody any one they saw committing an assault upon another in any of the stations, and for the purpose of putting an end to any fight or affray ; but they were directed to use this power with extreme caution, and not if the fight or affray was at an end before they interposed :—Held, that the company was not liable for the act of their servant, as the constable in giving A. into custody was not acting within the scope of his employment. Walker v. S. E. Ry., 39 L. J., C. P. 346 ; L. R. 5 C. P. 640 ; 23 L. T. 14 ; 18 W. R. 1032.

B. refused to leave a station-yard of the company, and a struggle thereupon ensued between him and the servants of the company, during which he was wrongfully given in charge by a constable of the company, employed under the above rule :—Held, that there was evidence that the constable was acting within the scope of his employment. Ib.

A foreman porter in the service of a railway company, who, in the absence of the station-master, is in charge of a station, has no implied authority to give in charge a person whom he suspects to be stealing the company's property ; and, if he gives in charge on such suspicion an innocent person, the company is not liable. Edwards v. L. & N. W. Ry., 39 L. J., C. P. 241 ; L. R. 5 C. P. 445 ; 22 L. T. 656 ; 18 W. R. 834.

A clerk in the service of a railway company, whose duty it is to issue tickets to passengers, and to receive the money, and to keep it in a till under his charge, has no implied authority from the company to give into custody a person who he suspects has attempted to rob the till after the attempt has ceased, as such arrest could not be necessary for the protection of the company's property ; and the company is therefore not liable for the act of the clerk. Allen v. L. & S. W. Ry., 40 L. J., Q. B. 55 ; L. R. 6 Q. B. 65 ; 23 L. T. 612 ; 19 W. R. 127 ; 11 Cox, C. C. 621.

A passenger took a return ticket from the Mansion House to Notting-hill Gate. On reaching Edgware Road, a station beyond Notting-hill Gate, he got out, but was informed that he must pay an additional fare of 2*d.* This he refused to do. He was thereupon given into custody by the inspector of the railway station upon the charge of refusing to give up his ticket, or pay his fare, and thereby defrauding the company. This charge was dismissed. The passenger having brought an action of trespass and false imprisonment :—Held, that, as the company was empowered under the Railways Clauses Act (8 & 9 Vict. c. 20), s. 104, to arrest persons committing frauds under s. 103, and as the inspector was their representative at Edgware Road, it must be presumed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that the inspector had authority from the company to arrest persons supposed to be guilty of committing offences against that section, and that the company was liable for his mistake. Moore v. Metropolitan Ry., 42 L. J., Q. B. 23 ; L. R. 8 Q. B. 36 ; 27 L. T. 579 ; 21 W. R. 145.

A passenger took his ticket from Monk's Ferry to Bangor and back. The company's line extended from Monk's Ferry to Chester, and the Chester and Holyhead Railway continued the line to Bangor. On his return at Chester, the ticket collector demanded 2*s.* 6*d.*, which the passenger refused to pay ; he was thereupon taken into custody by a railway servant, under the direction of a superintendent, and removed to the police station, where he paid the money under protest, and was released. The Chester station was occupied by the company, and by other railway companies ; one of the witnesses stated that he believed the person who took the passenger into custody was a servant of the company. His attorney having written to the secretary of the company for compensation, received a written answer from him, requesting that he might be furnished with the date of the transaction, and promising to make the necessary inquiries. He afterwards stated that it was an awkward business, and that the blame would fall upon the station-clerk ; he also offered to repay to the attorney the 2*s.* 6*d.* which had been overpaid. This was refused :—Held, in an action against the company for the arrest, that there was no evidence of authority for the arrest, or of subsequent ratification by them, and that they were not liable. Roe v. Birkenhead, Lancashire, and Cheshire Junction Ry., 7 Ex. 36 ; 6 Railw. Cas. 795 ; 21 L. J., Ex. 9.

A person took a ticket as a passenger by a railway, and by the same train his horse was conveyed, in respect of which (by an arrangement of the company) nothing was payable. On reaching his destination, he gave up his ticket, and was leaving the station with his horse, when he was taken into custody by the direction of the station-master for non-payment of the fare alleged to be due for the horse :—Held, that the arrest was not within the powers conferred on railway companies by 8 & 9 Vict. c. 20, ss. 103, 104, and that the company was not liable for the act of the station-master. Poulton v. L. & S. W. Ry., 8 B. & S. 616 ; 36 L. J., Q. B. 294 ; L. R. 2 Q. B. 534 ; 17 L. T. 11 ; 16 W. R. 309.

If a servant of a railway company, acting on behalf of the company, assaults and imprisons a passenger to compel him to pay his fare for riding in a carriage of the company, the act of the servant is one which may be for the benefit of the company, and may be ratified by the company. Eastern Counties Ry. v. Broom, 6 Ex. 314 ; 20 L. J., Ex. 196 ; 15 Jur. 297—Ex. Ch.

A passenger had been taken into custody by a railway inspector charged with having no ticket, refusing to pay the fare, intoxication, and assaulting the inspector. At the hearing before the magistrate, the solicitor of the company attended to conduct the proceedings :—Held, that such attendance was no evidence of ratification by the company. Ib.

A quarrel having arisen on the premises of a railway company between a servant of the company and a number of persons, amongst whom was A., the company's servant gave A. into custody on a charge of assaulting him and obstructing him in the discharge of his duty. In an action by A. against the company for an assault and false imprisonment:—Held, that the company could not be made responsible for this act of their servant. Lumsden v. L. & S. W. Ry., 16 L. T. 609. And see Van den Eynde v. Ulster Ry., supra, col. 929.

Liability of Tramway Company.]—Where the servant of a public company, who was directed to exclude the public from an inclosed portion of a street, then being repaired by the company under the provisions of a local act of parliament (which empowered the company to exclude the public, and rendered any person obstructing the company's servants liable to a fine), forcibly prevented one of the public from driving into and through such inclosure, and such person was arrested in consequence by a police constable:—Held, that even if such arrest was caused by the direct accusation or charge of the servant, the company were not responsible for such arrest, as being a matter not within the scope of the servant's employment. Barry v. Dublin Tramways Co., 26 L. R., Ir. 150.

A passenger on a tramway tendered a half-sovereign to the conductor of the car in payment of the fare. The conductor, supposing the coin to be counterfeit, gave the passenger in charge to the police:—Held, that the tramway company were liable in an action against them by the passenger for false imprisonment. Furlong v. South London Tramways Co., 1 Cab. & E. 316; 48 J. P. 329.

Sect. 52 of the Tramways Act, 1870, which enacts that "it shall be lawful for any officer or servant of the promoters or lessees of any tramway" to detain any person defrauding the company of his fare, must be construed as limited to any officer or servant appointed for that purpose. A tramway company gave to their conductors printed instructions, in which it was ordered that, except in cases of assault, conductors were not to give passengers into custody without the authority of an inspector or timekeeper. The conductor of a car, in which the plaintiff was a passenger, detained the plaintiff, and gave her into custody on a charge of passing bad money:—Held, in an action for false imprisonment against the company, that the defendants were not liable. Charleston v. London Tramways Co., 36 W. R. 367. Affirmed, 32 S. J. 557—C. A.

Liability of Public-house Proprietor.]—The plaintiff and M. went to a public-house belonging to the defendant, and ordered some refreshment from the bar-manager. M. tendered a foreign gold coin in payment, but the manager refused to take it, and handed it back to M., who then gave him a half-sovereign and received the change. The plaintiff and M. shortly afterwards left the house. The manager followed them, and subsequently gave them into custody upon a charge of attempting to pass bad coin. In an action for false imprisonment:—Held, that the bar-manager had no implied authority from the defendant to give the plaintiff and M. into custody, the supposed attempt having ceased, and the arrest being unnecessary for the protection of the defendant's property, and that the action was therefore not maintainable. Abrahams v. Deakin, 60 L. J., Q. B. 238; [1891] 1 Q. B. 516; 63 L. T. 690; 39 W. R. 183; 55 J. P. 212—C. A.

Protection of Master's Property.]—A servant has an implied authority to give a person into custody only when it is necessary to take such a step to protect his master's property. If a servant gives a person into custody when no such danger exists, the master will not be liable. Stevens v. Hinshelwood, 55 J. P. 341—C. A.

By Servants of Railway Company.]—Trover for quicks and plants against a railway company. On the trial the judge ruled that there was sufficient evidence of a conversion by the company. To this ruling the company excepted. The verdict was for the plaintiff. The bill of exceptions set forth the evidence. By this it appeared that the plaintiff was a contractor, planting hedges for the company at one of their stations, and was owner of live thorns which had been placed, by leave of A. (called in the bill or exceptions the general superintendent of the company), in a piece of ground belonging to the company, and close to the station. The plaintiff demanded these thorns from the station-master, and was referred to A., and A., professing to act for the company, refused to let the plaintiff remove them. It did not appear when or under what circumstances the thorns were brought to the station. The majority of the judges construed the bill of exceptions as meaning that the thorns had been carried as merchandise on the line, and left in the company's ground with their roots covered, as a mode of warehousing them for a reasonable time, in such a manner as they might remain alive. Taff Vale Ry. v. Giles, 2 El. & Bl. 822; 2 C. L. R. 132; 23 L. J., Q. B. 43; 18 Jur. 510; 2 W. R. 57—Ex. Ch.

Held, that it is the duty of a company carrying on trade to have on the spot all that in ordinary exigencies of their business might require to be done promptly, that there was sufficient evidence that A. had authority to this extent from the company, and that it was unnecessary to shew any authority under seal. Ib.

Held, also, that to give up, or refuse to give up on demand, goods left with the company in the course of their trade as carriers, was an act within the scope of such authority, and that, on the construction put on the bill of exceptions by the majority of the judges, the thorns were so left, and, therefore, there was evidence of a conversion by the company. Ib.

Privity of Contract.]—By an agreement between the Smithfield Club and the defendants, who were proprietors of a building and premises at Islington called the Agricultural Hall, the club was to have the exclusive use of the hall during the period of their annual show of stock, the defendants providing and paying a sufficient staff (who were to be under the sole control of the secretary and stewards of the club) to receive, take care of, and re-deliver the stock exhibited, and also paying the club 1,000*l.*, in consideration of which the defendants were to receive certain fees or admission money from the visitors. The stock and articles to be exhibited were received at the gate of the defendants' premises by Sharman (upon orders signed by the secretary of the Smithfield Club), who contracted with the defendants for a lump sum to receive them and to re-deliver them at the end of the show upon like orders: the defendants in no way interfering. One Stilgoe, who exhibited a pen of three sheep at the show in 1873, sold them to the plaintiff; and upon the plaintiff's drover producing an order for their removal signed by Stilgoe, Sharman or one of his men delivered him by mistake sheep from another pen. These the plaintiff rejected, and he brought an action against the defendants for converting his sheep: —Held, that, as between the plaintiff and the defendants, there was no privity of contract and no duty on the part of the latter to re-deliver the stock at the close of the show. Goslin v. Agricultural Hall Co., 1 C. P. D. 482; 45 L. J., C. P. 354, n.; 35 L. T. 92—C. A. Affirming, 45 L. J., C. P. 348; 34 L. T. 59.

e. Negligence.

i. Generally.

According to the principles of English law, the responsibility of a master for the negligence of his servant is founded on the presumption that the owner chooses his servant, and gives him orders which he is bound to obey. The Halley, 5 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 262; 37 L. J., Adm. 33; L. R. 2 P. C. 193; 18 L. T. 879; 16 W. R. 998.

For complaints by the public the master is responsible. Thus, if a servant drives his master's carriage over a bystander; or if a gamekeeper, employed to kill game, fires at a hare so as to shoot a bystander; or if a workman employed in building negligently drops a stone from the scaffold and so hurts a bystander, in all these cases the bystander is entitled to claim reparation from the master, because the master is bound to guarantee the public against all damage arising from the wrongful or careless acts of himself or of his servants. Bartonshill Coal Co. v. Reid, 3 Macq. H. L. 266; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 767; 6 W. R. 664.

In all cases where a master gives the direction and control over a carriage or an animal to a rational agent, the master is only responsible in an action on the case for want of skill or care of the agent. Sharrod v. L. & N. W. Ry., 6 Railw. Cas. 239; 7 D. & L. 213; 20 L. J., Ex. 185; 14 Jur. 23.

Intervention of Act of Third Person between Servant's Negligence and Injury.] —Where the negligence of a servant is an effective cause of an injury, the intervention, between the negligence of the servant and the injury, of the negligence of another person which immediately causes the injury, does not relieve the master from his liability for the negligence of his servant. Engelhart v. Farrant, 66 L. J., Q. B. 122; [1897] 1 Q. B. 240; 75 L. T. 617; 45 W. R. 179—C. A. See also Murphy v. G. N. Ry., infra, col. 937.

ii. Railway Employees.

Plaintiff travelled with a ticket issued by the D. company over defendants' railway in a carriage belonging to the D. company. By the defendants' act of parliament, the D. company had running powers over the line, the defendants receiving a percentage on the traffic receipts, such percentage to include the cost of all services connected with manning the lines, use of stations, and services of station staff necessary for dispatch of business connected with the traffic. The plaintiff was injured at a station belonging to the defendants by the negligence of a porter employed on a platform which was exclusively allotted to the D. company's traffic:—Held, that the porter was acting as the defendants' servant, and that therefore the defendants were liable. Self v. L., B. & S. C. Ry., 42 L. T. 173; 44 J. P. 344—C. A.

The defendants' railway crossed a level crossing which was some twenty yards distant from a footbridge. Both the crossing and the bridge were private crossings, intended for the use of persons employed in a neighbouring manufactory. About thirty yards from the crossing was a box where a railway man was commonly stationed, who was sometimes shouted to by persons wishing to pass the level crossing with carts, and answered "All right." The plaintiff, a boy of eleven years of age, who was employed at the manufactory, having occasion to go over the line, was waiting at the level crossing until one train had passed, but was knocked down and severely injured, when in the act of crossing, by another train, which he had not observed, and which was passing in the opposite direction immediately afterwards. At the trial there was evidence that the bridge was dirty and not lighted at the time of the accident; that the train did not whistle; that the plaintiff knew the bridge, having crossed it several times; and that the man at the box used to bring out a stick to stop him from going over the bridge, but that when the accident happened he was not present. There was no evidence to shew what the man's special duties were, or whether he had any duties in respect to foot-passengers. Upon this evidence the learned judge was asked to nonsuit the plaintiff:—Held, on further consideration, that there was evidence of negligence to go to the jury, and that the conduct of the railway man was a distinct breach of duty which amounted to negligence and contributed to the accident. Clarke v. Midland Ry., 43 L. T. 381.

The stations of the defendants and of two other railway companies at Bristol adjoined, and were open to one another, and the passengers of each company were in the habit of passing directly from one to the other, the whole area being used as common ground by the passengers of all three companies. While the plaintiff was standing on the defendants' platform, on his way from the terminus of one of the other companies to the booking-office of the other company, waiting for his luggage, a porter of the defendants negligently drove a truck laden with luggage, and a portmanteau fell off and injured the plaintiff:—Held, that as the negligence complained of was an act of misfeasance by a servant of the defendants in the course of his employment, the maxim of respondeat superior applied; and that, in the circumstances, they were liable. Tebbutt v. Bristol and Exeter Ry., 40 L. J., Q. B. 78; L. R. 6 Q. B. 73; 23 L. T. 772; 19 W. R. 383.

M. was a cloak-room clerk in the defendants' employ, and assisted at the parcels office; he "used to take up parcels for passengers from the cloak room to the train, when there was no porter there, and that was a regular thing for him to do." A passenger had asked him to take a parcel to the train, which he did, and as he was running back, he ran against another porter, who in his turn came against the ticket-collector, and the ticket-collector upset the plaintiff's wife, causing injuries which resulted in her death. At the trial the plaintiff was nonsuited, on the ground that there was no evidence that at the time of the accident M. was acting within the scope of his employment. It was agreed at the trial that, if the court should be of opinion that the nonsuit was wrong, judgment should be entered for the plaintiff for 236*l.* and costs :—Held, that there was evidence to go to the jury that at the time of the accident M. was acting within the scope of his employment, that the nonsuit was wrong, and that judgment should be entered for the plaintiff as agreed. Milner v. G. N. Ry., 50 L. T. 367.

A railway porter wheeled a barrow with luggage thereon to a side entrance to the defendants' station, and left it stationary close to the top of some steps leading down to the public footpath outside. Some licensed porters, not employed by or subject to the control of the defendants, rushed up the steps—as was usual when the constable whose duty it was to keep them off the platform and to maintain order amongst them was absent, as he was on this occasion—and in a struggle for the luggage upset the barrow of trunks. These tumbled down the steps and injured the plaintiff, a passenger, who was waiting on the footpath for his luggage to be brought out :—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover. Murphy v. G. N. Ry., [1897] 2 Ir. R. 301.

A railway train, driven at the rate of forty miles an hour according to the general directions of the railway company to the driver, ran over and killed some sheep, which had strayed on the line in consequence of the defective fences of the company :—Held, that, the train being under the direction and control of a rational agent, the company was not liable in trespass for the injury, but that the proper form of action was by action on the case, either for permitting the fences to be out of repair, or for directing the servant to drive at such a rate as to interfere with the right of the sheep to be on the line of railway. Sharrod v. L. & N. W. Ry., 6 Railw. Cas. 239 ; 7 D. & L. 213 ; 20 L. J., Ex. 185 ; 14 Jur. 23.

iii. Servants in Charge of Horses and Vehicles.

Horse.]—The plaintiff was driving a waggon with three horses along a highway, walking in the usual way at the head of the leading horse, on his proper side of the road. The defendant and his groom were riding by at a foot pace (meeting the waggon on the wrong side), when just as he passed the plaintiff, the groom touched his horse with his spur and the horse kicked out and struck the plaintiff :—Held, that the act of using the spur when so near to the plaintiff was such an improper act on the part of the groom as to justify the jury in finding the defendant to have been guilty of negligence. North v. Smith, 10 C. B. (N.S.) 572 ; 4 L. T. 407.

A person occasionally employed by the defendant as his servant, being sent out by him on his business, took the horse of another person, in whose service he also worked, and, in going, rode over the plaintiff. At the trial, it was left for the jury to say, whether or not the horse was taken by the servant with the implied consent or authority of the defendant ; and they having found a verdict for the plaintiff, the court refused to grant a new trial. Goodman v. Kennell, 1 M. & P. 241 ; 3 Car. & P. 167 ; 6 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 61.

Where a servant wantonly, and not in the execution of his master's orders, struck the plaintiff's horses, and thereby produced an accident, the master is not liable ; but where he so struck them in the course of his employment, although injudiciously, the master is responsible. Croft v. Alison, 4 B. & Ald. 590 ; 23 R. R. 407.

Stage Coach.]—The proprietors of a mail-coach are answerable for any injury happening to a passenger through the misconduct of their driver. White v. Boulton, Peake, 81 ; 3 R. R. 657.

But coach-owners are not liable for injuries happening to passengers from accident or misfortune, where there has been no negligence nor default in the driver. Aston v. Heaven, 2 Esp. 533 ; 5 R. R. 750. S. P., Christie v. Griggs, 2 Camp. 79 ; Crofts v. Waterhouse, 11 Moore, 133 ; 3 Bing. 319 ; 4 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 75 ; 28 R. R. 631.

The proprietor of a stage-coach is answerable for the negligence of the driver, from the usual place of taking passengers, not only till the coach arrives at its destination, but till the passengers are safely set down. Dudley v. Smith, 1 Camp. 167 ; 10 R. R. 661.

The driver of a stage-coach before passing through any place that is dangerous, is bound to inform the passengers of the full extent of the danger ; and if he proceeds without giving them this information, the proprietor is liable for any injury they may thereby suffer, which they might have escaped by alighting. Ib.

If, when dangers occur, the driver of a stage-coach does not take the safest course, the owner is responsible for the mischief which ensues. Jackson v. Tollett, 2 Stark. 37 ; 19 R. R. 673.

If a declaration in an action against coach proprietors, for an injury received by the overturning of a coach, states that it was their duty to carry the plaintiff safely for a certain hire, it does not mean to carry safely at all events, but will be sufficiently supported by proof of the want of due care. Harris v. Costar, 1 Car. & P. 636.

Omnibus.]—A driver of an omnibus while driving his master's omnibus in regular course, wilfully and contrary to express orders endeavoured to obstruct the passage along the road of another omnibus belonging to a rival proprietor, by drawing his omnibus across the road :—Held, this was such an act as the master was not responsible for. Limpus v. London General Omnibus Co., 1 H. & C. 526 ; 32 L. J., Ex. 34 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 333 ; 7 L. T. 641 ; 11 W. R. 149—Ex. Ch.

The fact that a passenger in an omnibus is struck by the driver's whip is primâ facie evidence of negligence by the driver in the course of his employment ; and even if it appears that the blow was struck at the servant of another omnibus with whom there had been a dispute, and who had jumped on the omnibus step to get its number, it is a question for the jury whether the blow was struck by the driver in private spite or in supposed furtherance of his employer's interests. Ward v. London General Omnibus Co., 42 L. J., C. P. 265 ; 28 L. T. 850—Ex. Ch. Affirming, 21 W. R. 358.

A passenger was getting out of an omnibus before it stopped, when the conductor told her to wait. She continued to move towards the door, and he took her hand and supported her to the step, from which she fell to the ground :—

Held, that this was not such negligence on the part of the servant as to render the master liable. Lingard v. Kirkpatrick, 15 L. T. 245.

—— Proceedings before Magistrate—Bar to Action.]—In an action for damages against the proprietors of an omnibus, in respect of injuries caused by negligence of their driver, they pleaded that plaintiff was awarded and had accepted a sum of money as compensation, by a magistrate having jurisdiction to award the same :—Held, a good defence to the action, notwithstanding such order was not made on the proprietors but on the driver. Wright v. London General Omnibus Co., 46 L. J., Q. B. 429 ; 2 Q. B. D. 271 ; 25 W. R. 647.

Cab.]—In an action against the registered proprietor of a cab for the loss of a portmanteau by the negligence of the licensed driver, it appeared that the arrangement between the proprietor and the driver was, that the driver paid each morning a fixed sum for the use of the cab and two horses during the day, and was allowed to keep for himself all the money which he received. The cab had upon it a plate with the name of the defendant as the proprietor, in pursuance of 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 22, s. 20, but the proprietor did not exercise any control over the driver as to where he should ply with the cab :—Held, that, under the circumstances proved, and the 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 22, and 6 & 7 Vict. c. 86, the driver was the servant or agent of the proprietor, with authority to enter into contracts for the employment of the cab, on which the proprietor was liable ; and therefore the action was rightly brought against him. Powles v. Hider, 6 El. & Bl. 207 ; 25 L. J., Q. B. 331 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 472 ; 4 W. R. 492.

A person was run over and sustained injuries through furious driving on the part of a cab driver, and brought an action for such injuries against the proprietor of the cab. The arrangement between the proprietor and the driver was that the horse and cab were entrusted by the former to the latter for the day, to be used entirely at the driver's discretion during the day, for the purpose of plying for hire. The driver was to pay 16*s.* for the cab ; all that he made above that sum was his perquisite for his labour, and any deficiency he had to make good afterwards. There was no particular time fixed for going out or returning with the cab. On the day when the accident occurred, the driver was on his way back with the cab to the stables of the proprietor, intending to return the cab. When he came to the end of the mews in which the stables were, he went on with the cab to a tobacconist's a little way off and purchased some snuff, and on his way back to the stables the accident happened :—Held, that the proprietor was liable for the acts of the driver while acting within the scope of the purposes for which the cab was intrusted to him, as a master for the acts of his servant, and that the driver was at the time of the accident so acting. Venables v. Smith, 46 L. J., Q. B. 470 ; 2 Q. B. D. 279 ; 36 L. T. 509 ; 25 W. R. 584.

The provisions of the Hackney Carriage Acts do not necessarily impose upon cab proprietors and drivers the relation of master and servant. Where, therefore, by the terms of the contract between them, such a relation is not established, and, apart from the provisions of the act, they are only in the position of bailor and bailee, the proprietor is not liable in an action for damages caused by the negligent driving of the driver. Powles v. Hider (6 El. & Bl. 207) and Venables v. Smith (2 Q. B. D. 279) distinguished. King v. Spurr, 51 L. J., Q. B. 105 ; 8 Q. B. D. 104 ; 45 L. T. 709 ; 30 W. R. 152 ; 46 J. P. 198.

Under the Metropolitan Hackney Carriage Act, 1843, so far as the public is concerned, the proprietor of a hackney carriage is responsible for the acts of the driver whilst plying for hire, as if the relationship of master and servant existed between them. Venables v. Smith (2 Q. B. D. 279) approved. King v. London Improved Cab Co., 58 L. J., Q. B. 456 ; 23 Q. B. D. 281 ; 61 L. T. 34 ; 37 W. R. 737 ; 53 J. P. 788—C. A.

Carriage or Chaise.]—A master is responsible for injury resulting from the negligence of his servant whilst driving his cart or carriage, provided the servant is at the time engaged in the business of his master, even though the accident happened in a place where his master's business did not call him ; but if the journey on which the servant starts is solely for his own purposes, and undertaken without the knowledge or consent of his master, the latter is not responsible. Mitchell v. Crasweller, 13 C. B. 237 ; 22 L. J., C. P., 100 ; 17 Jur. 716 ; 1 W. R. 153.

A master is not liable in trespass for the wilful act of his servant, as by driving his master's carriage against another, done without the direction or assent of the master ; but he is liable to answer for any damage arising to another from the negligence or unskilfulness of his servant acting in his employ. M'Manus v. Crickett, 1 East, 106 ; 5 R. R. 518.

Where a master intrusts his servant with his carriage for a given purpose, and the servant drives it for another purpose of his own, in a direction different from that ordered by his master, and in doing so drives over a person, the master is liable for such negligence. Heath or Sleath v. Wilson, 2 M. & Rob. 181 ; 9 Car. & P. 607.

The defendant, who kept two horses at a livery stable, being desirous of trying them in double harness, had them put into his carriage and driven by a groom employed at the stable, whilst he himself sat beside the groom. As the groom was driving, the horses were startled by a dog and became unmanageable to such an extent that the groom could not stop them, though he still retained some control over them. The groom endeavoured to turn down a side street, but, failing to do so, drove on to the pavement and injured the plaintiff. The jury having found that there was no negligence on the part of any one :—Held, that the act of the groom in giving to the horses the direction which brought them on the pavement and into collision with the plaintiff, being neither negligent nor wilful, did not give a cause of action. Holmes v. Mather, 44 L. J., Ex. 176 ; L. R. 10 Ex. 261 ; 33 L. T. 361 ; 23 W. R. 364.

In an action for injuries sustained through the negligent driving of one of defendant's servants, the only question being whether the defendant was responsible for such negligence, it appeared that the defendant was the proprietor of an hotel and shop in the town of C., and kept a pony and chaise for his own personal use. They were not used for the purpose of the defendant's business. The accident which occasioned the injuries occurred during the temporary absence of the defendant, who had left a servant, E., in charge of the shop only, with authority to sell goods and generally to see that things went right in his absence. The defendant gave E. no authority to drive. Another servant, named M., was in charge of the yard, and it was his duty to drive when defendant required. A housekeeper had charge of the house. While the defendant was so absent, one of his relatives, Q., who admittedly had no authority to act as his agent, called at the house, and when leaving E., at Q.'s request, drove Q. in the pony chaise to the neighbouring railway station. When E. was driving the pony and chaise back from the station the accident took place:—Held, that there was no evidence proper to be submitted to the jury that E. was at the time of the accident acting in the course of his employment as the defendant's servant. Wilson v. Owens, 16 L. R. Ir. 225. Affirmed in C. A.

A van was standing at A.'s door, from which A.'s goods were unloading, and A.'s gig was standing behind the van. B.'s coachman, who was driving B.'s carriage, came up, and, there not being room for the carriage to pass, the coachman got off his box and laid hold of the van horse's head; this caused the van to move and thereby a packing-case fell out of the van upon the shafts of the gig and broke them:—Held, that B. was not liable for this, as the coachman was not acting in the employ of B. at the time of the accident. Lamb v. Palk, 9 Car. & P. 629.

A master is responsible for an injury occasioned by negligent driving of his servant, where he is acting at the time in his service, and in a manner impliedly sanctioned by him. Patten v. Rea, 2 C. B. (N.S.) 606; 26 L. J., C. P. 235; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 892; 5 W. R. 689.

A., the general manager of a defendant, proprietor of a horse repository, was possessed of a horse and gig, which were kept for a time upon the defendant's premises free of charge, and were used by A. in the conduct of the defendant's business. In going (without the knowledge of the defendant) upon his business, with the horse and gig, A. drove against and killed the plaintiff's horse:—Held, that the defendant was responsible; and that it was immaterial that A. was also going on private business of his own. Ib.

Trespass lies against a master for the act of his servant, where, while the servant is driving his master in a gig, the horse runs away and does damage. Chandler v. Broughton, 1 C. & M. 29; 3 Tyr. 220; 2 L. J., Ex. 25.

Cart.]—A herd got leave from his master to go for the day to a neighbouring town to transact business of his own, and borrowed his master's horse and tax-cart for the purpose. He afterwards proposed, and the master assented, that he should bring home some meat from the town for the master. He drove the horse and tax-cart so negligently that he injured the plaintiff:—Held, in an action against the master for the negligence of the servant, that the court could not hold as a matter of law, upon the evidence, that the master was responsible for the negligence of the servant. Cormick v. Digby, Ir. R. 9 C. L. 557.

If a servant in driving his master's cart, on his master's business, makes a detour from the direct road for some purpose of his own, his master will be answerable for any injury occasioned by his negligent driving while so out of the road. Joel v. Morison, 6 Car. & P. 501.

But if a servant takes his master's cart without leave, at a time when it is not wanted for the purpose of business, and drives it about solely for his own purposes, the master will not be answerable for any injury which he may do. Ib.

A carman, without his master's permission, and for a purpose of his own wholly unconnected with his master's business, took out his master's horse and cart, and on his way home negligently ran against a cab and damaged it. The course of the employment of the carman was, that, with the horse and cart, he took out beer to the customers of his master, who was a brewer, and in returning to the brewery he called for empty casks wherever they would be likely to be collected, for which he received from his master a gratuity of 1*d.* each. At the time of the accident the carman had with him two casks which he had picked up on his return journey at a public-house which his master supplied, and for which he afterwards received the customary 1*d.*:—Held, that the carman had not re-entered upon his ordinary duties at the time of the accident, and therefore the master was not liable. Rayner v. Mitchell, 2 C. P. D. 357; 25 W. R. 633.

A wine merchant sent his clerk with his horse and cart under the care of his carman, to deliver wine and bring back empty bottles. On their return, when within a quarter of a mile from his master's stable, the carman, at the request of the clerk and for his business, drove the horse and cart in another direction, and when two miles from the stable injured a person by negligent driving:—Held, that the master was not liable, as the act of the servant was not done in the course of his employment, but on a new and an independent journey. Storey v. Ashton, 10 B. & S. 337; 38 L. J., Q. B. 223; L. R. 4 Q. B. 476; 17 W. R. 727.

In an action for damage done to the plaintiff's cabriolet, against which the defendant's cart was driven, the defendant will be liable, although it should appear that his servant was not driving at the time of the accident, but had entrusted the reins to a stranger who was riding with him, and who was not in the service of the defendant. Booth v. Mister, 7 Car. & P. 66.

The defendant sent out with a horse and cart for the delivery of parcels a driver, whose duty it was to drive the cart, and a youth whose duty it was to deliver the parcels, but not to drive at all. The driver left the cart, and during his absence the youth, in order to further the defendant's business, proceeded to turn the cart round, and while so doing caused injury to the plaintiff's vehicle:—Held, that the negligence of the driver in leaving the cart without proper attendance was an effective cause of the injury, and that the defendant was liable for that negligence; and that his liability was not removed by the intervention of the act of the youth outside the scope of his employment, which was the proximate cause of the injury. Engelhart v. Farrant, 66 L. J., Q. B. 122; [1897] 1 Q. B. 240; 75 L. T. 617; 45 W. R. 179—C. A.

In an action for death caused or injuries sustained, through being run over by a vehicle driven by a servant, evidence that he might have seen the plaintiff or the deceased in time to pull up, if he had not been looking at his horses owing to the want of a skid in going down hill, is sufficient evidence of negligence; and even although there was some negligence on the part of the deceased in crossing the road, yet the master is liable if his servant, by the exercise of reasonable care, could have seen the deceased and avoided the accident. Springett v. Ball, 4 F. & F. 472.

—— Privity of Contract.]—The plaintiff, a person of full age, contracted with the defendant to carry goods for her in his cart. The defendant sent his servant with the cart, and the plaintiff, by the permission of the servant, but without the defendant's authority, rode in the cart with her goods. On the way the cart broke down, and the plaintiff was thrown out and severely injured:—Held, that, as the defendant had not contracted to carry the plaintiff, and as she had ridden in the cart without his authority, he was not liable for the personal injury she had sustained. Lygo v. Newbold, 9 Ex. 302; 2 C. L. R. 449; 23 L. J., Ex. 108; 2 W. R. 158.

—— Pleadings.]—A declaration which charges the defendant with having negligently driven his cart against the plaintiff's horse is supported by evidence that the defendant's servant drove the cart. Brucker v. Formont, 6 Term Rep. 659; 3 R. R. 303.

iv. Servants in Charge of Harbours and Docks.

Harbour-master.]—The R., which was anchored in F., outer harbour, having to be beached in the inner harbour, S., the harbour-master, directed the master of the R. where to beach her. Before the R. left the outer harbour, S. came on board, although a Trinity-house pilot was on board, and when she had arrived near the place where she had to be beached, gave directions as to the lowering of her anchor. The R. overran her anchor and grounded on it, sustaining damage. In an action against the harbour commissioners and S., the court found as a fact that there was negligence on the part of S., and that the place where the R. grounded was outside the jurisdiction of the harbour commissioners:—Held, that the duties of the harbour-master comprised directions as to the mooring and beaching of vessels; that by giving directions when he went on board, S. had resumed the functions as harbour-master, and that he and the commissioners were therefore liable for the damage done to the R. The Rhosina, 54 L. J., P. 72; 10 P. D. 131; 53 L. T. 30; 33 W. R. 794; 5 Asp. M. C. 460—C. A.

A ship having sustained an injury which made it necessary that she should be grounded, the acting harbour-master suggested or permitted that she should be grounded in a lock which had previously been used for a like purpose. The harbour-master represented that the bottom of the lock was even, and that the operation could safely be performed. There was, however, a sill several inches high at the bottom, and the ship being fully laden, her keel was broken and the hull strained. The owners sued the dock company for damages:—Held, that the harbour-master was acting within the scope of his authority in permitting this use of the lock; that the company was responsible for his representation, and that he was guilty of negligence. The Apollo, Little v. Port Talbot Co., 61 L. J., P. 25; [1891] A. C. 499; 65 L. T. 590; 7 Asp. M. C. 115; 55 J. P. 820—H. L. (E.)

Foreman of Dockyard—Liability of Government Officials.]—A barge belonging to the plaintiffs was moored in Chatham Dockyard at a berth pointed out by the foreman, and the barge was there damaged. In an action to recover the amount of the damage from the port admiral, the admiral superintendent, and the queen's harbour-master of Chatham dockyard, being the officials in charge of the dockyard, the jury found that the berth was unsafe, and gave a verdict for the plaintiffs:—Held, that there being no act of parliament and no order in council rendering the defendants liable, their liability must be decided on common law principles, and that the doctrine of "respondeat superior" does not apply in such a case, but the doctrine of invitation does apply, and as there was no evidence that the defendants invited the plaintiff to moor the barge where they did, the defendants were not liable, and judgment must be for them. Wright v. Lethbridge, 63 L. T. 572; 6 Asp. M. C. 558—C. A.

Traffic Foreman—Authority of.]—The plaintiff's ship, the C., was ordered by the defendant company, the consignees of the C.'s cargo, to proceed to the defendant's wharf to discharge. On her arrival the defendant's traffic foreman wrote to her master saying he could bring the C. to the wharf at a certain time, and stating the then depth of the water, and asking him to inform the pilot thereof. On the C. proceeding to the wharf, but before she got into her berth, she grounded on a ridge of mud which had been formed between the berth next the quay and another outside it, and sustained the damage in respect of which her owners now sued the wharfingers:—Held, that even if there had been any misrepresentation the traffic foreman had no authority to make it. The Calliope, 59 L. T. 901; 6 Asp. M. C. 359. But see S. C. in C. A., 58 L. J., P. 76; 14 P. D. 138; 38 W. R. 155.

Carman delivering Coals—Removal of Plate in Footway.]—The carman of a coal merchant, for the purpose of delivering coals at the premises of a customer, removed an iron plate in the footway which covered an opening communicating with the coal cellar. The plaintiff was passing along the footway at the time. The carman gave her no warning that the plate was taken up, and in consequence of his negligence in not taking due precautions, without any want of due care on her part, she fell into the opening and sustained injuries:—Held, in an action against the coal merchant for negligence, that he was responsible, as the carman was acting as his servant in the delivery of the coals. Whiteley v. Pepper, 46 L. J., Q. B. 436; 2 Q. B. D. 276; 36 L. T. 588; 25 W. R. 607.

Servant delivering Goods—Truck left on Road—Intoxication.]—A cornfactor was absent from his shop, and during his absence his sister managed his business. She wanted to send out some corn to a customer, and for this purpose employed a person who occasionally worked for her brother, and who at the time of such employment was in a state of inebriety. This man, contrary to the practice of the cornfactor's shop, took out the corn on a small warehouse truck, which he negligently left on the road, whereby a person driving along in a chaise was injured:—Held, that the cornfactor was liable in an action at the suit of this person, on the ground that the employment of a tipsy man was an act of negligence, and that by such employment he set the whole thing in motion, and must therefore be answerable for the consequences. Wanstall v. Pooley, 6 C. & F. 910, n.

Foreman of Stevedore—Assisting Carman.]—A stevedore employed to ship iron rails had a foreman whose duty it was (assisted by labourers) to carry the rails from the quay to the ship after the carman had brought them to the quay and unloaded them there. The carman not unloading the rails to the foreman's satisfaction, the latter got into the cart and threw out some of them so negligently that one fell upon and injured a person who was passing by:—Held (per Grove and Denman, JJ., Brett, J., dissentiente), that there was evidence for a jury that the foreman was acting within the scope of his employment, so as to render the stevedore responsible for his acts. Burns v. Poulsom or Poulson, 42 L. J., C. P. 302; L. R. 8 C. P. 563; 29 L. T. 329; 22 W. R. 20.

Pilot—Damage to Oyster Beds.]—A ship in charge of a compulsory pilot was at high water brought into and anchored by the pilot in a river in which there were oyster beds, the existence of which was known to the pilot. The place where she was anchored was not the usual and customary place for vessels of her size and draught to anchor in. At low water she grounded, and thereby did damage to an oyster bed. On notice of the existence of the oyster bed being given to the master, he took all reasonable means to remove the ship as speedily as possible. In an action by the lessee of the oyster bed against the shipowner and the pilot:—Held, that the act of the pilot in anchoring the ship where he did was negligence which made him liable, but that the ship was not liable because the master's duty on receiving notice of the existence of the oyster bed was to take all reasonable measures—not extraordinary measures—to remove his ship, and this he had done. The Octavia Stella, 57 L. T. 632; 6 Asp. M. C. 182.

Clerk—Overflow of Water from Lavatory.]—The defendants sublet to the plaintiffs the lower rooms of their house, while they retained the upper rooms for carrying on their own business. In these upper rooms there was a lavatory for the use of the defendants' clerks, the key of which was kept by the defendants' foreman. This foreman, leaving off work at seven o'clock, went at ten minutes past seven to the lavatory to wash his hands. Turning on the tap, and finding no water, he went away without turning the tap off. When the water was turned on next morning it overflowed, went through the floor, and damaged the plaintiff's goods in the room below. The jury found that the damage was caused by the negligence of the clerk in leaving the tap open:—Held, that the defendants were liable for the damage so caused by the negligence of their clerk, upon the ground that whether the use of the lavatory by the clerk was or was not within the scope of his authority, it was at all events an incident to his employment, so as to render his employer liable for the damage resulting from his negligence in such use. Ruddiman v. Smith, 60 L. T. 708; 37 W. R. 528; 53 J. P. 518.

The plaintiffs occupied premises beneath the offices of the defendants, who were solicitors. One of the defendants had a room of the offices, and in it was a lavatory for his own use exclusively, and his orders to his clerks were that no clerk should come into his room after he had left. A clerk went into the room to wash his hands at the lavatory after his employer had left, turned the water tap, and negligently left it so that water flowed from it into the plaintiffs' premises and damaged them. In an action for negligence:—Held, that the act of the clerk was not within the scope of his authority, or incident to the ordinary duties of his employment, and that there was no evidence of negligence for which the defendants were liable. Stevens v. Woodward, 50 L. J., Q. B. 231; 6 Q. B. D. 318; 44 L. T. 153; 29 W. R. 506; 45 J. P. 603.

Servant in Occupation of Premises—Setting on Fire.]—By the law of Scotland, a tenant is liable to his landlord, if premises demised are burnt down by the negligence or misconduct of the tenant's servant, in the ordinary scope of his employment. The defendant's servant burnt down a house demised to the defendant, in Scotland, by lighting furze and straw, with a view to cleanse a chimney which smoked, although she had been cautioned against the danger of such a proceeding. In an action brought against the defendant by his landlord for this injury:—Held, that it was properly left to the jury to say whether the servant was acting within the general scope of her duty; and the jury having found for the defendant, the court refused to grant a new trial. M'Kenzie v. M'Leod, 10 Bing. 385; 4 M. & Scott, 249; 3 L. J., C. P. 79.

A defendant, having purchased some timber of the plaintiff, a timber merchant, was permitted by the plaintiff to use a shed of the plaintiff's for the purpose of working up the timber. The defendant, with the knowledge of the plaintiff, employed a carpenter to work up the timber in the shed; the carpenter, in lighting his pipe, set fire to the shed, which was burnt down:—Held, first, that the defendant's right to use the shed was not a letting by the plaintiff, but a mere licence to use the shed. Williams v. Jones, 3 H. & C. 256; 33 L. J., Ex. 297. Affirmed, 3 H. & C. 602; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 843; 13 L. T. 300; 13 W. R. 1023—Ex. Ch.

Held, secondly, that the negligence of the carpenter in setting the shed on fire was not in the course of his employment as the defendant's servant so as to render the defendant liable. Ib.

Servant of Bailee.]—The bailee for hire of a chattel is responsible to the bailor for damage done to the chattel through negligence of the bailee's servant, though not done in the course of his employment. Coupé Co. v. Maddick, 60 L. J., Q. B. 676; [1891] 2 Q. B. 413; 65 L. T. 489; 56 J. P. 39.

The defendants' hall was hired for the purpose of an evening concert, at which the plaintiff was to take part as one of the orchestra. There was no agreement between the hirer of the hall and the defendants as to the use of the hall for a rehearsal, but a rehearsal in which the plaintiff took part was held, without objection, in the afternoon of the day fixed for the concert. The plaintiff, after the rehearsal, placed the instrument he had been playing in an ante-room, in a secure position, but without any notice to the defendants or their hall-keeper. In the evening, the hall-keeper, in the course of his duty, went to the ante-room to turn on the gas at the meter and had to move the instrument, which he then placed in another part of the room as carefully as he could. The instrument fell and was damaged:—Held, (i.) that there was no bailment between the parties; (ii.) that it was not within the scope of the hall-keeper's employment to take care of the instrument; and (iii.) that there was no evidence of negligence on the part of the hall-keeper. Newwith v. Over Darwen Industrial Society, 63 L. J., Q. B. 290; 10 R. 588; 70 L. T. 374.

Servant of Highway Board—Heap of Stones by Roadside.]—The defendants, a highway board, had left a heap of stones on the side of a road within their jurisdiction; their servant in placing the stones there had allowed them to project into the road. A person while driving on a dark night drove against the stones and was killed. In an action under Lord Campbell's Act:—Held, that the defendants were liable for the act of their servant. Tucker v. Axbridge Highway Board, 53 J. P. 87.

Servant in charge of Dog—Scienter.]—If the owner of a dog appoints a servant to keep it, the servant's knowledge of the dog's ferocity is the knowledge of the master. Baldwin v. Casella, 41 L. J., Ex. 167; L. R. 7 Ex. 325; 26 L. T. 707; 21 W. R. 16. See also ANIMALS.

vi. Acts of Contractors and their Servants.

A person who employs a contractor to do a particular act is liable for the injurious acts of the contractor which flow out of the fulfilment of the contract. Pitts v. Kingsbridge Highway Board, 25 L. T. 195; 19 W. R. 884.

The defendant employed P. to clean out a drain which was on the defendant's land. P. was not in the defendant's service, but was a common labourer, selected by the defendant on account of his having dug the drain originally. P. cleaned out the drain without assistance from any other person, and without the further direction or inspection of the defendant. He received five shillings for the job from the defendant. In the course of cleaning out the drain P. took up part of an adjoining highway and replaced the same in an improper manner and with insufficient materials, in consequence of which the plaintiff's horse, passing along the highway, was injured:—Held, that in these circumstances P. was not an independent contractor, but was acting as the servant and under the control of the defendant, and consequently that the defendant was responsible for the injury. Sadler v. Henlock, 4 El. & Bl. 570; 3 C. L. R. 760; 24 L. J., Q. B. 138; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 677; 3 W. R. 181.

A captain of a vessel employed a stevedore to unload his vessel. The stevedore employed his own labourers, amongst whom was the plaintiff, and also one of the crew, named Davis, whom he paid, and over whom he had entire control, to assist them in unloading. The plaintiff while engaged in the work was injured through the negligence of Davis:—Held, that the captain was not responsible for the injury. Murray v. Currie, 40 L. J., C. P. 26; L. R. 6 C. P. 24; 23 L. T. 557; 19 W. R. 104.

A lessee of a ferry hired of the defendant a steamer, with a crew to ply to and fro. The plaintiff purchased of the lessee of the ferry a season ticket, and while on board the vessel, was injured by the breaking of a rope through the negligence of the crew:—Held, that the crew remained the servants of the defendant, and that he was therefore liable to the plaintiff for the negligence. Dalyell v. Tyrer, El. Bl. & El. 899; 28 L. J., Q. B. 52; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 335; 6 W. R. 684.

Held, also, that the liability of the defendant in such a case is independent of any contract, and that it was immaterial whether the purchase of the ticket was from the lessee or the defendant. Ib.

The defendants sent a barge under the management of their lighterman to a wharf for the purpose of being loaded. He was unable to get up to it, in consequence of a barge belonging to the plaintiff lying in the way, without any one in charge of it. The foreman of the wharf told him to shove the other barge away, as it had no business there, and to bring his alongside. He then moved the plaintiff's barge from the wharf, and made it fast to a pile in the river. When the tide went down, the barge settled upon a projection in the bed of the river, and was injured:—Held, that the defendants were responsible, as the lighterman in doing the act complained of was acting as their servant. Page v. Defries, 7 B. & S. 137.

A master porter, employed by a merchant at Liverpool to hoist or lower goods, cannot be considered in the light of a bailee, but of a servant; and the party employing him is liable for any injury caused through his negligence or want of skill. Randleson v. Murray, 3 N. & P. 239; 8 A. & E. 109; 1 W. W. & H. 149; 7 L. J., Q. B. 132; 2 Jur. 324.

D. contracted with the defendants, an urban authority, to supply by the day a driver and horse to drive and draw a watering-cart belonging to the defendants. The driver was employed and paid by D., and was not under the defendants' direction or control otherwise than that their inspector directed him what streets to water. In an action to recover damages for injuries caused by the negligent conduct of the driver whilst in charge of the cart:—Held, that the defendants were not liable. Quarman v. Burnett (6 M. & W. 499) followed; Rourke v. White Moss Colliery Co. (2 C. P. D. 205) distinguished. Jones v. Liverpool Corporation, 54 L. J., Q. B. 345; 14 Q. B. D. 890; 33 W. R. 551; 49 J. P. 311.

Where a person was hired and paid by W. as a driver of a horse kept by its owner for the service of the defendant, but which the owner could use as he liked when the defendant did not require it:—Held, that the driver was not the servant of the defendant, and that, an accident having happened through the servant's negligence when he was not out on the defendant's service, the defendant was not liable. Nicholson v. Harrison, 4 W. R. 459.

A butcher who had purchased a beast at Smithfield in the city of London, employed a licensed drover to drive it home. By the by-laws of the city, such beasts must, within the limits of the city, be driven by licensed drovers, unless driven by the purchasers themselves. The drover employed a boy to drive the beast, and through the boy negligently driving the beast, after it had passed the limits of the city, it ran into the plaintiff's premises and damaged his property:—Held, that although the damage was not done within the city, the boy was not to be deemed the servant of the owner of the beast, and that the owner therefore was not liable. Milligan v. Wedge, 4 P. & D. 714; 1 Q. B. 714; 12 Ad. & E. 737; 10 L. J., Q. B. 19.

The defendant sent some bales of cotton to a warehouse, and they were piled there by his men, under the direction of the warehouseman's foreman. Owing to a fault in the piling, the pile fell and hurt the plaintiff:—Held, that the defendant was not liable. Murphy v. Caralli, 3 H. & C. 462; 34 L. J., Ex. 14; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1207; 13 W. R. 165.

The defendant engaged the services of S., a thatcher, for a certain period at weekly wages, for the purpose of hiring him out to do thatching work for his profit. S. having, during the period, thatched some stacks of wheat for the plaintiff, for which work the defendant claimed and received payment:—Held, that the defendant was responsible to the plaintiff for injury to the wheat, occasioned by the negligent manner in which S. did the work. Holmes v. Onion, 2 C. B. (N.S.) 790; 26 L. J., C. P. 261.

The appellant and respondent were owners of adjoining houses, between which was a party wall. The appellant's house also adjoined B.'s house, and between them was a party wall. The appellant employed a builder to pull down his house and rebuild it. In the course of rebuilding, the builder's workmen, in fixing a staircase, negligently and without the knowledge of the appellant, cut into the party wall between the appellant's house and B.'s house, in consequence of which the appellant's house fell, and the fall injured the respondent's house. The cutting of the party wall was not authorised by the contract between the appellant and his builder:—Held, that the appellant could not get rid of responsibility by delegating the performance to a third person, and was liable to the respondent for the injury to his house. Bower v. Peate (1 Q. B. D.) commented on. Hughes v. Percival, 52 L. J., Q. B. 719; 8 App. Cas. 443; 49 L. T. 189; 31 W. R. 725; 47 J. P. 772—H. L. (E.)

The defendant, a contractor under a district board, was engaged in constructing a sewer, and employed men with horses and carts. The men so employed were allowed an hour for dinner, but were not permitted to go home and dine or to leave their horses and carts. One of the men went home about a quarter of a mile out of the direct line of his work to his dinner, and left his horse unattended in the street before his door. The horse ran away and damaged certain railings belonging to the plaintiff:—Held, that it was properly left to the jury to say whether the driver was acting within the scope of his employment, and that they were justified in finding that he was. Whitman v. Pearson, 37 L. J., C. P. 156; L. R. 3 C. P. 422; 16 W. R. 649.

The plaintiff received personal injuries through the negligence of one S., who was under the immediate control of one J. The defendants made an arrangement with J. to do certain work on which S. was subsequently employed, and was so employed at the time the plaintiff was injured. Under that arrangement the defendants might at any moment stop J. from going on with the work without committing any breach of contract:—Held, that J. was a servant of the defendants, and that the defendants were, therefore liable to the plaintiff for the negligence of S. Oldfield v. Furness, 58 J. P. 102—C. A.

vii. Servant lent to Third Party.

If a person lends his servant to another for a particular employment, the servant for anything done in that particular employment must be considered as the servant of the man to whom he is lent, although he remains the general servant of the person who lent him:—Semble, that that relation is the same whether the lender is paid, or lends his servant gratuitously. Rourke v. White Moss Colliery Co. (2 C. P. D. 205) followed; Jones v. Liverpool Corporation (14 Q. B. D. 890) discussed. Donovan v. Laing, 63 L. J., Q. B. 25; [1893] 1 Q. B. 629; 4 R. 317; 68 L. T. 512; 41 W. R. 455; 57 J. P. 583—C. A.

f. Fraudulent Acts.

A master is civilly responsible for the fraud or negligence of his servant acting in the course of his employment; but not for an act of wilful fraud or negligence done by him out of the scope of his authority, or inconsistent with the course of his employment. Coleman v. Riches, 16 C. B. 104; 3 C. L. R. 795; 24 L. J., C. P. 125; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 596; 3 W. R. 453.

Therefore, where the servant of a wharfinger fraudulently signed a receipt purporting to be an acknowledgment that wheat had been delivered at his employer's wharf to be shipped to the order of C., no such wheat having in fact been delivered, and thereby wilfully induced C. to pay the price to the pretended vendor:—Held, that the wharfinger was not liable, although it was proved that C.'s course of dealing was to pay for all wheat delivered for him at the wharf, on the production, by the vendor, of the wharfinger's receipt, and that the latter knew it. Ib.

An attorney's clerk by giving a receipt for money on account to a different person from that to whom he gives credit, to enable such person to deceive others, does not bind the master. Williams v. Goodison, 2 Car. & P. 257.

A master is answerable for every such wrong of his servant or of his agent as is committed in the course of the service and for the master's benefit, though no express command or privity of the master is proved; and there is no distinction between the case of fraud and the case of any other wrong. Mackay v. Commercial Bank of New Brunswick, 43 L. J., P. C. 31; L. R. 5 P. C. 394; 30 L. T. 180; 22 W. R. 473.

When one party has suffered, and another has profited by, the fraudulent representation of an agent of the latter made within the scope of his authority, the former is entitled to recover damages. Ib.

An action of deceit may be maintained against a company, whether incorporated or not incorporated, in respect of the fraud of its agent. Ib.

An officer of a banking corporation, whose duty it was to obtain the acceptance of bills of exchange in which the bank was interested, fraudulently, but without the knowledge of the president or directors of the bank, made a representation to A. which, by omitting a material fact, misled him, and induced him to accept a bill in which the bank was interested; and he was compelled to pay the bill:—Held, that he could recover from the bank the amount so paid. Ib.

In an action of deceit, whether against a person or against a company, the fraud of the agent may be treated for the purposes of pleading as that of the principal. Ib.

g. Other Wrongful Acts.

Trespass.]—A master is liable in trespass for any act done by his servant, in the course of executing his orders with ordinary care; and, therefore, where a master ordered his servant to lay down a quantity of rubbish near his neighbour's wall, but so that it might not touch the same, and the servant used ordinary care in executing the orders of his master, but some of the rubbish naturally ran against the wall:—Held, that the master was liable in trespass. Gregory v. Piper, 9 B. & C. 591; 4 M. & Ry. 500.

A local board of health, being in occupation of a sewage farm, had given plenary powers for the management of such farm in the most beneficial manner to B. A ditch ran between the farm and the land of the plaintiff. With a view to rendering such ditch more capable of carrying off the drainage from the farm, B. wrongfully went upon the plaintiff's land and pared away his side of the ditch, and cut down so much of the brushwood and underwood on the plaintiff's side as impeded the flow of drainage along the ditch:—Held, that the acts so done by B. were not within the scope of his employment; and consequently the local board was not liable for them at the suit of the plaintiff, there being no implied authority from the board to do them. Bolingbroke (Lord) v. Swindon New Town Local Board, 43 L. J., C. P. 287; L. R. 9 C. P. 575; 30 L. T. 723; 23 W. R. 47.

Infringement of Patent.] — The workmen employed on the works of a company, in the manufacture of certain foils and sheet metals, infringed, in the carrying out of the process upon which they were employed, a patent for a method of combining lead and tin and a metal so produced:—Held, that the directors and managers, as well as the company, were personally liable for the acts of the workmen, even on the supposition that the workmen had been directed by them not to infringe the patent. Betts v. De Vitre, 37 L. J., Ch. 325; L. R. 3 Ch. 429; 18 L. T. 165; 16 W. R. 529.

Interference with Ferry.]—A boatman left his boat to a lad in his employ, who was accustomed to ply in it for hire, and to carry passengers across a haven; and the lad on one occasion received a passenger and carried him across near to the line of an ancient ferry, paying the fare over to his master:—Held, that the master was responsible for his act. Huzzy v. Field, 1 C. & M. 345; 3 Tyr. 371; 4 L. J., Ex. 239.

Accident caused by Music in Street—Salvation Army.]—A horse belonging to the plaintiffs was injured by another horse which became restive owing to the noise of the music played by a detachment of the Salvation Army in a public street. In an action brought by the plaintiffs against the defendant as head of the Salvation Army to recover damages for such injury:—Held, that in the absence of evidence to show what the relationship was between the particular members of the army and the defendant, it could not be inferred that such members were the servants of the defendant or were acting under his authority. London General Omnibus Co. v. Booth, 63 L. J., Q. B. 244.

3. Injuries to Volunteers assisting Servants.

General Rule.]—The rule of law, that a master is not in general responsible to his servant for an injury occasioned by the negligence of a fellow-servant, in the course of their common employment, applies to the case of a person who is injured whilst voluntarily assisting the servants in their work. Degg v. Midland Ry., 1 H. & N. 773; 26 L. J., Ex. 171; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 395; 5 W. R. 364.

Therefore, where the servants of a railway company were turning a truck on a turntable, and a person not in the employment of the company volunteered to assist them, and whilst so engaged, other servants of the company negligently propelled a steam-engine, and thereby caused the death of the person who so volunteered, and the servants were persons of competent skill, and the company did not authorise the negligence:—Held, that the company was not liable to an action by the personal representative of the deceased. Ib.

A person who, in a transaction of common interest, assists the servants of another with the master's consent, can recover against the master for injuries caused by the negligence of the servants. Wright v. L. & N. W. Ry., 45 L. J., Q. B. 570; 1 Q. B. D. 252; 33 L. T. 830—C. A.

Consent of Master—Volunteer, who is.]—It is not in every case where a party works with the servants of another for a common purpose, that he becomes a volunteer, so as to prevent his maintaining an action against the party for an injury accruing from the negligence of his servants while working for the common purpose. Abraham v. Reynolds, 5 H. & N. 143; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 53; 1 L. T. 330; 8 W. R. 181.

A. sold to B. some bales of cotton, which were in the upper storey of a warehouse. B. employed C. to see it weighed, and lower it by means of a rope into a cart, which he contracted with D. to provide for it, who sent his servant E. for that purpose. In lowering one of the bales the rope broke, through the negligence of C., in consequence of which the bale fell on E. and injured him:—Held, first, that E. might maintain an action against B. Ib.

Held, secondly, that there was not even evidence to go to a jury, that at the time of the accident E. was either a fellow-servant of C. or a volunteer. Ib.

Stranger invited by Servant.]—If a stranger, invited by a servant to assist him in his work, is, while engaged in giving such assistance, injured by the negligence of another servant of the same master in the course of his employment, the stranger cannot hold the master responsible. The stranger, by volunteering his assistance, cannot impose upon the master a greater liability than that in which he stands towards his own servant; and if the master takes care that his servants are persons of competent skill and ordinary carefulness, he is not liable for any injury that one of them may receive from the negligence of another. Potter v. Faulkner, 1 B. & S. 800; 31 L. J., Q. B. 30; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 259; 5 L. T. 455; 10 W. R. 93—Ex. Ch.

A passer-by who is casually appealed to by a workman for information respecting a thing which the latter is doing in a public thoroughfare, is not to be considered a volunteer assistant, so as to exonerate the workman's master from responsibility for an injury resulting to the former from the workman's negligent mode of doing the work. Cleveland v. Spier, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 399.

The plaintiff, after purchasing some felt from the defendants, went into a loft where the felt was stored, to inspect the article purchased. The loft was open at one end, and the plaintiff was acquainted with the construction of it. The plaintiff and C., a servant of the defendants, proceeded to unroll the felt, and the plaintiff, who, in the act of so doing, was walking backwards, fell from the loft, and sustained personal injuries. He brought an action against the defendants for damages for injuries caused by their negligence, and the jury by whom the case was tried, among other findings, found that, but for the plaintiff's own negligence, the accident would not have happened, and also that C. was not acting within the scope of his employment in obtaining the plaintiff's assistance to unroll the felt:—Held, that the verdict should be entered for the defendants. Sullivan v. O'Connor, 22 L. R., Ir. 467—C. A.

—— Sudden Emergency—Agent of Necessity.]—The driver of an omnibus, when within a quarter of a mile of his master's premises, was forbidden by the police to drive further on the ground that he was not sober. A bystander volunteered to drive the omnibus home, and was authorised to do so by the driver and conductor, no effort being made to communicate with the master:—Held, that there was no evidence upon which it could be held that any necessity to delegate the duty of driving to the bystander had risen. Quære, whether the driver and conductor could become agents of necessity of the proprietor of the omnibus, so as to make the substitute appointed by them a servant of the proprietor, and render the latter responsible for the consequences of his want of care and skill. Per Lord Esher, M.R.: The principle of agency of necessity does not extend to such a case, but is restricted to certain well-known cases, such as those of the master of a ship, of the acceptor of a bill of exchange for the honour of the drawer, and of salvors. Gwilliam v. Twist, 64 L. J., Q. B. 474; [1895] 2 Q. B. 84; 14 R. 461; 72 L. T. 579; 43 W. R. 566; 59 J. P. 484—C. A.

4. Criminal or Quasi-Criminal Liability.

a. Public Nuisance.

If A. employs another to do a lawful act, and he in doing it commits a public nuisance, A. is not responsible. Peachey v. Rowland, 13 C. B. 182; 22 L. J., C. P. 81; 17 Jur. 764.

Aliter, if the act to be done necessarily involves the committing of a public nuisance. Ib.

Where a business is conducted so as to be a public nuisance, the owner is liable to be indicted, although the nuisance is entirely occasioned by the conduct of his servants in disregarding his directions, and although he has no knowledge of the existence of the nuisance. Reg. v. Stephens, 7 B. & S. 710; 35 L. J., Q. B. 251; L. R. 1 Q. B. 702; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 961; 14 L. T. 593; 14 W. R. 859.

An owner of a quarry on the margin of a navigable river, being very old and infirm, did not personally superintend it; he, however, gave directions to his men to dispose of the refuse in a certain way, and conduct the business in a proper way. These directions were disregarded, and the refuse was suffered to fall into the river, whereby its navigation was obstructed. Upon an indictment for the nuisance against him:—Held, that he was liable. Ib.

b. Offences under Particular Statutes.

Under Licensing Acts—Supplying a Constable.]—The Licensing Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 74), s. 16, enacts, that "if any licensed person . . . . supplies any liquor or refreshment, whether by way of gift or sale, to any constable on duty, unless by authority of some superior officer of such constable," he shall be liable to a penalty. The servant of a licensed person having supplied to a constable in uniform and on duty a certain quantity of brandy, in the ordinary course of business:—Held, that the master was liable to the penalty imposed by the statute, personal knowledge on the part of the master not being necessary to constitute the offence. Mullins v. Collins, 43 L. J., M. C. 67; L. R. 9 Q. B. 292; 29 L. T. 838; 22 W. R. 297.

—— Suffering and Permitting Gaming.]—In order to support a conviction under the Licensing Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 94), s. 17, by which if any person licensed under the act "suffers any gaming or any unlawful game to be carried on on his premises" he is made liable to certain penalties, it is necessary to give some evidence of actual or constructive knowledge on the part of the person charged that gaming was carried on on his premises. Bosley v. Davies, 45 L. J., M. C. 27; 1 Q. B. D. 84; 33 L. T. 528; 24 W. R. 140.

At the hearing of an information against an hotel-keeper for suffering gaming on his licensed premises, it was proved that a police-constable, about half-past twelve in the morning, was in the street in which the premises were situate. Two of the windows had the blinds up, so that the constable could see three gentlemen, and from what they said it was evident that they were playing cards. He waited for about a quarter of an hour, when the front door was opened by one of the waiters, and he then entered and went upstairs to the room, and found six gentlemen round a table with a quantity of money on it. The manageress of the hotel said that she did not know that they were playing cards, and that they did not have the cards of her, and her statement was confirmed by the card-players, who were in a private room. The hotel-keeper having been convicted:—Held, that the case must be sent back to the justices with an intimation of the opinion of the court that, though actual knowledge on the part of the hotel-keeper or his servants, in the sense of seeing or knowing of the card-playing, was not necessary to be shewn, yet that some circumstances must be proved from which it could be inferred that they connived at what was going on. Ib.

The offence of suffering gaming on licensed premises may be committed by connivance, either on the part of the principal or the person in charge. Redgate v. Haynes, 45 L. J., M. C. 65; 1 Q. B. D. 89; 33 L. T. 779.

A gentleman took a sitting-room and three bedrooms in an hotel; one of these bedrooms was occupied by himself, the other two by a horse-trainer and a jockey, both of whom lived in the immediate neighbourhood. The hotel-keeper retired to bed shortly before 11 p.m. and the hall-porter was left in charge. Between 1.30 and 2.15 the following morning the three persons were discovered in the sitting-room playing cards for money, the noise they made having been heard outside the premises. During all this time the hall-porter, whose duty it was to stay up and attend to customers, was in a parlour at the extreme end of the house where he could not hear what was going on:—Held, that there was sufficient evidence to convict the hotel-keeper of suffering gaming on her premises, and that it was unnecessary to prove an actual knowledge on her part of what was going on. Ib.

Under Metropolitan Police Act.]—If a keeper of a place of public resort instructs his servant to manage it in such a way as to be a violation of 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 44, and the servant does so, the master is guilty of an offence within the act. Wilson v. Stewart, 3 B. & S. 913; 32 L. J., M. C. 198; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1130; 8 L. T. 277; 11 W. R. 640.

Under Mines Regulation Act.]—By s. 22 of 23 & 24 Vict. c. 151, a penalty is imposed on the owner or agent, if through the default of such owner or agent, any of the general rules, the provisions of which ought to be observed by them, are neglected or wilfully violated. One of the rules was that whenever safety lamps were required, they should be first examined and locked by a person duly authorised for that purpose. The owner appointed a competent person to examine and lock the lamps, but such person delivered them to the miners for use in the mine unlocked:—Held, that in the absence of any personal default on the part of the owner, he was not liable to a penalty in respect of the act of the person so employed by him. Dickinson v. Fletcher, 43 L. J., M. C. 25; L. R. 9 C. P. 1; 29 L. T. 540.

Under Weights and Measures Act—Sale of Coal.]—By s. 29, sub-s. 1, of the Weights and Measures Act, 1889, "any inspector of weights and measures, or officer appointed for the purpose by the local authority, may, at all reasonable times, enter any building or part of a building or other place in which coal is sold or kept or exposed for sale, and may stop any vehicle carrying coal for sale or for delivery to a purchaser, and may test any weights and weighing instruments found in any such place or vehicle, and may weigh any load, sack, or other less quantity of coal, found in any such place or vehicle, or which is in course of delivery to any purchaser." By sub-s. 2: "If it appears to a court of summary jurisdiction that any load, sack, or less quantity so weighed is of less weight than that represented by the seller, the person selling or keeping or exposing the coal for sale, or the person in charge of the vehicle, as the case may be, shall be liable to a fine not exceeding 5*l.*":—Held, that in order to convict the seller of coal of an offence under the above section there must be an actual representation by him as to the weight of the coal sold, and that a representation made to an inspector by a servant in charge of a vehicle carrying coal for delivery to a purchaser was not of itself the representation of the master so as to make him liable under the section. Roberts v. Woodward, 59 L. J., M. C. 129; 25 Q. B. D. 412; 63 L. T. 200; 38 W. R. 770; 17 Cox, C. C. 139

Under Metropolis Management Act—Damage to Street Lamp.]—A master is not liable under s. 207 of the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855, for the accidental breaking by his servant of a street lamp, the top of which projected over the kerb, such accident having been caused by some goods on a van, which the servant was driving, coming in contact with, and wrecking the top of the lamp. Harding v. Barker, 37 W. R. 78; 53 J. P. 308.

Smoke Nuisance.]—The defendant, who was the owner and occupier of certain premises in the metropolis used for the purpose of manufacture, was summoned under the Smoke Nuisance (Metropolis) Act, 1853, for negligently using a furnace in such premises so that the smoke arising therefrom was not effectually consumed. The furnace in question was constructed so as to consume its own smoke if carefully used; and the emission of smoke complained of was caused by the carelessness of the stoker employed by the defendant to attend to the furnace. The defendant was not personally guilty of any negligence in connection with the matter:—Held, that the defendant was not criminally responsible for the negligence of his servant, and could not be convicted of the offence. Chisholm v. Doulton, 58 L. J., M. C. 133; 22 Q. B. D. 736; 60 L. T. 966; 37 W. R. 749; 16 Cox, C. C. 675; 53 J. P. 550.

The chimney of a mill sent forth black smoke. The furnace was properly constructed and efficient foremen superintended; the stoker's own negligence being the sole cause of the smoke:—Held, that the owner of the mill was liable under s. 96 of the Public Health Act, 1875. Niven v. Greaves, 54 J. P. 548.

Slaughter-house.]—The Slaughter-houses, &c. (Metropolis) Act, 1874, which contains in terms no prohibition as to the manner in which the slaughter of cattle is to be performed, enacts by s. 4 that the local authority may make by-laws regulating the conduct of any business specified in the act, and the by-laws made under the act prohibit the occupier of a slaughter-house from slaughtering or permitting to be slaughtered any animal contrary to certain regulations laid down in them:—Held, that these by-laws were not repugnant to the common law, and that upon breach of them the occupier of a slaughter-house was liable for the act of his servant, although the offence of the servant was committed without the knowledge and contrary to the express order of his master. Collman v. Mills, 66 L. J., Q. B. 170; [1897] 1 Q. B. 396; 75 L. T. 590; 18 Cox, C. C. 481; 61 J. P. 102.

Regulation as to Lights on Tramway Engine—Breach by Engine-driver.]—A tramway company were convicted before justices of the breach of a regulation of the Board of Trade, made under a local act, relative to lamps being placed and lighted in a conspicuous position on the front of a tramway engine:—Held, that the regulation was not invalid as a regulation, and that its subject-matter need not have been dealt with by a by-law; that the offence being stated in the words of the regulation was sufficiently described, and that the company were responsible for the personal neglect of their engine-driver.

St. Helen's Tramways Co. v. Wood, 60 L. J., M. C. 141 ; 56 J. P. 70.

Protecting Smuggled Goods from Seizure.]—A master is answerable for the illegal act of his servant, if within the scope of his probable authority, and done for the master's benefit. Thus, where, after the detection of smuggled tobacco concealed in a cellar, a servant in his master's absence procured a permit, by which he intended to protect the goods from seizure, the master is liable for the penalty attached to the offence of unduly using a permit. Att.-Gen. v. Siddon, 1 C. & J. 220 ; 1 Tyr. 41 ; 9 L. J. (O.S.) Ex. 7.

III. RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF SERVANT AND THIRD PARTIES.

A. RIGHTS OF SERVANT.

Procuring Discharge of Workman—Cause of Action — Legal Injury.] — Boiler-makers in common employment with the respondents, objected to work with the latter on account of what they had done at another time. The appellant, an official of the Boiler-makers' Union, in response to a telegram from one of the boiler-makers, came to the yard and dissuaded the men from immediately leaving their work, as they threatened to do, intimating that if they did so he would do his best to have them deprived of the benefits of the union, and also fined ; they must wait till the matter was settled. The appellant then saw the managing director, to whom he said that if the respondents, who were engaged from day to day, were not dismissed, the boiler-makers would leave their work or be called out. The respondents were thereupon dismissed :—Held, that no actionable wrong had been committed by the appellant. Allen v. Flood, 67 L. J., Q. B. 119 ; [1898] A. C. 1 ; 77 L. T. 717 ; 46 W. R. 258—H. L. (E.)

Action against Servant instead of Master—Relief in Equity.]—Where one recovered in trover against a servant of the African Company, equity would not relieve, because plaintiff in equity might at law have defended himself, but decreed that the company should indemnify the servant, and that the plaintiff at law (one of the defendants in equity) might prosecute the decree in the servant's name. Langdon v. African Co., Pre. Ch. 221.

B. LIABILITY OF SERVANT.

Acts done under Authority.]—Where the act of the principal is lawful in the country where it is done, and the authority under which such act is done is complete, binding and unquestionable there, the servant who does the act cannot be made responsible in the courts of this country (of which he is a subject) for the consequence of such acts, merely by reason of a personal disability, imposed by the law of this country upon him for contracting such engagement. Dobree v. Napier, 3 Scott, 201 ; 2 Bing. (N.C.) 781 ; 5 L. J., C. P. 273.

Unlawful Acts.]—If a keeper of a place of public resort instructs his servant to manage it in such a way as to be a violation of 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 44, and the servant does so, the master is guilty of an offence within that act, and the servant is guilty as aiding and abetting him within 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 5. Wilson v. Stewart, 3 B. & S. 913 ; 32 L. J., M. C. 198 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1130 ; 8 L. T. 277 ; 11 W. R. 640.

A servant who joins with and assists his master in the commission of a fraud is civilly responsible for the consequences, though his concurrence is unknown to the party injured, for all directly concerned in the commission of a fraud are principals. Cullen v. Thomson, 4 Macq. H. L. 441 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 85 ; 6 L. T. 870.

Conversion for Benefit of Master.]—A servant is liable for an action of trover for a conversion for the benefit of his master. Cranch v. White, 1 Scott, 314 ; 1 Bing. (N.C.) 414 ; 1 Hodges, 61.

The defendant received from R. a bill of exchange, with notice that it was the plaintiff's property, and that it had been placed in the hands of R. for the purpose of his procuring it to be discounted for the plaintiff. R. being indebted to the defendant's mother, in whose employ the defendant was, the latter appropriated the bill in discharge of R.'s debt :—Held, that this was a conversion for which the defendant was liable in trover. Ib.

A servant may be charged in trover, although the act of conversion is done by him for the benefit of the master. Stephens v. Elwall, 4 M. & S. 259. And see Perkins v. Smith, 1 Wils. 328.

A servant or an agent who has received goods from his master or principal, may, on a demand made by the true owner, give a qualified refusal to deliver them up, without being liable to an action of trover. Lee v. Bayes or Robinson, 18 C. B. 599 ; 25 L. J., C. P. 249 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1093.

Money Had and Received.]—A party who, in the character of a servant to a debtor, receives money from his master to discharge the debt, is not liable to be sued by the creditor as for money received to his use. Howell v. Batt, 2 N. & M. 381 ; 5 B. & Ad. 504 ; 3 L. J., K. B. 49.

Beating Fellow Servant.]—One servant has no right to beat another ; and if an under servant misconducts himself, an upper servant is not justified in striking him, but should inform their master. Reg. v Huntley, 3 Car. & K. 143.

Injuries Due to Negligence.]—Under circumstances of danger, if the driver of a public conveyance fails to take the safest course, he would be liable, and he cannot, in such case, insist upon the fact that he kept to his own side of the road. Mayhew v. Boyce, 1 Stark. 423 ; 18 R. R. 796.

MAXIMS.

Generally.]—I need hardly repeat that I detest the attempt to fetter the law by maxims. They are almost invariably misleading ; they are for the most part so large and general in their language that they always include something which really is not intended to be included in them. Per Esher (Lord), M.R. Yarmouth v. France, 57 L. J., Q. B. 7; 19 Q. B. D. 653; 36 W. R. 283.

Actio personalis moritur cum personâ.]—The plaintiff brought his action for damages and an injunction against the firm of T. & Co., for torts committed by the firm. The firm consisted of T. alone, who died more than six months after the commencement of action, and the action was continued against his executors:—Held, that T. having died more than six months after the commission of the acts complained of, no action, either for damages or injunction, could be maintained against his executors; although the action had been commenced in the lifetime of the testator, and although the executors continued the business in the name of the firm. Kirk v. Todd, 52 L. J., Ch. 224: 21 Ch. D. 484; 47 L. T. 676; 31 W. R. 69—C. A. See also Blyth v. Fladgate, 60 L. J., Ch. 66; [1891] 1 Ch. 337; 63 L. T. 546; 39 W. R. 422. Story v. Sheard, 61 L. J., M. C. 178; [1892] 2 Q. B. 515; 67 L. T. 433; 41 W. R. 31; 56 J. P. 760.

Audi alteram partem.]—Under an act in 1846 the B. Canal Company were authorised to charge certain tolls, rates, and dues for goods traffic in respect of the canals and other works of the company, and were prohibited from making an order to reduce, advance, or otherwise vary all or any of such tolls, rates, or dues, without the consent of a railway company, who guaranteed that, if the income of the canal company in any year was insufficient to pay a dividend of 4*l.* per cent. on the capital of the canal company, the railway company would make up the deficiency. The B. Canal Company was one link in a chain of canals owned by various companies and forming a continuous line of navigation between two points. In pursuance of an application made to them by one of those companies, the railway commissioners, under the Regulation of Railways Act, 1873, s. 11, made an order allowing through rates for goods traffic between those two points, the effect of which would be to reduce the tolls of the B. Canal Company below the maximum allowed by the act of 1846, and below the amounts theretofore charged by the company. The railway company were not represented before the commissioners, and did not consent to the order or to any variation of the tolls:—Held, that the order was made without jurisdiction, and must be restrained by prohibition. By Kelly, C.B., because the commissioners could not make an order affecting the liability of the railway company under their guarantee without at least hearing them. By Pollock, B., and Hawkins, J., because the consent of the railway company had not been obtained, and the Regulation of Railways Act, 1873, gave the commissioners no power without such consent to reduce the tolls, rates, or dues as authorised by the act of 1846. Warwick Canal Co. v. Birmingham Canal Co., 48 L. J., Ex. 550; 5 Ex. D. 1; 40 L. T. 846.

Causa proxima non causa remota spectatur.]—A ship was chartered for time on monthly hire: the charterers agreeing to pay the freight during employment and efficient performance of the service, and the owner covenanting that the ship should be seaworthy during the continuance of the charter; provided that if at any time it should appear to the charterers that the ship became inefficient it should be lawful for them to put her out of pay, or to make such abatement by way of mulct out of the hire or freight as they should adjudge fit. The owner effected a time policy of insurance "on freight outstanding." During the time the ship became inefficient through perils of the seas, and the charterers refused to pay freight after that date. The owner having brought an action on the policy:—Held, that on the true construction of the charterparty the efficiency of the ship was not a condition precedent to the earning of the freight: that the pecuniary loss was caused by the charterers availing themselves of the abatement clause, and not by the perils of the seas; and that the underwriters were not liable. Inman Steamship Co. v. Bischoff, 52 L. J., Q. B. 169; 7 App. Cas. 670; 47 L. T. 581; 31 W. R. 141; 5 Asp. M. C. 6—H. L. (E.)

Cuicunque aliquis quid concedit, &c.]—An action was brought against a railway company to recover an amount assessed by a jury, as compensation for vibration from the use of the railway after construction. The damage did not arise from negligence, but was the inevitable consequence of the proper and ordinary use of the railway:—Held, that no action would lie for the damage sustained; for the legislature having given power to the company to employ locomotive engines, if such locomotives cannot possibly be used without occasioning vibration and consequent injury to neighbouring houses, upon the principle of law that cuicunque aliquis quid concedit, concedere videtur et id sine quo res ipsa esse non potuit, it must be taken that power is given to cause that vibration without liability to an action. Hammersmith and City Ry. v. Brand, 38 L. "Damnum absque injuriâ."]—See Street v Union Bank of Spain and England, 55 L. J., Ch. 31; 30 Ch. D. 156; 53 L. T. 262; 32 W. R. 901.

The court does not interfere to prevent the infringement of a right producing no mischief. Saunders v. Smith, 2 Jur. 491.

Debitor non præsumitur donare.]—See Johnstone v. Haviland, [1896] A. C. 95—H. L. (Sc.)

Delegatus non potest delegare.]—See Huth v. Clarke, 59 L. J., M. C. 120; 25 Q. B. D. 391; 63 L. T. 348; 38 W. R. 655.

Equity—Rules.]—Equity will not enforce that which is the cause of public inconvenience. Anon., Cary, 12.

Legal right prevented by act of equity, party will be reinstated therein. O'Donel v. Browne, 1 Ball & B. 263. Pulteney v. Warren, 6 Ves. 93.

A bill to enforce a right springing from a statutory engagement is analogous to a bill for specific performance, and the plaintiff must come into court with clean hands. Fisher v. Tully, 38 L. T. 236 —— Applicant must do Equity.]—He that will have equity, must do equity. Browne v. Jones, 1 Atk. 190.

The rule that the plaintiff seeking equity must do equity, applies only to the one matter which is the subject of a given suit. Hanson v. Keating, 4 Hare, 5; 8 Jur. 949.

The principle that he who comes into equity must do equity applies only to equity arising out of the same transaction. Whitaker v. Hall, 1 Glyn. & J. 213.

Where wife sues (which she may do) to avoid annuity charged by her on her separate estate, on account of defect in the memorial, the maxim he that will have equity must do it to the same person, does not apply to compel her to repay the consideration money, nor can it be recovered against her. Aguilar v. Aguilar, 5 Madd. 414.

If it be necessary to have the assistance of a court of equity to set aside a usurious contract, it must be on the terms of paying what is fairly due with legal interest. Scott v. Nesbitt, 2 Cox, 183; 2 Bro. C. C. 641.

The rule that a party coming for equity must do equity does not extend so far as to affect matters unconnected with the transaction in respect of which the relief is sought. Wilkinson v. Fowkes, 9 Hare, 592.

Conveyance of an estate, to which defendant is entitled in equity, suspended till an account of the rest of the estate taken in the original suit from the danger of the plaintiff's losing his demand; the rule that he who will have equity must do it holds so as not to tack together things independent; but the court will lay hold of any circumstance for it, as danger from absconding or living abroad. Shish v. Foster, 1 Ves. 88.

The maxim "he who seeks equity must do equity" considered. The equity to be observed by a person seeking equity must be some equity which is involved in the subject of the suit. United States of America v. M'Rea, 37 L. J., Ch. 129; L. R. 3 Ch. 79; 17 L. T. 428; 16 W. R. 377.

The rule that "he who seeks equity must do equity" is restricted to an equity in respect of the subject-matter of the suit. Gibson v. Goldsmid, 5 De G. M. & G. 757; 24 L. J., Ch. 279; 3 Eq. R. 106; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1; 3 W. R. 79.

The maxim in chancery that "he who seeks equity must do equity," when applied to a case of partial non-performance of an agreement, includes the rule at law which, in actions for damages upon contracts, discriminates between a whole or only a partial failure of performance; the breach being a bar when it goes to the whole, but no bar to a partial failure, in which case the party injured is entitled by a cross action to compensation. Oxford v. Provand, 5 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 150; L. R. 2 P. C. 136.

Where a creditor by judgment extends lands by elegit, he holds quousque debitum satisfactum fuerit, and at law the debtor cannot on a writ ad computandum insist on the creditors doing more than account for the extended value; for if the debtor comes into equity for relief, the court will give it him by obliging the creditor to account for the whole he has received; but as he who comes for equity must do equity, they will direct the debtor to pay interest to the creditor, though it should exceed the principal. Godfrey v. Watson, 3 Atk. 517.

—— "Equity looks on that as Done which ought to be Done."]—The maxim that equity looks upon that as done which ought to be done, applies only (in cases depending upon contract) in favour of persons who are entitled to enforce the contract, and cannot be invoked by volunteers. Austis, In re, Chetwynd v. Morgan, 31 Ch. D. 596; 54 L. T. 742; 34 W. R. 483—C. A.

Nothing is looked upon in equity as done, but what ought to have been done: not what might have been done. Burgess v. Wheate, 1 Eden, 186; 1 W. Bl. 121.

The principle of equity that "what is agreed to be done is considered as done," applies equally to companies as to individuals. Strand Music Hall Co., In re, 14 W. R. 6—L.JJ.

Expressio unius est exclusio alterius.]—I may observe that the method of construction summarised in the maxim, "expressio unius, exclusio alterius," is one that certainly requires to be watched. Perhaps few so-called rules of interpretation have been more frequently misapplied and stretched beyond their due limits—Per Wills, J. Colquhoun v. Brooks, 57 L. J., Q. B. 70; 19 Q. B. D. 406; 57 L. T. 448; 36 W. R. 332. See also S. C., in C. A., per Esher (Lord), M.R., 57 L. J., Q. B. 439; 21 Q. B. D. 65; 59 L. T. 661; 36 W. R. 657; 52 J. P. 645.

The maxim "expressio unius, exclusio alterius" is often a valuable servant, but a dangerous master to follow in the construction of statutes or documents. The exclusio is often the result of inadvertence or accident, and the maxim ought not to be applied when its application, having regard to the subject-matter to which it is to be applied, leads to inconsistency or injustice—Per Lopes, L.J. Colquhoun v. Brooks, 57 L. J., Q. B. 439; 21 Q. B. D. 65; 59 L. T. 661; 36 W. R. 657; 52 J. P. 645.

Lands taken under a conditional sale and afterwards forfeited to the crown are not open to a conditional purchase under s. 13 of the Crown Lands Alienation Act, 1861. The crown has, under the 18th section, the option either to sell them by public auction or to retain them in its own hands. Blackburn v. Flavelle, 50 L. J., P. C. 58; 6 App. Cas. 628; 45 L. T. 52; 30 W. R. 67.

An underlease of a nursery ground contained an express covenant by the underlessee to deliver up all landlord's fixtures thereon at the end of the term:—Held, that a representation and covenant by the grantors of the under-lease that the underlessee should be at liberty, without hindrance from anyone, to remove trade fixtures during the term, and that the grantors had not entered into covenants inconsistent with such right could not be implied. Porter v. Drew, 49 L. J., C. P. 482; 5 C. P. D. 143; 42 L. T. 151; 28 W. R. 672; 44 J. P. 267. See McGuire v. Scully, Beat. 370.

Extra territorium jus dicenti impune non paretur.]—See MacLeod v. Att.-Gen. (N.S.W.), 60 L. J., P. C. 55; [1891] A. C. 455; 65 L. T. 321; 17 Cox, C. C. 341—P. C.

Fictions of Law.]—Fictions of law shall never be contradicted so as to defeat the end for which they were invented; but for every other purpose they may be contradicted. Mostyn v. Fabrigas, Cowp. 177.

And the court will notice legal fictions, to avoid their working injustice, by affording ground for objections merely technical, and having no real foundation. Bennett v. Isaac, 10 Price, 154.

Fraus non est fallere fallentem.]—Where debtor combines with creditor in fraud upon others, and creditor breaks trust, there is no punishment, but goods fraudulently transferred ordered to be retransferred for benefit of creditors. "Fraus non est fallere fallentem." Woodford v. Multon, Cary, 13.

"Grantor shall not Derogate from his own Grant."]—The maxim that a grantor shall not derogate from his own grant, does not entitle a grantee of a house to claim an easement of light to an extent inconsistent with the intention to be implied from the circumstances existing at the time of the grant and known to the grantee. Birmingham Banking Co. v. Ross, 57 L. J., Ch. 601; 38 Ch. D. 295; 59 L. T. 609; 36 W. R. 914—C. A.

Tenant for life having made a lease of coal mines, amounting to a forfeiture, cannot join the remainderman in a bill for injunction. Wentworth v. Turner, 3 Ves. 3.

Ignorantia juris neminem excusat.]—The rule "Ignorantia juris neminem excusat" applies where the alleged ignorance is that of a well-known rule of law, but not where it is that of a matter of law arising upon the doubtful construction of a grant. In the latter case it is not decisively a ground for refusing relief in equity. Beauchamp (Earl) v. Winn, L. R. 6 H. L. 223; 22 W. R. 193.

A witness's knowledge of the law enabling him to decline to answer criminating questions, must be presumed on the maxim "Ignorantia juris non excusat." Reg. v. Coote, 9 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 463; 42 L. J., P. C. 45; L. R. 4 P. C. 599; 29 L. T. 111; 21 W. R. 553.

You must ascribe to every subject a knowledge of the law, more especially in cases where it prescribes a rule of civil conduct—Per Lord Westbury. Carter v. M'Laren, L. R. 2 H. L. (Sc.) 120, 126.

A. entered into an agreement for a lease of a fishery from B. At the time of entering into the agreement both parties bonâ fide believed that B. was the owner of the fishery; but it was afterwards discovered that B. was not the true owner. There was no fraud on either side, and the deeds establishing A.'s title to the fishery were equally known and accessible to both parties:—Held, that A. was entitled to have the agreement set aside, subject to certain equitable terms for the benefit of B., and that the maxim of "Ignorantia juris non excusat" did not apply. Cooper v. Phibbs, L. R. 2 H. L. 149; 16 L. T. 678; 15 W. R. 1049.

It is said "Ignorantia juris haud excusat," but in that maxim the word "jus" is used in the sense of denoting general law, the ordinary law of the country. But when the word "jus" is used in the sense of denoting a private right, that maxim has no application. Ib.

Ignorantia legis may be a good plea in equity, though not at law. Watson v. Marston, 1 W. R. 362.

See also Katharina, Cargo Ex, Lush. 142; 30 L. J., P. 21; 3 L. T. 597.

In pari delicto potior est conditio possidentis.]—The plaintiff deposited with the defendant the half of a 50*l.* bank note by way of pledge to secure the payment of money due from the plaintiff to the defendant. The debt was contracted for wine and suppers supplied to the plaintiff by the defendant in a brothel kept by her, to be there consumed in debauch. The plaintiff having brought an action to recover the half-note:—Held, that the maxim "In pari delicto potior est conditio possidentis" applied; and that as the plaintiff could not recover without shewing the true character of the deposit, and that being on an illegal consideration to which he was himself a party, he was precluded from obtaining the assistance of the law to recover it back. Taylor v. Chester, 10 B. & S. 237; 38 L. J., Q. B. 225; L. R. 4 Q. B. 309; 21 L. T. 359.

M. wrote to B. to the effect that he had forged B.'s name by putting it with his own to a bill of exchange for 100*l.*, which would become due in a few days. He implored B. to meet the bill, and offered, if he would do so, to give him a bill of sale of all his property to secure what he owed him. B., who was already an unsecured creditor of M. for 100*l.*, paid the 100*l.* bill and took a bill of sale of all M.'s property to secure 200*l.* Three weeks later B. entered and sold the property and satisfied his debt. The following month M. was adjudicated a bankrupt, the act of bankruptcy alleged being the execution of the bill of sale. The trustee applied for an order that B. should refund the proceeds of sale received by him, on the ground that the bill of sale was void as being given only for a past debt, and as being the price of a bargain for the concealment of a felony:—Held, that the wrong done not being an offence against the bankrupt law, the trustee was in no better position than the bankrupt would have been, and that, the latter having been a party to the wrong, the maxim "In pari delicto potior est conditio possidentis" would have applied, and no action could have been maintained. Mapleback, In re, Butt, Ex parte, 46 L. J., Bk. 14; 4 Ch. D. 150; 35 L. T. 503; 25 W. R. 103; 13 Cox, C. C. 374—C. A.

Parties to a contract which is against public policy or illegal, are not always regarded as being in pari delicto, but public policy is sometimes considered as advanced by allowing either or the more excusable of the parties to sue for relief against the transaction. Reynell v. Sprye, 8 Hare, 275. Affirmed, 1 De G. M. & G. 660; 21 L. J., Ch. 633.

The rule "In pari delicto melior est conditio possidentis," preventing suit, is not universal; it admits of degrees of guilt by concurring in the same criminal act. Osborne v. Williams, 18 Ves. 379; 11 R. R. 218.

Lex non cogit ad impossibilia.]—A declaration alleged that the defendant in 1840 demised certain premises to the plaintiff for a long term of years, and the defendant covenanted that "neither he nor his assigns would, during the term, permit any messuage to be built on a paddock fronting the demised premises"; alleging as breaches, first, that he, during the term, permitted a railway station to be built on the paddock ; and, secondly, that he assigned the paddock to a railway company, who erected the railway station on the paddock. Plea, that the company required to take the paddock under powers given them by an act of parliament of 1862, for purposes for which they were by the act empowered to take the same ; that the paddock was land which the company was empowered to take compulsorily for the purposes of the undertaking authorised by the act ; and that the company under the powers so conferred did compulsorily purchase and take the paddock, and that the assignment by the defendant to the company was the assignment in completion of such compulsory purchase ; that the company afterwards built on the paddock the erections complained of, which were erections reasonably required for the purposes of the undertaking authorised by the act. Replication : that though the erections were reasonable, it was not necessary or compulsory for the company to build them :—Held, that the defendant was entitled to judgment, for he was discharged from his covenant by the subsequent act of parliament, which compelled him to assign to the railway company, and so put it out of his power to perform the covenant, on the principle of the maxim of "Lex non cogit ad impossibilia" ; and that it conld make no difference whether the company was only empowered or was compelled to build the station on the paddock. Baily v. De Crespigny, 38 L. Nemo debet lacesseri pro una et eadem causa.]—A workman having been injured through the fault, as he alleged, of his employers, brought an action against them for damages. While the action was pending, he died, intestate and unmarried. His mother was appointed his executrix, and she raised a second and concurrent action for solatium for her son's death, and asked that the second action should be remitted to the same jury who were to try the first action :—Held, that the second action was incompetent. Wood v. Gray, [1892] A. Nemo tenetur seipsum accusare.]—The depositions on oath of a witness legally taken are evidence against him, should he be subsequently tried on a criminal charge, except so much of them as consists of answers to questions to which he has objected as tending to criminate him, but which he has been improperly compelled to answer. The exception depends upon the principle "Nemo tenetur seipsum accusare," but does not apply to answers given without objection, which are to be deemed voluntary. Reg. v. Coote, 9 Moore, P. C. No one can take Advantage of his own Wrong.]—The only exception, and the well-known exception, to the rule which protects a purchaser with notice taking from a purchaser without notice is that which prevents a trustee buying back trust property which he has sold, or a fraudulent man who has acquired property by fraud saying he sold it to a bonâ fide purchaser without notice, and has got it back again. Those are cases to shew that a person shall not take advantage of his own wrong—Per M.R., Barrow's Case, 49 L. J., Ch. 498 ; 14 Ch. D. 445 ; 42 L. T. 891—C. A.

The maxim that no man can take advantage of his own wrong is somewhat obscure ; but in my opinion it only means this : that a man cannot enforce against a person whom he has wronged by a breach of contract or a breach of duty, a right created against such person by such breach of contract or duty. The maxim can only be employed by the person against whom the wrong has been done, except where the person having a derivative right has been clothed with the full rights of the person from whom he has derived his title.—Per Bowen, L.J. London Celluloid Co., In re, Bayley and Hanbury's Case, 57 L. Qui prior est tempore, potior est jure.]—If an executor, in pursuance of the directions contained in the testator's will, carries on the testator's business, and in so doing contracts debts, the fact that he has carried on the business in his own name and that the testator's assets employed in it are ostensibly the executor's own property, will not entitle a judgment creditor of the executor to take in execution the testator's assets. Lapse of time and an enjoyment of the assets in a manner inconsistent with the trusts of the will, coupled with the consent of the beneficiaries, may, however, raise an inference of a gift of the assets by them to the executor, and entitle the judgment creditor to take them in execution. But, when the possession and the time which has elapsed are in accordance with the trusts of the will, no such inference can arise. Ray v. Ray (G. Coop. 264) distinguished. Morgan, In re, Pillgrem v. Pillgrem, 50 L. J., Ch. 834; 18 Ch. D. 93; 45 L. T. 183—C. A. See also Société Générale de Paris v. Walker, 55 L. J., Q. Qui sentit commodum, sentire debet et onus.]—A devise of premises for life provided that the tenant for life should keep the premises in repair. The tenant for life entered upon and enjoyed the premises during her lifetime, but left them at her death out of repair. The remainderman in fee brought an action against the executor of the tenant for life in respect of the non-repair of the premises within the period of limitation prescribed by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 2, which gives a right of action against the executor of a person deceased in respect of wrongs committed by the testator to another in respect of his property:—Held, that an action of tort in respect of the permissive waste by non-repair of the premises would have lain at common law against the tenant for life in her lifetime, and consequently lay under the above-mentioned statute against her executor after her death. Woodhouse v. Walker, 49 L. J., Q. B. 609; 5 Q. B. D. 404; 42 L. T. 770; 28 W. R. 765; 44 J. P. 666.

Quicquid plantatur solo, solo cedit.]—Miners working under customs established by the High Peak Mining Customs and Mineral Courts Act, 1851 (14 & 15 Vict. c. xciv.), lawfully erected machinery and buildings necessary thereto on surface land, of which the miners were entitled to the exclusive use for mining purposes, but the freehold of which belonged to others. The buildings were attached so as to be part of the soil, and so that they could not be removed without some disturbance, which would not amount to a destruction, of the soil. The buildings were from the first intended to be accessory to the mining, and there was nothing to shew that the property in them was intended to be irrevocably annexed to the soil:—Held, that the maxim "Quicquid plantatur solo, solo cedit," was not applicable, and that the miners were entitled to pull down and remove the buildings while their interest in the mine continued, and were not liable to the surface owners for so doing. Wake v. Hall, 52 L. Quod semel placuit in electionibus, amplius displicere non potest.]—Where a man has an option to choose one or other of two inconsistent things, when once he has made his election it cannot be retracted; it is final and cannot be altered. Scarf v. Jardine, 51 L. J., Q. B. 612; 7 App. Cas. 360; 47 L. T. 258; 30 W. R. 893—H. L. (E.)

Res perit domino.]—A horse was sold by the plaintiff to the defendant upon condition that it should be taken away by the defendant and tried by him for eight days, and returned at the end of eight days if the defendant did not think it suitable for his purposes. The horse died on the third day after it was placed in the defendant's stable, without fault of either party:—Held, by Denman, J., that the plaintiff could not maintain an action for the price, as for goods sold and delivered. Elphick v. Barnes, 49 L. J., C. P. 698; 5 C. P. D. 321; 29 W. R. 139; 44 J. P. 651.

Sic utere tuo, ut alienum non lædas.]—The defendants, a burial board, planted on their own land, and about four feet distant from their boundary railings, a yew tree, which grew through and beyond the railings, so as to project over an adjoining meadow, which was hired by the plaintiff for pasture. The plaintiff's horse, feeding in the meadow, ate of that portion of the yew tree which projected over the meadow, and died of the poison contained therein. The tree was planted and grown with the knowledge of the defendants. The plaintiff having brought an action for the value of the horse:—Held, that the defendants were liable on the principle of the maxim, "Sic utere tuo, ut alienum non lædas." Crowhurst v. Amersham Burial Board, 48 L. ## MAYOR'S COURT.

1. Jurisdiction, 970.
2. Prohibition, 974.
3. Foreign Attachment, 976.
4. Practice, 985.

1. Jurisdiction.

Extent of—Inferior Court.]—The mayor's court is an inferior court of local jurisdiction, confined to the limits and liberties of the city. London Corporation v. Cox, 36 L. J., Ex. 225; L. R. 2 H. L. 239; 16 W. R. 44.

"Carry on Business"—Railway Station.]—The South-Eastern Railway Company has a station in Cannon Street, City, where a considerable portion of its business is transacted. Their principal station, where the meetings of the directors are held and the general and substantial business of the company is conducted, is without the city:—Held, that the company does not carry on business within the jurisdiction of the mayor's court, within the meaning of s. 12 of the Mayor's Court Extension Act, 1857 (20 & 21 Vict. c. clvii.). Le Tailleur v. S. E. Ry., 3 C. P. D. 18.

The place where a railway company carries on its business within s. 12 of the Mayor's Court Procedure Act, is where the general superintendence and management of the business take place. Rogers v. L. C. & D. Ry., 26 W. R. 192.

When, therefore, it appeared that a railway company had a chief office, which was also a terminal station, in London, but that its business was managed at Victoria Station, which was not within the city:—Held, that the company carried on their business at Victoria Station and not within the city. Ib.

—— Solicitor's Clerk.]—By s. 12 of the Mayor's Court (Extension) Act, 1857, "Where the debt or damage claimed in any action shall not exceed 50*l.* no plea to the jurisdiction shall be allowed, provided the defendant, or one of the defendants shall dwell or carry on business within the city of London":—Held, that a clerk, employed by a solicitor at his office, which was within the city of London, did not "carry on business" there within the meaning of s. 12, so as to give the mayor's court jurisdiction to try an action in which the clerk was defendant. Graham v. Lewis, 58 L. J., Q. B. 117; 22 Q. B. D. 1; 37 W. R. 73; 53 J. P. 116—C. A. Affirming 59 L. T. 35.

Residence of Parties—Action on Bill of Exchange.]—Bills of exchange were drawn and accepted abroad, and indorsed by the defendant abroad, one of them being payable in London, the others in Liverpool. The foreign bankers having no residence or place of business in London, as indorsees of the bills, sued the defendant (who likewise had no residence or place of business in London) in the mayor's court, and attached moneys of the defendant in the hands of the garnishee, a banker in London:—The court made absolute a rule for a prohibition, holding that the mayor's court had no jurisdiction, the cause of action not arising within the city, and the parties to the suit being both resident abroad. Banque de Crédit Commercial v. De Gas, L. R. 6 C. P. 142; 24 L. T. 235.

Cheque payable in City, Indorsed in Yorkshire.]—A defendant, for valuable consideration, indorsed to the plaintiff a cheque for 10*l.* payable at a bank in the city of London; the cheque was dishonoured on presentation; the indorsement was in Yorkshire. The plaintiff having sued in the mayor's court to recover the amount of the cheque, the defendant's attorney applied for a prohibition:—Held, that the dishonour of the cheque within the city of London did not give the mayor's court jurisdiction, and that a prohibition ought to issue. Robinson v. Emanuel, 43 L. J., C. P. 244; L. R. 9 C. P. 414; 30 L. T. 500.

"Cause of Action arising wholly or in part within the City"—Assignment of Debt.]—The plaintiff brought an action in the mayor's court as assignee of a debt alleged to be due in respect of the price of goods sold and delivered to the defendant by the assignor. The sale and delivery had taken place without the city of London, but the debt had been assigned in writing to the plaintiff pursuant to s. 25, sub.-s. 6 of the Judicature Act, 1873, within the city of London:—Held, that the assignment of the debt was part of the cause of action, and that the cause of action having arisen in part within the city of London there was no ground for a prohibition. Read v. Brown, 58 L. J., Q. B. 120; 22 Q. B. D. 128; 60 L. T. 250; 37 W. R. 131—C. A.

Equitable Jurisdiction—Part of Cause of Action arising out of the Jurisdiction.]—The mayor's court has no equitable jurisdiction, unless the whole cause of action has arisen within its jurisdiction. Sect. 12 of the Mayor's Court Act, 1857 (20 & 21 Vict. c. clvii.) does not apply to a suit on the equity side of that court. Reg. v. London Corporation, 61 L. J., Q. B. 329.

The defendants agreed to transfer to the plaintiff shares of the nominal value of 6,000*l.* in a projected company as soon as the company was incorporated. The company was afterwards incorporated by registration under the companies acts at Somerset House, which is outside the jurisdiction of the mayor's court, London. The plaintiff commenced an action in the mayor's court for specific performance of the agreement:—Held, that the defendants were entitled to prohibition, as part of the cause of action—namely, the incorporation of the company—arose outside the jurisdiction. Bowler v. Barberton Development Syndicate, 66 L. J., Q. B. 144; [1897] 1 Q. B. 164; 75 L. T. 620; 45 W. R. 162—C. A.

Claim over £50—Contract by Telegram—Offer received and accepted within City.]—When an offer is sent by telegram and a telegram in reply is sent accepting the offer, the contract is complete on the despatch of the telegram in reply. An action was brought in the mayor's court for a sum of 50*l.* for money had and received, alleged to have been received under bets made by the defendant on behalf of the plaintiff. The plaintiff had sent a telegram, "Put me on so much on such a horse," from a post-office outside the city, to the defendant, a "bookmaker," who had offices within the city. This telegram was received by the defendant within the city, and it was answered by a telegram sent from a telegraph office within the city accepting the offer:—Held, refusing a motion for a prohibition, that the contract (if any) was complete on the receipt of the telegram within the city and the sending the telegram in reply within the city; that the whole cause of action (if any) arose within the city; and that the mayor's court had jurisdiction. Cowan v. O'Connor, 57 L. J., Q. B. 401; 20 Q. B. D. 640; 58 L. T. 857; 36 W. R. 895.

Goods Sold—Order and Delivery.]—Orders were given for goods at Poplar, to be delivered to a carrier named by the buyer and to be paid by him. The goods were received by the carrier (on delivery orders handed to him by the seller in the city of London) partly within and partly without the city. An action having been brought for the price in the mayor's court:—Held, that part of the cause of action arose out of the jurisdiction of the court, and therefore the defendant was entitled to a prohibition. Gold v. Turner, L. R. 10 C. P. 149; 23 W. R. 732.

The defendant, who carried on business in the city of London, posted a letter there containing an order for goods, addressed to the plaintiff in Surrey. No letter was sent accepting the offer; but the goods were taken by a servant of the plaintiff and delivered to the defendant in London:—Held, that the whole cause of action arose in the city. Taylor v. Jones, 45 L. J., C. P. 110; 1 C. P. D. 87; 34 L. T. 131.

In an action in the mayor's court for the price of goods sold, it was sworn that part of the goods for the price of which the plaintiff sued was ordered by a letter posted in Liverpool, and received by the defendant at his house of business in London. A rule for a prohibition was discharged, on the ground that the letter was a continuing order, and spoke in the place where it was received, and therefore that part of the cause of action arose within the jurisdiction. Bennett v. Cosgriff, 38 L. T. 177.

If a merchant abroad orders goods of a shopkeeper residing within the city of London, to be put on board a ship lying beyond the limits of the city, and the shopkeeper sends them from his shop to be shipped in pursuance of the order, the price of the goods may be sued for in the mayor's court, as a debt arising within the city. Huxham v. Smith, 2 Camp. 21; 11 R. R. 651.

Sale of Property—Agreement where made.]—The defendant verbally agreed outside the city of London and the liberties thereof, to purchase from the plaintiff the lease of a shop at New Cross, in Surrey, with the goodwill and stock-in-trade of a drapery business carried on there, and the terms thereof were embodied in two counterpart documents, one of which was signed by the defendant at Bow, in Middlesex, and the other was subsequently signed by the plaintiff within the city, and the documents so signed were then exchanged between the parties' solicitors within the city. Neither of the parties dwelt or carried on business within the city. There remained a sum of 50*l.*, balance of the purchase-money, unpaid, and the plaintiff sued the defendant for it in the mayor's court. The defendant thereupon obtained a writ of prohibition to restrain the mayor's court from further proceeding with the action:—Held, that the writ had been rightly issued, as no part of the cause of action arose within the jurisdiction of the mayor's court. Alderton v. Archer, 54 L. J., Q. B. 12; 14 Q. B. D. 1; 51 L. T. 661; 33 W. R. 136.

Account stated by Letter received in City.]—A defendant, in an action in the mayor's court, had written a letter addressed to and received by the plaintiff in the city, but posted out of the city, in which there was a distinct admission of the debt afterwards sued for. A rule nisi having been obtained for a prohibition to the mayor's court, it was held that upon a claim on an account stated the prohibition could not issue, as the mayor's court had jurisdiction; that by the receipt of the letter in the city an account was stated in the jurisdiction, and, therefore, a complete cause of action arose there. Evans v. Nicholson, 32 L. T. 778.

Held, that the statement of an account is analogous to the acceptance of a contract, and that an account was here stated by the defendant at the moment when he posted the letter, and that the statement was continuous until it reached the plaintiff, at which time it was an account stated to him at the place where he received it. Ib.

The defendant ordered goods of the plaintiff's traveller in Battersea, and they were delivered to him at his place of business in Battersea, where he resided. There was no statment as to the place from which the goods were sent; but, after they had been received by him, the defendant, in answer to a letter written to him by the plaintiff's solicitor in King William Street, City, demanding payment of the price, 8*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.*, wrote to the solicitor (whether by post or otherwise did not appear), "I will call at your office in the early part of next week, and hope to make some satisfactory arrangement for the payment of Mr. Taylor's claim." Upon a rule for a prohibition to restrain the position in an action brought in the mayor's court for goods sold and delivered at the defendant's request, and upon accounts stated:—Held, a sufficient admission of the debt to support an account stated, and to warrant the court in assuming that there was a cause of action arising within the jurisdiction of the mayor's court. Taylor v. Nicholls, 45 L. J., C. P. 455; 1 C. P. D. 242; 24 W. R. 673.

—— Nature of Statement.]—When it is sought to shew jurisdiction in the mayor's court by reason of an account stated, the account on which the jurisdiction is sought to be based must be a real account stated in the strictest sense of the term, not a mere acknowledgment of a balance due from the defendant. Brenan v. Crawley, 16 W. R. 754. See Morris v. Lautour, 9 L. T. 767.

The plaintiff's solicitor, who carried on business within the jurisdiction of the mayor's court, wrote to the defendant demanding payment of 7*l.* 6*s.* 6*d.* for goods sold and delivered by him to the plaintiff. Neither of the parties resided or carried on business, nor was the contract entered into within the jurisdiction. The defendant, in a letter written to the plaintiff's solicitor— posted outside, but received within the jurisdiction—admitted that he owed 5*l.* 6*s.* 6*d.* to the plaintiff. The plaintiff having brought an action in the mayor's court to recover 5*l.* 6*s.* 6*d.* on an account stated, the defendant obtained a writ of prohibition:—Held, that the admission of the defendant and the bringing of the action amounted to an account stated within the jurisdiction of the mayor's court, and that therefore the mayor's court had jurisdiction to try the action. Grundy v. Townsend, 36 W. R. 531—C. A.

In Actions for Sums of less Amount than 50*l.]—The effect of ss. 12 & 15 of the Mayor's Court Procedure Act, 1857 (20 & 21 Vict. c. clvii.), is to extend the jurisdiction of the mayor's court in cases within s. 12, and consequently a prohibition cannot be granted to prohibit an action in the mayor's court for a sum of less than 50*l.*, the defendant carrying on business, and part of the cause of action having arisen, within the city. Hawes v. Pavely or Pavely, 46 L. J., C. P. 18; 1 C. P. D. 418; 34 L. T. 835; 24 W. R. 895. S. P., Hawkins v. Jeffreys, 34 L. T. 837—C. A.

The circumstance of the debt or damages being under 50*l.* does not prevent the court from issuing a prohibition to the lord mayor's court, where the cause of action arose without its jurisdiction. Robinson v. Emanuel, infra.

Abandoning Part of Claim.]—An action having been brought in the mayor's court, upon a guarantee given by the defendant for an attorney's bill, upon shewing cause against a rule for a prohibition obtained (before declaration) on the ground that the whole of the cause of action did not arise within the city of London, certain of the charges in the bill being for attendances at Westminster, the plaintiff consenting altogether to abandon his claim, in respect of those items; the court discharged the rule, but without costs. Ellis v. Fleming, 45 L. J., C. P. 512; 1 C. P. D. 237.

Objection to, how taken.]—A defendant, wishing to object to the jurisdiction of the mayor's court, must do so by plea, and not by application for a prohibition. Brenan v. Cradley, 17 L. T. 549. But see infra.

Effect of Plea to.]—A plea to the jurisdiction in an action by concessit solvere in the mayor's court by an indorsee against the acceptor of a bill of exchange made payable at a banker's in London (but not specially), admits the drawing, acceptance, indorsement and dishonour of the bill, but not that either of the acts took place within the city of London. Sewell v. Cheetham, 43 L. J., C. P. 239; L. R. 9 C. P. 420; 22 W. R. 695. See Jacobs v. Brett and Evans v. Nicholson, infra.

Appearance by Defendant—Waiver.]—When an action has been commenced in the mayor's court, the defendant does not, by entering appearance, not under protest, and taking other steps, waive his right to object to the jurisdiction so soon as he ascertains exactly what the nature of the plaintiff's claim against him is. Lee v. Cohen, 71 L. T. 824—C. A.

2. PROHIBITION.

Application by whom made—Solicitor.]—In order to allow the mayor's court of London to entertain a suit, the cause of action must have arisen within its jurisdiction, even although the amount in dispute is less than 50*l.*, and the defendant carries on business in the city of London:—Held, that an attorney is sufficiently a stranger to the suit in the mayor's court to entitle him to apply for a prohibition, although the defendant himself can only raise an objection to the jurisdiction by plea under 20 & 21 Vict. c. clvii. s. 15. Willis v. Harris, 43 L. J., C. P. 208.

When a party not residing within the jurisdiction of the mayor's court is made a defendant by process therein, a prohibition will be granted with costs upon the court being informed of such process by the attorney of the defendant. Robinson v. Emanuel, 43 L. J., C. P. 244; L. R. 9 C. P. 414; 30 L. T. 500.

—— Defendant.]—A defendant in a suit in the mayor's court cannot move for a writ of prohibition to stay the proceedings in a foreign attachment. Baker v. Clark, L. R. 8 C. P. 121.

A defendant can himself apply in the superior court to prohibit the mayor's court from proceeding further in an action when the court is proceeding without jurisdiction. Bridge v. Branch, 1 C. P. D. 633 : 34 L. T. 905.

A defendant in an action in the mayor's court may obtain a writ of prohibition, notwithstanding the Mayor's Court Procedure Act, 1857 (20 & 21 Vict. c. clvii.), s. 15, which enacts that "no defendant shall be permitted to object to the jurisdiction of the court in or by any proceeding whatsoever except by plea" ; the real effect of that section being only to limit the mode of objecting within the mayor's court to the jurisdiction. Jacobs v. Brett, 44 L. J., Ch. 377 ; L. R. 20 Eq. 1 ; 32 L. T. 522.; 23 W. R. 556.

—— Stranger.]—The court, at the instance of a stranger, made a rule absolute for a prohibition to the mayor's court, after verdict for the plaintiff, notwithstanding that the claim was below 50*l*., and consequently there could be no plea to the jurisdiction. Quartly v. Timmins, L. R. 9 C. P. 416 ; 22 W. R. 488.

Whether a writ of prohibition is applied for by either of the parties to the suit in an inferior court, or by a stranger to such suit, the only discretion which the superior court has to refuse such writ is if in doubt, in fact or law, whether the inferior court is exceeding its jurisdiction or is acting without jurisdiction. Worthington v. Jeffries, 44 L. J., C. P. 209 ; L. R. 10 C. P. 379 ; 32 L. T. 606 ; 23 W. R. 750.

But when a writ of prohibition has been issued to restrain proceedings in the mayor's court on the application of a stranger to the suit, it cannot be sustained unless he can shew that the court has exceeded its jurisdiction both with reference to the facts and the law, and then it is a matter of discretion with the superior court whether or not to set it aside. Chambers v. Green, 44 L. J., Ch. 600 ; L. R. 20 Eq. 552.

Plea to Jurisdiction.]—The same facts which would allow a stranger to obtain a prohibition to the mayor's court will not entitle the defendant to plead to the jurisdiction of that court. Evans v. Nicholson, 32 L. T. 664.

By the Mayor's Court Act, s. 12, no plea to the jurisdiction shall be allowed in cases where the plaintiff claims not more than 50*l*., and where the cause of action arises either wholly or in part within the city ; and, by s. 15, no defendant may object to the jurisdiction except by plea. The plaintiff's cause of action arose in part within the city, and the defendant pleaded to the jurisdiction :—Held, that although a prohibition might be granted, the defendant was not entitled to plead to the jurisdiction. Ib.

A prohibition will not be granted to restrain the mayor's court from proceeding where no plea to the jurisdiction is allowed under s. 12 of the Mayor's Court Procedure Act, 1857. Hawes v. Paveley, 46 L. J., C. P. 18 ; 1 C. P. D. 418 ; 34 L. T. 835—C. A.

By s. 15 of the Mayor's Court of London Procedure Act, 1857, no defendant shall be permitted to object to the jurisdiction of the court in or by any proceeding whatsoever, except by plea. The court therefore refused to grant a prohibition, although the cause of action in respect of which proceedings were taken in the mayor's court, did not arise within the jurisdiction of that court. Manning v. Farquharson, 30 L. J., Q. B. 22 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1300 ; 3 L. T. 378 ; 9 W. R. 107.

On what Grounds granted.]—A superior court is not bound to grant prohibition to the mayor's court, to prevent that court from proceeding in an action from want of jurisdiction, unless it is clear that the cause of action sued on arose outside the jurisdiction. Taylor v. Nicholls, 45 L. J., C. P. 455 ; 1 C. P. D. 242 ; 24 W. R. 673.

By Court of Chancery.]—Semble, that the Court of Chancery has jurisdiction to issue a prohibition to the mayor's court. Jacobs v. Friedburg, 21 W. R. 353.

Costs of Rules for Prohibition.]—In pursuance of the intimation given by the court in Robinson v. Emanuel (L. R. 9 C. P. 414), that the court would, in future, in virtue of its general jurisdiction over its officers, order the costs of a rule for a prohibition to be paid by the plaintiff's attorney in every case in which the action had been improperly brought in the mayor's court in respect of a cause of action not arising within the jurisdiction of that court, the costs were, on the 12th July, 1874, ordered to be paid by the respective attorneys for the plaintiffs in several cases. Mem., L. R. 9 C. P. 751, n.

The order for costs of a prohibition will not be made against the plaintiff's solicitor personally, unless the rule has been moved for in that form, and the solicitor has had an opportunity of shewing cause. Rogers v. L. C. & D. Ry., 26 W. R. 192.

Against Attachment of Goods not within the Jurisdiction.]—A prohibition lies to prohibit the mayor's court attaching the goods of a garnishee which are not within its jurisdiction. Mayar v. Carmot or Cannot, 24 L. T. 583 ; 19 W. R. 756. And see Cases infra.

3. Foreign Attachment.

Corporation Aggregate cannot be Garnishee.]—The process against a garnishee to enforce obedience to the jurisdiction of the mayor's court in foreign attachment is personal, and cannot be applied to a corporation aggregate. Where, therefore, a corporation aggregate was cited as garnishee to appear in the mayor's court, it was held entitled to maintain prohibition. London Corporation v. London Joint Stock Bank, 50 L. J., Q. B. 594 ; 6 App. Cas. 393 ; 45 L. T. 81 ; 29 W. R. 870.

Custom must be strictly Pursued.]—The suit of foreign attachment is founded upon ancient custom, and in itself is perfectly valid. The process by which it is sought to be enforced must be strictly pursued according to the custom. Fictitious summonses and returns will render the suit invalid. Ib.

Discharge of Garnishee.]—No payment but a payment made by compulsion of law can discharge a garnishee from his original liability to his creditor. Ib.

Not against Dead Man.]—The custom of foreign attachment does not warrant proceedings against one who at the time of their commencement was dead. Matthey v. Wiseman, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 657; 34 L. J., C. P. 216; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 603; 12 L. T. 846; 13 W. R. 914.

Therefore a judgment and execution and payment by the garnishees in a suit so commenced in the mayor's court cannot be set up by them as an answer to a claim against them by the personal representative of the deceased, for a debt due to him in his lifetime, notwithstanding that the letters of administration were granted before execution had, and (as was suggested) by the custom that she might have appeared in the mayor's court and dissolved the attachment. Ib.

What Sums Attachable.]—A judgment was obtained by the plaintiff against the defendant in China. In an action upon the judgment in the queen's bench here, judgment was, pursuant to a consent given by the defendant's attorney in the city of London, signed at the queen's bench office, Temple:—Held, that the judgment so signed was not a debt arising within the city of London, so as to give jurisdiction to the mayor's court to attach moneys of the defendant in the hands of his attorneys there. Tapp v. Jones, 43 L. J., C. P. 250; L. R. 9 C. P. 418; 30 L. T. 499; 22 W. R. 632.

It is not so absolutely clear that a debt, the subject of an action upon which judgment has not been recovered, is protected from foreign attachment, as to make it the duty of the debtor to disregard such attachment, and pay the debt, after judgment, to the judgment creditor or his assignees. Nelson v. Barter, 2 Hem. & M. 334; 33 L. J., Ch. 705; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 832; 10 L. T. 743; 12 W. R. 1043.

A foreign attachment can only affect moneys for which the debtor himself could maintain an action at the time of the attachment. Webster v. Webster, 31 Beav. 393; 31 L. J., Ch. 655; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1047; 6 L. T. 11; 10 W. R. 503.

A sum of money directed to be paid by A. to B. by the master's allocatur, cannot be attached in A.'s hands by process out of the sheriff's court in an action against B. Coppell v. Smith, 4 Term Rep. 312.

A sum directed to be paid by A. to B. by the award of an arbitrator, cannot be attached in A.'s hands at the suit of a creditor of B. Caila v. Elgood, 2 D. & R. 193; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 33.

Money awarded under a rule of court cannot be attached. Grant v. Harding, 4 Term Rep. 313, n.

The court will not grant a prohibition to restrain the mayor's court from proceeding upon an attachment of shares in a mining company worked on the cost-book principle, upon the suggestion that such shares are not goods and effects. Tredinnick v. Oliver, 5 H. & N. 780; 29 L. J., Ex. 466.

Where Lien Exists.]—A plaintiff in a foreign attachment cannot take money or goods out of the hands of a garnishee who has a lien thereon, without discharging the lien. Giles v. Nathan, 5 Taunt. 558; 1 Marsh. 226; 15 R. R. 581, 584.

Where other Equitable Rights.]—Property belonging to a defendant in the hands of the garnishee, with whom the defendant has pledged it, cannot, after it has been equitably assigned by the defendant to a third person, be attached by a creditor of the defendant, although no notice of the assignment has been given to the garnishee. Robinson v. Nesbitt, 37 L. J., C. P. 124; L. R. 3 C. P. 264; 17 L. T. 653; 16 W. R. 543.

The custom of foreign attachment does not apply to debts, the beneficial interest of which is vested in a person other than the defendant sued in the mayor's court, whereof the garnishee has notice, and such debts are not attachable under the custom. Westoby v. Day, 2 El. & Bl. 605; 22 L. J., Q. B. 418; 18 Jur. 10; 1 W. R. 431.

Priority.]—A creditor who, after his debtor's death, obtains an attachment in the mayor's court against part of the assets, gains no priority over the fund attached, as against the other creditors of the deceased. Redhead v. Welton, 29 Beav. 521; 30 L. J., Ch. 577; 4 L. T. 230; 9 W. R. 473.

A judgment in the mayor's court obtained against the garnishee, does not entitle the plaintiff to rank as a judgment creditor in the administration of the garnishee's assets. Holt v. Murray, 1 Sim. 485.

Jurisdiction—Bill of Exchange.]—The cause of action, that is, the whole substantial cause of action, must arise, and the garnishee must reside or carry on business within the city of London, in order to give the mayor's court jurisdiction to attach moneys of the debtor in the hands of a garnishee. Cooke v. Gill, 42 L. J., C. P. 98; L. R. 8 C. P. 107; 28 L. T. 32; 21 W. R. 334.

The defendant, who had no residence or place of business in London, drew bills in Philadelphia upon the Union Bank of London, and indorsed them in Philadelphia, and there delivered them to the agents of the plaintiff, who remitted them to the plaintiff in London. The drawees refusing to accept the bills, the plaintiff issued an attachment out of the mayor's court to attach moneys of the drawer in the hands of the garnishees, bankers in London:—Held, that the cause of action arose in America and not in London, and consequently that the garnishees were entitled to a prohibition. Ib.

—— Sale of Shares in Company.]—A plaintiff attached by process in the mayor's court money of the defendant in the hands of the garnishees. A rule nisi was obtained for a writ of prohibition, on the ground that the action was brought to recover calls in a public company in course of winding-up, under an order made by the Master of the Rolls out of the jurisdiction of the mayor's court, and that the defendant was a foreigner having no residence or place of business in England. Cause was shewn upon an affidavit stating that the contract for the purchase of the shares was made in London, and that the defendant carried on a large banking business through the garnishees as his agents in the city of London. The plaintiff being desirous of questioning the decision in Cooke v. Gill (supra), the rule was enlarged upon his undertaking to declare in prohibition. Whinney v. Schmidt, L. R. 8 C. P. 118.

—— Freight, where Payable — Parties.]—Where process had issued out of the mayor's court against garnishees, and on cause being shewn against a rule for a prohibition, it appeared that the claim against the original defendant was for extra freight due on a charter-party in respect of a voyage from the Chincha Islands to the Victoria Docks, not within the city of London, and that neither the defendant nor the garnishees resided within the city of London :—Held, that the prohibition must issue, although, by the terms of the charter-party, payment of the freight was to be made within the city of London. Byrne v. Guano Consignment Co., 25 L. T. 935.

—— Residence of Parties.] — In a foreign attachment, it is not necessary that the debt should arise within the jurisdiction, or that the defendant in that court should reside within it, or be actually summoned. Harrington v. Macmorris, 5 Taunt. 228 ; 1 Marsh. 33.

Foreign attachment is a bad plea, either where the parties are not both resident in London, or where the plaintiff is an executor or an administrator. Barrymore (Lord) v. Taylor, 1 Esp. 327.

—— Fund only within.]—A bank in Belgium, having funds in the hands of their agent in London, failed. A merchant firm at Hamburg, creditors of the bank, attached the fund in London in the mayor's court ; a demurrer to a bill filed to restrain the proceedings in the mayor's court, and to obtain a writ of prohibition, was overruled. Jacobs v. Friedburg, 21 W. R. 353.

Where the mayor's court has no jurisdiction over the person of a defendant against whom a plaint has been entered in that court, the awarding process of foreign attachment against a person having funds in his hands belonging to the defendant, as a means of compelling an appearance, is an excess of jurisdiction for which prohibition will lie. De Haber v. Portugal (Queen), 17 Q. B. 171 ; 20 L. J., Q. B. 488 ; 16 Jur. 164.

The process of foreign attachment can only be resorted to where the cause of action against the original defendant arises within the jurisdiction of the court from which the attachment issues. Ib.

A custom of foreign attachment of a debt due to the defendant from a third person on the bare fact of the latter being found within the city when neither the plaintiff nor the defendant nor the garnishee is in any way connected with the city, and when neither the cause of action between the plaintiff and the defendant, nor the alleged debt from the garnishee to the defendant, arose within the jurisdiction of the city, is bad. London Corporation v. Cox, 36 L. J., Ex. 225 ; L. R. 2 H. L. 239 ; 16 W. R. 44. Affirming 2 H. & C. 401 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 800 ; 8 L. T. 700.

The garnishee is entitled to move for prohibition against the mayor's court proceeding with the garnishment without first raising in that court the question of jurisdiction. Prohibition would only have issued at the suit of the original defendant, after the defendant had first raised the question by plea in the mayor's court, under 20 & 21 Vict. c. clvii. Ib.

Pleading.]—If a plea of foreign attachment states the custom to be "that if any person be or hath been indebted to any other person within the city," it ought to aver that the defendant in the plaint was indebted to the plaintiff within the city. Morris v. Ludlam, 2 H. Bl. 362.

A plea of foreign attachment must state that the garnishee is within the jurisdiction of the mayor's court at the time of the attachment. Crosby v. Hetherington, 5 Scott (N.R.) 637 ; 4 Man. & G. 933 ; 12 L. J., C. P. 261.

—— Money in Hands of "Self and Partner."] —A plea of foreign attachment stated the custom to be, that if the plaintiff in a plaint in debt against another in the mayor's court alleges that any other person owes to the then defendant any money that may be attached ; and that the plaintiff below alleged that he and any other person owed to the defendant below a certain sum of money :—Held, that such plea was bad, as the person owing the money to the defendant must, within the custom as pleaded, be a different person from the plaintiff ; and it is doubtful whether a custom for a party to attach money in the hands of himself and partner can be supported, even if properly pleaded. Nonell v. Hullett, 4 B. & Ald. 646.

—— Warning to Shew Cause.]—It is not necessary to aver the custom that the plaintiff below shall swear to the debt, or the fact that he did swear to it ; neither is it necessary to aver that the plaintiff in the principal case was indebted to the plaintiff below within the jurisdiction of the mayor's court ; nor that a scire facias issued against the garnishee ; it is enough to state that he was "warned to shew cause." Banks v. Self, 5 Taunt. 234.

Where it was alleged that a plaint had been levied against the plaintiff in the lord mayor's court before action, but there was no allegation of issuing a scire facias to warn the defendant, who was the alleged garnishee, previously to the commencement of the action :—Held, a good plea. Webb v. Hurrell, 4 D. & L. 824 ; 4 C. B. 287 ; 16 L. J., C. P. 187.

—— Previous Summons.]—Where, pending an action, a foreign attachment was executed, but which latter suit had been commenced previously to the action :—Held, that it might be pleaded to the further maintenance. Ib.

A custom in an inferior court to issue process of foreign attachment for the purpose of compelling the appearance of the defendant, without a previous summons, is bad. Bruce v. Waite, 1 Man. & G. 1 ; 1 Scott (N.R.) 81 ; 9 L. J., C. P. 237.

The creditors of the garnishee must be summoned (though it is alleged to be the custom of London to give notice), otherwise the judgment against the garnishee will be erroneous and the money paid or levied in execution of it will not discharge the garnishee of his debt to his creditors. Fisher v. Lane, 3 Wils. 297 ; 2 W. Bl. 834.

Issue of Execution—At what Time.]—On a plea of foreign attachment, not stating that it was after suit, it is necessary that it should be proved that it was executed before suit. And if it appears that it was after plea, and after time for pleading expired, the judge will not amend. Belbo v. Ionides, 2 F. & F. 674.

To an action for money had and received, the defendant pleaded a recovery by foreign attachment, at the suit of a creditor of the plaintiff's ; and that the creditor had execution of the sum recovered, according to the custom of London : the plaintiff replied that no execution was executed, on which the defendant joined issue :—Held, that without execution executed, the defendant was not discharged from his debt to the plaintiff ; and that, having joined issue on the fact of the execution, the jury was not estopped, by a record of satisfaction in the foreign attachment, from finding according to the fact ; and that it is no answer to a plea of recovery under a foreign attachment that the plaintiff had no notice of the proceedings. Magrath v. Hardy, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 782; 6 Scott, 627; 6 D. P. C. 749; 1 Arn. 352; 7 L. J., C. P. 299; 2 Jur. 594.

A summons to the defendant of nihil returned, and information of the goods in the hands of the garnishee, must appear on the face of the record in the court below. Ib.

—— Compulsory Payment — What.] — The plaintiffs, being foreign merchants, had a sum of money belonging to them in the hands of the defendants. The plaintiffs also dealt with R. & Co., who resided abroad, and were indebted to them in a sum exceeding the debt due from the defendants to the plaintiffs. R. & Co. attached money in the hands of the defendants, according to the custom of London, as being the money of the plaintiffs. The attachment was tried and a verdict recovered against the defendants, as garnishees. Judgment was obtained and a certificate granted by the officer of the court, informing the defendants that judgment had been entered. On the production of the certificate by R. & Co., the defendants, as garnishees, paid the amount of the verdict by debiting the plaintiffs in the defendants' books of account, and crediting R. & Co. therewith, under an engagement that the money should be returned if the proceeding failed. The plaintiffs afterwards appeared to the action in the mayor's court, and put in bail, by which the attachment was dissolved:—Held, first, that this was not a compulsory payment, as by the custom it was not required to be made until after execution executed; and, secondly, that the transfer made by the defendants in their books of account did not amount to payment, unless the plaintiffs had directed it to be done, or had subsequently assented to it. Wetter v. Rucker, 4 Moore, 172; 1 Br. & B. 494; 21 R. R. 690.

—— Where Garnishee Removes.] — Where judgment had been obtained in the mayor's court against a garnishee who had removed his person and effects out of the jurisdiction of that court:—Held, that execution could not issue against him out of the court of K. B., under 19 Geo. 3, c. 70, s. 4, as that statute is confined to suits in inferior courts, where the proceedings are similar to those in the courts above. Bulmer v. Marshall, 1 D. & R. 537; 5 B. & Ald. 821.

Staying Proceedings.]—The court will not stay proceedings in an action commenced there, to abide the event of an action in the mayor's court, where it is sought to try in a foreign attachment the title to the same property which is in suit there. Smidt v. Ogle, 6 Taunt. 74; 16 R. R. 575.

Where a foreign attachment had been sued out of the mayor's court against a railway company by their corporate name, the company being only provisionally registered, and money in the hands of their bankers was attached thereunder, but no further proceedings taken, the court refused to stay proceedings in an action subsequently brought therein against three provisional committee-men of the company for the same debt which was sought to be recovered under the attachment. Denton v. Maitland, 11 Jur. 42.

Election.]—A plaintiff sued the defendants, who resided abroad, in respect of a cause of action arising abroad, and whilst the action was pending he commenced an action in the mayor's court against them for the same cause of action, and by foreign attachment he attached certain moneys of the defendants, in the hands of their attorneys, to answer his claim in the mayor's court:—Held, that as the mayor's court had no jurisdiction in the matter, the proceedings there, whilst the action in the superior court was pending, were vexatious, and the plaintiff was therefore put to the election of abandoning the action in the mayor's court, or of having the proceedings stayed in the cause in the superior court. Frith v. Guppy, 36 L. J., C. P. 45; L. R. 2 C. P. 32; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 1011; 15 L. T. 616; 15 W. R. 280.

A plaintiff, who had obtained a judgment in the exchequer, proceeded on it by foreign attachment in the mayor's court, and while the defendant was in custody under the attachment sued out a ca. sa. in the exchequer on the judgment:—Held, that the ca. sa. was not irregular, however the defendant might be entitled to apply to the equitable jurisdiction of the court to compel the plaintiff to forego either it or the foreign attachment. Chamberlayne v. Green, 9 M. & W. 790; 1 D. (N.S.) 649; 11 L. J., Ex. 307; 6 Jur. 400.

Form of Return to Certiorari.]—A cause commenced by foreign attachment in the mayor's court, was removed into the queen's bench by certiorari. A return was made omitting to shew that the garnishee resided within the jurisdiction of the mayor's court:—Held, no objection to the return, which was in the usual form. Day v. Paupierre, 13 Q. B. 802; 7 D. & L. 12; 18 L. J., Q. B. 270; 14 Jur. 40.

Evidence of Proceedings.]—In a declaration for maliciously and without reasonable or probable cause issuing out of the mayor's court, London, an attachment of a debt owing from third persons to the plaintiff, it must appear that the action in which the attachment issued was terminated. Parton v. Hill, 10 L. T. 414; 12 W. R. 753.

The plaintiff purchased wine lying at the defendant's wharf from the holder of a warrant, given by the defendant for its delivery. The vendor indorsed the warrant generally. The plaintiff sent it so indorsed to the wharf, and obtained samples of the wine. A notice from the mayor's court was subsequently served at the wharf attaching the vendor's goods in the defendant's custody, and a description of the wine was at the time of service indorsed on the back of the notice, and shewn to the defendant's manager. The plaintiff, on afterwards producing his warrant at the wharf, and demanding the wine, was told by the manager (the defendant being absent) that the wine was stopped on account of the attachment. The same day the plaintiff's attorney wrote to the defendant to demand the delivery of the wine by eleven o'clock the next day. The defendant's manager called next morning on the plaintiff's attorney after seeing the defendant, and stated that the matter required consideration, and that the defendant would consult his attorney. But the same day at noon a writ was issued:—Held, first, that the wine was not in the custody of the law; and that the attachment was a circumstance to be considered by the jury in forming a conclusion whether there was a conversion.

Pillot v. Wilkinson, 3 H. & C. 345; 34 L. J., Ex. 22; 12 W. R. 1084—Ex. Ch.

Held, secondly, that on these facts there was evidence of a conversion; and it was a question for the jury whether the defendant entertained a bonâ fide doubt as to the plaintiff's title to the wine, and whether a reasonable time had elapsed for clearing up that doubt. Ib.

A judge at nisi prius will take judicial notice of the custom of foreign attachment, and of the seal affixed to proceedings in the mayor's court. Jeffs v. Day, 12 L. T. 852.

To prove that the defendant, under process of foreign attachment, has paid a sum of money to a creditor of the plaintiff, the record of the cause in the mayor's court, with an entry of satisfaction, is conclusive evidence: the record is only primâ facie evidence that the debt for which the action was brought in the mayor's court arose within the limits of the city. Huxham v. Smith, 2 Camp. 21; 11 R. R. 651.

—— Proof of Debt.]—A garnishee, against whom a recovery was had in the mayor's court, after a summons to the defendant, and nihil returned, might protect himself by giving such proceedings in evidence upon non assumpsit in an action to recover the same debt brought by the defendant below, without proving the debt of the plaintiff below who attached the money in his hands; although, by the course of proceedings in the mayor's court, bail not having been put in, the plaintiff below was not obliged to prove the debt to entitle himself to recover against the garnishee. M'Daniel v. Hughes, 3 East, 367.

Effect of—Garnishee Order.]—The existence of an attachment in the mayor's court does not prevent the operation of a garnishee order made under ss. 60—64 of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854. Richter v. Laxton, 48 L. J., Q. B. 184; 39 L. T. 499; 27 W. R. 214.

—— Validity of Debt.]—The plaintiffs, merchants in London and Madras, issued an attachment out of the lord mayor's court, to attach moneys in the hands of B. for a debt due from V. of Madras. B. pleaded a prior attachment by S., a foreign creditor, and so the action of the plaintiffs in the mayor's court was defeated. The plaintiffs filed a bill alleging that the prior attachment was not for a bonâ fide debt, and praying for an account and payment of their debt:—Held, that the court had jurisdiction to decide the matter, and the court being of opinion that no debt was due to S., directed payment to the plaintiffs of the debt due to them. Shand v. Du Buisson, 43 L. J., Ch. 508; L. R. 18 Eq. 283; 22 W. R. 483.

In an action for a debt by W. against D., he pleaded that the debt had been attached in the hands of D. as garnishee in a plaint in the Mayor's Court by C. against W. A replication, that the debt sued for in the mayor's court did not arise or accrue within the jurisdiction thereof, is bad. Westoby v. Day, 2 El. & Bl. 605; 22 L. J., Q. B. 418; 18 Jur. 10; 1 W. R. 431.

—— Bar to further Action.]—In an action by A. against B., execution executed upon a foreign attachment in the mayor's court of London is a good plea in bar of the further maintenance of an action against C., the garnishee, in respect of the same debt. Webb v. Hurrell, 4 C. B. 287; 4 D. & L. 824; 16 L. J., C. P. 187.

In order to render a recovery by foreign attachment, according to the custom of London, an answer to an action in the superior courts, there must have been execution executed. Magrath v. Hardy, 6 Scott, 627; 4 Bing. (N.C.) 782; 6 D. P. C. 749; 1 Arn. 352; 7 L. J., C. P. 299; 2 Jur. 594.

A foreign attachment pending is no bar to an action, until judgment is recovered in the attachment. Nathan v. Giles, 5 Taunt. 558; 1 Marsh. 226; 15 R. R. 581.

A. deposited goods with B. as a security for money advanced by B., with a promise to deliver the bill of lading, when it should arrive, indorsed to B.; C. was employed as a broker to dispose of the goods for B.'s benefit. Before the bill of lading arrived, the goods were attached in the mayor's court in the hands of C. by a creditor of A.:—Held, that the transfer of the property to B. was complete, though the bill of lading had never been indorsed, and that, therefore, the foreign attachment was no answer to an action by B. against C. for the proceeds. Ib.

—— Founding Petition on.]—A debt, which has been attached in the mayor's court, is not sufficient to support a petition for winding up a company. European Bank, In re, Baylis, Ex parte, 35 L. J., Ch. 690.

—— Secured Creditor—Writ served but Judgment not obtained.]—A creditor who has served a writ of foreign attachment in an action in the mayor's court, but has not obtained judgment in the action before the commencement of the bankruptcy or liquidation of his debtor, is not "a creditor holding security on the property of the debtor" within the meaning of s. 12 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869. Levy v. Lovell, 49 L. J., Ch. 305; 14 Ch. D. 234; 42 L. T. 242; 28 W. R. 602—C. A. Contra, London Cotton Mills Co., In re, Brander, In re, 25 W. R. 109.

An attachment of the goods of the defendant in an action of debt in the tolzey court of Bristol is only a process to compel the appearance of the defendant, and does not make the plaintiff a secured creditor within the meaning of s. 16, sub-s. 5, of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, the effect of an attachment in the tolzey court being the same as that of a foreign attachment under the custom of the mayor's court of London. Levy v. Lovell (14 Ch. D. 234) followed. Sear, Ex parte, Price, In re, 17 Ch. D. 74; 44 L. T. 887—C. A.

—— Arrest on Mesne Process.]—The customary process of foreign attachment in the city of London was not equivalent to an arrest on mesne process, though the attachment could only be dissolved by the defendant putting in bail or rendering himself to prison; and 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, does not affect the custom. Day v. Paupierre, 7 D. & L. 12; 13 Q. B. 802; 18 L. J., Q. B. 270; 14 Jur. 40.

—— Render of Defendant.]—When, in a proceeding by foreign attachment, the defendant renders himself in dissolution of the attachment and the plaintiff goes on in the action and recovers judgment, the defendant is entitled to be discharged from custody by virtue of s. 4 of the Debtors Act, 1869. The 29th section, which preserves the custom of foreign attachment, does not operate so as to make the defendant, under such circumstances, liable to be detained in custody. Waine v. Wilkins, 42 L. J., Q. B. 95; L. R. 8 Q. B. 107; 27 L. T. 825.

4. PRACTICE.

Solicitor of High Court may be Sued.]—A solicitor of the high court who had also been admitted a solicitor in the mayor's court was sued in the latter court:—Held, that he was not entitled to have the action removed into the high court on the ground of the privilege of a solicitor of the high court to be sued in that court only. Day v. Ward, 55 L. J., Q. B. 494; 17 Q. B. D. 703; 55 L. T. 518; 35 W. R. 59.

Counter-claims.]—When in an action in the mayor's court on a cause of action within the jurisdiction, a counter-claim beyond the jurisdiction is set up, the court will not grant a prohibition. Davis v. Flagstaff Silver Mining Co., 47 L. J., C. P. 503; 3 C. P. D. 228; 38 L. T. 769; 26 W. R. 431—C. A.

Such counter-claim should be dealt with by the mayor's court itself, under the powers conferred on it by the Judicature Act, 1873 (36 & 37 Vict. c. 66), ss. 89, 90. Ib.

Certiorari—Discretion of Judge—Action "fit to be tried in Superior Court."]—By clause 12 in the schedule to the Borough and Local Courts of Record Act, 1872, which has been applied by order in council to the mayor's court, "No action entered in the court shall before judgment be removed or removable from the court into any superior court by any writ or process, except by leave of a judge of one of the superior courts in cases which shall appear to such judge fit to be tried in one of the superior courts":—Held, that the question whether an action was fit to be tried in the superior court was a matter of opinion for the judge, and that he had a discretion in all cases as to whether an action should be removed into the superior court. The words "fit to be tried" mean "ought to be tried" in the superior court. Banks v. Hollingsworth, 62 L. J., Q. B. 239; [1893] 1 Q. B. 442; 4 R. 228; 68 L. T. 477; 41 W. R. 225; 57 J. P. 436—C. A.

In an action in the mayor's court against two defendants, one of whom was a corporation aggregate, an application was made by the defendant corporation to have the action transferred to the chancery division of the high court, on the grounds (1) that accounts were required from persons who were not within the jurisdiction of the mayor's court; (2) that it would be necessary to bring several persons into the action as third parties, which could not be effectually done if the action remained in the mayor's court; (3) that, according to recent decisions, a corporation aggregate could not be made defendants in an action in the mayor's court:—Held, that under these circumstances, it was "fit" that the whole proceeding should be transferred from the inferior court to the high court. Vickers v. Stevens, 44 L. T. 679; 29 W. R. 562.

A party to an action in the mayor's court is not entitled as of right to remove the action by writ of certiorari into the high court, but can only do so by leave of a judge of the high court in a case where it shall appear to him that the action is one which is fit to be tried there. Cherry v. Endean, 55 L. J., Q. B. 292; 54 L. T. 763; 34 W. R. 458.

Rule 12 of the Borough and Local Courts of Record Act, 1872, which is applicable to the mayor's court, provides that "no action entered in the court shall, before judgment, be removed or removable from the court into any superior court by any writ or process, except by leave of a judge of one of the superior courts in cases which shall appear to such judge fit to be tried in one of the superior courts," &c. The plaintiff brought an action in the mayor's court against the defendant, a stockbroker, for alleged misconduct in connection with the purchase of certain shares, and claimed 110*l.* as damages:—Held, that the action was one which was "fit to be tried" in the superior courts, and that the defendant was accordingly entitled to a writ of certiorari. Simpson v. Shaw, 56 L. J., Q. B. 92; 56 L. T. 24.

—— Time for lodging Writ.]—By the Mayor's Court of London Procedure Act, 1857, s. 17, "No cause depending in the mayor's court shall be removed before judgment therein into any superior court, unless the writ removing such cause shall have been lodged with the proper officer of the court within one month after the service of the plaint, or unless such writ shall have been lodged with such officer before such action shall have been entered for trial according to the practice of the mayor's court":—Held that the section gave alternative periods for lodging the writ, and that the defendant could avail himself of whichever was the longer period. Prim v. Smith, 57 L. J., Q. B. 336; 20 Q. B. D. 643; 58 L. T. 606; 36 W. R. 530—C. A.

By the Borough and Local Courts of Record Act, 1872, schedule, r. 12, it is enacted that no action shall before judgment be removed into any superior court except by leave of a judge of one of the superior courts in cases which shall appear to such judge fit to be tried in one of the superior courts, and upon such terms as to payment of costs, security for debt and costs, or such other terms as such judge shall think fit:—Held, that this rule does not override s. 17 of the Mayor's Court of London Procedure Act, 1857, and does not substitute the discretion of a judge for the strict limit of time imposed in that section. Price v. Shaw, 59 L. T. 480.

Previous Practice.]—Circumstances under which a writ of certiorari was granted to the mayor's court. Jones v. Hey, 17 W. R. 996.

When a suit in the lord mayor's court was removed by writ of certiorari into the court of chancery, and it appeared upon the face of the bill that some of the plaintiffs were out of the jurisdiction of the lord mayor's court, an order was made ex parte, without further evidence, that the suit in the mayor's court be retained in the court of chancery. Tracy v. Open Stock Exchange Co., 40 L. J., Ch., 159; L. R. 11 Eq., 556; 19 W. R. 379.

An order was also made in a suit from the mayor's court that the registrar of that court might be at liberty to pay over to the credit of the cause in the court of chancery the money paid into the mayor's court. Ib.

A writ of certiorari will be issued to remove a suit out of the equity side of the lord mayor's court into the court of chancery on a bill being filed for the purpose, and evidence being given that neither the plaintiff nor the defendant, nor the subject-matter of the suit, was within the jurisdiction of the lord mayor's court, and that the cause of action did not arise there. Davies v. MacHenry, L. R. 3 Ch. 200.

A plaintiff in an action against a defendant in the lord mayor's court for 80*l.*, attached his balance at her bankers', within the lord mayor's jurisdiction. The defendant paid 80*l.* into court in lieu of special bail, discharged the attachment, and pleaded coverture. The action failed. Thereupon the plaintiff filed a bill against the defendant on the equity side of the lord mayor's court, which was removed by certiorari into the court of chancery. MacHenry v. Davies, L. R. 6 Eq. 462.

—— Security for Costs.]—A cause was removed by certiorari from the mayor's court. The defendant paid a sum of money into court in lieu of bail, and shortly afterwards obtained a rule for security for costs, on the ground that the plaintiff resided out of England. The security for costs was never given, and a period of nearly two years elapsed without any proceeding in the cause. The court made absolute a rule calling on the plaintiff to give security for costs within a fortnight, otherwise the defendant to be at liberty to take the money paid in, in lieu of bail, out of court. Tassie v. Kennedy, 5 D. & L. 587; 2 B. C. Rep. 278; 17 L. J., Q. B. 215; 12 Jur. 854.

When a cause had been removed from an inferior court by habeas corpus at the defendant's instance, and no further steps taken on either side for a year, the plaintiff might apply ex parte for a procedendo to issue, unless bail in the queen's bench were given within four days. And the bail below cannot move to set aside such procedendo when issued, until they or the defendant have put in bail in that court. Blanchard v. De la Crouée, 9 Q. B. 869; 16 L. J., Q. B. 181; 11 Jur. 283.

Upon the removal of a cause by certiorari from the lord mayor's court, the defendant is not at liberty, under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, s. 2, to pay money into court in lieu of putting in and perfecting special bail. Morgan v. Pebrer, 2 Scott, 853.

The general rule, that where an action against an executor is removed from an inferior court, the defendant is not bound to put in special bail, does not extend to the case of an inferior court where a custom of foreign attachment exists which can only be dissolved on putting in special bail. Bustow v. Gant, 13 Q. B. 807; 21 L. J., Q. B. 377; 17 Jur. 299.

Removal of Judgment for Purposes of Execution.]—Under the Mayor's Court of London Procedure Act, 1857, s. 48, a plaintiff who has recovered a judgment in an action in the mayor's court, against a defendant having goods within its jurisdiction, is entitled, as of right, to remove such judgment into one of the superior courts, and to issue execution thereout against the goods of the defendant; and such execution will not be set aside as an abuse of the process of the court, notwithstanding that execution could have been issued out of the mayor's court with as full effect as out of the superior court, and that the only object of removing the judgment into the superior court may have been to obtain the increased costs of such execution. Haywood v. Saint, 32 L. T. 566.

By the Mayor's Court of London Procedure Act, 1857, s. 48, execution might be issued in a superior court upon a judgment obtained in the mayor's court. By the Borough and Local Courts of Record Act, 1872, s. 6, where final judgment has been obtained in any local court for a sum not exceeding 20*l.*, "such court shall be at liberty to send a writ or precept for the recovery of the same to the registrar of any county court within the jurisdiction of which the defendant may possess any goods or chattels . . . and thereupon the high bailiff of such county court shall execute the same in the same manner as if such writ or precept had been issued out of such county court":—Held, that the two statutes were not inconsistent, and that the Mayor's Court of London Procedure Act, 1857, s. 48, had not been repealed by the Borough and Local Courts of Record Act, 1872, s. 6; and that notwithstanding the latter statute, execution might be issued in the High Court of Justice upon a judgment for a sum not exceeding 20*l.* obtained in the mayor's court. Paine v. Slater, 52 L. J., Q. B. 282; 11 Q. B. D. 120; 48 L. T. 623; 31 W. R. 941—C. A.

—— Setting aside after Removal.]—By the Mayor's Court Procedure Act, 1857, s. 48, a judgment removed from that court to a superior court shall have the same force and effect as a judgment recovered in the superior court:—Held, that it is competent to the court to which such judgment is so removed to set it aside, if satisfied that it was obtained in a matter over which the inferior court had no jurisdiction. Bridge v. Branch, 1 C. P. D. 633; 34 L. T. 905.

Jurisdiction to Commit—Debtors Act.]—The jurisdiction of the mayor's court to commit a person for nonpayment of a judgment debt, conferred by ss. 36 & 38 of the Mayor's Court Act, 1857, is not affected by s. 5 of the Debtors Act, 1869. Washer v. Elliott (1 C. P. D. 169) considered and followed. Schuller v. Wood, 64 L. J., Q. B. 243; 15 R. 91.

The mayor's court, and other inferior courts, can only enforce judgments of superior courts, under the Debtors Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 62), s. 5, against debtors resident or carrying on business within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the court so enforcing. Washer v. Elliott, 45 L. J., C. P. 144; 1 C. P. D. 169; 34 L. T. 56; 24 W. R. 432.

Appointment of Receiver.]—A receiver appointed by court of chancery pending administration proceedings in the mayor's court. Nothard v. Proctor, 45 L. J., Ch. 302; 1 Ch. D. 4; 33 L. T. 709.

Taxation of Costs—Certificate—Prohibition.]—Where the judge of the mayor's court has granted a certificate for the taxation of the costs of an action in that court upon a higher scale than the scale which would otherwise be applicable, without stating any ground for granting such a certificate, it is a mere irregularity, and no prohibition will lie. Reg. v. London Corporation and Stock, 62 L. J., Q. B. 589; 5 R. 544; 69 L. T. 721.

New Trial.]—Upon a rule for a mandamus to compel the mayor's court to enter judgment for the plaintiff, that court having granted a new trial on the ground that the verdict found for him was against the weight of evidence:—The court of queen's bench expressed an opinion that the mayor's court had power to grant a new trial on such ground, but, not being clear about the matter, a rule for a writ to issue was made absolute. Reg. v. London Corporation, Roux v. Merton, 27 L. T. 61.

Notwithstanding s. 10 of the Mayor's Court Act, a superior court has no power to prohibit the mayor's court from proceeding to retry an action there, after a rule absolute for a nonsuit in the superior court upon a point reserved. Lebeau v. General Steam Navigation Co., 42 L. J., C. P. 76; L. R. 8 C. P. 129; 21 W. R. 358.

In an action in the mayor's court, the recorder directed a verdict for the plaintiff, with leave to the defendant to move for misdirection:—Held, that the defendant was confined to the leave reserved, and was not entitled to insist on a new trial upon the ground that his own evidence had been improperly excluded. Ellis v. Marriott, 8 W. R. 192.

Where a rule has been obtained to enter a nonsuit or for a new trial in the mayor's court, London, under s. 22 of 20 & 21 Vict. c. clvii., it is not competent to the unsuccessful party afterwards, even with the leave of the judge, to move the divisional court under s. 10. Mears v. Chittick, 9 Q. B. D. 35.

—— Power to give Judgment.]—The judge of the mayor's court, London, has no power, on a motion before that court for a new trial, to direct judgment to be entered for either of the parties in the action as a judge of the high court can do under Ord. XL. r. 10, no rules having been made for applying the rules of the judicature acts to that court, and no such power being given to an inferior court by s. 89 of the Judicature Act, 1873. Pryor v. City Offices Co., infra.

Appeal—To Court of Appeal.]—The court of appeal from inferior courts has no jurisdiction to hear and determine questions of law arising upon the records of the mayor's court; the proper tribunal to entertain them is the court of appeal under the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 18, sub.-s. 4. Le Blanch v. Reuter's Telegraph Co., 1 Ex. D. 408; 34 L. T. 691; 25 W. R. 115.

Where, notwithstanding the absence of jurisdiction to enter judgment on an application for a new trial, the judge of the mayor's court has acted as if he had such power, an appeal will lie to the court of appeal in respect of his having so erroneously acted. Pryor v. City Offices Co., 52 L. J., Q. B. 362; 10 Q. B. D. 504; 48 L. T. 698; 31 W. R. 777—C. A.

—— By Leave.]—The mayor's court is an inferior court within s. 45 of the Judicature Act, 1873, and where there has been an appeal from that court to a divisional court under that section no further appeal lies to the court of appeal except by special leave of the divisional court. Appleford v. Judkins, 47 L. J., C. P. 615; 3 C. P. D. 489; 38 L. T. 801; 26 W. R. 734—C. A.

—— Before Judicature Act.]—The Mayor's Court Act (20 & 21 Vict. c. clvii.), ss. 8, 10, provides that in certain cases a party may appeal, if he gives notice within two days of the decision, and gives security; and that, "if upon the trial" the judge gives him leave to move in a superior court, he may move within the time limited for like motions in such court. At the conclusion, on a Thursday, of a trial in the mayor's court, the judge refused to give the plaintiff, who was nonsuited, leave to move, but on the ensuing Monday, on application made to him, granted such leave:—Held, that he had no power to do so, because, even if there had been no refusal, the leave must be given within a reasonable time, and that would be two days. Folkard v. Metropolitan Ry., 42 L. J., C. P. 162; L. R. 8 C. P. 470; 29 L. T. 101; 21 W. R. 736.

—— To High Court—Claim over £20—Leave to Appeal.]—By the Mayor's Court of London Procedure Act, 1857, s. 8, an appeal from the mayor's court to the superior courts is given where the sum sought to be recovered exceeds 20*l.*, and by s. 9, such appeal is to be by special case. By s. 10, the parties in any case in the mayor's court may, if the judge grants leave, move in the superior courts to set aside the verdict:—Held, that Ord. LIX. r. 10, which provides that all appeals from inferior courts shall be by notice of motion, does not make it necessary where the sum sought to be recovered in the mayor's court exceeds 20*l.*, and a motion to set aside the verdict and judgment on the ground of misdirection is made in the high court, that the leave of the judge of the mayor's court should be obtained. Eder v. Levy, 56 L. J., Q. B. 650; 19 Q. B. D. 210.

—— Condition precedent—Security for Costs.]—It is a condition precedent to the right of appeal under s. 8 of the Mayor's Court Procedure Act, 1857, that the appellant should have given security for the costs of the appeal; that section has not been repealed by Ord. LIX. rr. 10–17. Morgan v. Bowles, 63 L. J., Q. B. 84; [1894] 1 Q. B. 236; 10 R. 62; 42 W. R. 269.

—— Time for Giving Notice.]—The provision in s. 8 of the Mayor's Court of London Procedure Act, 1857, that a party desiring to appeal shall, within two days of the determination or direction against which he appeals, give notice of appeal to the other party, is a condition precedent to the appeal, and the high court has no power, under r. 16 of Ord. LIX., to extend the time for giving such notice. Kirby v. North British and Mercantile Insurance Co., 65 L. J., Q. B. 527; [1896] 2 Q. B. 99; 74 L. T. 723; 44 W. R. 529; 60 J. P. 549—C. A.

A. APOTHECARIES.

1. QUALIFICATION.

Apprenticeship and Certificate.]—In an action for a libel upon the plaintiff, who had served upwards of three years as house-apothecary at a public infirmary, before the passing of 55 Geo. 3. c. 194 :—Held, that such service was sufficient to qualify him to act as an apothecary, and superseded the necessity of an apprenticeship, or the production of a certificate, in conformity with the regulations of that statute. Wogan v. Somerville, 1 Moore, 102 ; 7 Taunt. 401.

To an action on a bond the defendant pleaded, that the bond was given in pursuance of a corrupt agreement, that he should serve the obligee as an apprentice to the business of a surgeon-apothecary and man midwife for two years, and that the agreement should be ante-dated, to make it appear that he had served five years, in order that, by such corrupt contrivance, he might be admitted to his examination for the business of an apothecary at the end of two years, instead of five, as required by the statute. A verdict having been found for the defendant, the court held that the bond was void, and refused to enter judgment non obstante veredicto, which was moved for on the ground that it appeared to be the object of the parties to enable the defendant to practise as a surgeon also, and that a five years' apprenticeship was not required for the business of a surgeon, and that it was not open to the defendant to object to the legality of his own bond. Prole v. Wiggins, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 230 ; 3 Scott, 607 ; 2 Hodges, 204 ; 6 L. J., C. P. 2.

Who is.] — A man carried on the business of a surgeon and an apothecary, and made up medicines for his patients, but did not make them up from other persons' prescriptions, or sell drugs to the public :—Held, that he was an apothecary within the phrase and meaning of s. 65 of the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106. Crabb, Ex parte, 25 L. J., Bk. 45 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 628 ; 4 W. R. 501.

Trading.]—What selling of drugs by a surgeon-apothecary constitutes trading. Not if ancillary to business of surgeon. Daubeny, Ex parte, Briden, In re, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 16 ; 2 Deac. 72 ; 6 L. J., Bk. 49.

What constitutes Practising.]—Practising as an apothecary is the mixing up and preparing medicines prescribed by a physician or by any other person, or by the apothecary himself. Woodward v. Ball, 6 Car. & P. 577.

The acting as a surgeon or an accoucheur is not practising as an apothecary, nor would the party supplying medicine to a friend be so. But if the party sought his living by practising as an apothecary, that is sufficient, as it is not essential that he should have gained his whole livelihood by his practice. Ib.

In an action by an apothecary, to prove practising, he ought to shew instances of compounding and making up prescriptions ; merely attending local complaints is not enough. Thompson v. Lewis, M. & M. 255 ; 3 Car. & P. 483.

Where a person was sued for a penalty, and insisted that he was within the exemption, as having actually practised as an apothecary prior to the passing of the 55 Geo. 3, c. 194 :—Held, that in summing up to the jury, the judge acted properly in referring them to s. 5, which described the duty of an apothecary to be to make up prescriptions of physicians ; and it appearing that the defendant had never done so prior to the passing of the act, through incapacity and ignorance, that it was strong evidence to be left to the jury, and that they were warranted in finding that he had never practised as an apothecary, although he had occasionally administered medicines to different patients prior to that period. Apothecaries' Co. v. Warburton, 3 B. & Ald. 40.

An apothecary being freeman of London attended a patient, and made up and administered proper medicines to him, but without having a licence from the faculty, or the direction of a physician, or demanding or taking any fee for his advice :—Held, that this did not amount to a practising of physic within 14 & 15 Hen. 8, c. 5. Rose v. Physicians' College, 5 Bro. P. C. 553.

Customers went to the shop of a chemist and asked him what was good for their ailments, and not being a certificated apothecary, he was accustomed to suggest medicine, make it up, and sell it to them :—Held, that in so doing he was acting and practising as an apothecary, and was liable to a penalty under 55 Geo. 3, c. 194, s. 20. Apothecaries' Co. v. Nottingham, 34 L. T. 76.

—— Apothecary's Assistant.] — Where an apothecary's assistant attended patients as an apothecary :—Held, that he could not be considered as practising as such, although the patients paid him for the medicines administered to them. Brown v. Robinson, 1 C. & P. 264.

A. bound himself apprentice to an apothecary, who resided eight miles from H. The apothecary then took a house at H., in which A. resided, and attended several patients there, the apothecary coming over occasionally, and being consulted by the defendant about the patients :—Held, that this was a practising by A. as an apothecary, within 55 Geo. 3, c. 194, s. 20. Apothecaries' Co. v. Greenwood, 2 B. & Ad. 709 ; 9 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 331.

Liability to Penalties—Unqualified Person.]—An unqualified person dispensing medicine of his own advice is within the penalties of 55 Geo. 3, c. 194. Apothecaries' Co. v. Allen, 1 N. & M. 413 ; 4 B. & Ad. 625.

A diploma of M.D. from the university of St. Andrew's, in Scotland, is no defence to an action for penalties, for practising as an apothecary without having obtained a certificate from the Apothecaries' Company. Apothecaries' Co. v. Collins, 5 Car. & P. 519 ; 1 N. & M. 401 ; 4 B. & Ad. 604 ; 2 L. J., K. B. 149.

A chemist and druggist practising as an apothecary, in attending the sick, and giving them medicines, is liable to penalties. Apothecaries' Co. v. Greenough, 1 G. & D. 378 ; 1 Q. B. 799 ; 11 L. J., Q. B. 156.

—— Whether Penalty cumulative.]—Section 20 of the Apothecaries Act, 1815, provides that, if any person "shall act or practise as an apothecary" without having obtained the requisite certificate, "every person so offending shall for every such offence forfeit 20*l.*" A defendant had given advice and had prescribed and supplied medicine to three separate persons on different occasions on the same day, without a certificate, and was sued for three separate penalties :—Held, that only one offence had been committed, and that only one penalty was therefore recoverable, for the statute contemplated an habitual course of conduct on the part of the defendant, and not an isolated act. Apothecaries' Co. v. Jones, [1893] 1 Q. B. 89 ; 5 R. 101 ; 67 L. T. 667 ; 41 W. R. 267 ; 17 Cox, C. C. 588 ; 57 J. P. 56.

By a plaint in a county court, a defendant was summoned for a debt of 20*l.*, for illegally practising as an apothecary. The particulars stated that the action was brought to recover 20*l.*, for that the defendant, on divers days, acted as an apothecary, without a certificate, at four places named, by attending and supplying medicine to four persons mentioned, whereby he had forfeited 20*l.* By 55 Geo. 3, c. 194, s. 20, any person who shall practise as an apothecary without a certificate shall forfeit for every such offence 20*l.* :—Held, that whether the facts stated in the particulars amounted to four offences or one offence only, the sum recoverable was limited by the summons and particulars to 20*l.*, and therefore the county court had jurisdiction. Apothecaries' Co. v. Burt, 5 Ex. 363 ; 1 L. M. & P. 405 ; 19 L. J., Ex. 334.

Surgeons in Army or Navy.]—Action for work done as an apothecary. Plea, that the plaintiff was not an apothecary prior to the 1st of August, 1815 ; nor had he, at any time, obtained a certificate to practise as an apothecary from the master, wardens, and society of the art and mystery of apothecaries. Replication, that before the work was done, and before the 1st of August, 1826, the plaintiff held a warrant as assistant-surgeon in the navy, and that the work was done after the passing of the 6 Geo. 4, c. 133 :—Held, that the replication was good. Steavenson v. Oliver, 8 M. & W. 234 ; 10 L. J., Ex. 338 ; 5 Jur. 1064.

In an action to recover charges claimed by an apothecary, he relied on the 6 Geo. 4, c. 133, s. 4, which enacts, that no person who held a commission or warrant as surgeon or assistant-surgeon in his majesty's army should be obliged to prove that he was in practice as an apothecary on the 1st August, 1815, otherwise than as holding such commission or warrant :—Held, that the evidence of the paymaster of the regiment, that he paid the plaintiff his salary as assistant-surgeon during a period of several years, and that he should not have so done without the production of his warrant, was sufficient to entitle him to the right conferred by the statute. Milbank v. Bryant, 3 Q. B. 690 ; 3 G. & D. 31 ; 12 L. J., Q. B. 81 ; 6 Jur. 931.

2. Recovery of Charges.

Medicines and Attendances.]—In an action by a payee on a promissory note, expressed to be "in consideration of the payee's care and medical attendance bestowed on the maker" :—Held, that evidence was admissible to shew the consideration to have been medicines furnished, and services performed as an apothecary, and, if that was proved, that he could not recover without bringing himself within 55 Geo. 3, c. 194, s. 21. Blogg v. Prickers, R. & M. 125.

A surgeon and apothecary may, besides his charge for medicine, recover such charges for attendances as the jury consider fair and reasonable. Handley v. Henson, 4 Car. & P. 110.

Where an arbitrator awarded to an apothecary in London charges for attendances the court refused to refer back the award to him for reconsideration. Gensham v. Germain, 11 Moore, 1 ; 4 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 37.

There is no rule of law to preclude an apothecary from recovering both for medicines and attendance, where the united charges do not exceed a reasonable remuneration, and it is a question for the jury what is reasonable. Morgan v. Hallen, 3 N. & P. 489 ; 8 A. & E. 489 ; 1 W. W. & H. 370 ; 7 L. J., Q. B. 212 ; 2 Jur. 591.

The fact of an apothecary having, in a former bill left a blank for the price of his attendances, is evidence upon which a jury may say whether or not there was a contract to make no charge for attendance. Ib.

If a surgeon, in a bill to his patient, leaves a blank for his charge for attendances, and the patient pays a sum on account, the former is bound by the bill, and cannot recover more than the sum paid into court by the latter. Tuson v. Batting, 3 Esp. 192.

The right of an apothecary to charge for attendances is not matter of law, but of contract, either express or to be applied from the usage of the place. Smith v. Chambers, 2 Ph. 221 ; 11 Jur. 359.

Bottles.]—An apothecary who furnishes medicines, not being in a capacity to recover, cannot recover even for the phials in which the medicines were contained. Steel v. Henley, 1 Car. & P. 574.

Must have Certificate at the Time of the Services rendered.]—Under the Medical Act, 1858, ss. 31 and 32, and the Apothecaries Act (55 Geo. 3, c. 194), s. 21, in order to recover for medicines and attendance as an apothecary it is necessary that the practitioner should have been qualified and registered at the time of the services rendered ; and it is not sufficient that he produce at the trial a certificate of registration obtained after action brought. Leman v. Houseley, 44 L. J., Q. B. 22 ; L. R. 10 Q. B. 66 ; 31 L. T. 833 ; 23 W. R. 235. Contra, see Turner v. Reynall, post, col. 1003.

Action for goods sold and delivered, work done, and materials provided, and on an account stated: the particulars of demand consisted of items "for medicines and attendances." At the trial, the plaintiff's assistant proved that they were surgeons, and that he had visited and dispensed medicines to the defendant, and that on one occasion he had bled the defendant:—Held, that primâ facie the charges were charges in a medical case, and that the plaintiffs were therefore bound to prove that they were certificated as apothecaries, or that they had been in practice previously to the 1st August, 1815. Proud v. Mayall, 3 D. & L. 531. S. P., Walmsley v. Abbott, 1 Car. & P. 309; 5 D. & R. 62; 3 B. & C. 218; 2 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 223.

Agreement to Cure within a specified Time—Fraudulent Professions.]—A person who professes to cure certain disorders within a specific time, and induces another person to employ him by false and fraudulent professions of his skill, cannot recover either for his medicines or attendance. Hupe v. Phelps, 2 Stark. 480; 20 R. R. 726.

Country Certificate—Nonpayment of Extra Fee to Apothecaries' Company.]—In an action by an apothecary for charges incurred in London, he produced at the trial a certificate of qualification entitling him to practise in the country, and he had not paid the extra fee of 4*l.* 4*s.* to the Apothecaries' Company, which was necessary by 55 Geo. 3, c. 194, s. 19, to entitle him to practise in London:—Held, that he was not prevented from recovering by s. 21. Young v. Geiger, 6 C. B. 541; 6 D. & L. 337; 18 L. J., C. P. 40; 12 Jur. 983.

An apothecary is entitled to recover for business done in London, if he has a general certificate from the Apothecaries' Company of his fitness to practise, although he paid but 6*l.* 6*s.* on his obtaining it. Chadwick v. Bunning, 2 Car. & P. 106; R. & M. 306.

Not necessary to prove every Item.]—In an action for an apothecary's bill, consisting of a great number of items, where the jury gives a verdict for the whole sum due, the court will not grant a new trial because every item was not proved, if evidence was given as to some of them. Wheeler v. Sims, 5 Jur. 151.

Pleading want of Qualification.]—It is not necessary to plead as a defence to an action on an apothecary's bill, that he has not a certificate to practise from the society of apothecaries, as that is part of the plaintiff's case. Morgan v. Ruddock, 4 D. P. C. 311; 1 H. & W. 505.

In an action brought by a party for work and labour as an apothecary, and for medicines, he must either prove his certificate, or that he was in practice as an apothecary before the 1st of August, 1815, pursuant to 55 Geo. 3, c. 194, s. 21, although the defendant has only pleaded nunquam indebitatus. Sharpe v. Wagstaffe, 3 M. & W. 521; 6 D. P. C. 566; 1 H. & H. 164; 7 L. J., Ex. 167. S. P., Shearwood v. Hay, 5 A. & E. 383; 6 N. & M. 831; 2 H. & W. 249; 5 L. J., K. B. 246.

So, although he has pleaded as to part that he never was indebted, and as to the residue, a tender. Ib. S. P., Wadsworth v. Collins, 3 Car. & K. 53.

3. Proof of Certificate.

In an action for medicines supplied as an apothecary, he, after proof of the delivery of the medicines, put in evidence a licence from the Apothecaries' Company (the seal to which was proved to be genuine), to practise as such, granted to a person bearing his christian and surname:—Held, that it was unnecessary for him in the first instance, to give any additional evidence of his identity with the person named in the licence. Simpson v. Dismore, 9 M. & W. 47; 1 D. (N.S.) 357; 11 L. J., Ex. 137; 5 Jur. 1012.

Before 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 8, in an action for an apothecary's bill, it was necessary to prove that the seal affixed to the certificate to practise as an apothecary was the common seal of the Apothecaries' Company. Chadwick v. Bunning, 2 Car. & P. 106; R. & M. 306.

In order to prove that a person has passed his examination at Apothecaries' Hall, it is sufficient to produce the certificate of examination (which is given to every person who has been approved of by the examiners), and prove the signature of one of the examiners to such certificate. Walmsley v. Abbott, 5 D. & R. 62; 3 B. & C. 218; 1 Car. & P. 309; 2 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 223.

The certificate required by 55 Geo. 3, c. 194, was a certificate from the court of examiners, and not from the master, wardens, and society of the art and mystery of apothecaries. Steavenson v. Oliver, 8 M. & W. 234; 10 L. J., Ex. 338; 5 Jur. 1064.

Onus of Proof.]—In an action for a penalty for practising as an apothecary, without having obtained a certificate from the Apothecaries' Company, it is not necessary, on the part of the company, to prove that the party has not obtained his certificate, the onus being laid on him to shew that he has. It must, however, be averred in the declaration that he has not. Apothecaries' Co. v. Bentley, 1 Car. & P. 538; R. & M. 159.

B. Medical Practitioners.

1. General Medical Council.

Election of Members.]—Under the existing charter of the university of London, the right to elect its member of the general medical council under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 90, is vested in its senate, consisting of the chancellor, vice-chancellor, and fellows for the time being; not in the whole body incorporated as the university by the charter, namely, the chancellor, vice-chancellor, fellows, and graduates. Reg. v. Storrar, 2 El. & El. 133; 28 L. J., Q. B. 326; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1304; 7 W. R. 612.

Registration—Royal College of Physicians—Right to grant Diplomas.]—The Royal College of Physicians of London was, at the date of the passing of the Medical Act, 1886, "a medical corporation legally qualified to grant diplomas in respect of medicine and surgery," within the meaning of s. 3, sub-s. 1 (a) of that act, and therefore the independent diploma of that corporation confers the right of registration under the medical acts. Royal College of Physicians v. General Medical Council, 62 L. J., Q. B. 329; 5 R. 323; 68 L. T. 496; 57 J. P. 519.

Removal of Name—Power of Court to review Decision.]—By the Medical Act (21 & 22 Vict. c. 90), the General Council of Medical Education and Registration were established, one of their duties being to keep a register of medical practitioners.—By s. 29, "if any registered medical practitioner shall after due inquiry be judged by the general council to have been guilty of infamous conduct in any professional respect, the general council may, if they see fit, direct the registrar to erase the name of such medical practitioner from the register":—Held, that if the council, acting bonâ fide and after due inquiry, have adjudged a medical practitioner to have been guilty of infamous conduct in a professional respect, the court has no jurisdiction to review their decision. La Mert, Ex parte (4 B. & S. 582), approved and followed. Allbutt v. General Medical Council, 58 L. J., Q. B. 606; 23 Q. B. D. 400; 61 L. T. 585; 37 W. R. 771; 54 J. P. 36—C. A.

Under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 90, s. 29, the General Council of Medical Education and Registration are sole judges of whether a registered medical practitioner has been guilty of infamous conduct in a professional respect; and the council having after due inquiry adjudged, and ordered the name of the medical practitioner to be removed from the register accordingly, the court cannot interfere. La Mert, Ex parte, 4 B. & S. 582; 33 L. J., Q. B. 69; 9 L. T. 410; 12 W. R. 201.

The plaintiff was a duly registered dentist. He had advertised his name in connection with a dental institution. The general council considered such conduct amounted to "disgraceful conduct in a professional respect" within the meaning of the act, and erased his name from the register. In an action for a mandamus to have the name reinstated:—Held, that there were facts before the general council on which they might come to the determination to erase the plaintiff's name from the register, and therefore this court would not interfere. Partridge v. General Medical Council, 57 J. P. 4—C. A.

By 21 & 22 Vict. c. 90, s. 26, any entry which shall be proved to the satisfaction of the general or branch council to have been fraudulently or incorrectly made, may be erased from the register by order in writing of the council:—Held, that the council might make such an order, where the registration had been made under the dispensing power given to them by s. 46, as well as where it had been made by the registrar under s. 15. Reg. v. General Medical Council, 3 El. & El. 525; 30 L. J., Q. B. 201; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 798; 3 L. T. 692; 9 W. R. 413.

When the registrar of the branch medical council inserts in, and afterwards, by order of such branch council, and without notice to the party registered, strikes out of the registry the description of a qualification which the evidence produced to the registrar by the claimant did not shew that he had obtained, the court will not by mandamus compel the registrar to reinsert such description. Reg. v. Steele, 13 Ir. C. L. R. 398.

—— Infamous Conduct.]—One test of whether a person has been guilty of "infamous conduct in any professional respect" is whether he has, in the pursuit of his profession, done something with regard to it which is reasonably regarded by his professional brethren of repute and competency as disgraceful and dishonourable. Allinson v. General Medical Council, infra.

Judicial Inquiry—Personal Interest of Member of Tribunal.] — The General Council of Medical Education and Registration, acting under the powers of the Medical Act, 1858, held an inquiry in which they adjudged a medical practitioner to be guilty of infamous conduct in a professional respect, and directed the registrar to erase his name from the register. The inquiry was impugned on the ground of the disqualification of one of the members on the ground of interest:—Held, that, in the absence of a pecuniary interest, the true question is whether the relation of the impugned member to the inquiry is such that he can be reasonably suspected of bias. Allinson v. General Medical Council, 63 L. J., Q. B. 534; [1894] 1 Q. B. 750; 9 R. 217; 70 L. T. 471; 42 W. R. 289; 58 J. P. 542—C. A.

The General Council of Medical Education and Registration, acting under the powers of the Medical Act, 1858, held an inquiry in which they adjudged a medical practitioner to be guilty of infamous conduct in a professional respect, and removed his name from the register of medical practitioners. The proceedings were instituted by the managing body of a company called the Medical Defence Union, whose object was to protect the characters of medical practitioners and to suppress and prosecute unauthorised practitioners. Two out of twenty-nine persons who held the inquiry were members of the Medical Defence Union, but not of the managing body of the union:—Held (Fry, L.J., dissenting), that the two members had not such an interest in the matter in question as to disqualify them from taking part in the inquiry; and the court refused to interfere with the decision of the council. Leeson v. General Medical Council, 59 L. J., Ch. 233; 43 Ch. D. 366; 61 L. T. 849; 38 W. R. 303—C. A.

Erasure of Name—Erroneous Exercise of Discretion—Liability—Absence of Malice.]—The act of the General Council of Medical Education and Registration, under ss. 11 or 13 of the Dentists Act, 1878, in erasing from the dentists' register the name of a person registered in respect of a qualification as licentiate of a medical authority referred to in the act, is not a merely ministerial, but a discretionary act, in respect of which no action is maintainable against the council, in the absence of malice on their part, even though the discretion were erroneously exercised. Partridge v. General Medical Council, 59 L. J., Q. B. 475; 25 Q. B. D. 90; 62 L. T. 787; 38 W. R. 729; 55 J. P. 4—C. A.

Dentist—Registration of.]—Where a person has been registered under the Dentists Act, 1878, as a licentiate of a medical authority, the fact that his diploma has since been revoked by such medical authority does not render him liable to be erased from the dentists' register under the act. Partridge, Ex parte, or Reg. v. General Medical Council, 19 Q. B. D. 467; 36 W. R. 442—C. A. Affirming, 56 L. J., Q. B. 609; 52 J. P. 40.

A person articled as a pupil to a dental practitioner at the date of the passing of the Dentists Act, 1878, cannot claim to be registered under s. 37 of the act unless he has complied with the requirements of s. 7, which provides that a person shall not be registered under the act "as having been at the passing thereof engaged in the practice of dentistry unless he produces or transmits to the registrar, before the 1st day of August, 1879, information of his name and address, and a declaration signed by him in the form in the schedule" to the act, "or to the like effect." Reg. v. General Medical Council, 66 L. J., Q. B. 588; [1897] 2 Q. B. 203; 76 L. T. 706; 46 W. R. 2—C. A. Affirming, 61 J. P. 344.

Publication of Minutes—Libel—Privilege.]—The publication of the minutes of the council, containing a report of their proceedings, comprising a statement that the name of a specified medical practitioner has been removed from the register on the ground that, in the opinion of the council, he has been guilty of infamous conduct in a professional respect, is, if the report be accurate, and published bonâ fide and without malice, privileged, and the medical practitioner, cannot maintain an action of libel against the council in respect of the publication. Allbutt v. General Medical Council, supra.

2. Physicians.

College.]—The 14 & 15 Hen. 8, c. 5, appointing and regulating the College of Physicians, is a public act. Physicians' College v. Harrison, M. & M. 191; 4 M. & Ry. 404.

A doctor, who is not a member, has no right to inspect the books of the College of Physicians. West v. Physicians' College, 1 Wils. 240; 5 Mod. 395.

A doctor of physic, who has been licensed by the college to practise physic in London and within seven miles, cannot claim, as a matter of right, to be examined by the college, in order to his being admitted a fellow of the college. Rex v. Physicians' College, 7 Term Rep. 282.

A mandamus will not lie to the College of Physicians, commanding them to examine a doctor of physic, who has been licensed, in order to his being admitted a fellow of the college. Ib.

A person created a doctor of medicine by a Scotch university could not practise as a physician in England, unless licensed by the College of Physicians, before the Medical Act. Collins v. Carnegie, 3 N. & M. 703; 1 A. & E. 695; 3 L. J., K. B. 196.

Candidates to be admitted of the college are to be examined by the comitia minora, then proposed to the comitia majora, and elected by them before they can claim to be admitted. Rex v. Askew, 4 Burr. 2186.

Under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 90, the Royal College of Physicians has power to grant licences without restricting their licentiates from compounding and supplying for gain the medicines which they prescribe; and for such licentiates so to compound and supply medicines is not an invasion of the privileges of the Apothecaries' Company. If such practice by licentiates of the college would have been an invasion of the privileges of the Apothecaries' Company, the proper remedy would have been by proceedings at law against the offender, and not by information and bill in equity against the college. Att.-Gen. v. Royal College of Physicians, 1 Johns. & H. 561; 30 L. J., Ch. 757; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 511; 4 L. T. 356; 9 W. R. 590.

Recovery of Charges.]—See infra.

3. Surgeons.

Before the Medical Act.]—The separated companies of surgeons and barbers were under the same regulations as before their separation. Sharpe v. Law, 4 Burr. 2133.

Understanding the Latin tongue was a previous qualification necessary to being even apprenticed to a London surgeon. Rex v. Surgeons' Co., 2 Burr. 892.

To an action for work and operations performed as a surgeon, a plea that he had not been examined or approved, or admitted to exercise or occupy himself as a physician or a surgeon, as required by the statute, is bad for not shewing that the work and operations were done in a place within the operation of the 3 Hen. 8, c. 11, which imposed a penalty on persons practising as physicians or surgeons in London, or within seven miles thereof, or in any diocese within the realm, without being examined. D'Allax v. Jones, 26 L. J., Ex. 79; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 979.

Penalties under 55 Geo. 3, c. 194.]—A surgeon may administer medicines in the cure of a surgical case without being subject to the penalties of 55 Geo. 3, c. 194; but he has no right to do so in a case of internal diseases not requiring surgical treatment, such as fever or consumption. Apothecaries' Co. v. Lotinga, 2 M. & Rob. 495.

District Medical Officer—Tenure of Office.]—A district medical officer appointed under the Medical Appointments Order, 1857, of the poor law board, holds his office durante bene placito. Donahoo v. Local Government Board, 46 L. T. 300; 30 W. R. 334.

Recovery of Charges.]—See infra.

4. Dentists.

Registration.]—See supra, col. 998.

Artificial Teeth—Sale of Goods.]—A. ordered of B. a set of artificial teeth, which were by the terms of the contract to be fitted to her mouth; before they were so fitted she died:—Held, a contract for the sale of goods within the Statute of Frauds (29 Car. 2, c. 3, s. 17); and that B. could not sue her executor for work and labour done and materials provided for. Lee v. Griffin, 1 B. & S. 272; 30 L. J., Q. B. 252; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1302; 4 L. T. 546; 9 W. R. 702.

5. Recovery of Charges.

Physician.]—A physician registered under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 90, who attends a patient professionally, and is not prohibited from suing by any by-law of the College of Physicians, can recover his fees without an express contract. Gibbon v. Budd, 2 H. & C. 92; 32 L. J., Ex. 182; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 525; 8 L. T. 321; 11 W. R. 626.

The presumption is not as formerly, that he attends the patient for an honorarium, but for fees, the right to which can be enforced by action. Ib.

Semble, the rule that a physician shall not maintain an action for his charges is founded upon the general custom of the profession not to charge, and there is nothing to prevent him from making a special contract that he shall be paid for his services, and recovering under the contract. Att.-Gen. v. Royal College of Physicians, 1 John. & H. 561; 30 L. J., Ch. 757; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 511; 4 L. T. 356; 9 W. R. 590.

—— Before the Medical Act.]—A physician could not maintain an action for his fees. Chorley v. Bolcot, 4 Term Rep. 317; 2 R. R. 395.

A physician might recover on an express contract to remunerate him for his attendance. Veitch v. Russell, 3 G. & D. 198; Car. & M. 362; 3 Q. B. 928; 12 L. J., Q. B. 13; 7 Jur. 60.

But, as the ordinary understanding was, that such attendance was given without legal title to remuneration, subsequent promises to pay were, in general, to be referred to the usual honorary claim of the physician, and would not amount to proof of an express contract, unless it was clear that the attendance was not given on the ordinary understanding. Ib.

—— Expenses out of Pocket.]—When no special agreement had been made to remunerate a physician, he could not recover expenses out of pocket, in travelling to attend his patient, for such expenses were incidental to the attendance, and to be considered as money paid to the physician's own use in the ordinary exercise of his profession. Veitch v. Russell, 3 G. & D. 198; Car. & M. 362; 3 Q. B. 928; 12 L. J., Q. B., 13; 7 Jur. 60.

—— Promise subsequent to Attendance.]—A contract to pay a physician could not be implied from the mere fact of his attendance on a patient, but a promise at the end of his attendance to pay him a fixed sum or a reasonable compensation, would raise such a contract as would support an action. Ib.

—— Acting as Surgeon.]—A physician could not sue for his fees for anything he had done as a physician, either in attending or in prescribing medicine for a patient; but if he acted as a surgeon, or in any other capacity than that of a physician, he might maintain an action for a compensation for what he had done, provided he could shew that it was not done by him as a physician; and the fact that he was not paid fees at the time when he was consulted, went to shew that he was not acting as a physician. Little v. Oldacre, Car. & M. 370.

B. practised as a physician and a surgeon. On a case occurring in which the advice of a physician was considered necessary, as well as the aid of a surgeon, he was called in. It appeared that he had performed for his patient some services which usually are in the province of a surgeon. He sent his bill to the executors of his patient:—Held, that if the jury considered that he had done any work as surgeon, they should find a verdict for him to the amount of the value of that service. Battersby v. Lawrence, Car. & M. 277.

If a medical practitioner wrote prescriptions, and passed himself off as a physician, although he had no diploma, and no right to assume that character, he could not maintain an action for fees as a surgeon. Lipscombe v. Holmes, 2 Camp. 441.

Surgeon.]—A. had several of his children residing in a house distant from his own in the charge of a servant:—Held, that if an accident happened to one of the children, A. was liable to pay for its cure, although he did not know the surgeon who was called in, and although the accident might have arisen from the carelessness of the servant. Cooper v. Phillips, 4 Car. & P. 581.

Under the Apothecaries Act (55 Geo. 3 c. 194), s. 21, which is not repealed by the Medical Act, 1858 (21 & 22 Vict. c. 90), ss. 31, 32, a member of the College of Surgeons, registered as a surgeon only under the later act and having no other qualification, cannot recover for medicines administered by him in a case not requiring surgical treatment. Leman v. Fletcher, 42 L. J., Q. B. 214; L. R. 8 Q. B. 319; 28 L. T. 499; 21 W. R. 738.

A person having a certificate as a surgeon from the College of Surgeons cannot charge for attending a patient in a fever, unless he has also a certificate from the Apothecaries' Company. Allison v. Haydon, 4 Bing. 619; 1 M. & P. 588; 3 Car. & P. 246; 6 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 144; 29 R. R. 653.

But a surgeon may charge for medicine administered in a surgical case, when the medicine is subservient and subordinate to the discharge of his duty as a surgeon. Ib.

When a surgeon attended patients in cases requiring surgical aid, and also dispensed medicines to them, not being certificated as an apothecary under 55 Geo. 3, c. 194:—Held, that he might recover for his surgical advice. Simpson v. Ralfe, 4 Tyr. 325.

Gratuitous Services.] — Attendance by a medical man on the deceased:—Held, under the circumstances, to have been gratuitous, and his demand as a debt against the assets was rejected. Packman v. Vivian, 24 Beav. 290.

—— Promise or Expectation of Legacy.]—A physician attended a testator for many years, without having obtained any remuneration. He stated, "that the testator had promised to pay him for his services or leave him an equivalent." He did neither:—Held, that he had no claim against the estate, and a payment made to him by the executor was disallowed. Shallcross v. Wright, 12 Beav. 558; 19 L. J., Ch. 443; 14 Jur. 1037.

A surgeon for several years bestowed medical attendance upon a lady, but, expecting that she would amply compensate him by a legacy, sent in no bill. She died and left him nothing; whereupon he sued her executors, claiming 500*l.* The jury awarded him 250*l.*:—The court refused to disturb the verdict. Baxter v. Gray, 4 Scott (N.R.) 374; 3 Man. & G. 771; 11 L. J., C. P. 63.

In such a case, to disentitle the party to sue, there must be something more than the mere expectation of a legacy. Ib.

Bankruptcy—Personal Labour. — Action for work and labour as a surgeon and for medicines. Plea, his bankruptcy before the debt accrued, and that his assignees claimed the debt from the defendant before action. Replication, that the work was the personal labour of the bankrupt, and necessary for the present support of the bankrupt and his family; that the materials were purchased with the proceeds of his personal labour, and increased in value thereby, and necessary for the performance of the work. On the trial it appeared that the plaintiff was a surgeon and an apothecary, and in substance carrying on a trade as such with medicines obtained on credit:—Held, that the assignees were entitled to the proceeds of a trade thus carried on, and that the replication was not proved. Elliot v. Clayton, 16 Q. B. 581; 20 L. J., Q. B. 217; 15 Jur. 293.

21 & 22 Vict. c. 90.]—The enactment has not a retrospective operation. Wright v. Greenroyd, 1 B. & S. 758; 31 L. J., Q. B. 4; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 98; 5 L. T. 347. S. P., Thistleton v. Frewer, 31 L. J., Ex. 230.

The 21 & 22 Vict. c. 90, s. 32, is not confined to cases in which the patient is sued. De la Rosa v. Prieto, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 578; 33 L. J., C. P. 262; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 851; 10 L. T. 757; 12 W. R. 1029

Unregistered Assistant—Right of Registered Practitioner to recover for Services of.]—A qualified medical practitioner duly registered under the Medical Act, 1858, established a branch practice under the management of his brother, who was not so qualified or registered, and held no apothecary's certificate under 55 Geo. 3, c. 194. In an action by the assignee of the qualified practitioner to recover charges for medical aid and advice rendered, and the costs of medicines supplied, to the defendant by the brother alone, without consulting the qualified practitioner:—Held, that under ss. 31 and 32 of the Medical Act, 1858, the plaintiff was not entitled to recover. Howarth v. Brearley, 56 L. J., Q. B. 543; 19 Q. B. D. 303; 56 L. T. 743; 36 W. R. 302; 51 J. P. 440.

Unregistered Practitioners.] — Though an unregistered assistant may sue a registered practitioner for salary, an unregistered practitioner cannot sue a registered practitioner for medicines supplied to, or attendance upon the patients of the latter at his request. De la Rosa v. Prieto, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 578; 33 L. J., C. P. 262; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 851; 10 L. T. 757; 12 W. R. 1029.

Where medicine is supplied or attendance given by an unregistered practitioner to a patient, under a guarantee for payment given by a third person, the Medical Act, 1858, will afford a defence either to the principal debtor, or to the surety; for the patient does not the less require protection because the paymaster is a third person. Ib.

A medical officer of a Peruvian vessel of war lying in the Thames, engaged an unregistered practitioner to attend the crew and troops (partly on board the vessel, and partly on shore) during his temporary absence. In an action against the Peruvian officer for the services thus rendered:—Held, that s. 32 of the Medical Act precluded the unregistered practitioner from recovering; for, by whatever law the contract was to be interpreted, the remedy must be governed by the lex fori. Ib.

A medical practitioner is entitled to maintain an action for attendances and medicines, though not registered at the time of such attendances; it is enough if he appears to be duly registered at the time of the trial. Turner v. Reynall, 14 C. B. (N.S.) 328; 32 L. J., C. P. 164; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1077; 8 L. T. 281; 11 W. R. 700. But see Leman v. Houseley, ante, col. 994.

Where a business is carried on by two partners, one of whom is registered as a surgeon and an apothecary, and the other as a surgeon only; this is no answer to a joint claim for attendances given and medicines supplied in both capacities. Ib.

6. Proof of Registration.

Semble, that a book, purporting to be a copy of the Medical Register pursuant to 20 & 21 Vict. c. 90, and professing to be "published and sold at the office of the general council of medical education and registration," is admissible under s. 27. Pedgrift v. Chevallier, 8 C. B. (N.S.) 246; 29 L. J., M. C. 225; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1341; 2 L. T. 360; 8 W. R. 500.

7. Diplomas.

Effect of Bankruptcy.]—Diplomas conferring degrees and honours and certificates from medical institutions or practitioners did not pass to the provisional assignee by the vesting order of the Insolvent Debtors' Court under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 37. Kernot v. Cattlin, 2 El. & Bl. 790.

Proof of.]—The mere production in court of a diploma of a doctor of physic, under the seal of one of the universities, is not in itself evidence to shew that the party named in the diploma is entitled to that degree. Moises v. Thornton, 8 Term Rep. 303; 3 Esp. 4.

But when a person, previously a stranger to a place, went to a town which was the seat of a university, and was told that a certain building was the college, that a certain person whom he saw in it was the librarian, and this person shewed him a seal in his custody, which he stated to be the seal of the university, and produced a book which he stated to be the Book of Acts (statute book) of the university, and such person compared such seal with the seal upon a diploma, the genuineness of which was in question, and made a copy (which was duly examined) from the Book of Acts of an entry of an act conferring the degree of M.D.:—Held, that the diploma was authenticated, and the act conferring the degree properly proved. Collins v. Carnegie, 3 N. & M. 703; 1 A. & E. 695; 3 L. J., K. B. 196.

By whom Granted.]—Where the university of G., having from an ancient period exercised the power of conferring degrees in medicine on persons educated therein, in 1599 King James by charter granted to certain professors of medicine there, and their successors, the power of summoning and examining all persons practising, within certain limits, the art of surgery, and to admit or reject them, with power to fine for contumacy, &c., and the grantees assuming the name of "the Faculty of Physicians, &c., of G.," the university having afterwards founded a professorship of surgery, proceeded to confer degrees in surgery as well as medicine:—Held, that the "Faculty, &c.," was entitled to the supervision over persons so graduating and practising within the limits, and might impose the penalty, &c., or proceed against them at law. Glasgow University v. Faculty of Physicians, 7 Cl. & F. 958.

Prosecution for Forging.] — A person was convicted on an indictment at common law for forging and uttering a diploma of the College of Surgeons. The jury found that he forged the document with the general intent to induce the belief that it was genuine, and that he was a member of the college, and that he shewed it to persons with intent to induce such belief in them; but that he had no intent in forging, or in uttering, to commit any particular fraud or specific wrong to any individual whatever:—Held, that the conviction was not sustainable, on the ground that no particular person was defrauded. Reg. v. Hodgson, Dears. & B. 3;

25 L. J., M. C. 78; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 453; 4 W. R. 509; 7 Cox, C. C. 122.

8. Pretending to be Qualified.

Evidence to justify Conviction.]—To warrant a conviction for acting as or pretending to be a surgeon, there must be unequivocal evidence that the party has so acted or pretended; it is not enough that he is so called by persons whom he has attended professionally, in the absence of evidence to shew that he has done so on his own account and for his own profit. Pedgrift v. Cherallier, 8 C. B. (N.S.) 240; 29 L. J., M. C. 225; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1341; 8 W. R. 500.

H. kept a shop, where he dispensed medicines and gave advice; he had a diploma in the window, in which he was described as "John Hamilton, doctor of medicine of the Metropolitan Medical College of New York," and he so held himself out to the world; and the magistrate reported that it was not satisfactorily proved that he was not entitled so to describe himself. He was not registered, and held no qualifications which would entitle him to be registered under the Medical Act. The magistrate having dismissed a complaint brought against him under the Medical Act (21 & 22 Vict. c. 90), s. 40:—Held, that the decision of the magistrate was right, as the only evidence of any false pretence was, that the person pretended to be what he really was; and also that it was a question of fact for the magistrate's decision rather than one of law for the court. Carpenter v. Hamilton, 37 L. T. 157.

K., who was legally qualified as a surgeon and apothecary, and registered as such under the 21 & 22 Vict. c. 90, was, before the time of passing of that act, possessed of a German medical diploma, and called himself Dr. K.; he continued to use that description after the passing of the act, though not registered as doctor of medicine:—Held, no evidence that he had wilfully and falsely pretended to be, or taken or used the name and title of, a doctor of medicine, so as to render him liable to a penalty under s. 40. Ellis v. Kelly, 6 H. & N. 222; 30 L. J., M. C. 35; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1113; 3 L. T. 331; 9 W. R. 56.

A medical practitioner registered as Licentiate of Soc. Apoth. Lond. 1885, but not qualified to be registered as M.D., physician, or surgeon, under the Medical Act, 1858, placed "M.D." after his name on vaccination certificates, and in other ways described himself to the public as M.D., and as "physician" and "surgeon," in some cases with the further addition of "legally registered practitioner":—Held, that he could be convicted of wilfully and falsely pretending to be a doctor of medicine, physician, and surgeon, contrary to s. 40 of the Medical Act, 1858. Reg. v. Baker, 66 L. T. 416; 17 Cox, C. C. 575; 56 J. P. 406.

Where the defendant signed a medical certificate as J. H., "botanic surgeon, Boston, U.S.," and had over his door, in large legible characters, his name, with the word "surgeon" after it, and in very small letters underneath, "Boston, U.S., not registered in England," and on a glass panel of his door his name, with the words "anti-registered surgeon" after it, the word "anti-registered" being in small letters and illegible except on close inspection:—Held, that there was no evidence to convict him under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 90, s. 40. Steele v. Hamilton, 3 L. T. 322.

A druggist had attended a patient in the capacity of a medical man, and had sent in to him a bill for such attendances, headed, "Mr. P. to Thomas Andrews, M.D.," setting out a variety of charges for attendance and medicine. He subsequently wrote a letter, signed "Thomas Andrews, M.D.," threatening legal proceedings unless the bill were paid, and he gave a receipt for the bill when paid, signing it in the same way. There was a coloured lamp over his shop door, on three sides of which the words and letters "Thomas Andrews, M.D." were painted. He had obtained by the payment of a sum of money a diploma of doctor of medicine from the University of Philadelphia in the United States, but he had never been in America, or studied, or passed any examination for such degree, and he was not registered under the Medical Act (21 & 22 Vict. c. 90). On appeal, from a conviction by justices under s. 40 of that act, for having unlawfully, wilfully, and falsely taken and used the name, title, description, and addition of M.D., and thereby implying that he was then registered under the Medical Act, whereas he was not so registered:—Held, that the conviction was right, and must be affirmed. Andrews v. Styrap, 26 L. T. 704.

Non-registrable Medical Title.] — Quære, whether a person having a non-registrable medical title, and knowing that such title is non-registrable, uses the title "M.D.," commits an offence against s. 40 of the Medical Act, 1858. Reg. v. Lewis, 60 J. P. 392.

9. Agreements as to Medical Practice.

Specific Performance.]—Whether the court can enforce specific performance of a contract to sell a medical practice, where the practice is non-dispensing, quære:—Semble, that there would be power to do so, if it were a dispensing practice. May v. Thomson, 51 L. J., Ch. 917; 20 Ch. D. 705; 47 L. T. 295—C. A.

Illegal Agreement—Serving Unqualified Person as Assistant.]—The act 55 Geo. 3, c. 194, prohibiting medical practice by unqualified persons, is not repealed by implication by the Medical Act, 1858. The defendant, a duly qualified medical practitioner, agreed with the plaintiff, a medical practitioner not duly qualified, but who was described in the agreement as "medical practitioner," to serve the plaintiff as assistant in his profession as a medical practitioner, and not to practise at R. within five years after the close of the engagement. The plaintiff applied for an injunction to prevent the defendant from practising at R. in breach of this agreement:—Held, by Pearson, J., that the Medical Act of 1858 does not prohibit unqualified persons from practising medicine, its object being only to enable the public to distinguish between qualified and unqualified practitioners—that the use, by an unqualified person in a private agreement with another medical man, of any of the titles for the wilful use of which by an unqualified person for the purpose of deceiving the public, penalties are imposed by s. 40 of the act, is not an offence within that section; that the agreement therefore was not illegal, and that the plaintiff could enforce its terms, and was entitled to an injunction. The defendant appealed, and on appeal shewed that the plaintiff had given various certificates of cause of death, which shewed that the plaintiff had attended the deceased persons during their last illness, and from which it was to be inferred that he attended patients in the way in which a medical practitioner ordinarily attends, and in fact personally acted as an apothecary:—Held, that his doing so was made illegal by the act 55 Geo. 3, c. 194, s. 14, that the agreement therefore was to assist the plaintiff in carrying on a business which he could not lawfully carry on, and that the agreement was illegal and could not be enforced. Davies v. Makuna, 54 L. J., Ch. 1148; 29 Ch. D. 596; 53 L. T. 314; 33 W. R. 668; 50 J. P. 5—C. A.

Semble, if the plaintiff had carried on his business by means of duly qualified assistants, without personally acting as a physician, surgeon, or apothecary, the agreement might have been legal. Ib.

10. PROCEEDINGS AGAINST, FOR NEGLIGENCE.

a. By Action.

Parties to Sue.]—In an action against a surgeon for unskilfulness and misconduct, issue being taken on the fact of the employment of the defendant by the plaintiff, the mere circumstance of the defendant's attendance is evidence in support of the issue, though the plaintiff is an infant, and the defendant is sent for and paid by the plaintiff's father. Gladwell v. Steggall, 5 Bing. (N.C.) 733; 8 Scott, 60; 8 L. J., C. P. 361; 3 Jur. 535.

It is not a ground of demurrer to a declaration in an action by a man and his wife against a surgeon for an injury to the wife by reason of his improper and unskilful treatment, that it is not stated that he was retained and employed as a surgeon for reward to be to him paid, by whom he was so retained, or by whom he was to be paid. Peppin v. Shepherd, 11 Price, 400.

It is sufficient to aver that he was retained as a surgeon, and entered upon the cure. Ib.

Surgeon—Grounds of Liability.]—An action lies against a surgeon for gross negligence and want of skill in his profession, as well as for negligence and carelessness, to the detriment of a patient. Seare v. Prentice, 8 East, 352.

So, for want of skill in disuniting the callus of the leg after it was set. Slater v. Baker, 2 Wils. 359.

A surgeon is responsible for an injury done to a patient, through the want of proper skill in his apprentice, but in an action against him the plaintiff must shew that the injury was produced by such want of skill, and it is not to be inferred. And if a person goes into a surgeon's shop, and asks to be bled, saying he has found relief from it before, and does not consult the person there as to the propriety of performing the operation; if there are no external indications of its being improper, such person is justified in performing it, and the surgeon will not be answerable for its not producing a beneficial result. Hancke v. Hooper, 7 Car. & P. 81.

Every person who enters into a learned profession undertakes to bring to the exercise of it a reasonable degree of care and skill: he does not, if he is an attorney, undertake at all events to gain the cause; nor does a surgeon undertake that he will perform a cure; nor does the latter undertake to use the highest possible degree of skill, as there may be persons of higher education and greater advantages than himself; but he undertakes to bring a fair, reasonable, and competent degree of skill; and, in an action against him by a patient, the question for the jury is, whether the injury complained of must be referred to the want of a proper degree of skill and care in the defendant or not. Lanphier v. Phipos, 8 Car. & P. 475.

A surgeon having been employed by a railway company to examine a passenger who had sustained an injury in a collision on their line, and he having so far as he could see or judge, on his own statement of his injuries, told him that they were so slight that he accepted a small sum in compensation:—Held, even assuming that his injuries were greater, there was no ground of action. Pimm v. Roper, 2 F. & F. 783.

In an action by a person who had been a patient at a hospital, for maltreatment there by two of the surgeons, it appeared that the alleged maltreatment was in the administration of a hot bath which they had ordered, but which it was no part of their ordinary duty personally to direct and superintend, and at the actual administration of which they were not present:—Held, that he was not entitled to expect more than the usual and ordinary degree of care and attention at the hands of the surgeons, and that if they were not personally cognizant of the alleged ill-usage, they were not liable. Perionowsky v. Freeman, 4 F. & F. 977.

Medical Practitioner.]—To render a medical man liable for negligence, or want of due care or skill, it is not enough that there has been a less degree of skill than some other medical man might have shewn, or a less degree of care than even he himself might have bestowed; nor is it enough that he himself acknowledged some degree of want of care; there must have been a want of competent and ordinary care and skill, and to such a degree as to have led to a bad result. Rich v. Pierpont, 3 F. & F. 35.

Persons not fully Qualified.]—A person not qualified, as being a regular medical practitioner, but assuming to be or to practise as such, and undertaking to treat another for a disease, is liable for injury caused by ignorant and improper treatment, by which the patient is rendered worse instead of better, and is injured by the use of improper medicines. Ruddock v. Lowe, 4 F. & F. 519.

In an action against a chemist and druggist upon an alleged retainer (as a surgeon and an apothecary) to treat the plaintiff for a certain disorder (for which mercurial treatment was improper), the breach being negligent treatment (by mercury):—Held, that if the defendant assumed to act as a surgeon or an apothecary, he was liable as such; but that those words were immaterial and might be rejected, the substance of the declaration being, that he undertook to treat the plaintiff for his disorder, and did so negligently or ignorantly; and that mercurial treatment, in a case for which it was wholly unfit, was such negligence or ignorance as would sustain the action. Jones v. Fay, 4 F. & F. 525.

Apothecary.]—It is a good defence to an action by an apothecary, that he treated the patient ignorantly or improperly. Kannen v. M'Mullen. Peake, 59.

Aliter, if the medicines were administered under the direction of a physician. Ib.

C. VETERINARY SURGEONS.

Use of words "Veterinary Forge"—False Representation.]—A farrier who is not on the Register of Veterinary Surgeons, and who did not, at the time of the passing of the Act 44 & 45 Vict. c. 62, hold the veterinary certificate of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland, commits an offence under the 17th section of that act if he uses the words "veterinary forge" on his business premises or bill-heads. Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons v. Robinson, 61 L. J., M. C. 146 : [1892] 1 Q. B. 557 ; 66 L. T. 263 ; 40 W. R. 412 ; 17 Cox, C. C. 477 ; 56 J. P. 313.

Veterinary Surgeon—Unlawfully using Name—Veterinary Chemist.]—G., a chemist, published a book dealing with diseases of horses, recommending medicines which he kept, and advising people in some cases to consult a veterinary surgeon. He described himself in the book as "pharmaceutical and veterinary chemist" :—Held, the justices were right in holding that this was not unlawfully using a description implying that he was a veterinary surgeon, contrary to 44 & 45 Vict. c. 52, s. 17. Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons v. Groves, 57 J. P. 505.

Attendance—Custom.]—If there is a general usage applicable to a particular trade or profession, persons employing one in such trade or profession will be taken to have dealt with him according to that usage, but a usage for a veterinary surgeon to charge for his attendance, when there was not much medicine required, is too uncertain. Sewell v. Corp, 1 Car. & P. 392.

A count for work, labour, and materials, will enable a plaintiff to recover for attendances as a farrier, and for medicines administered. Clark v. Mumford, 3 Camp. 37.

Where it was agreed between A. and B. that B. should take A.'s mare to graze, and have her blistered :—Held, that A. could maintain an action against a chemist for selling ointment to B., which, upon being applied, injured the mare. Phillips v. Wood, 1 N. & M. 434 ; 2 L. J., K. B. 100.

D. PHARMACY ACT.

1. CHEMISTS.

Register.]—Under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 56, persons who have become members of the Pharmaceutical Society since the passing of the act, according to its by-laws and charter are entitled to be put upon the register of pharmaceutical chemists, which is to be kept according to the act, although they have been admitted as members of the society without being examined according to the provisions of the act. Reg. v. Pharmaceutical Society, 24 L. J., Q. B. 177 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 698 ; 3 W. R. 485—Ex. Ch.

Charges.]—In an action to recover the amount of a chemist's bill, it being suggested that the items are properly within the scope of an apothecary's profession, the proper question for the jury is, under 55 Geo. 3, c. 194, ss. 14, 28, whether he has acted as an apothecary, and not whether he has charged as a chemist or an apothecary. Richmond v. Coles, 1 D. (N.S.) 560 ; 11 L. J., Q. B. 155 ; 6 Jur. 238.

Sale.]—An injunction to prevent a chemist from selling a quack medicine under a false and colourable representation that it was a medicine of the plaintiff, an eminent physician, was refused. Clark v. Freeman, 11 Beav. 112 ; 17 L. J., Ch. 142 ; 12 Jur. 149.

Liability of "Corporation" to Penalty as a "Person."]—Whether the word "person" in a statute can be treated as including a corporation must depend on a consideration of the object of the statute, and of the enactments passed with a view to carry that object into effect. The 31 & 32 Vict. c. 121, was passed to protect the public against the sale by incompetent persons of poisonous drugs, and in the 1st section enacts that "it shall be unlawful for any person to sell, or keep open shop for retailing, dispensing, or compounding poisons, or to assume or use the title of chemist and druggist, &c., or pharmacist, &c., unless such person shall be a pharmaceutical chemist, &c., within the meaning of this act, and be registered under the act." By s. 15, any person who shall offend in this respect (the words of s. 1 being almost repeated) shall be liable to pay a penalty of 5*l.*, to be sued for as therein directed. A small body of persons had obtained a registration under the Companies Acts, 1862—1867. One only of these persons was a qualified, certified, and registered chemist. His share in the company was very small ; he was the person who appeared in the shop and conducted the sales, and he received a salary for his labour in dispensing the drugs, which were sold for the profit of the company :—Held, that, under these circumstances, the word "person" in the 1st and 15th sections of the statute did not apply so as to make this incorporated company liable to the penalty. But the actual seller must be a qualified person. Pharmaceutical Society v. London and Provincial Supply Association, 49 L. J., Q. B. 736 ; 5 App. Cas. 857 ; 43 L. T. 389 ; 28 W. R. 957 ; 45 J. P. 20—H. L. (E.)

Semble, a corporation employing an unqualified manager would be liable. Ib.

2. POISONS.

Sale by Unqualified Person — Mixture containing Scheduled Poison.]—The prohibition in the Pharmacy Act, 1868, as to the sale of poisons does not apply to a mixture containing an infinitesimal quantity of poison. Pharmaceutical Society v. Delve, 63 L. J., Q. B. 360 ; [1894] 1 Q. B. 71 ; 10 R. 25 ; 70 L. T. 139 ; 42 W. R. 192 ; 58 J. P. 152.

A person, not being a registered chemist, who sells an article containing a considerable amount though not consisting solely of the poisons mentioned in sched. 2 of the Pharmacy Act, 1868, is subject to the penalty imposed by s. 15. Pharmaceutical Society v. Piper, 62 L. J., Q. B. 305 ; [1893] 1 Q. B. 686 ; 5 R. 296 ; 68 L. T. 490 ; 41 W. R. 447 ; 57 J. P. 502.

The prohibition against the sale of poisons by unqualified persons, which is contained in ss. 1 and 15 of the Pharmacy Act, 1868, extends to the sale of proprietary medicines containing one of the scheduled poisons as an ingredient in such quantity as to be hurtful to man or child. Pharmaceutical Society v. Piper (5 R. 296) approved. Pharmaceutical Society v. Armson, 64 L. J., Q. B. 32 ; [1894] 2 Q. B. 720 ; 9 R. 587 ; 71 L. T. 315 ; 42 W. R. 662 ; 59 J. P. 52—C. A.

—— "Patent Medicine," meaning of.]—The exemption contained in s. 17 in favour of patent medicines is restricted to medicines which are protected by letters patent under the great seal, and does not apply to proprietary medicines. Ib.

The exemption of patent medicines in s. 16 from the above penalty only applies to medicines protected by letters patent. Pharmaceutical Society v. Piper, supra.

Sale of—Dispensing Prescription by Chemist—Bonâ fide Belief.]—A duly registered chemist was convicted under the Pharmacy Act, 1868, s. 17, for selling poison to a person unknown to him. It was proved that Y., who was unknown to the chemist, came into his shop and produced a prescription written in the abbreviated form usual among chemists. At the foot of it were the initials "R. M. L.," and the words "Mrs. Newton, Aug. 11, 1869." There was a legally qualified medical practitioner having the initials R. M. L. The chemist's assistant dispensed the prescription by putting a small quantity of prussic acid into a bottle and filling up the bottle with rose water according to the meaning of the prescription. The chemist made an entry in his prescription book, "Newton, Mrs. (copying the prescription), Aug. 11, R. M. L." He also indexed the entry by inserting the name "Newton," and the page in the index contained in the book. The bottle was labelled with the name and address of the chemist, but not with the word "poison." The prescription was one which might be ordered for a lotion. No evidence was given as to whether there was such a person as Mrs. Newton or not. The chemist was also convicted in respect to the same sale, for selling poison in a bottle not labelled with the word "poison" :—Held, first, that, assuming that he bonâ fide believed that he was dispensing a prescription given by a medical man to Mrs. Newton, he could not be convicted for selling poison to a person unknown to him, but must be taken to have dispensed a medicine according to the requirements of the proviso to s. 17. Berry v. Henderson, 39 L. J., M. C. 77 ; L. R. 5 Q. B. 296 ; 22 L. T. 331.

Held, secondly, that he could not be twice convicted under the same section in respect of the same sale. Ib.

—— Name and Address of "Seller."]—By the Pharmacy Act, 1868, s. 17, it is unlawful to sell poisons unless the box or wrapper containing the poison be labelled with (amongst other things) the name and address of "the seller." P. was a duly qualified chemist, and kept a shop in one street in a town. He also rented a window in the shop of T. in another street and supplied T. with poisons, which T. sold on commission. The poisons sold by T. were contained in a wrapper bearing the name and address of P. :—Held, that the provisions of the act had not been complied with, for that T. was "the seller" within the meaning of s. 17, and the poisons should have borne his name and address on the label. Templeman v. Trafford, 51 L. J., M. C. 4 ; 8 Q. B. D. 397 ; 45 L. T. 684 ; 30 W. R. 78 ; 46 J. P. 325.

Unregistered Assistant of Registered Chemist—Liability to Penalty.]—By s. 15 of the Pharmacy Act, 1868, it is provided that "any person who shall sell . . . poisons . . . not being a duly registered pharmaceutical chemist or chemist and druggist . . . shall for every such offence be liable to pay a penalty or sum of 5*l.*" :—Held, that an unregistered chemist's assistant who, in the absence of his master, sells any poison or preparation containing poison as in that act defined, is liable to a penalty under the above section, notwithstanding that he effects such sale on behalf of his master, and that his master is duly registered. Pharmaceutical Society v. Wheeldon, 59 L. J., Q. B. 400 ; 24 Q. B. D. 683 ; 62 L. T. 727 ; 54 J. P. 407.

Injuries by—To Dog.]—The defendant, a confectioner, had a shop in which there was a counter, from behind which the customers were served by the defendant and his assistants, the space behind the counter being used exclusively by the latter for that purpose, the space in front of it being the part of the shop reserved for the accommodation of the customers. Inside the counter the defendant placed some bread and cheese covered with a poison for the purpose of destroying rats and mice. The plaintiff went to the shop to make some purchases, accompanied by a dog which passed behind the counter and ate a portion of the poisoned bread and cheese and was thereby killed :—Held, that the defendant was not liable for damages for the loss of the dog. Stansfield v. Bolling, 22 L. T. 709.

1. General Principles.

Party must be entitled in the same Right.]—A term of years and a freehold may subsist in the same person without merger if held in different rights. Jones v. Davies, 7 H. & N. 507; 31 L. J., Ex. 116; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 592; 6 L. T. 442; 10 W. R. 464—Ex. Ch.

If a husband is possessed of a term of years, and the owner of the reversion in fee devises it to the wife who has issue, the husband, who in the lifetime of the wife is tenant by the curtesy initiate, holds the two estates in different rights without having acquired the freehold by his own act, and consequently there is no merger. Ib.

A fund was limited in trust for a husband and wife successively for life, and then upon trust for the children of the marriage as the husband and wife jointly or as the survivor of them should appoint, and in default of appointment in equal shares, to be vested at twenty-one. There were two children of the marriage who attained twenty-one, one of whom afterwards died. No joint appointment was made. The husband, after the death of the wife, released the power, so as to vest a moiety of the fund in himself as administrator of the deceased child, and claimed to have such moiety transferred to himself:—Held, that he was entitled to a transfer upon surrendering his life interest in the moiety; but that he was not entitled so long as he retained his life interest, inasmuch as there could be no merger of two interests held in different rights. Radcliffe, In re, Radcliffe v. Bewes, 61 L. J., Ch. 186; [1892] 1 Ch. 227; 66 L. T. 363; 40 W. R. 323—C. A.

In Equity.]—A court of equity will not establish a merger by analogy to law, where the effect would be to defeat its own rules and practice, e.g. in the protection of married women from the marital control. Whittle v. Henning, 2 Ph. 731; 18 L. J., Ch. 51; 12 Jur. 1079. S. P., Thorn v. Newman, 3 Swanst. 603.

Where if the estates were legal, there would be a legal merger, there will be an equitable merger if the estates are equitable. But in a case of merger of equitable interests a court of equity will regulate the rights, so as not to hold that there is a merger, if there are equitable reasons why there ought not to be one, and will deal with a legal merger on equitable grounds. Brandon v. Brandon, 31 L. J., Ch. 47; 5 L. T. 339; 9 W. R. 825.

Where there is primâ facie a legal merger, but the complication of circumstances, and the effect of holding that there is a merger is such as to induce the court to say that it was never intended by the parties to produce a partial merger, it will hold that there is not a merger. Ib.

On a question of merger the acts of trustees will not bind those beneficially interested. Ib.

2. By Judgment.

Bond.]—Where judgment has been entered up on a bond debt, the debt is merged in the judgment, and mere delivery of the bond will not be a valid donatio inter vivos. Patterson v. Williams, Ll. & G. t. Plunk. 95.

Joint Demands.]—A judgment (without satisfaction) recovered against one of two joint debtors, is a bar to an action against the other. King v. Hoare, 13 M. & W. 494; 2 D. & L. 382; 14 L. J., Ex. 29; 8 Jur. 1127.

Joint and Several Demands.]—A judgment (without satisfaction) recovered of two persons jointly and severally bound is no bar to an action against the other. Ib.

In Partnership Cases.]—There is no settled rule of equity that a contract which is in terms joint, and would be so construed at law, is to be treated in equity as joint and several. Kendall v. Hamilton, 48 L. J., C. P. 705; 4 App. Cas. 504; 48 L. T. 418; 28 W. R. 97—H. L. (E.)

An action and a judgment against two persons who had borrowed money from the plaintiffs (though the judgment is unsatisfied), constitute a bar to another action brought by the same plaintiffs against a third person, who is afterwards discovered to have been really interested, as partner, with the two debtors in the business for the purpose of which the money had been borrowed. King v. Hoare, supra, adopted. Ib. S. P., Higgins, Ex parte, Tyler, In re, 3 De G. & J. 33; 27 L. J., Bk. 27; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 595; 6 W. R. 406.

A creditor of a firm of three, two of whom resided in America, recovered judgment against the third alone, who resided in England, and who afterwards became bankrupt, his partners remaining solvent:—Held, that the creditor might (notwithstanding the separate judgment) prove against the joint estate. Waterfall, Ex parte, or Jones, Ex parte, Morrison, In re, 4 De G. & Sm. 199; 20 L. J., Bk. 5; 15 Jur. 214.

In 1846 A. and B., to secure a debt due from them as partners to C., gave C. their joint and several bond and warrant of attorney, upon which C. entered up a joint judgment. In 1849 the partnership was dissolved, and from that time A. alone carried on the business. In 1858 A. became bankrupt:—Held, that C. could not prove for the amount secured by the bond and upon A.'s estate, the several as well as the joint bond and warrant having been merged in the joint judgment. Gallie, In re, 9 Ir. Ch. R. 188.

The firm of D. having been employed by the executors of B. to sell certain crops, &c., paid over a part of the proceeds, but were adjudicated bankrupt on the petition of the executors of B. in 1880 upon a judgment for the balance. The executors of B. proved as creditors of the joint estate. Subsequently H. S. D., one of the partners in the bankrupt firm, became entitled to a legacy and to other moneys, and the executors of B. attempted to withdraw the proof against the joint estate and prove against the separate estate of H. S. D. The trustee rejected the proof on the ground that the creditors were bound by their election, and his decision was reversed by the county court judge. On an appeal from his decision:—Held, that the ground upon which the trustee had rejected the proof was wrong, but that, in order to entitle them to prove against the separate estate of H. S. D., the respondents must prove that they had a separate cause of action against him. Held, also, upon an argument that the separate cause of action was merged in the joint judgment, that it was not so merged. Chandler, Ex parte, Davison, In re, 13 Q. B. D. 50; 50 L. T. 635.

Interest subsequent to Judgment.]—A defendant, jointly and severally with A., undertook, if a bill of exchange drawn by the defendant in favour of the plaintiff was not paid at maturity, to pay as interest thereon 20*l.* for each month afterwards. The bill not being paid at maturity, the plaintiff sued the defendant for the bill and interest as per agreement, but declared in such action on the bill only, and recovered judgment by default for the amount of such bill only. He afterwards brought an action against the defendant on the agreement for interest:—Held, that he was entitled to maintain such action for the interest which accrued prior to the judgment in the former action, but not for the interest subsequently to such judgment, as the right to interest under the agreement ceased when judgment was obtained. Florence v. Jenings, 2 C. B. (N.S.) 454; 26 L. J., C. P. 274; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 772.

A railway company, in 1864, issued debentures by which they bound themselves to pay a principal sum one year after the date of issue, with interest at 6 per cent., and charged the railway and undertaking with the payment of the principal sum and interest. Soon after the expiration of the year a debenture-holder brought an action against the company, and recovered judgment for the principal debt, interest, and costs. The company was ordered to be wound up in 1868, and the debenture-holder was admitted to prove for the judgment debt and interest at 4 per cent. The debenture-holder claimed to prove for an additional 2 per cent. on the original amount of the debenture from the date of the judgment:—Held, that the original debt was merged in the judgment, and that the claimant was only entitled to interest on the judgment at 4 per cent. European Central Ry., In re, Oriental Financial Corporation, Ex parte, 46 L. J., Ch. 57; 4 Ch. D. 33; 35 L. T. 583; 25 W. R. 92—C. A.

By an indenture of mortgage A., a beneficed clergyman, assigned to B. certain policies of assurance subject to a proviso for redemption thereof on payment by A., on the 30th of January, 1865, to B. of the sum of 3,000*l.*, with interest at the rate of 7*l.* per cent. per annum, and A. thereby covenanted that he would pay to B. the said sum of 3,000*l.*, with interest at the rate aforesaid, on the day before mentioned, and that in case the said sum of 3,000*l.* should not be paid on the day before mentioned, A. covenanted that he would, so long as the said sum of 3,000*l.* remained due on that security, pay to B. interest at the rate aforesaid. A. made default in payment, and B. after obtaining a judgment against A., issued a sequestration against his benefice. The sequestrator paid to B. the principal sum, together with interest thereon at the rate of 4*l.* per cent. per annum. B. claimed the difference between the principal sum due on his security with interest at the rate of 7*l.* per cent. per annum, and the amount paid to him by the sequestrator. B. brought an action to recover that difference, and A. demurred, on the ground that the security of the mortgage deed was merged in the judgment:—Held, overruling the demurrer, that part of the security was extinguished and part remained; that the debt due to B. in respect of the principal moneys was merged in the judgment, and therefore extinguished, but that the debt due to B. in respect of the interest was not merged in the judgment, and therefore remained. European Central Ry., In re (4 Ch. D. 33), distinguished. Popple v. Sylvester, 52 L. J., Ch. 54; 22 Ch. D. 98; 47 L. T. 329; 31 W. R. 116.

A mortgage deed contained a covenant for payment of a principal sum and interest at 5 per cent. on a certain day; and there was a further covenant by the mortgagor that if the said principal sum should remain unpaid after the date fixed for payment, he would, so long as the same or any part thereof should remain unpaid, pay interest thereon at 5 per cent. The mortgagee recovered judgment for principal, interest to date, and costs:—Held, that the covenant to pay the principal sum was merged in the judgment, that the true construction of the separate covenant was only to pay interest so long as any part of the principal sum remained due under the covenant, and that therefore the mortgagee was, as from the date of the judgment, entitled to interest on the judgment debt at 4 per cent. only, and not to interest at 5 per cent. on the principal sum. Popple v. Sylvester (22 Ch. D. 98), distinguished. Fewings, Ex parte, Sneyd, In re, 53 L. J., Ch. 545; 25 Ch. D. 338; 50 L. T. 109; 32 W. R. 352—C. A.

Semble, a covenant to pay interest may be so worded as not to merge in a judgment for the principal. Ib.

By a deed, 1,400*l.* was advanced to one Gye on the security of three life policies, whereby Gye covenanted to keep up the premiums and pay interest at 3 per cent. on the loan. By a covenant in the deed, which was made between M. of the one part, G. and L., sureties, of the second part, and Gye, of the third part, G. and L. covenanted with M. "that they or one of them will, during the continuance of the present security, in the event of the premiums on the said policies . . . and the interest in respect of the said principal sum of 1,400*l.* not being paid, as to the premium within three days, and as to the interest within thirty days, of their falling due by Gye . . . duly pay the premiums . . . and also pay the interest on the said sum of 1,400*l.* Judgment was recovered for the 1,400*l.* against Gye:—Held, that it operated as a merger with regard to the liability to pay future interest, and that the surety was released. But semble, there could be no merger of interest accrued before the judgment. Faber v. Lathom (Earl), 77 L. T. 168.

Double Securities.]—Where a covenant was given for payment of an annuity, and also a warrant of attorney, upon which a memorandum was written that it was to be as a "collateral security":—Held, that the covenant was not merged in the judgment which was entered up under the warrant. Pennell, Ex parte, Kearsley, In re, 2 Mont. D. & D. 273; 10 L. J., Bk. 77; 5 Jur. 899.

B. and C., being indebted to A., give a joint and several bond. A. takes (as part of the same security) a joint warrant of attorney, and enters up a joint judgment. B. and C. become bankrupts:—Held, that the bond is merged in the judgment, and that A. can only prove against the joint estate of B. and C. Christie, Ex parte, Barrow, In re, 2 Deac. & C. 155; 1 Mont. & B. 352; 1 L. J., Bk. 103. And see Gallie, In re, 9 Ir. Ch. R. 188, supra.

A., B. and C., together with D. (deceased), and two sureties, gave their joint and several bond, with warrant of attorney, to the Provincial Bank, as security for the balance of an account current, not to exceed 1,000*l*. Under the warrant of attorney the bank entered six several judgments against the obligors. A., B. and C. became bankrupts. The bank now sought to prove on the joint estate for the balance of the account current due at the time of the bankruptcy :—Held, that the bank was precluded from proof of the debt, as simple contract ; that the bond was merged in the separate judgments ; and that the proof could only be against the separate estates of the bankrupts. Clarke, In re, 7 Ir. Eq. R. 39.

On Assignment of Judgment.]—A judgment creditor, who had executed a deed whereby the real and personal estate of the debtor were conveyed to trustees for the benefit of such of his creditors as should execute the deed, assigned his judgment to such trustees :—Held, that the trustees could not be considered as owners of the trust estate, so that the assignment by the judgment creditor would have the effect of merging the judgment. Squire v. Ford, 9 Hare, 47 ; 20 L. J., Ch. 308 ; 15 Jur. 619.

In other Cases.]—A testator indebted on bond devises his real estate to the bankrupt and two other trustees for payment of his debts. The bond creditor, after the testator's death, brings an action against the bankrupt and the other devisees, and recovers a joint judgment against them :—Held, that he could not prove under the separate commission against the bankrupt, even for the purpose of voting in the choice of assignees. Pearce, Ex parte, Foxwell, In re, 2 Deac. & C. 451 ; 1 L. J., Bk. 109.

Judgment having been obtained against an attorney in an action brought to recover a sum of money received by him on behalf of his client, the court held that the debt owing from him as attorney was merged in the judgment debt, and refused to grant a rule calling upon him to pay over the money. Corbet Davies, In re, 15 L. T. 161 ; 15 W. R. 46.

3. In Documents under Seal.

Parties.]—A mortgage executed by two (and the wife of a third) of three persons indebted to the mortgagee in a simple contract debt does not operate as a merger of the claim on the simple contract in the specialty. Sharpe v. Gibbs, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 527 ; 12 W. R. 711.

To operate a merger of a simple contract debt in a specialty, the specialty must be co-extensive with the simple contract debt, and between the same parties. Boaler v. Mayor, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 76 ; 34 L. J., C. P. 230 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 565 ; 12 L. T. 457 ; 13 W. R. 775.

A bond given by an executor to a simple contract creditor of his testator is an extinguishment of testator's debt. Martin v. Ditchfield, Ridgw. t. Hardw. 209.

A servant who has contracted with a married woman by deed, and performed the stipulated services, may maintain an action of assumpsit against the husband. White v. Cuyler, 6 Term Rep. 176 ; 1 Esp. 200 ; 3 R. R. 147.

Where parties contract by deed, but the defendant does not execute it, the plaintiff might sue in assumpsit, notwithstanding the deed. Sutherland v. Lishman, 3 Esp. 42.

Where the master of the plaintiff's ship entered into a charter-party, as agent for the plaintiffs, with the defendant, a partner in the house of M. & Co., for the delivery of goods upon a stipulated freight, and the goods were delivered to M. & Co., who were the consignees named in the bill of lading :—Held, that the plaintiffs could not maintain assumpsit against the defendant for the freight. Schack v. Anthony, 1 M. & S. 573.

When Remedies Co-extensive.]—If one of two makers of a joint and several promissory note gives the holder a deed of mortgage to secure the amount with a covenant to pay it, the other maker is not thereby discharged, for the remedy on the specialty is not co-extensive with the remedy on the note. Ansell v. Baker, 15 Q. B. 20. S. P., Boaler v. Mayor, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 76 ; 34 L. J., C. P. 230 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 565 ; 12 L. T. 457 ; 13 W. R. 775.

The plaintiffs having contracted by charter-party sealed to let a ship, then in the Thames, to freight to the defendants for eight months, to commence from the day of her sailing from Gravesend on the voyage there stated, and having covenanted that she should sail from the Thames to any British port in the English Channel, there to load such goods as the freighters should tender and sail to the West Indies, and bring back a return cargo to London, afterwards agreed by parol with the defendants that the ship, instead of loading at some port in the Channel, should load in the Thames, and that the freight should commence from her entry outwards at the custom-house :—Held, that the subsequent parol contract, relating to a time anterior to that when the covenants in the deed came into operation, was distinct from and not inconsistent with the contract by deed, and might therefore be enforced by action of assumpsit. White v. Parkin, 12 East, 578 ; 11 R. R. 488.

Where Additional Security.]—To 3,000*l*., parcel of a money claim, the defendant pleaded a subsequent agreement to deliver to the plaintiff an indenture to pay the 3,000*l*. on a certain day, and that the defendant, in pursuance of such agreement, did, with the consent and at the request of the plaintiff, execute and deliver to the plaintiff such indenture, and did thereby covenant to pay the 3,000*l*. Replication, that the indenture was made by way of security for the payment of the 3,000*l*., and that it was always expressed by the indenture that it was made as such security :—Held, that the plea was a good plea of merger as to so much of the debt to which it was pleaded, and that the replication was no answer to it. Price v. Moulton, 10 C. B. 561 ; 20 L. J., C. P. 102 ; 15 Jur. 228.

Where a deed contained an express covenant to retire and pay promissory notes, and a proviso that the simple contract should not merge in the specialty :—Held, that even if the remedies by simple contract to a certain extent were preserved, still there was but one debt, and that had become a debt by specialty. Price v. Moulton (10 C. B. 561) considered. Stamps Commissioners v. Hope, 60 L. J., P. C. 44 ; [1891] A. C. 476 ; 65 L. T. 268—P. C.

To an action for money lent, the defendant pleaded, that the causes of action arose out of disbursements made for and on account of a vessel belonging to the defendant, and that the master made and sealed a bottomry bond, which was accepted and received by the plaintiff in satisfaction of the promises in the declaration. The plaintiff replied that he did not accept or receive the bond in satisfaction of the promises. At the trial it appeared that the bond was given by the master the day after the transaction as to the advances on the ship's account was closed, and by way of collateral security only :—Held, that the plaintiff's right to sue the owner in respect of the implied contract was not destroyed by the taking such additional security. Weston v. Foster, 3 Scott, 155 ; 2 Bing. (N.C.) 693 ; 2 Hodges, 59 ; 5 L. J., C. P. 242.

A defendant, being indebted to the plaintiff, executed with sureties a bond in the penal sum of 2,000*l*., whereby, after reciting that the plaintiff had agreed to give the defendant time for the payment of the debt owing, and of such further sums as might afterwards become due, the condition was, that if the defendant should pay the plaintiff the sum due and such further sums as might become due, or in case he should make default, and the sureties should, within one month after notice, pay the plaintiff the sums due, not exceeding 1,000*l*., or, if no notice should be given, the bond to be void :—Held, no merger, and the plaintiff might, notwithstanding the giving of the bond, recover the amount of the original debt. Norfolk Ry. v. Macnamara, 3 Ex. 628.

A banker takes from his customer and his surety a bond conditioned for the payment of all sums already advanced or thereafter to be advanced to the customer. This does not amount to a merger, and the customer may be sued for the balance of his account as upon a debt by simple contract. Holmes v. Bell, 3 Man. & G. 213 ; 3 Scott (N.R.) 479.

A. and B. were both domiciled in England. A. lent B. money on an English bond, payable to him and his executors. Afterwards B. gave A. a heritable bond, charging lands in Scotland, as an additional security, and made payable to him and his heirs at a different time and with a different rate of interest. On the death of A. :—Held, that the English bond was the primary security ; that it did not merge in the Scotch heritable bond as the jus nobilius ; and that the debt passed under A.'s will, executed according to the English, but not according to the Scotch solemnities, under the general term "securities for money." Cust v. Goring, 18 Beav. 383 ; 24 L. J., Ch. 308 ; 18 Jur. 884 ; 2 W. R. 379.

The bankrupts gave a joint and several promissory note for 2,000*l*. to secure advances made by their bankers ; and when they were indebted to the bankers in 1,957*l*., one of the bankrupts mortgaged certain property to them to secure that sum, and all such further sums as might be advanced to the extent of 3,000*l*., including the said sum of 1,957*l*. At the time of the bankruptcy, the amount of the debt due to the bankers was 4,365*l*., of which sum they realised the 3,000*l*. under the mortgage :—Held, that the mortgage deed did not operate as a merger of the promissory note, and that the bankers could prove on the note for the balance of their debt. Bate, Ex parte, Rishton, In re, 3 Deac. 358.

In the case of a bond given by one of several joint debtors the legal effect of which is to merge the simple contract debt, can this effect be controlled by the parties agreeing by a separate instrument that such bond shall be deemed a collateral security only, and that all remedies shall remain for the simple contract debt as if the bond had not been taken, quære. Owen v. Homan, 3 Mac. & G. 378 ; 20 L. J., Ch. 314 ; 15 Jur. 339.

A. sells goods to B. in the course of trade, and afterwards takes an usurious bond. B. becomes bankrupt ; quære, whether the bond extinguishes the precedent book debts, or whether A. can prove either of them under the commission. Davy, Ex parte, Ridgw. 289. Semble, not. See Christy, Ex parte, 2 Deac. & C. 155 ; Mont. & B. 352 ; 1 L. J., Bk. 103.

4. Of Equitable in Legal Estate.

In General.]—Where legal and equitable estates meet in the same person, the equitable merge in the legal. Wade v. Paget, 1 Bro. C. C. 364 ; 1 Cox, 74. S. P., Conolly v. Conolly, Ir. R. 1 Eq. 376 ; 15 W. R. 944—Ch. App.

To create a merger of the equitable in the legal estate by their union, the interest in each must be the same, and equitable recovery, therefore, barred an equitable remainder in tail in the person who had whole legal fee. Brydges v. Brydges, 3 Ves. 121.

Where the equitable and legal estates, equal and co-extensive, unite in the same person, the former merges ; therefore, where the former descends ex parte paternâ, the latter ex parte maternâ, upon their union the paternal heir has no equity. Selby v. Alston, 3 Ves. 339 ; 4 R. R. 10. S. P., Goodright d. Alston v. Wells, 2 Dougl. 771.

Where an equitable estate in fee by purchase and a legal estate in fee by descent meet in the same person, the equitable estate will merge in the legal, and the descent will be according to the legal title. Douglas, In re, Wood v. Douglas, 54 L. J., Ch. 421 ; 28 Ch. D. 327 ; 52 L. T. 131 ; 33 W. R. 390.

Semble, where a person takes an equitable estate by election, and a legal estate by descent, he is not a purchaser within the act 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 106. Ib.

A fund in court was subject to a trust for a husband for life, remainder to his wife for life, remainder to their son absolutely. The husband and son, by deed, surrendered and released their respective interests to the wife, for the express purpose of giving her a present absolute interest in the fund, and thereby enabling her to assign it at once to the son. But a petition by the three for the payment of the fund to the son was refused, on the ground that this court will not establish an equitable merger by analogy to law where the effect would be to defeat its own rules and practice in the protection of married women from the marital control. Whittle v. Henning, 2 Ph. 731 ; 18 L. J., Ch. 51 ; 12 Jur. 1079.

—— Copyholds.]—In two manors in Durham, there is no custom of surrendering to the uses of the will, but the tenant devests himself of the legal estate, and by surrender vests it in a trustee, who subscribes a memorandum or defeasance that the surrender is to the uses of the surrenderor's will. In this case the father and maternal grandfather of the testator R. N., being both copyholders, had respectively caused their copyhold tenements to be surrendered to the other, who had subscribed the usual defeasance. The legal estate in both descended to the testator. But, with regard to the tenements in the manor of H., they were devised by the father of the testator to trustees, to the intent that his widow might receive an annuity thereout, and subject thereto to the testator R. N. in fee. The widow being alive at the time the testator R. N. made his will and died, it was held that the copyhold in the manor of Houghton passed by his will ; with respect to the tenements which were in the other manor, the testator's maternal grandfather, who held the beneficial interest in them, devised them unto trustees upon trust for the testator R. N. :—Held, that, there being nothing to separate the legal estate and equitable interest, the equitable interest had merged in the legal estate in the testator, and could not be devised by him according to the custom of the manor :—Held, that his widow was entitled to free bench, and the heir subject thereto to the inheritance; but they, taking benefits under the will, were bound to elect. Nicholson v. Nicholson, Taml. 319.

Estate Tail.]—Tenant in tail of an equitable estate taking a conveyance of the legal estate to himself and his heirs, the equitable estate tail is not merged in the legal fee. Stoney v. Saunders, Hay. & J. 519. S. P., Browne v. Blake, 1 Moll. 368.

—— Copyholds.] — Equitable estate tail in copyhold does not merge by accession of the legal fee. Merest v. James, 6 Madd. 118; 22 R. R. 253.

5. Of other Estates.

On Acquisition of Prior Estate.]—A tenant for life of a settled estate agreed to sell and convey a piece of land part thereof to a company, and then, before the conveyance was completed, by deed, in consideration of the release by his son, who was the tenant for life next in remainder of the settled estate, of a rent-charge charged thereon payable to him, and of a covenant by the son to pay and keep down certain charges thereon in exoneration of the father and of such part of the settled estate as was retained by the father, conveyed part of the settled estate, including the land agreed to be conveyed to the company, to a trustee for a term of ninety-nine years upon trusts for further securing the payment of the charges covenanted to be paid by the son, and subject to such term and to the trusts thereof to the use of the son, his heirs and assigns :—Held, on a summons taken out under the Vendor and Purchaser Act, 1874, that, having regard to the provisions of s. 25, sub-s. 4, of the Judicature Act, 1873, and to the fact that it was for the benefit of the son that the father's life estate should be kept alive, the father's life estate was not merged and extinguished, and that the father had the power with consent of the son to execute a valid conveyance under the Settled Land Acts to the company of the land agreed to be conveyed to them. Barry Ry. and Wimborne (Lord), 76 L. T. 489.

A tenant for life in possession of certain real estate conveyed to B., the next tenant for life under the same will, the said real estate, to the use that she should receive a rent-charge during her life, and, subject thereto, to the use of B., his heirs and assigns. Upon B.'s death, it was contended by the tenant in tail in remainder that the effect of the conveyance was to merge the estate pur autre vie thereby conveyed in B.'s life estate, and that the remainderman had become entitled to the real estate in possession free from the rent-charge :—Held, that the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 25, sub-s. 4, applies to all cases where there would not have been a merger both at law and in equity, and that, it being apparent that no merger was intended, the conveyance to B. did not operate so as to cause a merger. Snow v. Boycott, 61 L. J., Ch. 591; [1892] 3 Ch. 110; 66 L. T. 762; 40 W. R. 603.

On Purchase of Equity of Redemption.]—Mortgagee purchasing an equity of redemption preserves his mortgage unmerged by taking a conveyance to a trustee, with a declaration of his intention to that effect. Bailey v. Richardson, 9 Hare, 736.

Estate pur Autre Vie.]—The estate of a tenant for life in lands held pur autre vie cannot merge in the possible estate therein of his heir or executor; the latter being an independent estate, less in value than the former, and not taken by the heir or executor as a remainder upon the previous estate, but as a special occupancy upon the death of the tenant for life. Pickersgill v. Grey, 30 Beav. 352; 31 L. J., Ch. 394; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 632; 5 L. T. 706; 10 W. R. 14.

6. Charges and Incumbrances.

a. General Principles.

In what Cases.] — Where a purchaser of a property pays off a mortgage on it without shewing an intention to keep it alive, still, if its continuance as an existing charge is beneficial to him, it will be treated in equity as subsisting unless an intention to the contrary can be inferred from the terms of the purchase deed or from other legitimate evidence. But the opportunity of making a very doubtful claim against third parties is not such a benefit as is meant in this enunciation of the doctrine; and if an intention to keep alive a charge on property is inconsistent with the real intention of the parties to the deed by which the property was assigned to the purchaser, the charge cannot be treated as still subsisting simply because the purchaser afterwards finds it would have been better for him to have kept the charge alive. Liquidation Estates Purchase Co. v. Willoughby, 65 L. J., Ch. 486; [1896] 1 Ch. 726; 74 L. T. 228; 44 W. R. 612—C. A.

Mortgage not merged by union with the fee; the actual intention not established by the acts of the party, presumed from the greater advantage against merger, in favour of the personal representative. Forbes v. Moffatt, 18 Ves. 384; 11 R. R. 222.

A person becoming entitled to an estate subject to a charge, for his own benefit, may keep up the charge. Distinction upon this subject in law and equity : the latter sometimes holding a charge extinguished where it would subsist at law, and sometimes preserving it where at law it would be merged, depending on the intention, actual or presumed, of the person in whom the interests are united. Where, as in most instances, it is, with reference to the party himself, of no sort of use to have a charge on his own estate, it will sink without some act by him to keep it on foot. Ib.

Owner of a charge is not, as a condition of keeping it up, called on to repudiate the estate; his election is not to take the charge or the estate, but whether, taking the estate, he means the charge to sink or continue distinct. Ib. And see Clarendon (Earl) v. Barham, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 688; 12 L. J., Ch. 215; 6 Jur. 963.

Merger of a charge in the inheritance is not to be assumed, if it would be contrary to the interest of the owner of the estate and charge. Davis v. Barnett, 14 Beav. 542.

Where a charge on an estate becomes vested absolutely in the owner of the inheritance of the estate, the three tests usually applied for ascertaining whether the charge has merged are:—first, whether there has been an actual expression of intention to that effect; secondly, whether the acts done by the owner of the estate are only consistent with the charge being kept on foot; and thirdly, whether it is for the interest of the owner that the charge should not merge in the inheritance. Tyrwhitt v. Tyrwhitt, 32 Beav. 244; 1 N. R. 458; 32 L. J., Ch. 553; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 346; 8 L. T. 140; 11 W. R. 409.

When the owner of an estate has also a charge upon it, and there is some intermediate charge or estate between his own charge and his ownership in fee, it may be reasonable to say that without some special act no presumption can be made of an intention to merge the charge in the fee, for that might be against the interest of the owner, by letting in the intermediate estate; but where the intermediate estate is created by the act of the owner himself, this reasoning has no application. Johnson v. Webster, 4 De G. M. & G. 474; 3 Eq. R. 101; 24 L. J., Ch. 300; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 145; 3 W. R. 84.

At law and equity, where there is a confusion of rights, there is an immediate merger; that is prevented in equity by the intention, either express or implied, as in the case of an infant entitled to an estate, and also to a charge upon it, the rights remain distinct, because more beneficial. Compton (Lord) v. Oxenden, 2 Ves. J. 263; 4 Bro. C. C. 397. S. P., Alsop v. Bell, 24 Beav. 451.

Where the same person becomes absolutely entitled to an estate, and a sum of money charged upon it, the charge will be deemed extinguished unless it appears that the owner intended otherwise. Hood v. Phillips, 3 Beav. 513.

For the purpose of shewing the intention, evidence direct and presumptive may be resorted to. A transfer to a trustee must be considered as one of the grounds rebutting the presumption of merger, but does not amount to decisive evidence against the presumption. Ib.

The legal estate of a property being vested in A., for the benefit of himself and B. in equal moieties, he mortgaged it unknown to B. B. afterwards paid off the mortgage, and had the legal estate conveyed to him subject to such equity of redemption as the lands were subject to:—Held, that there was not such a perfect union of the legal and equitable estates in B.'s moiety of the estate as to give his widow a title to dower. Knight v. Frampton, 4 Beav. 10; 10 L. J., Ch. 247.

Where an equitable mortgagee, after notice of an act of bankruptcy, took a conveyance of the legal estate:—Held, that his equitable mortgage was not thereby merged, but remained good, notwithstanding the invalidity of such conveyance. Harvey, Ex parte, Emery, In re, 3 Deac. 547; 1 Mont. & C. 261.

A testator, being the absolute beneficial owner of a trust fund, subject to his wife's interest therein if she should survive him, borrowed part of the fund from the trustees on the security of a mortgage of an estate of which he was seised in fee. He afterwards made his will, whereby he devised the real estate to his wife for life, with remainder to the plaintiff in fee; and bequeathed "all and every the shares and sums of money in the public funds, or upon government or real securities," which he should die possessed of, or in anywise entitled to, in trust for his wife for life, with remainder to the plaintiff for life, remainder to the plaintiff's children absolutely. The testator's wife survived:—Held, that there was no merger of the mortgage debt in the real estate. Wilkes v. Collin, L. R. 8 Eq. 338; 17 W. R. 878.

Held, also, that the testator's interest in the trust fund passed by the specific bequest. Ib.

At what Date.]—A mortgage affecting the fee of settled lands having been bequeathed to the tenant for life, he, while in solvent circumstances, evidenced an intention to merge the mortgage debt in the inheritance. There was no evidence of any contrary intention during the remainder of his life. At his death he was insolvent:—Held, that a merger of the charge took place as of the earliest date to which, upon the evidence, the intention to merge was referable. Godley's Estate, In re, [1896] 1 Ir. R. 45.

b. On Acquisition of Estate.

Tenant in Tail—Disentail.]—Guardians of an infant redeemed the land-tax on estates of which he was tenant in tail, and paid all the instalments of the redemption money during the infancy. On the infant attaining his majority he suffered a recovery, and afterwards, on his marriage, conveyed the estates to the uses of his settlement, but no mention was made in the settlement of the land-tax. During his life, in the rental accounts, the rent-charges in lieu of the land-tax were kept distinct from the rents paid by the tenants. The owner (the settlor) by his will devised these rent-charges:—Held, that the rent-charges were not merged either by the effect of the settlement or the course pursued, and that the devisees under the will of the owner (the settlor) were entitled against the persons claiming under his settlement. Blundell v. Stanley, 3 De G. & Sm. 433; 18 L. J., Ch. 300; 13 Jur. 998.

A tenant in tail in 1841 executed a disentailing deed with respect to estates the land-tax on which had been redeemed during the minority of a previous tenant for life by his guardians, who were also trustees for the purpose of receiving and applying the rents. The tenant in tail, after enlarging his estate, executed certain mortgages, and conveyed the estates to trustees upon trust for sale, subject to the several charges and incumbrances affecting the same. The property was put up for sale, and described in the conditions as "subject to land-tax if any":—Held, that, the land-tax under the circumstances, and in accordance with Ware v. Polhill (11 Ves. 257; 8 R. R. 144), having become extinguished, the rent-charge in lieu thereof to which the tenant for life was equitably entitled merged by conveyance to the trustees for sale, who took the legal fee, and that a purchaser for them took the estate free from land-tax or any yearly charge in respect or by reason of the redemption. Bulkeley v. Hope, 1 K. & J. 482; 24 L. J., Ch. 356; 3 W. R. 360.

A testator was possessed of considerable property as owner in fee simple consequent upon his execution of a disentailing deed, by which he converted an estate in tail into an estate in fee. Prior to the execution of the disentailing deed he had paid off charges upon the property, and had caused an assignment of the charges to be made to trustees to keep the charges on foot for his benefit, or had caused a memorandum of the facts to be indorsed on the receipts. Subsequently to the disentailing deed he paid off other charges, but only took simple receipts for them. By his will he left all his property in the county R., and situate in certain parishes, to his brothers, free from all charges. The testator was possessed of other property in the county R. not in the parishes mentioned: — Held, that only the property in the parishes named by the will passed by the devise, and that it being for the benefit of the testator to have kept the charges alive, he must be presumed to have intended to keep them on foot, and they continued a charge on the undevised portion of the estate. Keogh v. Keogh, Ir. R. 8 Eq. 179; 22 W. R. 508. Affirmed, Ir. R. 8 Eq. 449.—C. A.

On Failure of preceding Limitations.]—Tenant in tail in remainder (after estates to A. for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail) pays off a mortgage during the life of the tenant for life, takes an assignment to himself on the mortgage term, and afterwards comes into possession of the estate, and dies without issue; the mortgage is a subsisting charge for the benefit of his personal estate, there being no act to shew a contrary intention. Wigsell v. Wigsell, 2 Sim. & S. 364; 4 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 84; 25 R. R. 224.

A person having a partial interest in an estate brought up charges thereon, and had them transferred to trustees for him; he afterwards became absolutely entitled to the estate:—Held, under the circumstances, that the charges had merged in the inheritance. Selsey (Lord) v. Lake (Lord), 1 Beav. 146; 8 L. J., Ch. 233.

A life estate and an annuity charged on the same estate and devised to the same person held not to have merged. Byam v. Sutton, 19 Beav. 556; 18 Jur. 847; 2 W. R. 684.

A testatrix devised to the defendant, a married woman, a reversionary life interest in an estate, and she bequeathed to the defendant, for life and for her separate use, an annuity charged on the same estate, and to commence immediately. At the death of the testatrix, the prior limitation having failed, the defendant became tenant for life in possession:—Held, that a merger of the defendant's annuity in her life estate, by operation of law, would not be presumed. Ib.

Tenant in tail in remainder expectant upon a preceding estate tail purchased a mortgage on the estate, and took an assignment to himself of the mortgage debt and of the term by which it was secured. He subsequently became entitled to the estate as tenant in tail in possession, and as such continued for six years in receipt of the rents, after which he died without barring the entail or doing any other act indicative of an intention as to whether the charge should merge:—Held, that the charge was kept alive for the benefit of his personal representative. Horton v. Smith, 4 K. & J. 624; 27 L. J., Ch. 773; 6 W. R. 783.

By Conveyance.]—A mortgage was made for a term of years, and subsequently the reversion was conveyed to a trustee for sale to secure a further advance and the prior advances:—Held, that the terms were not merged, though portions had been sold by the trustee with the concurrence of the mortgagee. Locking v. Parker, 42 L. J., Ch. 257; L. R. 8 Ch. 30; 27 L. T. 635; 21 W. R. 113.

By purchase.]—A tenant for life of an estate settled in strict settlement, buys up some of the charges on the estate, and has them assigned to a trustee; he next purchases the ultimate remainder, and has it conveyed to him, subject to the subsisting charges; he then devises the estate subject to the charges that might be thereon at his decease; the intermediate remainders fail at his death. The charges so purchased are merged, and parol evidence is admissible to prove that the testator so intended. Astley v. Milles, 1 Sim. 298; 27 R. R. 190.

By Devise.]—A. devised his real estate to B., in fee, charged with 1,000*l.*, which he gave to B. in trust, to be laid out for the separate use of C., his sister, for her life; and after her decease, as she should by her will appoint, and in default of appointment to be retained by B. B. devised the estates to trustees in trust for C. and D., as tenants in common in fee, subject to his debts, &c.; and by a codicil he directed his personal estate to be first applied in payment of his debts, legacies, &c. After B.'s death, the trustees conveyed the estates to C. and D., as tenants in common in fee, subject to the 1,000*l.* and other incumbrances. C. and D. having agreed to make partition, one moiety of the estates was conveyed to C. in fee, subject to a term for indemnifying D. for the 1,000*l.*, and the other moiety was conveyed to D. in fee. C. afterwards mortgaged her moiety in fee, and by her will, without referring to the 1,000*l.*, disposed of her personal estate in general terms:—Held, that the 1,000*l.* was merged. Tyler v. Lake, 4 Sim. 351.

S. being seised in fee of two-thirds of certain real estate charged with a mortgage debt in favour of A., and being also seised of the other third of the same estate not so charged, devises all her real and personal estate to A. charged with her debts, and she appoints A. her executor. A. pays all the debts except his own mortgage debt, and in his residuary account of S.'s estate he states that he appropriates the clear residue of her estate towards satisfaction of his mortgage debt, but the sum so set apart is insufficient to pay the whole debt. A. devised the property possessed by him under the will of S. to certain persons as tenants in common, provided they undertook to receive the same with all the liabilities attaching thereto:—Held, that A. intended to keep the charge alive; that the mortgage did not merge in the fee; and that A.'s devisees took the property charged with the balance of the mortgage debt. Hatch v. Skelton, 20 Beav. 453.

H. S., by his marriage settlement, assigned a sum of 7,500*l.* to trustees, in trust for himself for life, and after the deaths of both in trust for all the children of the marriage, in such shares, &c., as H. S. should by deed or will appoint; and he charged the 7,500*l.* on an estate to which he was absolutely entitled. There were three children of the marriage, J. G. S., and two daughters. H. S., by his will, in 1851, appointed 5,000*l.* of the fund to J. G. S., and devised to him and the heirs of his body the lands on which it was charged. In 1858, by codicil, he revoked the devise of the lands in the will, and devised them to J. G. S. for life, remainder to such uses as J. G. S. should by deed or will appoint. In 1872 by his marriage settlement, reciting the devises of the land by the will and codicil, J. G. S. in exercise of his power appointed the lands, after his death, to trustees for 200 years, to secure a jointure for his wife, remainder in strict settlement to the sons and daughters successively of the intended or any subsequent marriage, with an ultimate remainder to himself in fee. No mention or allusion to the charge of 5,000*l.* was made in the settlement:—Held, that there was no merger of the charge, and that the 5,000*l.* continued personal estate of J. G. S. Smith v. Smith, 19 L. R., Ir. 514.

A testator devised his real estates to his wife and his three daughters, A., B. and C., in equal shares; and by a codicil bequeathed 1,000*l.* to his daughter A., charged on all his real and personal estate. A. married, and her husband joined her in conveying her undivided fourth of the real estate to trustees free from incumbrances, &c., by a post-nuptial settlement, which was held not binding on the wife, no fine having been levied by her:—Held, that the fourth part of the legacy was not merged in the estate devised to A. by the will, but that the husband, by the settlement, released A.'s fourth of the real estate from the legacy. Walpole v. M'Clintock, 7 Ir. Eq. R. 353.

By Descent.]—Merger of a charge in the inheritance is not to be assumed if it would be contrary to the interest of the owner of the estate and charge. Davis v. Barrett, 14 Beav. 542.

By an ante-nuptial settlement in 1812, the settlor conveyed lands to trustees to the use of himself for life with remainder to the use of trustees for 500 years, to secure a jointure and to raise 6,000*l.* for the benefit of the wife and the younger children of the marriage, and subject to these prior charges, to raise 20,000*l.* for the eldest son. Subject to these trusts the lands stood limited to the settlor in fee. The settlor mortgaged his reversion in fee, and died prior to the Inheritance Act (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 106), having devised the estate, subject to the payment of debts and legacies, to his eldest son and heir-at-law:—Held, that it was to the interest of the eldest son to keep the charge alive as against the subsequent incumbrancers on the estate, and that the 20,000*l.* had not merged in the reversion in fee. Ib. S. P., Clarendon (Earl) v. Barham, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 688; 12 L. J., Ch. 215; 6 Jur. 963; Sing v. Leslie, 2 H. & M. 68; 4 N. R. 17; 33 L. J., Ch. 549; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 794; 10 L. T. 332.

A., on her father's death, became seised of real estates as his heir, and entitled under his marriage settlement to a sum which the trustees of the settlement had lent him on mortgage of the estates. The testatrix, by a deed executed shortly before her will, charged the estates and the sum secured on them with an annuity, and otherwise showed that she intended the mortgage to be kept on foot for the purpose at least of securing the annuity. By her will she devised the estates, after the payment of her own debts and after her father's affairs should have been settled, to B., and died intestate as to her residuary personal estate:—Held, that as against her next of kin the incumbrance created on the estate by her father must be considered to have merged in it. Swabey v. Swabey, 15 Sim. 106.

If the inheritance of an estate comes to one having an equitable charge upon it, the charge is merged, except in certain cases. Chester v. Willes, Ambl. 246.

c. On Acquisition or Payment off of Charge.

By Tenant in Fee.]—The transfer to a trustee of a charge paid off is not conclusive evidence of an intention to keep it alive. Accordingly, where A. B., the owner in fee of an estate, paid off a mortgage in fee existing on it, which in 1807 was transferred to a trustee, in trust for A. B., her "heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns respectively," and the trustee covenanted to convey to A. B., her heirs or assigns, or unto such other person or persons, and in such manner and form as A. B., her heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns should direct. A. B. devised the estate to a trustee to pay certain specified legacies, and subject thereto, she devised it to C. D. in fee, "and upon or for no other use, trust, intent, or purpose whatsoever." A. B. died in 1832:—Held, that the mortgage had merged. Hood v. Phillips, 3 Beav. 513.

Where a tenant in fee becomes entitled to a charge upon the same land, the fact that a merger of the charge would give priority to other charges affords sufficient presumption to rebut merger; and it is not, in general, necessary to inquire into the relative value of the estate and the charges which would be so let in. Richards v. Richards, 1 Johns. 754. S. P., Grice v. Shaw, 10 Hare, 76; Johnson v. Webster, 4 De G. M. & G. 474; 3 Eq. R. 101; 24 L. J., Ch. 300; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 145; 3 W. R. 84.

But, semble, it is essential that the charges on which the presumption against merger is founded should be substantial charges. Ib.

Application of the rule, that where an owner of an estate in fee-simple becomes entitled to a charge upon that estate, primâ facie the charge, in equity at least, merges in the inheritance, unless the owner of the estate does some act to keep it alive, or it is for his interest that the charge should continue to be a subsisting charge upon the estate. Swinfen v. Swinfen, 29 Beav. 199; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 89; 4 L. T. 194; 9 W. R. 175.

Where a person is owner of an estate, and of a charge upon it, the presumption of merger arises upon his death. Ib.

Devise by an owner in fee, without mentioning a charge on it, to which he was absolutely entitled:—Held, to be some indication of his intention to merge it. Ib.

A. was owner in fee of an estate on which there was a charge to which he was absolutely entitled, and a subsequent charge of a jointure in favour of B. A. devised the estate in fee to B.:—Held, that B. took discharge of the mortgage. Ib.

A., the owner of a freehold estate, subject to a mortgage in fee to secure 1,300*l.*, devised and bequeathed his real and personal estate to B., the mortgagee. B., in his residuary account, stated that he had retained 467*l.* out of the personal estate towards payment of his mortgage debt. Afterwards B. devised the property to three relatives of A., "provided they undertake to receive the same with all the liabilities attaching thereunto":—Held, first, under the circumstances, that the mortgage had not merged in the fee; and secondly, that the three took the estate subject to the payment of the balance of the mortgage debt. Hatch v. Skelton, 20 Beav. 453.

An infant, tenant in tail in possession, subject to charges amounting to 26,461*l.*, secured by a term of 500 years, was made a ward of court, and during his minority 12,165*l.* of the charges were paid off and assigned to a trustee for him. After coming of age, in 1842, he barred the entail, and subsequently paid off a further charge of 923*l.*, taking an absolute assignment of it to himself. In 1851 he mortgaged the estate for 4,300*l.*

making no mention of his charges. In 1861 he paid off the remaining charges, amounting to 13,846*l.*, partly out of his own moneys and partly by a mortgage of the estate for 12,000*l.*, with a collateral assignment of his charges and of the term of 500 years. In 1876 he paid off the 4,300*l.* mortgage, partly out of his own moneys and partly by means of a trust fund of 3,133*l.*, to which he was absolutely entitled, subject to the payment of a life annuity of 100*l.*, and subject to it the 4,300*l.* was assigned to a trustee for him absolutely. By his will, made in 1877, he devised the estate upon trust "to and for the several uses, intents, and purposes, and subject to the annuities, charges, provisoes, and limitations hereinafter mentioned, expressed and declared, of and concerning the same respectively, and to none other." The will charged the estate with 35,000*l.* for five of his younger children (excluding his son R. in the event that happened), and, subject thereto, devised it to his son R. for life, with remainders over in favour of the other five younger children, and bequeathed the residue of his personal estate to whichever of his sons should, under the will, become entitled, at the testator's death, to a life estate in the lands. The testator died in 1881, and was succeeded by his son, R.:—Held, that the sums of 26,461*l.* and 4,300*l.* only subsisted as charges on the estate for the purpose of securing the mortgage of 12,000*l.* (with interest thereon) and the annuity of 100*l.* respectively. Nunn's Estate, In re, 23 L. R., Ir. 286—C. A.

By Tenant in Tail.]—Tenant in tail restrained as to alienation, but with powers of leasing and jointuring, as in case of tenant for life, considered as tenant for life; and therefore his personal representative is a creditor for a charge on the estate paid by him (intent to the contrary not appearing), though the subsequent remainders were exactly of the same nature, and the term having been very short, little more than forty years remained. Shrewsbury (Countess) v. Shrewsbury (Earl), 1 Ves. J. 227; 3 Bro. C. C. 120; 2 R. R. 101.

A charge not extinguished for the benefit of the estate, though satisfied by the tenant in tail, with the intention of extinguishing it, under the erroneous supposition that he was tenant in fee simple. Buckinghamshire (Earl) v. Hobart, 3 Swanst. 186; 19 R. R. 197.

If tenant for life pays off charge on estate, primâ facie he is entitled to that charge for his own benefit, with the qualification of having no interest during his life. If tenant in tail or in fee pay off charge, that payment is primâ facie presumed to be in favour of estate; but presumption may be rebutted by evidence, as by calling for assignment, or by a declaration. Id. 199.

—— In remainder.]—Tenant n tail in remainder (after estates to A. for life, and to his first and other sons in tail) pays off a mortgage during the life of the tenant for life, takes an assignment to himself of the mortgage term, and afterwards comes into possession of the estate, and dies without issue; the mortgage is a subsisting charge for benefit of his personal estate, there being no act to show a contrary intention. Wigsell v. Wigsell, 2 Sim. & S. 364; 4 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 84; 25 R. R. 224.

Tenant in tail in remainder expectant upon a preceding estate in tail purchased a mortgage on the estate, and took an assignment to himself of the mortgage debt and of the term by which it was secured. He subsequently became entitled to the estate as tenant in tail in possession, and as such continued for six years in receipt of the rents, after which he died without barring the entail or doing any other act indicative of an intention as to whether the charge should merge:—Held, that the charge was kept alive for the benefit of his personal representative. Horton v. Smith, 4 Kay & J. 624; 27 L. J., Ch. 773; 6 W. R. 783.

Distinction in this respect where the tenant in tail becomes entitled to the charge without any act on his part. Ib.

An estate, vested in A. for life, with remainder to his eldest son B. in tail, was subject to considerable family mortgages. B. being possessed of other large property, granted an annuity of 2,500*l.* a year to A., to cease upon his death, or upon B.'s "paying off, satisfying, and discharging" the several mortgages:—Held, on the whole, that the intention was to merge the mortgages. Hoghton v. Hoghton, 15 Beav. 278; 21 L. J., Ch. 482; 17 Jur. 99.

Renewable Leaseholds.]—C., the owner of leaseholds, renewable by custom, contracted, in 1798, to redeem the land tax thereon, under 38 Geo. 3, c. 60, and transferred to the commissioners a sum of consols for that purpose, but did not exercise the option of keeping the charge on foot under s. 17 of the act. After the death of C., T. D. and M. D., who were entitled in equal shares to the leaseholds under his will (which contained no reference to the land tax), and also to his residuary personal estate, by a settlement made in 1818, assigned the leaseholds, and all their "estate and interest" therein, to trustees upon the trusts of the settlement. The recitals did not refer to the land tax. T. D. died in 1821, having made no claim to a moiety of the charge in respect of the land tax. On the death of M. D., the personal representative of T. D. and M. D. claimed, as against those entitled under the settlement, a charge in respect of the land tax:—Held, that C., on redeeming the land tax, became entitled to the interest on the consols transferred by him as a rent-charge on the leaseholds for his own benefit; that it did not pass under the general words of the settlement of 1818, but remained as a separate property in the settlors, as residuary legatees of C.; that their representative was now entitled to it as a charge on the leaseholds; and that the fact of T. D. not having made any claim was no bar. Neame v. Moorsom, 36 L. J., Ch. 274; L. R. 3 Eq. 91; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 913; 15 W. R. 51.

By Tenant for Life.]—Where tenant for life pays off an incumbrance upon the estate, he shall be considered as a creditor for the money so paid; but where tenant in tail pays, it is in exoneration of the estate of which he may make himself absolute owner. Jones v. Morgan, 1 Bro C. C. 206.

When a tenant for life pays off a mortgage on the estate, the fact that he is the parent of those entitled in remainder is not of itself sufficient to rebut the presumption that he intends to keep the charge alive for his own benefit. Harvey, In re, Harvey v. Hobday, 65 L. J., Ch. 370; [1896] 1 Ch. 137; 73 L. T. 613; 44 W. R. 242—C. A.

A tenant for life of an estate, with an ultimate remainder to himself in fee, paid off a charge upon the estate, and conveyed the debt and a term to a trustee, who executed a declaration of trust :—Held, in the absence of intention to the contrary, that the charge was kept alive. Pitt v. Pitt, 22 Beav. 294 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1010. S. P., Wyndham v. Egremont (Earl), Amb. 753.

Tenant for life in possession, subject to be disseised on executory devise taking effect, paying off incumbrance on estate is entitled to repayment if so disseised. Drinkwater v. Combe, 2 Sim. & S. 340 ; 3 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 178 ; 25 R. R. 210.

Charges paid off by the tenant for life primâ facie kept alive, and not merged in the inheritance. Faulkner v. Daniel, 3 Hare, 217 ; 10 L. J., Ch. 33. S. P., Reddington v. Reddington, 1 Ball & B. 131.

The owner of an estate voluntarily charged it with his own simple contract debt, and by the same deed, settled the estate, subject thereto, on himself for life, with remainder to his daughter. He afterwards paid off the debt, but declared that the charge should continue for the benefit of his personal estate. After his death :—Held, that the charge still subsisted, and must be raised and paid. Jameson v. Stein, 21 Beav. 5 ; 25 L. J., Ch. 41.

If a tenant for life pays off a charge on the inheritance, he is primâ facie entitled to that charge for his own benefit ; but he may, if he think proper, exonerate the estate. A tenant for life paying off a charge upon the estate, and in the same transaction merging the security by taking an assignment connecting it with the legal estate of inheritance, primâ facie puts an end to the charge ; but something is required to manifest an intention to exonerate the inheritance. A simple payment of the charge, without more, is sufficient to establish the right of the tenant for life to have the charge raised out of the estate. He has no obligation or duty to make a declaration, or to do any act demonstrating his intention ; the burden of proof is upon those who allege that in paying off the charge he intended to exonerate the estate. Burrell v. Egremont (Earl), 7 Beav. 205 ; 13 L. J., Ch. 309 ; 8 Jur. 587.

Where the testator devised real estate to his wife for life, remainder to his children by a former marriage, and he also gave specific legacies to his wife, and appointed her, with two others, executors, the personal estate being insufficient to pay off the mortgage, which was called in, the specific legacies were, with her consent, sold and applied to redeem the estate, and the mortgage term assigned to attend the inheritance :—Held, that in the absence of fraud or ignorance of facts, the payment was primâ facie a gift for the benefit of the remainderman, and that the wife could not claim a lien on the estate. Toplis v. Von der Heyde, 4 Y. & C. 173 ; 9 L. J., Ex. Eq. 27.

T. was beneficially entitled for his life to renewable leaseholds for three lives held on trust to renew and subject to certain charges. All the cestuis que vie having died, and T.'s right to renew being disputed by the reversioner, the trustee of the leaseholds, with the consent of the persons entitled to the charges, in order to facilitate the obtaining of a renewal, transferred the legal estate to T. by a deed which recited (though contrary to the fact) that the charges had been paid by T. Thereupon T. obtained a renewal (without prejudice to the question in dispute), and to avoid litigation, purchased the reversion in fee. He subsequently paid off the charges and mortgaged the premises in fee. By his will, reciting that the charges were subsisting, he devised his interest in the premises to T. T. subject to the charges :—Held, that T. T. took the fee subject to the charges. Trumper v. Trumper, 42 L. J., Ch. 641 ; L. R. 8 Ch. 870 ; 29 L. T. 86 ; 21 W. R. 692.

By a settlement dated in 1821, copyhold lands, which had been conditionally surrendered for securing certain mortgages, were settled by the testator, subject to the mortgages, he at the same time convenanting to pay off the same, and there was a proviso, that as between the testator, his heirs, executors and administrators, and the persons entitled under the settlement, the lands were to be the primary fund for payment of the same mortgage debts. In 1826, the testator paid off the debts out of his own moneys, and satisfaction was duly entered on the court rolls of the conditional surrender. In 1831, the lands were, under a power in the first settlement resettled by the testator and his wife, but no notice was taken of the fact of repayment of the mortgages. By his will the testator directed all his debts, &c., to be paid out of the personalty only :—Held, that the amount of the mortgage debts was to be considered as kept on foot as part of the testator's personal estate. Pears v. Weightman, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 586.

By indenture of 7th September, 1812, certain lands were subject to certain outstanding incumbrances, settled upon A. for life, with remainder to his first and other sons in tail. In 1816, A. granted annuities to B. charged upon his life estate. In 1818, A. paid off some of the prior incumbrances, and had them assigned to a trustee for his own benefit ; and in 1820, A. and his trustee joined in assigning to C. for valuable consideration, the incumbrances so paid off :—Held, that the arrears of the interest of the charges so paid off in 1818 and assigned in 1822, were incumbrances on the life estate prior to the annuitant, and that as against the annuitant, the interest payable on the said charges out of the life estate had not been merged by the dealings of the owner of the life estate therewith. Harman v. Forster, 1 Dr. & Wal. 637.

Other Partial Interests.]—Feme sole makes a mortgage, and afterwards marries ; the mortgage is then transferred, and the husband joins in the transfer, and covenants to pay the money. During the coverture, the husband, by gradual payments out of his own property, reduces the money due upon the mortgage. By his will he makes a disposition of the mortgaged premises, and dies in the lifetime of his wife. Upon a bill by the wife, who claimed to be entitled by survivorship, to redeem the mortgage, the redemption was decreed upon the terms that the husband's estate should stand in the place of the mortgagee, for the sums paid by him out of his own property in reduction of the mortgage debt. Pitt v. Pitt, Turn. & R. 180 ; 24 R. R. 15.

In all cases where money is paid off by individuals, not having an absolute permanent interest in the premises, the court looks at the intention. Id.

Creditors.]—A., seised of the lands of G., subject to a charge for B., gave a judgment to secure a further charge for B. By a post-nuptial instrument, A. settled G., subject to the charge for B., but misstating its amount, upon himself for life, remainder to his eldest son for life, remainder over in strict settlement. On the marriage of A.'s eldest son the post-nuptial settlement was adopted. B.'s judgment was paid out of A.'s life estate:—Held, that the judgment creditors of A. after the settlement had no equity to raise for their benefit, out of the inheritance, the amount paid out of A.'s life estate on foot of B's. judgment. Stock v. Aylward, 8 Ir. Ch. R. 429—L. C.

Lunatic.]—Where a charge on a lunatic's estate is paid off out of her personal property by order of the court, the securities are to be assigned without prejudice to the conflicting claims of the real and personal representatives of the lunatic to the benefits of the payment. Digby (Earl), Ex parte, Norfolk (Countess), In re, 1 Jac. & Walk. 640.

By Infant.]—At law and equity, where there is a confusion of rights, there is an immediate merger; that is prevented in equity by the intention, either express or implied, as in the case of an infant entitled to an estate, and also to a charge upon it, the rights remain distinct because more beneficial. Compton (Lord) v. Oxenden, 2 Ves. J. 263; 4 Bro. C. C. 397.

Debt charged upon an estate paid out of the estate of the first-taker, an infant; the infant's estate reimbursed by a charge, though the security had been cancelled. Ware v. Polhill, 11 Ves. 283; 8 R. R. 144.

Where debts of a testator had been paid out of the income of the estate of an infant in tail under his will, by the direction of the court, after decree in an administration suit, and the tenant in tail subsequently died an infant, and his administrators, more than six years after taking out administration to him, filed a bill to revive the administration suit, for the purpose of having such payments recouped out of the corpus of the estate, and for payment of the costs of the administration suit:—Held, first, that the payment on behalf of the infant having been made by the court, a merger of the charge could not be presumed; and, secondly, that the pendency of the suit prevented such claim being barred by lapse of time. Alsop v. Bell, 24 Beav. 451. And see Nunn's Estate, In re, 23 L. R., Ir. 286—C. A., col. 1029, supra.

As Next of Kin.]—Where a person becomes entitled to a sum of money charged upon an estate, and secured by a term of years, being entitled to the fee-simple of the estate, a court of equity extinguishes the equitable lien, except in the case of creditors or of infancy. Donisthorpe v. Porter, 2 Eden, 162; Ambl. 600.

By Heir-apparent.]—A son paid off a mortgage upon an estate belonging to his father, the son being at the time expectant devisee of the absolute interest in the estate, though afterwards, by an alteration in the father's will, he became only tenant for life of the estate:—Held, that from the dealings between the parties an agreement was to be inferred that the son paid off the mortgage debt in settlement of pecuniary transactions between himself and his father, and that consequently the presumption that the son paid it off for his own benefit was rebutted, and that he was not entitled to any lien upon the estate for what he so paid off. Crow v. Pettingell, 20 L. T. 342; 17 W. R. 562—L.JJ. Reversing 38 L. J., Ch. 186.

By Bequest.]—A. devises certain premises (subject to a mortgage of 3,500*l.*) to his three daughters, to be divided equally; one dies; mortgagee bequeaths to the two survivors all the money due on the mortgage and the interest, so that it do not altogether exceed 4,000*l.*, and if it do not amount to 4,000*l.*, then to be made up; the other daughter dies, leaving all her real and personal estate to the third:—Held, that the charge is merged in the inheritance. Price v. Gibson, 2 Eden, 115.

Declaration of Trust.]—In 1824 A. purchased an estate, and he mortgaged it to raise part of the purchase-money. In 1840 the mortgage was paid off and transferred to B., who afterwards executed a declaration of trust in favour of A. A. died in 1848:—Held, that the charge had merged. Pitt v. Pitt, 22 Beav. 294; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1010.

Other Matters.]—Where an act of parliament enabled a railway company to purchase lands of corporations, tenants for life, &c., and directed that the purchase-money should be applied in the redemption of the land tax upon other parts of the property unsold:—Held, that a tenant for life, who had redeemed the land tax before the passing of the act, might reimburse himself out of the proceeds of the lands purchased of him by the company. The costs of an application to the court, under such an act of parliament, to have the purchase-money applied in the redemption of the land tax, will be allowed out of the purchase-money, although the act only makes an express provision for such costs in cases where the money is to be laid out in the purchase of lands, to be settled to the like uses. Northwick, Ex parte. London and Birmingham Ry., In re, 1 Y. & C. 166.

7. Of Terms.

a. In General.

Of Term in Fee.]—A lease was granted in 1759 for ninety-nine years, if certain parties should so long live; the lessees in 1818 demised the premises to P. for sixty-two years, from the 25th of March, 1821, if their interest should so long continue, subject to a rent of 42*l.*, and various covenants, with a proviso for re-entry in case of default. P. had already the reversion in fee, subject to a mortgage granted by him before the last-mentioned demise. By lease and release, executed in 1820, to which the mortgagee was a party, P., in consideration of a sum of money (part of which went to discharge the mortgage) conveyed the premises in fee to a purchaser, to whom the mortgagee also assigned his term; and it was stipulated that the purchaser should retain 300*l.* of the purchase-money upon trust, that if P. should pay the 42*l.* rent, and perform the covenants contained in the lease of 1818, the purchaser should pay over to him 300*l.* at the expiration of the term, or extinguishment of the lease of 1759, and interest in the meantime:—Held, that the deed of 1818 was an assignment of all the interest of the then lessees to P., and that by the conveyance of 1820, that interest, as well as the reversion in fee, passed to the purchaser, and the mortgage being at the same time put an end to, the term became merged in the inheritance, and consequently, that as soon as the terms became vested in the purchaser, P. was discharged from the rents and covenants and entitled to the 300*l.* Thorn v. Woolcombe, 3 B. & Ad. 586.

The owner of a leasehold for years mortgaged it, and afterwards, in 1820, confessed judgments. He, in 1824, acquired a freehold estate in the same lands. In a suit pending after the statute 3 & 4 Vict. c. 105 :—Held, that the freehold being acquired prior to the act, the judgment creditor had no equity to prevent the term, though an equity of redemption, being merged as against him. Smith v. Chichester, 12 Ir. Eq. R. 519—L. C.

Valid lease of charity property which had merged in the fee by an invalid absolute conveyance to the lessee, sustained on setting aside the latter on an information by the attorney-general. Att.-Gen. v. Kerr, 2 Beav. 420 ; 9 L. J., Ch. 190 ; 4 Jur. 406.

A man shall not be made occupant against his will so as to drown a previous estate which he had in the lands. Lewis Bowles's Case (11 Rep. 79) and Williams v. Williams (15 Ves. 419) considered and explained. Creagh v. Blood, 3 Jo. & Lat. 133 ; 8 Ir. Eq. R. 688.

A., lessee for the life of X., reversion to C. in fee, B. demises the lands to C. and his heirs for the life of X., C. dies leaving A. his heir-at-law. The estate which A. has in possession shall not merge in the estate in reversion which he derives from C., both estates being equal in quantity. Ib.

Trust Terms.]—A. and B. are co-heiresses of estate ; A. being married, her moiety is settled on husband, C., for life, remainder to A. for life, remainder to B. for life, remainder to trustees for 1,000 years, remainder to right heirs of survivor of B. and C. The trusts of term were to raise 1,000*l.* to be paid to such relations of A. as the survivor of B. and C. should appoint, and in default of appointment to next heir or co-heirs of B. A. and husband died in life of B., and B., by will, devised the whole estate to trustees, for certain purposes, but made no appointment of the 1,000*l.* It was decreed that heirs-at-law of B. were entitled to have the 1,000*l.* raised, and that the term of 1,000 years, created by the settlement, was merged in the inheritance of the moiety to which B. became entitled. Morris v. Cantle, 6 Bro. P. C. 418—H. L. (E.)

On marriage, lands are settled on A. for life, remainder to the first, &c., sons of the marriage in tail male, remainder to trustees for 500 years, to raise 5,000*l.* portions for daughter, payable at eighteen or marriage ; remainder to A. in fee. After the marriage A. settles other lands, and a term is created for raising the like sum of 5,000*l.* for daughters on failure of issue male, payable at sixteen or marriage ; A. dies, leaving a daughter his heir-at-law, who attains eighteen, and dies unmarried. The trust of the term is not merged in the fee, but the portion shall go to the daughter's executors, and is disposable by her will, but there shall be but one 5,000*l.* raised. Thomas v. Kemeys, 2 Vern. 348 ; Freem. Ch. 207 ; 1 Eq. Cas. Ab. 269.

A daughter's portion secured by a trust term, not extinguished by a devise of the lands to the daughter in tail. Laurence v. Blatchford, 2 Vern. 457.

By a marriage settlement lands are limited to the husband and wife, with remainder to their first, &c., sons, and then a term for years to secure portions for daughters. The husband dies, leaving only a daughter, upon whom the inheritance descends. The daughter dies an infant, and indebted, and disposes of her portion by her will. Equity relieves against the merger of the portion. Powell v. Morgan, 2 Vern. 90 ; 1 Eq. Cas. Ab. 269.

A testator devised freehold estates to trustees upon trust on B.'s coming of age, to raise 2,000*l.* to be then paid to him ; and subject to this and other charges in trust for A. for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail ; and in default of such issue, to B. for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail. A. died without issue before B. had attained twenty-one years :—Held, that the charge of 2,000*l.* had not merged, and that B. was entitled to have it raised. In such cases there is no merger where the rights to the land and to the money are not equal, or where the portion is given to the party by name. Sterne v. Wolfe, Wall. Lyn. 167.

Of Interesse termini in Freehold Reversion.]—A. was lessee of premises for a term of twenty-one years, which would expire at Michaelmas, 1809. In December, 1799, A. took a further lease of the same premises for sixty years, to commence from Michaelmas, 1809. The lessor died in December, 1800, and devised the premises in question to A., the lessee, for his life. By lease and release A., in 1806, conveyed his life estate to B. :—Held, that A.'s interest in the lease of 1799, which was to commence in 1809, was not merged in his estate for life Doe d. Rawlings v. Walker, 5 B. & C. 111 ; 7 D. & R. 487 ; 4 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 93 ; 29 R. R. 184.

Of Term in a Term.]—Where there is mortgage term of 1,000 years, and mortgagee takes assignment of another term of 500 years of the same premises :—Held, the term of 1,000 years is merged in the reversionary term of 500 years. Stephens v. Bridges, 6 Madd. 66 ; 22 R. R. 242.

The bankrupt, being the lessee under a lease for forty-six years, subject to a former lease for twenty years, deposits it by way of equitable mortgage. He afterwards purchases the remainder of the term granted by the first lease, and deposits that lease also with the same party for securing a further sum :—Held, that the first lease was not, under these circumstances, merged in the second, and that the depositaries were good equitable mortgagees under both deposits. Whitbread, Ex parte, Dix, In re, 2 Mont. D. & D. 415.

A., administrator, entitled for a term of years in land as part of the estate of his intestate, demised the land for a shorter term, which was shortly afterwards assigned to the administrator in his own right, and under whom the plaintiffs claimed :—Held, that there was in equity no merger, and that the plaintiffs who would be entitled to the land if the term was in existence, could maintain an action to establish their title to the land for the term, and for mesne profits. Chambers v. Kingham, 48 L. J., Ch. 169 ; 10 Ch. D. 743 ; 39 L. T. 472 ; 27 W. R. 289.

—— Parties.]—A. and B. were owners in fee as tenants in common of freehold property. On the death of B., a building lease of a portion of the freehold property was granted by A. and the devisees of B. to a person who afterwards assigned all his interest under that lease to A. alone. On the death of A., his devisees and the devisees of B., granted a building lease of another portion of the freehold property to a person who assigned his interest under the lease to A.'s trustees alone. The legal estate in all the property was outstanding in a mortgagee, who, subsequently to the above transactions, reconveyed the mortgaged premises to the trustees of A. and B. :—Held, that there was no merger of the leasehold interests in the reversion in fee of A., and that the leases were consequently still existing. Brandon v. Brandon, 31 L. J., Ch. 47 ; 5 L. T. 339 ; 9 W. R. 825.

An owner in fee bought up an existing building lease of the property, and had it assigned to a trustee, in trust for him, "his executors, administrators and assigns" :—Held, that the presumption was that the lease had not, in equity, merged in the inheritance, but that it passed as part of his personal estate :—Held, also, that the burden of proof was on those who asserted the contrary. Gunter v. Gunter, 23 Beav. 571 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1013 ; 5 W. R. 485.

A mortgage was made for a term of years, and subsequently the reversion was conveyed to a trustee for sale to secure a further advance and the prior advances :—Held, that the terms were not merged, though portions had been sold by the trustee with the concurrence of the mortgagee. Locking v. Parker, 42 L. J., Ch. 257 ; L. R. 8 Ch. 30 ; 27 L. T. 635 ; 21 W. R. 113.

Of Legal Term in Equitable Reversion.]—Where a term would merge by its union with the inheritance in the same person, if he has in the one the legal, in the other the equitable, estate, the term will attend the inheritance. Therefore, where tenant for years subsequently to his will contracted to purchase the inheritance, and died before conveyance, the residuary legatees have no claim under the term against the heir. Capel v. Girdler, 9 Ves. 509 ; 7 R. R. 289.

A testator, being possessed of the residue of a term of ninety-nine years, purchased the freehold reversion, and, by a deed reciting that he was desirous that the term should not merge, the reversion in fee was conveyed to a trustee, subject to the term, in trust for the testator, his heirs, or assigns, and to be conveyed and disposed of as he or they should direct :—Held, that the term was a term in gross, and passed by the will as personal estate. Belaney v. Belaney, 36 L. J., Ch. 265 ; L. R. 2 Ch. 138 ; 16 L. T. 269 ; 15 W. R. 369.

Extinction of Covenant.]—If a tenant for a term of years leased for a less term, and assigned his reversion, and the assignee took a conveyance of the fee, by which his former reversionary interest was merged, the covenants incident to that reversionary interest were thereby extinguished. Webb v. Russell, 3 Term Rep. 393 ; 1 R. R. 725.

b. Attendant and Satisfied Terms.

Since 8 & 9 Vict. c. 112.]—In 1829, A. died seised in fee of lands, of which his eldest son, B., was tenant. B., supposing him to have died intestate, entered on the lands claiming them as heir-at-law ; and in 1830, mortgaged them in fee, and levied a fine to confirm the mortgage ; and at the same time, an outstanding term of 500 years was, by his direction, assigned to a trustee for the mortgagee. In 1835, B. sold the estate to the defendant, who paid off the mortgage. The legal estate in the fee and the equity of redemption were conveyed to the defendant, and the term was assigned to a trustee for him to attend the inheritance. In 1845, it was discovered that A. had executed a will, whereby he devised the lands in fee to his second son, who thereupon brought ejectment to recover the estate from the defendant, and laid a demise in the name of the trustee to whom the term was assigned in 1835 :—Held, that, by the operation of 8 & 9 Vict. c. 112, the term had absolutely determined ; and the plaintiff could not recover upon the demise laid in the name of the trustee. Doe d. Cadwalader v. Price, 16 M. & W. 603 ; 16 L. J., Ex. 159 ; 11 Jur. 131.

In 1838, H. mortgaged premises for 1,000 years to D., and in 1839 conveyed the fee, subject to the mortgage term to her daughter, the wife of the defendant ; this conveyance was unknown to the parties to the subsequent deeds. In 1842, H. mortgaged the premises in fee to M., and in October, 1844, conveyed the equity of redemption to C. In October, 1844, M. assigned the mortgage of the fee to R. T., and the representatives of D. assigned the term of 1,000 to a trustee, to secure the money to, and afterwards to be reconveyed as C. should direct. In September, 1847, part of the premises being required for a railway company, C. received the purchase-money from the company, and therewith paid off the mortgagees :—Held, that the term had not become attendant upon the inheritance by construction of law, so as to be determined by 8 & 9 Vict. c. 112, s. 2, and therefore C. was entitled to recover upon the demise of the trustees. Doe d. Clay v. Jones, 13 Q. B. 774 ; 18 L. J., Q. B. 260 ; 13 Jur. 824.

A term outstanding in a trustee for a mortgagor, and to attend, is not so merged by 8 & 9 Vict. c. 112, as to prevent the mortgagor assigning it to a trustee as a security for the mortgage debt. Shaw v. Johnson, 1 Dr. & Sm. 124 ; 30 L. J., Ch. 646 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1005 ; 4 L. T. 461 ; 9 W. R. 629.

A term attendant on the inheritance cannot be disannexed, except by one who has power to create a term, or deal with the inheritance, and therefore where such a term was, prior to the 31st December, 1845, assigned at the instance of a tenant for life to secure repayment of money advanced upon a pretended mortgage of the fee, and afterwards for the benefit of the tenant for life, and persons to whom he affected to grant the fee, the term continued to attend the inheritance of the rightful owners, and was either extinguished by 8 & 9 Vict. c. 112, s. 1, or at any rate could not be set up against them. Plant v. Taylor, 7 H. & N. 211 ; 31 L. J., Ex. 289 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 140 ; 5 L. T. 318.

The mortgagees of a term, their mortgage debt being unpaid, and the mortgagor insolvent, took a conveyance from the assignees in bankruptcy of the reversion in fee, releasing the assignees from all claims in respect of their debt. The widow of the mortgagor was joined as a party to this deed, for the purpose of releasing her dower, but she refused to execute it, and filed a bill to have her right to dower declared :—Held, that as she had not executed the deed, the debt was not gone, and the term not satisfied. Anderson v. Pignett, 42 L. J., Ch. 310 ; L. R. 8 Ch. 180 ; 27 L. T. 740 ; 21 W. R. 150.

A term does not become satisfied within 8 & 9 Vict. c. 112, unless the beneficial interest in the whole charge secured by the term and in the whole estate are united, and merged in one person. Ib.

A term was created in 1813, to secure repayof a loan, which was repaid in 1837. In 1840 the land was demised for lives by the heir-at-law of the creator of the term. In 1843 the term was re-assigned by the satisfied creditor to a new incumbrancer, by direction of the heir-at-law of the creator of the term :—Held, that the term was not satisfied under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 112, so as to enure to the benefit of the lessee for lives. Owen v. Owen, 3 H. & C. 88 ; 33 L. J., Ex. 237 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 884 ; 11 L. T. 137.

Before 8 & 9 Vict. c. 112.]—Where term would merge by its union with the inheritance in the same person, if he has in the one the legal, and in the other the equitable estate, the term will attend the inheritance. Capel v. Girdler, 9 Ves. 509 ; 7 R. R. 289. S. P., Kelly v. Power, 2 Ball & B. 253 ; Tiffin v. Tiffin, 1 Vern. 1 ; 2 Ch. Cas. 49, 55 ; Douse v. Percival, 1 Vern. 104 ; Best v. Stamford, 2 Vern. 520 ; Prec. Ch. 252 ; 1 Salk. 154 ; Freem. Ch. 288.

Purchase of the fee-simple in the name of the purchaser, and of terms in the name of a trustee, with an intervening reversion of eleven days, and a reservation of rent, &c., to the vendors : the terms are terms in gross, not attendant upon the inheritance. Scott v. Fenhoullet, 1 Bro. C. C. 69.

Where a term was created, but no trusts of it declared, but the estate devised to tenants for life with remainders over, the court decided that there was no resulting trust as to the term, but that it attended the inheritance. Sidney v. Miller, or Shelley, G. Coop. 206 ; 19 Ves. 352 ; 14 R. R. 247.

Wherever land, or any interest in land, which would descend to the heir-at-law is devised for purposes which the law will not permit to take effect, the heir shall have the benefit of the interest so devised as undisposed of. Tregonwell v. Sydenham, 3 Dow. 194 ; 15 R. R. 40—H. L. (E.)

Heir held entitled to a term, by way of resulting trust, the trusts of which were to raise moneys and apply them for a purpose void as infringing the rule against perpetuities. Ib.

A., by will, gives lands to trustees for terms, remainder to T. Lord Foley and E. Foley for life. The trusts of the terms were for payment of scheduled debts, and to make an allowance to T. Lord Foley and E. Foley. The debts being stated to be paid, a trust results to the tenants for life. A demurrer by the trustees to a bill by creditors for an account, as having no interest, therefore overruled. Davidson v. Foley, 2 Bro. C. C. 203.

An equity of redemption in a term might be attendant on the inheritance. Scott v. Knox, Longf. & T. 381 ; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 397.

Assignment of an interesse termini, on the circumstances of the case, considered as an assignment to attend the inheritance. Saltern v. Melhuish, Ambl. 249.

Mortgagee may protect himself against a claim of dower by taking an assignment of an old mortgage term, prior to the right of dower. Wynn v. Williams, 5 Ves. 130.

A purchaser, to avail himself of an outstanding term against dower, must have procured an assignment, or at least a declaration of trust ; or have got possession of the deed creating the term. Maundrell v. Maundrell, 10 Ves. 246 ; 7 R. R. 393.

Two terms were created in the same manner, one of 500 years, in 1712, the other of 600 years, in 1768. In 1791 the latter was assigned to A., to secure a mortgage debt ; and, by a deed of even date, the former was assigned to B., as a trustee for A. A. died, having appointed B., C. and D. his executors. In 1801, by a deed endorsed on the first assignment of 1791, and "made between B., C. and D., executors of A., of the one part, and E. of the other part," B., C. and D. assigned the premises, "and all the estate, right, title, and interest" to E. for the residue of the term of 600 years, subject to the equity of redemption :—Held, that the term of 1712, being held by B. in what must be deemed his own right, did not pass by force of the words "and all the estate, right, title, and interest," and was not merged. Rooper v. Harrison, 2 K. & J. 86.

Real estates were devised to a trustee upon trust, on a given event, to convey them to certain parties, upon one of them electing which he would take. A party, in whom, as satisfied mortgagee at the date of the will and death of the testator, a satisfied mortgage term in one of the estates was, was held bound to execute a deed of surrender of the term to the trustee, and the cestuis que trustent were held not to be necessary parties thereto. Poole v. Pass, 1 Beav. 600 ; 8 L. J., Ch. 325.

—— Trustee.]—A mere trustee of an outstanding term cannot avail himself of it for the purpose of establishing a priority. Shaw v. Neale, 6 H. L. Cas. 581 ; 27 L. J., Ch. 444 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 695 ; 6 W. R. 635.

An attendant term having been vested in the wife of the owner of the inheritance, as the administratrix of the trustee, and her husband becoming bankrupt, his assignees agree to sell the estate, and file a bill for specific performance of the agreement, pending which suit the husband dies :—Held, that the widow was not entitled to dower ; that she was to assign the terms of the purchaser ; and that he was bound to accept the title. Mole v. Smith, Jac. 498.

A. AUTHORITIES.

1. LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL, FORMERLY METROPOLITAN BOARD OF WORKS.

Appeal to, from District Board.]—The services of a clerk of the works to paving commissioners were discontinued, and he ceased to act as their clerk. The powers of the commissioners having been determined in 1856 by 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, he applied for compensation for the loss of his office to the district board of works, who rejected his application, on the ground that he was not an officer of the commissioners at the time of the act coming into force. He appealed to the metropolitan board of works, who made an order awarding compensation for the loss of the emoluments, as such officer, arising from the passing of the act :—Held, that the question whether he was an officer or not was necessarily within the jurisdiction of the metropolitan board of works as a court of appeal. Reg. v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 8 El. & Bl. 529 ; 27 L. J., Q. B. 5 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 25 ; 6 W. R. 57.

Music and Dancing Licence—Appearance by Member in Opposition to Application — Invalidity of Proceedings.]—The county council in determining applications for music and dancing licences are acting judicially, and are bound by the same principles as are binding on justices in determining questions which come before them for judicial decision. — The London county council delegated to a committee of their body the hearing of applications for music and dancing licences. The committee by a majority recommended that a licence which had been applied for should not be granted. The applicant thereupon applied to the county council for a licence. At the hearing before the county council certain members of that body, who were also members of the committee and had voted in the majority against granting a licence at the hearing before the committee, instructed counsel to represent them before the county council and oppose the application for a licence. The councillors so instructing counsel were present at the hearing, but did not vote. The council by a majority refused the application for a licence. Held :—that the presence at the hearing of those members of the county council who had instructed counsel to oppose the application vitiated the proceedings, and a rule for a mandamus to hear and determine the application according to law was accordingly made absolute. Reg. v. London County Council, Akkersdyk, Ex parte, 61 L. J., M. C. 75 ; [1892] 1 Q. B. 190 ; 66 L. T. 168 ; 40 W. R. 285 ; 56 J. P. 8.

—— Association of Member with Objectors—Bias — Disqualification.] — A member of the London county council sat and voted at the hearing of an application for a music and dancing licence, which was refused. Several weeks previously he had attended a meeting of persons who afterwards served notices upon the council of their intention to oppose the application. At this meeting the witnesses it was proposed to call at the hearing were present and their evidence was discussed. He took no part in this discussion, but on being requested to do so explained the procedure before the licensing committee, and also said that, assuming the facts to be as stated, the matter should be placed before the committee, but he declined to give any opinion as to what importance the committee or council would attach to them. He took no further part in the meeting and the terms of the notices of opposition were not settled there, and he did not at any time take part in assisting to settle them or in advising thereon :—Held, that the facts did not furnish sufficient grounds for inferring such bias in favour of the promoters as to disqualify the member from voting on the application and thereby to invalidate the council's decision. Per Wright, J. : That the strict rule as to interest, other than pecuniary, is not applicable without qualification to bodies really exercising administrative functions, even though these involve something of a judicial character. Reg. v. London County Council, Edwardes, Ex parte, 15 R. 66 ; 71 L. T. 638.

—— Meeting for granting—Slander—Absolute Privilege—Notice of Action.]—At a meeting of the London county council held for the purpose of hearing applications for music and dancing licences, upon the plaintiffs applying for a renewal of such a licence for a place of entertainment belonging to them, the defendant, a member of the council, stated that he had been to the place in question, and had witnessed a most indecent performance there, and gave that as his reason for voting against the renewal. In an action of slander brought by the plaintiffs in respect of such statement, the jury found a verdict for the plaintiffs :—Held, that the defendant was not entitled to absolute immunity from liability for the words spoken, the duties of the county council in dealing with music and dancing licences being administrative and not judicial :—Held, also, that the defendant was not entitled to notice of action under 11 & 12 Vict. c 44, ss. 8 and 9, words spoken not being "anything done" within the meaning of those sections. Royal Aquarium v. Parkinson, 61 L. J., Q. B. 409 ; [1892] 1 Q. B. 431 ; 66 L. T. 513 ; 40 W. R. 450 ; 56 J. P. 404—C. A.

Order for Transfer of Part of Parish—Power to Amend "Local and Personal Act."]—The statute 9 Anne, c. 22, created a tax upon coals coming into the port of London, and provided for the appointment of commissioners for the purpose of building fifty new churches in and about London and finishing Westminster Abbey and Greenwich Hospital. By 10 Anne, c. 11, the commissioners were empowered to purchase land for cemeteries to be used in connection with the new parish churches ; and by s. 4 it was provided that, wherever they should purchase for the cemetery of a new parish a piece of ground outside the bounds of the parish the ground so purchased should henceforth be deemed to be part of the parish :—Held, that whether the above statutes, regard being had to the whole scope of them, were "general" acts, or "local and personal" acts, s. 4 of the latter statute was a "local and personal" enactment within s. 59, sub-s. 6, of the Local Government Act, 1888, and that therefore a county council could under s. 57 amend s. 4 of 10 Anne, c. 11, by ordering the retransfer of a cemetery to the parish of which it originally formed a part. Reg. v. London County Council, 63 L. J., Q. B. 4 ; [1893] 2 Q. B. 454 ; 4 R. 531 ; 69 L. T. 580 ; 42 W. R. 1 ; 58 J. P. 21—C. A.

Prohibition to County Council.]—Whether prohibition lies to a county council to prevent them from making such an order, quære. Ib.

Consent how, given.]—Where a new street was allowed by the metropolitan board of works to be made of twenty feet in width, it was held that the consent did not require to be under the seal of the board. Paddington Vestry v. Bramwell, 44 J. P. 815.

Costs of Returning Officer—Borough transferred from Kent to London.]—The London county council is the proper authority to certify under 6 Vict. c. 18, s. 55, for the costs of the returning officer who prepares the registry of parliamentary voters for the borough of Deptford (transferred by s. 40 of the Local Government Act, 1888, to London), notwithstanding s. 92 of the latter act, which retains it in the county of Kent for county parliamentary purposes. "Occupation voters," in sub-s. 2 of s. 92, means county occupation voters, and not those for a parliamentary borough. Weller v. Collins, 54 J. P. 441.

2. District Boards of Works.

Powers—Rates.]—The effect of the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, is to substitute districts for the parishes of which they are composed, for all purposes of management, taxation, and expenditure ; not for purposes of management only. The rates leviable in the component parishes, under the order of a district board, are raised for the benefit of the whole district, though apportioned between the parishes. Primâ facie, the rates ought be apportioned between the parishes according to their respective ratable value, and not according to the outlay in them respectively ; subject to allowances, at the discretion of the board, in cases falling within s. 159. An order of a district board on a parish, distinguishing between the sums required for sewerage and for other expenses, is good under s. 158, and is final, if made by the board after an impartial exercise of the discretion given to it by s. 159 ; the decision of the board, so arrived at, as to the amount proper to be required from a parish, being, even if erroneous, conclusive. St. Botolph, Aldgate, v. Whitechapel Board of Works, 3 El. & El. 89 ; 29 L. J., M. C. 228 ; 6 Jur. (N. S.) 1073 ; 2 L. T. 504 ; 8 W. R. 691.

—— "Tower, District of."]—At the time of the passing of the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, there was an ancient parish called the precinct of the Old Tower Without, adjacent to the Tower of London, and between that parish and certain parishes in the city of London, an extra-parochial place called Great Tower Hill, in the county of Middlesex, and partly in the city of London. Great Tower Hill, for paving and lighting purposes, was vested in trustees under a local act, who had power to make rates. By 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 90, all the powers of trustees under local acts in relation to paving, lighting, &c., any parish in schedule B. are to cease to be so vested, and to become vested in the board of works for the district. In schedule B., part 1, the Whitechapel district of works is to include "Tower, district of." There was no known district of that name :—Held, that it was intended to include within the description "Tower, district of," as well the area of Great Tower Hill as the parish of the precinct of the Old Tower Without; and that since the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, the power of trustees under the local act had ceased. Reg. v. Great Tower Hill (Trustees), 14 L. T. 792.

Compensation to "Officer" for Loss of Office.]—By s. 11 of the Metropolis Management (Plumstead and Hackney) Act, 1893, every officer in the service of the district boards therein mentioned who comes within the scope of the Superannuation (Metropolis) Act, 1866, and who has suffered pecuniary loss by abolition of office or by diminution or loss of salary, fees, or emoluments in consequence of the act of 1893, shall be entitled to pecuniary compensation:—Held, that the section must be construed to mean that compensation shall be paid to any of the servants of the district boards who have suffered loss in consequence of the act. Legg v. Stoke Newington Vestry, 59 J. P. 696.

Rating—Occupation.]—By s. 6 of the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855 (as amended by s. 8 of the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1856), no person shall be capable of acting or being elected as a vestryman for any parish unless he occupies premises in the parish of a ratable value of not less than 40*l*. The defendant was the tenant of premises which appeared in the rate-book as of the ratable value of 125*l*. He sub-let a portion of such premises and occupied the remainder. The portion which he retained in his own occupation was found by the jury to be of a ratable value of not less than 40*l*., but was not separately assessed in the rate-book. The defendant occupied no other premises in the parish. In an action to recover penalties from the defendant for acting as a vestryman without being duly qualified:—Held, that the defendant was qualified by rating and occupation to act as a vestryman. Gordon v. Williamson, 61 L. J., Q. B. 820; [1892] 2 Q. B. 459; 67 L. T. 214; 40 W. R. 692; 57 J. P. 166—C. A.

By 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120 (Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855), s. 6, "the vestry elected under this act in any parish shall consist of persons rated or assessed to the relief of the poor upon a rental of not less than 40*l*. per annum; and no person shall be capable of acting or being elected as one of such vestry for any parish, unless he be the occupier of a house, lands, tenements, or hereditaments in such parish, and be rated or assessed as aforesaid upon such rental as aforesaid within such parish":—Held, that to be qualified as a vestryman under the act, a person must be the occupier of real property in the parish, and be himself rated or assessed in respect of such occupation to the required amount. Mogg v. Clark, 55 L. J., Q. B. 69; 16 Q. B. D. 79; 53 L. T. 890; 34 W. R. 66; 50 J. P. 342—C. A.

By the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, s. 6, "the vestry elected under this act in any parish shall consist of persons rated or assessed to the relief of the poor upon a rental of not less than 40*l*. per annum; and no person shall be capable of acting or being elected as one of such vestry for any parish, unless he be the occupier of a house, lands, tenements, or hereditaments in such parish, and be rated or assessed as aforesaid upon such rental as aforesaid within such parish":—Held, that a person is not qualified under this section unless he occupies the premises in respect of which he is rated. Mogg v. Clark (15 Q. B. D. 82) followed. Reg. v. Soutter, 60 L. J., Q. B. 71; [1891] 1 Q. B. 57; 64 L. T. 40; 39 W. R. 65; 55 J. P. 229—C. A.

—— Joint Occupation.]—A son was joint occupier with his father and brother of hereditaments in a metropolitan parish of sufficient value to entitle him to be elected vestryman; a rate was made in April, 1876, upon the father only; in May the son was elected vestryman; an objection was raised to his return, but the inspectors of votes declared him to be duly qualified and elected; in June the son sat and voted as vestryman; in July he required the demand-note of the rate made in April to be altered so as to extend to himself as well as to his father, and in October he jointly with his father paid the rate:—Held, that the son in May was neither rated nor assessed within the meaning of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), s. 6, and was not qualified for election as vestryman; that the decision of the inspectors of votes as to his election was not conclusive; that by sitting and voting as vestryman in June he had incurred the penalty imposed by s. 54 for acting without qualification; and that his liability to the penalty was not taken away, upon the subsequent payment of the rate, by the Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1856, s. 4. Goodhew v. Williams, 47 L. J., C. P. 313; 3 C. P. D. 382; 37 L. T. 454; 26 W. R. 107—C. A.

—— Occupation not Personal.]—Where a person is rated as the occupier of premises of the requisite value for qualifying for the office of vestryman, he is not disqualified from election to and acting in such office merely because his personal occupation is reduced below the qualifying value by reason of his having sub-let portions of the premises. Hilton v. Haynes, 15 R. 41.

Loss of Qualification during Office.]—By s. 6 of the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855, rating and occupying are necessary qualifications for election to the office of vestryman. By s. 54, a person who acts as a member of any board or vestry without being qualified by rating and occupation is liable to a penalty:—Held, that a vestryman who was properly qualified at the time of his election did not cease to be a member of the vestry before the expiration of his term of office because he had ceased to occupy a house in the parish. Reg. v. Williams, Visger, Ex parte, 64 L. J., M. C. 34; 43 W. R. 140.

—— Quo Warranto.]—The writ of quo warranto will not lie against a vestryman, who has ceased to be qualified, unless he has acted as vestryman since disqualification. Ib.

Member "interested in Contract"—Penalty—Evidence.]—The brother of the defendant entered into a contract with a vestry constituted under the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, and in order to enable him to carry it out, borrowed money from the defendant, who by way of security took an assignment of the contract. Afterwards the defendant was elected a member of the vestry. An action for penalties having been brought against the defendant for acting as member of the vestry, an attendance-book of the members signed by the defendant and the minute-book of the vestry containing his name as a member in attendance were put in as evidence at the trial:—Held, that s. 54 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, applied to contracts made as well before as after the election of a member, and that the defendant was "interested" in the contract in question within the meaning of that section; that there was evidence under s. 60 that the defendant had acted as member of the vestry; and that he was liable to penalties for having acted after he had "ceased" to be a member. Hunnings v. Williamson, 52 L. J., Q. B. 416; 11 Q. B. D. 533; 49 L. T. 361; 32 W. R. 267; 48 J. P. 135—C. A.

Bankruptcy.]—A churchwarden of a parish named in schedule B. of the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855, is a member of the vestry of that parish within the meaning of s. 54, and is liable to a penalty if, after becoming bankrupt, he acts as a member of such vestry. Leftly v. Mannington, 48 L. J., Ex. 543; 4 Ex. D. 307; 40 L. T. 850; 27 W. R. 787.

b. Election and Mode of Proceedings.

See Local Government Act, 1894 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 73).

Parishioner, who is.]—Under a charity scheme sanctioned by the court, by which a parish was empowered to elect children for Christ's Hospital, it was provided that no child should be eligible unless born in the parish, or unless his parents or one of them should be or should have been parishioners or a parishioner of the parish:—Held, that the word "parishioner" must be taken in its ordinary sense of a person occupying premises which are liable to be rated in the parish. Etherington v. Wilson, 45 L. J., Ch. 153; 1 Ch. D. 160; 33 L. T. 652; 24 W. R. 303.

Therefore, when a man took a house temporarily, before the election, for the purpose of obtaining a qualification for his son, for which he paid rent and rates, and his son was elected by the parishioners:—Held, that the qualification was good, and the election valid. Ib.

See also ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VESTRY).

Election—Qualification of Elector—Nonpayment of Illegal Rate.]—By 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 16, no person shall be entitled to vote in any election of vestrymen unless he has paid all parochial rates due from him at the time of so voting. A declaration alleged that the defendant, knowing that plaintiff was a parishioner entitled to vote, fraudulently and maliciously prevented him from exercising his franchise. Plea shewed a rate good on the face of it, and alleged that when the plaintiff offered to vote the same was due from him, by reason whereof he was not entitled to vote. Replication, that the rate was for defraying expenses for which a rate could not legally be made, so that the rate was illegal and void. Rejoinder, that the rate was valid on the face thereof, and had not been adjudged illegal, nor had the validity of it been questioned in any ecclesiastical court:—Held, that a parishioner at the election of vestrymen, when his vote was challenged for nonpayment of a church rate, might shew that the rate was not due from him, being illegal and void; and therefore the replication was good, and the rejoinder bad. Tozer v. Child, 7 El. & Bl. 377; 26 L. J., Q. B. 151; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 774; 5 W. R. 287—Ex. Ch.

—— Inspectors of Votes.]—Inspectors of votes for the election of vestrymen have authority to inquire into the qualification of candidates, and are not to return as elected any person who, although he may have a majority of votes, was not qualified at the time of the election. Ross, Ex parte, 7 El. & Bl. 954; 26 L. J., Q. B. 312; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1302.

—— Refusal of Vote.]—An action does not lie against a churchwarden presiding under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, at the election of vestrymen and auditors, for refusing the vote of a party entitled to vote for vestrymen and auditors, or for refusing to allow as a candidate a party entitled to be candidate, unless malice is alleged and proved. Tozer v. Child, 7 El. & Bl. 377; 26 L. J., Q. B. 151; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 774; 5 W. R. 287—Ex. Ch.

—— Obstruction of Voting.]—By 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 21, "if any person knowingly personate and falsely assume to vote in the name of any parishioner entitled to vote in any election under this act, or forge or in any way falsify any name or writing in any paper purporting to contain the vote or votes of any parishioner voting in any such election, or by any contrivance attempt to obstruct or prevent the purposes of such election, the person so offending shall, upon conviction, be liable," &c.:—Held, that an intentional obstructing of the voting by actual violence is an offence within the act. Buckmaster v. Reynolds, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 63.

—— Validity—Quo Warranto.]—The procedure by quo warranto is applicable to question the validity of the election of a vestryman elected under the provisions of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855. Reg. v. Soutter, 60 L. J., Q. B. 71; [1891] 1 Q. B. 57; 63 L. T. 279; 39 W. R. 8; 55 J. P. 229.

Vestry Meeting—Shew of Hands.]—By 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 28, the duties of vestries are to be performed by the majority present. By a by-law made pursuant to s. 202, it was provided that all questions shall be determined by a shew of hands, or by a division, if demanded, with the names recorded:—Held, that the division or poll might take place after a shew of hands. Tear v. Freebody, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 228.

—— Mode of taking Vote.]—A burial board appointed under the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 85, laid before the vestry of the parish a proposal that the board should be authorised to borrow any sums of money not exceeding 20,000*l.* for their purposes. This proposal was not put to the vote by a shew of hands, but was met by an amendment, that the matter should be referred back to the board to be reconsidered; and a shew of hands being taken upon this amendment, it was carried by a majority. A division was then demanded, whereupon the chairman said that there should be a poll upon the original proposal and the amendment together, and that the votes must be affirmatively for one or the other, and not negatively as to either, and that no further amendment could afterwards be received. A majority of affirmative votes were given for the original resolution:—Held, that the proceeding was too informal to authorise the burial board to borrow the money; for that no shew of hands having been taken upon the original resolution, it could not properly be put to the poll, having regard to the provisions of the special act regulating the proceedings of this particular vestry. Held, also, that the manner of putting the resolution and amendment to the poll, and requiring only affirmative votes on each, was informal, because the majority of votes being given for the original proposition did not prove that it was preferred to any other, but merely to that particular proposition which had been put as an amendment, and which was not a direct negative of it. Elt v. St. Mary's, Islington, Burial Board, 1 Kay, 449.

A "division" of a vestry, "to be taken in the manner prescribed by the 58 Geo. 3, c. 69," may be taken by a poll of all the ratepayers, such poll being an adjournment of the vestry. At such poll, the original proposition and an amendment inconsistent with it, being the only one proposed, may be put to the vote, and affirmative and negative votes may be taken upon each, and in that way the sense of the voters may be ascertained. Ib.

Observations upon the best mode of taking the opinion of a meeting upon a resolution and amendment. Ib.

The proper way of taking the vote at a vestry is by a poll, the meeting being adjourned for that purpose, if necessary or convenient. Egham Burial Board, In re, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 956.

c. Powers.

Election of Minister.]—Where the right of electing the minister of a parish had been by deed vested in trustees for the parishioners:—Held, that it was not transferred to the vestry, or otherwise affected by 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, or by 19 & 20 Vict. c. 112. Carter v. Cropley, 8 De G. M. & G. 680; 26 L. J., Ch. 246; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 171; 5 W. R. 248.

Appointment of Governors and Directors of the Poor.]—A parish was previously to 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, and 19 & 20 Vict. c. 112, governed by local acts by which it was provided that the vestrymen should appoint governors and directors of the poor, who should make out the poor-rates for the parish:—Held, that since the passing of these acts, the old vestry had no longer the power of appointing the governors and directors, but that the power of doing so was vested in the new vestry by virtue of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 11, or 19 & 20 Vict. c. 112, s. 3. Reg. v. Rendle, 1 B. & S. 54; 30 L. J., M. C. 135; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1072; 9 W. R. 666.

Election of Almspeople.]—Under a deed for the foundation of a charity, the right of electing almspeople was vested "in the minister, churchwardens, overseers of the poor, and such of the parishioners as should pay taxations to the poor, and should not keep inmates or poor lodgers":—Held, that this was not "a duty, power, or privilege relating to the management and relief of the poor, or the administration of any money or other property applicable to the relief of the poor," within 19 & 20 Vict. c. 112, s. 3, and that the right of electing almspeople was not transferred to the new vestry appointed under that act. Att.-Gen. v. Drapers' Co., 4 Drew. 299; 27 L. J., Ch. 542; 6 W. R. 357.

Election of Trustees to a Charity.]—When a decree of the court of chancery and a scheme framed thereunder gave the parishioners and inhabitants of a metropolitan parish in vestry assembled the power to elect new trustees of a charity:—Held, to be exercisable by a vestry appointed under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, and 19 & 20 Vict. c. 112. Hayle, In re, 31 L. J., Ch. 612; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 810; 7 L. T. 18; 10 W. R. 577.

Superannuation Allowance to Officer—Discretion of Vestry.]—A metropolitan vestry has a discretion under 29 Vict. c. 31, s. 1, to grant or to refuse a superannuation allowance to a retiring officer; but, if an allowance be granted, the vestry has no discretion as to the amount, which must be in accordance with the scale prescribed in s. 4. Reg. v. St. George's, Southwark, 56 L. J., Q. B. 652; 19 Q. B. D. 533; 35 W. R. 841; 52 J. P. 6.

A metropolitan vestry has a discretion under 29 & 30 Vict. c. 31, s. 1, not merely as to granting or refusing a superannuation allowance to a retiring officer, but also, if an allowance be granted, as to the amount, subject to the scale of maximum allowances prescribed in s. 4. Reg. v. St. George's, Southwark (19 Q. B. D. 533), overruled. A vestry in declining to grant a superannuation allowance to a retiring officer were influenced by the idea that they had no discretion as to the amount:—Held, that the vestry had not properly exercised their discretion, and that a mandamus should go to them to consider and determine the application. Reg. v. St. Pancras Vestry, 59 L. J., Q. B. 244; 24 Q. B. D. 371; 62 L. T. 440; 38 W. R. 311; 54 J. P. 389—C. A.

—— Refusal of—Majority of Vestry pledged to vote against Pensions.]—The majority of the members of a metropolitan vestry had been elected on a programme, part of which included the voting against granting pensions to salaried officials of the vestry. On an application by a salaried official for a pension the vestry appointed a committee to consider and report on the claim, which report set out various grounds why a pension should not be granted. The vestry adopted this report and refused the application, whereupon the applicant obtained a rule calling upon the vestry to hear and determine the matter on the ground that, in view of the pledges of the majority of the vestry, the discretion of that body had not been lawfully exercised:—Held, that the rule should be discharged, as the question had been properly considered. Reg. v. Bromley St. Leonard Vestry, 60 J. P. 725.

Special Payment to Vestry Clerk.]—A special payment made by the vestry of a metropolitan parish to the vestry clerk, and ordered to be charged upon the poor-rate, for preparing the valuation list required by the Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 67), was disallowed by the poor-law auditor, on the ground that the preparation of the list was among the statutory duties of the vestry clerk, for which he was remunerated by salary, and because the charge was excessive, there being nothing to shew the payment to any person of any part of that sum :—Held, that the disallowance must be quashed, for there was nothing in the Vestry Clerks Act (13 & 14 Vict. c. 57) to shew that the preparation of the valuation list was among the general duties of the vestry clerk, and that, with regard to the alleged excess in the charge, the claim of the vestry clerk was not limited to his expenses, and it did not appear that the amount paid was not a reasonable allowance for his work and outlay. Reg. v. Cumberlege, 46 L. J., M. C. 214 ; 2 Q. B. D. 366 ; 36 L. T. 700 ; 25 W. R. 605.

B. JURISDICTION.

1. STREETS.

a. What are.

"Street."]—Though the word "street" may include the houses abutting or fronting upon a public thoroughfare, as well as the actual roadway or footways, yet the strict and primâ facie meaning of the word "street" is confined to the roadway and footways. See on the construction of the Holborn Valley Improvement Act, 1864. London Corporation v. Galloway, 2 De G. J. & S. 213. S. C. in H. L. 35 L. J., Ch. 477 ; L. R. 1 H. L. 34 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 747 ; 14 L. T. 865.

—— In Proviso to s. 6 of Act of 1878.]—In the proviso to s. 6 of the act of 1878 "street" has the meaning given to it in the interpretation clause (s. 250) of the act of 1855, and to come within the exemption of the proviso it must have been actually formed or laid out for the purpose of building at the time when the act of 1878 was passed. London County Council v. Mitchell, 63 L. J., M. C. 104 ; 10 R. 308.

—— Unfinished Road—Liability to Light.]—An unfinished road (in a parish mentioned in schedule (A) of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), containing inhabited houses along part of it, communicated at one end only with another road containing houses placed singly at long intervals. The soil of such unfinished road was private property, and the road itself had not been dedicated to the public. The vestry of the parish refused to light the road under s. 130 :—Held, that the vestry was not bound to treat the road as a street under ss. 130, 250. Reg. v. St. Mary, Islington, Vestry, El. Bl. & El. 743.

—— Mews—Dedication to the Public.]—A vestry proposed to erect a public urinal in a mews, not a thoroughfare, the freehold of which was in the plaintiffs as trustees. The mews had for seventy years or more been open to the public at all times ; no barrier had ever been put across the entrance. The mews had been lighted, cleansed, and paved by the vestry ; nothing had ever been paid by the trustees for lighting, cleansing, or paving. The land adjoining the mews, the occupants of which had the use of the mews, was in lease during the whole period. The lessees had applied to the vestry for leave to make erections upon and interfere with the soil of the mews, but such applications were made without the knowledge of the trustees :—Held, that the soil of the mews had been dedicated to the public, and it was a "street," being a highway within the meaning of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 88. Vernon v. St. James' Vestry, 49 L. J., Ch. 130 ; 42 L. T. 82. Affirmed, 29 W. R. 222—C. A.

—— Open Space in Front of House.]—A. occupied a public-house in a contiguous line of houses, in a district within 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120. Immediately in front of these houses was a public footway, then an intermediate space, then a public carriage way, then an intermediate space, then a public footway immediately in front of another line of houses, facing the first-mentioned line. The intermediate spaces had always been made use of by the owners of the houses opposite, in such manner as suited their respective occupations ; in some instances they had erected permanent structures, and A., whose house was a public-house, had, before the act came into operation, placed in the intermediate space opposite to his house a permanent horse-trough, and the carts of his customers stood on that space while the drivers and horses were resting ; he had also put there movable seats, and in summer a movable shed, and had fixed sockets into the ground. The footway was always left clear. A. paid the owner of the soil for permission to use the intermediate space. The public passed over the intermediate space as of right, subject to the user of it by the owners of the houses. Persons wishing to get from the footway to the carriage road did so without objection. The vestry elected under the act having removed A.'s shed and seats, as obstructions within s. 120 :—Held, that the act did not justify them, first, because the intermediate space was not part of a street within the meaning of the act ; and, secondly, because the shed and seats were not projections or obstructions against, or in front of, any house within the meaning of the act. Le Neve v. Mile End Old Town Vestry, 8 El. & Bl. 1054 ; 27 L. J., Q. 208 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 660 ; 6 W. R. 338.

—— Meaning of—Statement of Case.]—The G. Road was a lane 340 feet long ; there were no buildings on either side of it, except four houses at one part of it, and the lane was bounded on the north and south by back gardens and the backs and sides of houses. In proceedings taken by the Fulham board of works for the paving of the lane as a "new street" within the meaning of the metropolis management acts, the magistrate held that the lane was not a "street," and refused to state a case, as he considered the question one of fact :—Held, that the question whether the lane was a "street" or not was a question of fact and not of law, and that the magistrate could not be compelled to state a case. Reg. v. Sheil, 50 L. T. 590 ; 49 J. P. 68.

—— Includes New Street.]—The word street in the Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 102), s. 53, includes new streets as defined by s. 112, as well as old streets. Sheffield v. Fulham Board of Works, 1 Ex. D. 395.

The words "a street" in s. 53 of the Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 102), include "new streets" as defined by s. 112, as well as old streets. St. John's, Hampstead v. Cotton, 56 L. J., Q. B. 225 ; 12 App. Cas. 1 ; 56 L. T. 1 ; 35 W. R. 505 ; 51 J. P. 340—H. L. (E.)

"New Street."]—The words "new street," as used in the Metropolis Management Acts, 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 105, and 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 77, include a new street in the ordinary and popular sense of the term. Pound v.

Therefore, a country lane which was bounded by hedges and fields and was repaired by the parish time out of mind becomes a new street within the meaning of those statutes when houses are built along the sides of the lane. Ib.

The definition of the expression "new street" in s. 112 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1862, includes only such places as are streets in the ordinary sense of the term, and does not include all places coming within the definition of the word "street" in s. 250 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855. The two definitions cannot be incorporated for the purpose of determining whether a particular place is or is not a "new street." Arter v. Hammersmith Vestry, 66 L. J., Q. B. 460; [1897] 1 Q. B. 646; 76 L. T. 390; 45 W. R. 398; 61 J. P. 279.

—— Country Lane.]—Prior to the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, an ancient highway, which was a country lane and had been repaired by the parish from time out of mind, existed in a district within the act; after the passing of that statute, and before the passing of the Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862, twenty-one houses were built along the side of the lane, several of which belonged to P.; afterwards ninety houses were built along the side of the lane. N. was the owner of the soil and freehold of five new private roads leading out of the lane; but he had no exclusive occupation or possession of them:—Held, that the lane after the erection of the houses became a new street within the meaning of the acts; that P. and N. were the owners of land abounding or abutting thereon, and that they were liable to contribute to the expense of paving the same. Pound v. Plumstead Board of Works, supra.

—— Ancient Road newly built on.]—The Harrow road is an ancient road, and was formerly under the management of turnpike trustees and commissioners until 1864, when the vestry of the parish took charge of it for the first time. The part of the Harrow road eastward of Elgin road had been built over for many years. In 1866 a person built a row of houses called Frankfort Terrace on the side of the Harrow road on the part westward of Elgin road. There was no sewer on that part of the road, but sewer rates had been levied and paid in respect of the land adjoining for more than five years prior to 1856. When Frankfort Terrace was built the parish constructed a sewer in that part of the road, and, upon its completion, the vestry apportioned the whole of the expense of it upon the owners of the adjoining land under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 52:—Held, that the vestry was right, and that the road built upon was a "new street" within that section; and that the owners of the adjoining land were liable to be assessed for their respective portions of the whole expense. Sawyer v. Paddington Vestry, 40 L. J., M. C. 8; L. R. 6 Q. B. 164; 23 L. T. 662; 19 W. R. 96.

Held, also, that the word "street" in s. 53, did not apply to a new street within s. 52. Ib. But see St. John's, Hampstead, v. Cotton, 56 L. J., Q. B. 225; 12 App. Cas. 1; 56 L. T. 1; 34 W. R. 505; 51 J. P. 340—H. L. (E.) (supra).

—— Highway substantially bounded by Land—Not built on within Twenty Years.]—A road which substantially has land only bounding or abutting upon it, and upon which no houses have been built within twenty years, is not a new street within the meaning of s. 105 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, or s. 77 of the Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862. The owners of such land are therefore not liable to contribute to the expenses of paving the road. Battersea Vestry v. Palmer, 66 L. J., Q. B. 77; [1897] 1 Q. B. 220; 75 L. T. 362; 45 W. R. 110; 60 J. P. 774.

—— Carriage Way not dedicated to the Public.]—In the Metropolis Management Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 102), s. 112, the expression "new street" is not confined to streets dedicated to the public. St. Mary, Islington, Vestry v. Barrett, 43 L. J., M. C. 85; L. R. 9 Q. B. 278; 30 L. T. 11; 22 W. R. 402.

There were houses on both sides of a road, the footpaths of which on each side had been paved by the vestry of the parish, and were used by the public. The carriage way had never been dedicated to the public; the vestry paved the carriage way, and sought to recover the expense from the owner of the houses under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 105, on the ground that the carriage way was a new street:—Held, that although the carriage way had not been dedicated to the public, it was a new street within 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 112; and that the owner was liable to pay the expense of paving it under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 105. Ib.

—— Way over a Bridge.]—A railway company agreed by articles dated 12th June, 1868, with a water company, to build a bridge to be devoted to the use of the public, in which bridge the water company might lay its pipes. The bridge was built and used by the public for eighteen months. By an indenture of 28th December, 1871, the railway company covenanted with the water company to retain the possession of the bridge (subject to the user thereof by the public) under its control. The vestry of the district paved the road of which the district formed part:—Held, that the dedication of the bridge to the use of the public might be inferred; that the roadway over it was a new street within the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, and that the railway company was liable to contribute to the paving of the road. North London Ry. v. St. Mary, Islington, Vestry, 27 L. T. 672; 21 W. R. 226.

—— Jurisdiction of Magistrate—Power to review Decision.]—A metropolitan police magistrate, on a summons for an order, under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, ss. 105, 226, upon the proprietor of houses in D., alleged to be a new street within the metropolis, for his share of the expenses of paving it, after hearing the parties and their evidence, dismissed the summons on the ground that D. was not a new street within the meaning of the enactment, because it was an old highway. A rule, calling on him to hear and adjudicate on the complaint, was obtained, with a view of obtaining the decision of the court, that D. might be a new street within 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 105, though it was an old highway:—Held, by Lord Campbell, C.J., Wightman and Crompton, JJ., that the court could not inquire whether the magistrate came to a right conclusion or not, but only whether he had adjudicated; and, they being of opinion that he had done so, the rule was discharged without any expression of opinion as to whether he was right or wrong in his construction of the act. Erle, J., dissentiente, and holding that, as the magistrate could not safely proceed unless D. was a new street, his decision, that it was not, was such as to give the court jurisdiction to determine whether he was right or wrong in that decision. Reg. v. Dayman, 7 El. & Bl. 672; 26 L. J., M. C. 128; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 744; 5 W. R. 578.

A magistrate having, upon the construction of the 5th rule of s. 26 of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, decided that a certain place, being a row of houses forming part of a line of thoroughfare, was a street, the court declined to interfere with his decision. Newman v. Baker, 8 C. B. (N.S.) 200.

—— Roadway closed by Gate.]—The line of houses adjoining the road terminated at the east end of the bridge, while after crossing the bridge there was but one cottage, and the roadway ceased to be a public thoroughfare, being closed by a private gate. A small portion of the slope of the cutting abutted on the road, between the west end of the bridge and the private gate:—Held, that the railway company were not liable to contribute to the paving of the road, as it ceased at the eastern extremity of the bridge to be a "new street" within the meaning of the act. L. B. & S. C. Ry. v. St. Giles, Camberwell, Vestry, 48 L. J., M. C. 184; 4 Ex. D. 239; 41 L. T. 162.

—— Road and Footway.]—A footway adjoining a road has been paved by the public authorities and the expenses charged to the ratepayers generally. In 1890 the public authorities declared the whole roadway a "new street" and proceeded to pave the same and apportion the expense to the adjoining frontages. The appellant, one of the frontagers, objected to pay on the ground that the footway having been taken over and repaired at the public expense before the Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862, was not a "new street" within s. 112 of that act. The magistrate found the tar-paving to be temporary work:—Held, that the footway so taken into charge with the roadway was a "new street" within s. 112, and that the public authorities were entitled to treat the footway and roadway as a whole. Wilson v. St. Giles, Camberwell, 61 L. J., M. C. 3; [1892] 1 Q. B. 1; 65 L. T. 790; 40 W. R. 41; 56 J. P. 167.

—— Old Highway—Erection of Buildings—Paving Expenses.] — The expression "new street" in s. 105 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, is not limited by the definition of "new street" in s. 112 of the Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862, and includes a new street in the popular sense of the term; therefore, an ancient country highway may become a new street in the popular sense where buildings have been erected on the frontage either shortly before or after the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, came into operation, and, being a "new street" within s. 105, the expenses of paving such new street are chargeable upon the owners. Pound v. Plumstead Board of Works (L. R. 7 Q. B. 183) followed. St. Giles, Camberwell v. Crystal Palace Co., 61 L. J., Q. B. 802; [1892] 2 Q. B. 33; 66 L. T. 840; 40 W. R. 648; 57 J. P. 5—C. A.

A road, formerly a turnpike road, which after the turnpike trust has expired becomes by the erection of houses on its side a new street within the ordinary meaning of the words, is not prevented from being a new street within the metropolis management acts, by the mere fact that repairs to the footway of a temporary character have been undertaken by the vestry. Davis v. Greenwich Board of Works, 64 L. J., M. C. 257; [1895] 2 Q. B. 219; 14 R. 552; 72 L. T. 674; 59 J. P. 517—C. A.

"Street for Carriage or Foot Traffic."]—See Wood v. London County Council, post, col. 1059.

"Existing Street"—Projecting Fence.]—The appellant was the owner of a house and garden abutting upon an old public carriage way. The house of the appellant as well as several others were erected on either side of the road prior to the passing of the Metropolis Management Act, 1878. In 1889 the appellant pulled down the wall that separated his garden from the road and erected a new fence a few feet further back from the road; he subsequently commenced to build shops upon the site of the garden, and extended his boundary fence to its original position, which was less than the prescribed distance from the centre of the roadway within the meaning of s. 6 of the above act:—Held, that the road was an "existing street" within that section, and therefore that the appellant could not be required to set back his boundary fence. Ellis v. London County Council, 67 L. T. 558; 57 J. P. 24.

Closing of Passage—"Receptacle for Filth."] —At a special session of justices held under s. 79 of 57 Geo. 3, c. 29 (local and personal), an application for an order to close a certain passage was refused solely on the ground that there was no jurisdiction to make the order, because it did not appear that the passage was in fact "a harbour or receptacle for filth and rubbish" within the meaning of the preamble to the said section:—Held, that the construction put upon the section by the justices was erroneous, for its meaning was to give them jurisdiction if the passage was likely to, or might possibly become, a harbour or receptacle for filth and rubbish. Reg. v. Cloete, 64 L. T. 90; 55 J. P. 310.

"Pavement"—Tramway.]—A tramway is not a pavement of a street, and consequently not within the powers conferred on vestries by 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 98. Reg. v. Train, 2 B. & S. 640; 3 F. & F. 22; 31 L. J., M. C. 169; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1151; 10 W. R. 539; 9 Cox C. C. 180.

b. Property in.

Paramount Rights reserved by Owners.]—The provisions of the highway acts and the metropolis local management act, so far as they apply to roads or streets, are subordinate to the paramount rights reserved by the owner. St. Mary, Newington, Vestry v. Jacobs, 41 L. J., M. C. 72; L. R. 7 Q. B. 47; 25 L. T. 800; 20 W. R. 249.

Street vesting in Board—Disused Street.]—The 96th section of the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855, provides that "all streets being highways, and the pavements, stones and other materials thereof shall vest in and be under the management of the vestry or district board of the parish or district in which such highways are situate":—Held, that what "vests" in the board or vestry is a "street being a highway," that is, the street if and so long as it is a highway; and accordingly when a street ceases to be a highway by being stopped up or diverted or turned, and another substituted in lieu thereof, the original limit for which the street vested having arrived, the street ceases to be vested in the board or vestry, and no words of defeasance or divesting are necessary. Although there is an estate or interest in the material thing—some portion, including the surface of the soil over which the street extends—that estate or interest is limited by reference to the period for which it is used in a particular way. The duration or period of the estate is that during which the street is used as a highway; and as future streets when they become highways will be vested in the board or vestry, so existing streets when they cease to be highways cease to be vested, the period of the estate vested in the public body having ceased when the purpose for which the streets were so vested has ceased. The 96th section gives to these public bodies, over and above the easement of passage which the public possess and the powers of control and management of the roads which the surveyor of highways possessed under the Highways Act, such right of property and such possessory right in the streets as to enable these bodies to maintain actions in respect of that property or possessory right. Coverdale v. Charlton (4 Q. B. D. 104) explained. Rolls v. St. George, Southwark Vestry, 49 L. J., Ch. 691; 14 Ch. D. 785; 43 L. T. 140; 28 W. R. 867; 44 J. P. 680—C. A.

Dedication — Roadway over a Bridge.]—A railway company agreed by articles dated 12th June, 1868, with a water company, to build a bridge to be devoted to the use of the public, in which bridge the water company might lay its pipes. The bridge was built and used by the public for eighteen months. By an indenture of 28th December, 1871, the railway company covenanted with the water company to retain the possession of the bridge (subject to the user thereof by the public) under its control. The vestry of the district paved the road of which the district formed part:—Held, that the dedication of the bridge to the use of the public might be inferred; that the roadway over it was a new street within the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, and that the railway company was liable to contribute to the paving of the road. North London Ry. v. St. Mary, Islington, 27 L. T. 672; 21 W. R. 226.

Overhead Wires.]—By the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, s. 96, "all streets, being highways, shall vest in and be under the management and control of the vestry or district board of the parish or district in which such highways are situate." Defendants, a telephone company, fixed a telephone wire to a chimney, and stretched it across a street, which was vested in plaintiffs as the district board, at a height of about thirty feet from the ground. Plaintiffs brought an action for an injunction to restrain defendants from keeping up the wire:—Held, that what was vested in plaintiffs was the property in the surface of the ground, together with as much space, both above and below the surface, as amounted to the area of ordinary user; and that as the wire in question was above this area, and was not shown to be dangerous, so as to amount to a nuisance, plaintiffs were not entitled to an injunction:—Held, also, that defendants did not require plaintiffs' consent under 26 & 27 Vict. c. 112, s. 12, to entitle them to place the wire across the street. Wandsworth Board of Works v. United Telephone Co., 53 L. J., Q. B. 449; 13 Q. B. D. 904; 51 L. T. 148; 32 W. R. 776; 48 J. P. 676—C. A.

Vauxhall Bridge—Street Lamps.]—By a local lighting and paving act, the property in the lamps along the road and on half of Vauxhall Bridge is vested in commissioners; and the obligation to light the road and half the bridge is transferred from the bridge company to the commissioners; and by 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, ss. 90, 93, the property in such lamps and the obligation to light the bridge are transferred from the commissioners to the vestry of Lambeth. Reg. v. Lambeth Vestry, 3 B. & S. 1; 31 L. J., Q. B. 252; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 48; 6 L. T. 644.

c. Formation and Alteration of.

Laying out — Through Communication.]—A private act (53 & 54 Vict. c. ccxliii.), s. 35, provides as follows: "No road, passage, or way, which will not directly communicate at both ends with a public carriageway, shall be formed or laid out as a public carriageway without the consent in writing of the council," that is, the London County Council, and the section goes on to say that, "in giving their consent the council may prescribe all such conditions as they may think fit, provided always that, in case any person . . . considers that any conditions of the council are unreasonable, such person may serve notice of appeal . . . and such appeal shall stand referred to an arbitrator . . . whose decision shall be final." The new road in question purported not to communicate between two different streets, but it did not purport to lead out of one street, and after going round some distance to come back again into the same street:—Held, that the appellants should have been satisfied if the new road in question was shown to be about to come back again into the same street, there being no evidence that the new road was not going to return to the same street; that, as to the consent of the council to allow respondents to continue their road being required, such construction of the section would make it almost impossible to develop a building estate. London County Council v. Edmundson, 66 L. T. 200; 56 J. P. 343. And see cases, infra, col. 1060.

—— Consent of District Board to Excavations.]—A landowner having obtained the consent of the London County Council to lay out a new street for building, and the consent of the district board of works to construct a sewer running down and below it with gullies and house-drains, sent sections to the district board of works showing the excavations he proposed to make, with a request that the board would inform him of the conditions they deemed it necessary to impose upon him in excavating. The board replied that they had resolved to refuse their approval of the excavation of any gravel or subsoil beyond what was necessary to level or form a foundation for paving the street:—Held, that upon the true construction of the 2nd clause of s. 6 of the Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1890, the only power given to a district board of works, where a street had been laid out, was to impose conditions, and that the board had no power to place their veto upon excavation. Wandsworth Board of Works v. Bird, 61 L. J., M. C. 97; [1892] 1 Q. B. 481; 66 L. T. 376; 40 W. R. 464; 56 J. P. 280.

—— "For Foot Traffic only."]—Artizans' dwellings, comprising twenty-six tenements, accommodating about 250 persons, were built, opening on an approach 100 feet long and sixteen feet wide, entered from a public street through a gateway ten feet wide, over which one of the buildings was carried. A roadway had previously existed on the site, with warehouses abutting thereon, and the gateway included the site of a former gateway, which had been pulled down and altered to a greater width. The approach did not afford communication with any other public street, and was for the sole use and convenience of the tenants of the dwellings, to the exclusion of the public, no right of way over the same having ever been dedicated to or used by the public at large:—Held, that the approach had not been laid out as "a street for foot traffic only" within the meaning of s. 8 of the Metropolis Management and Building Acts (Amendment) Act, 1882 (45 Vict. c. 14), so as to require the sanction of the Metropolitan Board of Works to the laying out thereof. Metropolitan Board of Works v. Nathan, 54 L. T. 423; 34 W. R. 164; 50 J. P. 502.

Where a space or passage is formed for the sole purpose of giving access to artizans' dwellings from a public street, such space or passage is not necessarily "a street for foot traffic only" within the meaning of ss. 7 & 8 of the Metropolis Management and Building Acts (Amendment) Act, 1882. London County Council v. Davis, 64 L. J., M. C. 212; 15 R. 509; 43 W. R. 574; 59 J. P. 583.

—— "For Carriage or Foot Traffic."]—The appellant was erecting mansions (containing flats) in the form of a quadrangle. There was only one entrance to the quadrangle, which was, in fact, the courtyard of the mansions. This entrance was closed by means of iron gates, and was for the convenience of the tenants of the flats and those visiting them, with or without carriages. The public at large were entirely excluded:—Held, that the appellant had not commenced to form or lay out a "street for carriage or foot traffic" within the meaning of ss. 7 and 8 of the London Building Act, 1894. Wood v. London County Council, 64 L. J., M. C. 276; 15 R. 569; 73 L. T. 313; 44 W. R. 144; 59 J. P. 615.

Width of Roads to be Laid out for Building.]—By 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 98, no existing road, passage, or way, being of a less width than forty feet shall be hereafter formed or laid out for building as a street for the purposes of carriage traffic, unless such road, passage, or way be widened to the full width of forty feet; the measurement to be taken half on either side from the centre or crown of the roadway to the external wall or front of the house, or to the fence or boundary of the forecourt, if any:—Held, that this provision did not apply where the buildings abutted in the rear upon an old lane of less width than forty feet. Metropolitan Board of Works v. Cox, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 445.

—— "Open at both Ends."]—By the Metropolis Management Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 102), s. 98, no road being of less width than forty feet shall hereafter be formed or laid out for building as a street for the purposes of carriage traffic unless such road be widened to the full width of forty feet, or for the purposes of foot traffic only unless such road be widened to the full width of twenty feet, "or" unless such streets respectively shall be open at both ends:—Held, that such street must be of the width prescribed and be also open at both ends. Metropolitan Board of Works v. Steed, 51 L. J., M. C. 22; 8 Q. B. D. 445; 45 L. T. 611; 30 W. R. 891; 46 J. P. 199.

The appellants being owners of a plot of land abutting on the thoroughfare in the metropolis, laid out a road for building as a new street for carriage traffic, and erected, at the junction thereof with the thoroughfare, certain piers with the intention of hanging gates thereon for the purpose of excluding the public, without the consent of the Metropolitan Board of Works or their successors. The road in question had never been dedicated to or used by the public. The appellants were summoned before a magistrate, and convicted for having laid out a new street, with an entrance thereto not of the full width of such street nor open from the ground upwards, contrary to 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, and a by-law made thereunder, and to s. 98 of 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102. Subsequently, the appellants were summoned before a magistrate and convicted for permitting the said road to be continued, formed and laid out for a certain number of days, not being open at both ends from the ground upwards as directed by the said statute and by-law:—Held, that this conviction was right. Daw v. London County Council, 59 L. J., M. C. 112; 62 L. T. 937; 54 J. P. 502.

—— Consent of Board—How given.]—B. was the owner of a house, which had its front and only entrance in F. street, and behind it a garden with a dead wall at the further end. A new street was made parallel to F. street, of which the dead wall at the end of B.'s garden was part of the line of street. This new street was a mews, which the Metropolitan Board allowed to be made of twenty feet in width:—Held, that the consent of the Metropolitan Board to the mews, being of twenty feet in width, did not require to be under the seal of the board. Paddington Vestry v. Bramwell, 44 J. P. 815.

—— Notice to District Surveyor—Complaint more than Six Months after.]—L. was summoned by the Metropolitan Board of Works for laying out a new street of less than the required width, contrary to 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 98. L. gave notice of his intended building in May, 1883, to the district surveyor, and paid his fees, but no notice was given by the surveyor to the board till November, 1883. The complaint was made in March, 1884:—Held, that notice to the district surveyor was the date of the discovery by the board, and, therefore, the complaint was too late, being more than six months after the discovery, and so contrary to 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102,

c. 107. Metropolitan Board of Works v. Lathey, 49 J. P. 245.

—— Penalties for Breach of Regulation.]—In 1864, several plots of land abutting on one side of a lane were sold for building purposes; the lane was an ancient carriage way, and had buildings at intervals, on both sides, erected before 1862; the lane varied in width from forty-one feet to twenty-eight feet, which was the width opposite the plots, and on the other side of the road was a permanent enclosure belonging to a church and other buildings erected before 1862. In July, 1865, A. bought the plots, houses having been built on two of them, the front walls of the houses being twenty-seven feet from the old wooden boundary fence of the lane. On the 26th of September, 1865, A. began to remove this fence, which had been left untouched, and to substitute a permanent wall and railing, and the work was completed on the 14th of October. On the 6th of October the board of works was informed of what A. was doing, and in March, 1866, they laid an information against him to recover penalties for contravening the 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, ss. 98, 107. At the hearing the magistrate found that A., by taking down the old fence and erecting the permanent fence, did begin to form and lay out the road for building as a street on the 26th of September, and completed such forming on the 14th of October; that the road was not required by s. 98 to be widened to forty feet from the opposite fence, but only to the width of twenty feet from the centre of the roadway to the boundary fence of A.'s ground; and he convicted A. in certain penalties:—Held that the conviction was right. Taylor v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 36 L. J., M. C. 53; L. R. 2 Q. B. 213; 15 W. R. 765.

By 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 98, no existing roadway of a width less than forty feet shall be laid out for building as a street for carriage traffic unless such road be widened to the width of forty feet, taken half on either side of the centre of the roadway. An owner of land had in 1866 erected some houses thereon, the gardens in the rear of which abutted upon an ancient lane, and some of the owners of land adjoining this lane had in 1867 begun to form it into a street for carriage traffic. He, however, himself had done no act towards forming or laying out the lane as a street for the purposes of carriage traffic, otherwise than by the removal in 1866 of an old bank and thorn fence, and the substitution of an oak fence three feet within his own land, nor had he any intention of doing any such act, or of putting up any building fronting towards the lane:—Held, that he had not committed any offence against the statute, and was not bound to set back his oak fence, so as to leave a space of twenty feet between it and the centre of the lane. Metropolitan Board of Works v. Clever, 37 L. J., M. C. 126; L. R. 3 C. P. 531; 18 L. T. 723; 16 W. R. 1016.

Widening — Power to take Land.] — Two houses adjoining Wood-street, in the city of London, having been destroyed by fire, the outer walls being left standing, the commissioners of sewers adjudicated that it was desirable to widen Wood-street, and that the two houses, and the land on which they stood, projected into and prevented them from widening the street, and that the possession and purchase of those houses was necessary for that purpose, and they directed their solicitor to treat for the purchase. Notice to treat was accordingly given for the whole of the houses. The owners brought their action for an injunction to restrain the commissioners from proceeding on this notice. It was admitted by the commissioners that they only meant to use a strip of five-and-a-half feet in breadth for widening the street, and intended to sell the rest without giving the plaintiffs any option of pre-emption:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to an injunction, for that the adjudication was ultra vires, the commissioners having no power to adjudicate that the possession of the whole of the piece of land is necessary for the purpose of improvements when they only intend to use a small part of it for that purpose, though if they made such an adjudication in the belief that they should require the whole for the improvements, the correctness of the adjudication could not be questioned. Gard v. Sewers Commissioners, 54 L. J., Ch. 698; 28 Ch. D. 486; 52 L. T. 827—C. A.

If part of a piece of land prevents an improvement, the commissioners have power to take part compulsorily, their power of proceeding compulsorily not being limited to taking the whole. Whether the commissioners, if they only want a part of the site of an existing house for the purpose of an improvement, can adjudicate that the possession and purchase of the whole house are necessary, quære. Ib.

Semble, that the right of pre-emption given by 57 Geo. III. c. xxix., s. 96, is not taken away by the City of London Sewers Act, 1851 (14 & 15 Vict. c. xci.) s. 54. Ib.

A metropolitan vestry required, for the purpose of widening a street, a part of the buildings and site of an orphanage that would leave a substantial portion of the premises:—Held, that (the owners wishing to sell the part required only) the vestry could not take the whole. Teuliere v. St. Mary Abbott's Vestry, 55 L. J., Ch. 23; 30 Ch. D. 642; 53 L. T. 422; 50 J. P. 53.

Where part only of a house obstructs the proposed alteration of a street, the local authority having control of such street has, by ss. 80 & 82 of Michael Angelo Taylor's Act, power to take such part only, and cannot be compelled to take the whole house, provided the removal of such part does not involve a substantial alteration in the character and condition of the house, so that it can no longer be used as the same kind of building or for the same kind of business as before. Gordon v. St. Mary Abbott's Vestry, 63 L. J., M. C. 193; [1894] 2 Q. B. 742; 10 R. 539; 71 L. T. 196; 58 J. P. 463.

—— Failure to carry out — Expiration of Time—Penalties.]—By a local act certain persons were nominated directors of a company to establish a certain public market, for which purpose the company had compulsory powers to take the land needed for the market, such powers to expire within three years of the passing of the act. It was also provided that certain streets in the immediate neighbourhood of the market, acting as approaches to the same, should be widened within a stated period under certain penalties, for which purpose of widening the company might acquire land by agreement with the owners of the adjoining property, but not by compulsion. The company never had any real existence, and the whole scheme proved abortive. The time within which the company could exercise its compulsory powers had expired:—Held, that the company having failed to widen the aforesaid streets, the vestry was entitled to the penalties under the statute. St. Mary, Newington v. South London Fish Market Co., 52 J. P. 92.

—— Compulsory Purchase—Petition for Payment out of Purchase-money—Jurisdiction.]—The Court of Chancery has jurisdiction, under s. 89 of the General Metropolitan Paving Act, 57 Geo. 3, c. xxix., to order payment of the amount of the costs of a petition for payment out of court, and to separate accounts, of the purchase-moneys of houses taken by a vestry under the powers of the act for the purpose of widening a street. Saunders, In re, L. R. 8 Eq. 681.

—— Compulsory Purchase—Costs of Claimant when no Offer made—Jurisdiction to Tax.]—Where land is compulsorily taken for street improvements there is no power to order taxation of the costs of a successful claimant in proceedings under s. 82 of Michael Angelo Taylor's Act, when no offer has been made on behalf of the street authority. Reg. v. London JJ., Phelps, Ex parte, 64 L. J., M. C. 186; [1895] 1 Q. B. 881; 15 R. 401; 72 L. T. 564; 43 W. R. 590; 59 J. P. 311.

Naming Streets and Numbering Houses.]—The Metropolitan Board of Works had authority, under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 141, to name the streets and number the houses within the city of London, that enactment superseding in that respect a former and inconsistent local act, 11 & 12 Vict. c. 163 (the Sewer Act). Daw v. Metropolitan Boad of Works, 12 C. B. (N.S.) 161; 31 L. J., C. P. 223; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1040; 6 L. T. 353.

d. Obstructions.

Barrows and Stalls.]—The statute 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 73, extends to the metropolis the powers of improving and regulating streets, and for suppressing nuisances, contained in 57 Geo. 3, c. xxix. S. kept a barrow of chestnuts several hours standing in a street in the F. district, which was outside the area of the Metropolitan Traffic Act, 30 & 31 Vict. c. 135, but within the metropolis, and an officer of the local board desired him to remove, but he refused:—Held, that S. was liable to be convicted of an offence contrary to 57 Geo. 3, c. 29, s. 65. Fulham Board of Works v. Smith, 48 J. P. 375.

—— Power to Seize without Conviction.]—The power given by s. 65 of 57 Geo. 3, c. xxix., to the authority having control of pavements in districts within the act, to seize wares, merchandise and other matters placed on footways or carriageways and not removed when required by the authority, is not dependent upon the existence of a conviction under that section, but may be exercised although there has not been such a conviction. Brackley v. St. Mary, Battersea, 58 L. J., Q. B. 589; 23 Q. B. D. 486; 38 W. R. 28; 54 J. P. 165—C. A.

—— Concurrent Jurisdiction of Vestries and of Police.]—Sect. 65 of Michael Angelo Taylor's Act is still in force. Where costermongers, &c., carry on business in conformity with the police regulations, they do not commit any offence, and the above section has no application. But where they disobey the police regulations, and also the directions of the vestry having jurisdiction over them, the section does apply, and they can be proceeded against either under the Police Acts or under Michael Angelo Taylor's Act, but they cannot be punished under both acts for the same offence. Keep v. St. Mary, Newington, 63 L. J., Q. B. 369; [1894] 2 Q. B. 524; 9 R. 346; 70 L. T. 509; 58 J. P. 748—C. A.

—— Implied Repeal—Michael Angelo Taylor's Act—Metropolitan Streets Act, 1867.]—The powers given to the metropolitan local authorities by s. 65 of Michael Angelo Taylor's Act to order the removal of goods, barrows, &c., from carriage or footways are inconsistent with and therefore impliedly repealed so far as they affect costermongers, by s. 6 of the Metropolitan Streets Act, 1867, and s. 1 of the Metropolitan Streets Act Amendment Act, 1868. Summers v. Holborn Board of Works, 62 L. J., M. C. 81; [1893] 1 Q. B. 612; 5 R. 284; 68 L. T. 226; 41 W. R. 445; 57 J. P. 326.

Unloading Coke across Footway.]—Coke is not coal within the meaning of s. 15 of the Metropolitan Streets Act, 1867, and a conviction under that section for unloading coke between the hours of 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. cannot be sustained. Fletcher v. Field, 60 L. J., M. C. 102; [1891] 1 Q. B. 790; 64 L. T. 472; 39 W. R. 655; 55 J. P. 502.

Collecting Crowd—Power to Prosecute.]—A person, by singing hymns, occasioned a crowd to assemble, and thereby obstructed a certain highway within the metropolitan police district. An information was accordingly preferred against him by an inspector of police, under s. 72 of the Highway Act:—Held, that the provisions of s. 72 of the Highway Act were applicable to highways within the metropolitan area:—Held, also, that a prosecution under s. 72 of the act might be initiated by anyone, and therefore that the proceedings taken by the police were valid. Back v. Holmes, 57 L. J., M. C. 37; 56 L. T. 713; 16 Cox, C. C. 263; 51 J. P. 693.

Hanging out Articles in front of Shop—Sect. 119 of the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855, does not impliedly repeal the provisions contained in s. 54 of Michael Angelo Taylor's Act, which impose a penalty upon the hanging out of articles in front of any houses within the metropolis; such provisions are, therefore, still in force. To constitute an offence in such a case under s. 65 of the earlier act it is not necessary that there should be any danger to the highways; it is sufficient if articles are hung out in front of houses, whether over highways or not. Wyatt v. Gems, 62 L. J., M. C. 158; [1893] 2 Q. B. 225; 5 R. 507; 69 L. T. 456; 42 W. R. 28; 17 Cox, C. C. 679; 57 J. P. 665.

Erection of Posts—Power of District Board—Interference with Market.]—A district board of works, under the statutory powers conferred by 57 Geo. 3, c. xxix., s. 58, and 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 108, threatened to erect posts by the side of public footpaths along the public roads leading into the area of Spitalfields Market, in order to preserve the rights of the public and to insure the safety of foot passengers. It was proved that this would seriously interfere with the access to the market, which had been recently enlarged by throwing into it the site of houses which had been pulled down belonging to the plaintiff:—Held, that such an exercise of the board's powers would be an interference with the "rights and privileges vested in the plaintiff in reference to a market" within the exception contained in 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 91, and an injunction was granted restraining the proposed action of the board. Horner v. Whitechapel Board of Works, 55 L. J., Ch. 289; 53 L. T. 842—C. A.

Leaving Package on Footway—Power to state case—Person aggrieved.]—A tenant of D. left a package on the pavement of a court (in the city) 141 feet long and twenty-five feet wide, with two foot pavements, and was charged, under 30 and 31 Vict. c. 134, s. 6, with leaving the package longer than necessary. D., the freeholder, contended that the court was private property for the sole use of the tenants, and was not a street. On the tenant being convicted:—Held, that D. was not "a person aggrieved," and was not entitled to have a special case stated under 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, s. 33. Drapers' Co. v. Hadden, 57 J. P. 200.

Pilasters.]—See post, cols. 1072—1074.

Bow Window.]—See post, col. 1074.

Right of Vestry to Proceed in their own Name.]—A vestry was empowered, by act of parliament, to indict any person who should stop or impede rights of way in the parish, and to take such other proceedings for opening thereof as should appear expedient:—Held, that the vestry must indict in the name of the Queen, and sue in equity in name of the attorney-general, and that they could not proceed in their own name. Bermondsey Vestry v. Brown, 35 Beav. 226.

Right to Sue in Name of Clerk.] — Commissioner under a local paving act in the metropolis, may sue in the name of their clerk under 57 Geo. 3, c. xxix., s. 120, although the local act may direct them to sue in the name of another person. Frost v. Bolland, 5 B. & C. 611; 8 D. & R. 384; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 277. S. P., Dougan v. Bolland, 5 B. & C. 622; 8 D. & R. 435; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 278.

Power of Commissioners under 57 Geo. 3, c. xxix, s. 72.]—The power of the commissioners under 57 Geo. 3, c. xxix, s. 72, is confined to the removing of such things affixed to houses as project over the public way. Bouverie v. Miles, 1 B. & Ad. 38; 8 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 338.

e. Other Offences.

Damage to Street Lamp.]—A person is liable under s. 207 of the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855, to make good the damage done by his breaking a street lamp, even when the damage has been caused without any negligence on his part. Burgess v. Morris, 77 L. T. 97; 61 J. P. 553.

—— Liability of Master.]—A master is not liable under s. 207 of the Metropolis Local Management Act for the accidental breaking by his servant of a street lamp, the top of which projected over the kerb, such accident having been caused by some goods on a van which the servant was driving coming into contact with and breaking the top of the lamp. Harding v. Barker, 37 W. R. 78; 53 J. P. 308.

Street Music—Penalty—Imprisonment in Default of Payment.] — Sect. 1 of the Street Music Act, 1864, does not by implication repeal s. 77 of the Metropolitan Police Act, 1839, and, therefore, a street musician who under s. 1 of the Street Music Act, 1864, is convicted and fined forty shillings, may in default of payment of the fine be committed to prison for one month under s. 77 of the Metropolitan Police Act, 1839, although the punishment by imprisonment provided by s. 1 of the Street Music Act, 1864, cannot exceed three days. Reg. v. Hopkins, 62 L. J., M. C. 57; [1893] 1 Q. B. 621; 5 R. 315; 68 L. T. 292; 41 W. R. 431; 57 J. P. 152.

—— Householder requiring Musician to Depart.]—A householder who under s. 1 of the Metropolitan Police Act, 1864, requires a street musician to depart from the neighbourhood of his house, must give the street musician a reason for requiring him so to depart. Shields v. Howard, 66 L. J., Q. B. 105; [1897] 1 Q. B. 84; 45 W. R. 138; 60 J. P. 727.

Keeping Swine within Forty Yards of Streets.] —The powers conferred upon the commissioners under Michael Angelo Taylor's Act, 57 Geo. 3, c. xxix., absolutely to prevent the keeping of swine in any house, building, yard, or garden in or within forty yards of any street or public place within the district comprised in that act, is not extended by 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 73, to the larger district comprised within such last-mentioned act. Chelsea Vestry v. King, 17 C. B. (N.S.) 625; 34 L. J., M. C. 9; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1150; 11 L. T. 419; 13 W. R. 157.

Turning Cattle into the Streets.]—The owner of land on both sides of a highway, who claimed the grass and herbage growing on such parts of it as were not gravelled, put his cattle under the care of a servant, but who had no hold of them, to graze upon it:—Held, that they were not turned loose within the meaning of 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 54, clause 2. Sherborn v. Wells, 3 B. & S. 784; 32 L. J., M. C. 179; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1104; 8 L. T. 274; 11 W. R. 594.

Trafalgar Square.] — Semble, there is no right on the part of the public to occupy Trafalgar square for the purpose of holding public meetings, but the commissioners of works and public buildings (in whom the care, control, management, and regulation of the square is vested by 7 & 8 Vict. c. 60, s. 2, and 14 & 15 Vict. c. 42 s. 22) have power to prohibit the holding of such meetings there. Lewis, Ex parte, 57 L. J., M. C. 108; 21 Q. B. D. 191; 59 L. T. 338; 37 W. R. 13; 16 Cox, C. C. 449; 52 J. P. 773. S. P., Reg. v. Graham, 16 Cox, C. C. 420

g. Subways.

Right to Use—"Water Company"—Reduced Charge.]—A company constituted for the purpose of supplying hydraulic power, and not empowered to sell water, is not a "water company" within the meaning of s. 5 of the London County Council (Subways) Act, 1893; such a company is therefore not entitled to claim to pay only on the reduced scale of charges applicable to "water companies" for the use of the London County Council's subways. London County Council v. London Hydraulic Co., 61 J. P. 760.

2. Buildings.

See London Building Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. ccxiii.).

a. What are.

Building, what is—Structure of Wood.]—A structure of wood of considerable size (sixteen feet by thirteen), and intended to be permanently used as a shop, is a building, although not let into the ground, but merely laid upon timbers upon the surface. Sterens v. Gourley, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 99; 1 F. & F. 498; 29 L. J., C. P. 1; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 147; 1 L. T. 33; 8 W. R. 85.

New Building—Old Site.]—See Worley v. St. Mary Abbot, Kensington, post, col. 1075.

—— "Warehouse or other Building used wholly or in part for the purposes of trade."]—Where a building to be occupied with adjoining premises is erected on the site of old houses which had previously been so occupied, the whole premises constitute a new building to which the Metropolitan Building Act, 1855, applies. Holland v. Wallen, 10 R. 583; 70 L. T. 376.

The words of r. 4, s. 27, "Every warehouse or other building used either wholly or in part for the purposes of trade," are not confined to buildings ejusdem generis with warehouses. Ib.

"Old Building."]—A building is not an old building within 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, and 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, s. 8, unless the inclosing walls (which expression is not satisfied by two mere boundary walls at either side of the ground) were carried higher than the footings before the 1st of January, 1856. Tear v. Freebody, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 228; 6 W. R. 520.

"Public Building"—Ambulance Station—Deposit of Plans.]—An ambulance station structurally disconnected with any building, and from which the public is rigorously excluded, is not of itself a public building within s. 3 of the Metropolitan Building Act, 1855, so as to require the builder to deposit plans and sections of the building with the notice of its erection to the district surveyor under by-law 5, made under s. 16 of the Metropolitan Management and Building Acts (Amendment Act), 1878. Josolyne v. Meeson, 53 L. T. 319; 49 J. P. 805.

"Wooden Structure of a Moveable Character"—Steam Roundabout—Shooting-gallery—Caravans.]—A steam roundabout, shooting-gallery, and caravans are not "wooden structures or erections of a moveable or temporary character," within the meaning of the Metropolis Management and Building Acts Amendment Act, 1882, and may, therefore, be set up without obtaining from the London County Council the licence in writing prescribed by that section. Hall v. Smallpiece, 59 L. J., M. C. 97; 54 J. P. 710.

—— Builder's Pay-office on Wheels.]—A builder's office, constructed of wood and roofed with zinc, and placed upon iron wheels for the purpose of enabling it to be wheeled about to any place where building operations were being carried on, was, when not required at any such place, kept in the builder's own yard and used as a pay-office for his men:—Held, that it was not a "wooden structure or erection of a moveable or temporary character" within the meaning of s. 13 of the Metropolis Management and Building Acts Amendment Act, 1882 and did not require a licence in writing from the London County Council for its erection. London County Council v. Pearce, [1892] 2 Q. B. 109; 66 L. T. 685; 40 W. R. 543; 56 J. P. 790.

—— Bungalow Exhibited for Sale—Licence to Erect.]—A wooden structure or erection of a moveable character intended for sale, and which upon sale will be removed for actual use and occupation elsewhere, may be erected and set up, for the purpose of exhibition to customers, without the licence of the London County Council, under s. 13 of the Metropolis Management and Buildings Acts Amendment Act, 1882. London County Council v. Humphreys, 63 L. J., M. C. 215; [1894] 2 Q. B. 755; 10 R. 533; 71 L. T. 201; 43 W. R. 13; 58 J. P. 734.

—— Structure for carrying on Business during alterations.]—The proviso attached to s. 13 of the Metropolis Management and Building Acts Amendment Act, 1882, allowing a temporary wooden structure to be "erected by a builder for use during the alteration or repair of any building" without a licence, is limited in its application to structures erected by a builder for his use, and does not apply to a structure erected for the purpose of carrying on during the progress of the works the business usually carried on in the premises undergoing alteration or repair. London County Council v. Candler, 60 L. J., M. C. 114; 55 J. P. 679.

—— Erection without Licence—Penalty.]—See Reg. v. Cluer, London County Council, Ex parte, post, col. 1093.

"Structure or Work"—Temporary Seating in Completed Building—Building Notice.]—The erection of temporary seating in a completed building is not a "structure or work" within the meaning of ss. 78 and 145 of the London Building Act, 1894, and therefore the building notice required by s. 145 need not be given in respect of such erection. The words "structure or work" in s. 145 of the act mean something in the nature of a building; but the question whether an erection is a structure or not within the meaning of any particular section of the act depends upon the facts of and enactments sought to be applied to each particular case. Venner v. McDonnell, 66 L. J., Q. B. 273; [1897] 1 Q. B. 421; 76 L. T. 152; 45 W. R. 267; 61 J. P. 181.

Building "used for the purposes of" a Canal—Notice to District Surveyor.]—A canal company, under their statutory powers, erected a building upon one of their wharves, and let it to tenants, who used it in the course of their business. The company were not carriers, but received tolls in respect of the passage of barges over their canal; and it was arranged between them and the tenants that all the materials required by the tenants should be carried to the wharves in barges along the canal:—Held, that the building was not "used for the purposes of the canal" within the meaning of s. 6 of the Metropolitan Building Act, 1855, and that it was the duty of the builder to give notice to the district surveyor before commencing to build. Coole v. Lovegrove, 62 L. J., M. C. 153; [1893] 2 Q. B. 44; 5 R. 418; 69 L. T. 19; 41 W. R. 570; 57 J. P. 647.

Buildings for Her Majesty's service.]—See Jay v. Hammon, post, col. 1076.

b. In Regular and General Line.

See London Building Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. ccxiii.), ss. 22—31 &c.

"Regular Line," what is.]—By 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 143, after the 1st of January, 1856, no building is to be erected beyond "the regular line of buildings in the street in which the same is situate":—Held, that this does not mean a strict mathematical line, but a substantially regular line. Tear v. Freebody, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 228; 6 W. R. 520.

"General Line"—Architect's Certificate.]—The general line of buildings referred to in 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 75, exists independently of the certificate of the architect. That certificate does not create the general line of building, it merely points it out for the guidance of the magistrate. Wandsworth Board of Works v. Hall, 38 L. J., M. C. 69; L. R. 4 C. P. 85; 19 L. T. 641; 17 W. R. 256.

The "general line of buildings" referred to in the Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862, s. 75, exists independently of the certificate of the architect, which merely points it out for the guidance of the magistrate. Wandsworth Board of Works v. Hall, (L. R. 4 C. P. 85), followed. Paddington Vestry v. Snow, 45 L. T. 475; 30 W. R. 46; 46 J. P. 87. And see London County Council v. Cross, and Lavy v. London County Council, post, cols. 1092, 1093.

—— Determination of.]—In determining the general line of buildings of a street the architect of the Metropolitan Board of Works ought to have regard to the frontage of houses previously existing, and which may be rebuilt as well as to those still standing. Auckland (Lord) v. Westminster Board of Works, 41 L. J., Ch. 723; L. R. 7 Ch. 97; 26 L. T. 961; 20 W. R. 845.

Observations on the matters to be taken into consideration by the London County Council in fixing the building line with respect to a street. Worley v. St. Mary Abbot, Kensington, 61 L. J., Ch. 601; [1892] 2 Ch. 404; 66 L. T. 747; 40 W. R. 566.

—— Jurisdiction of Magistrate—Architect's Decision.]—The certificate of the superintending architect of the Metropolitan Board of Works made under the Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 102), s. 75, and fixing the "general line of buildings" in a road, is conclusive as to a building erected before the certificate is made; and on the hearing of a summons (issued after the making of the certificate) for an offence under s. 75 alleged to have been committed in respect of such building, the justice has no jurisdiction to review the architect's decision, or decide for himself whether the line fixed by the certificate is the true general line. Simpson v. Smith, (L. R. 6 C. P. 87) overruled. Spackman v. Plumstead Board of Works, 54 L. J., M. C. 81; 10 App. Cas. 229; 53 L. T. 157; 33 W. R. 661; 49 J. P. 420—H. L. (E.)

—— Line Determined on Day previous to Hearing of Summons—Demolition.]—Where B. applied to the Metropolitan Board of Works for consent to build a house which was granted, but without procuring the conditions upon which the consent was granted, he built higher than those conditions permitted:—Held, that a magistrate, upon a summons charging him with having erected a building beyond the general line of buildings in the street, and contrary to the conditions on which the consent of the board was obtained, might order him under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 75, to demolish so much of the house as was beyond the general line, although this line had only been decided by the superintending architect on the day previous to the hearing of the summons. Bauman v. St. Pancras Vestry, 36 L. J., M. C. 127; L. R. 2 Q. B. 528; 15 W. R. 904.

House at Corner of two Streets—Architect's Certificate—Jurisdiction of Magistrate.]—The appellant's house was built at the corner of the K. road and a new street called D. gardens. The side of the house abutting on the eastern side of D. gardens projected beyond a row of houses on that side of D. gardens. Under s. 75 of the Metropolis Management Amendment Act 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 102), the superintending architect to the Metropolitan Board of Works gave a certificate that the main fronts of that row of houses was the general line of buildings, on the eastern side of D. gardens, but did not decide that that was the general line of buildings, either of the row of houses or of the street in which the appellant's house was situate:—Held, that no offence under s. 75 had been committed by the building of the appellant's house, and that there was no jurisdiction for a magistrate's order under that section directing the demolition of the projecting part of the house. Barlow v. St. Mary Abbot, Kensington, 55 L. J., Ch. 680; 11 App. Cas. 257; 55 L. T. 221; 34 W. R. 521; 50 J. P. 691—H. L. (E.)

The duty of the superintending architect to the County Council is to find by his certificate not only what is the general line of buildings for a particular street, but also whether the building complained of as projecting beyond the general line is in fact in that street; and his finding on the latter (as well as on the former) question is conclusive, and cannot be reviewed either by a court of summary jurisdiction or on appeal therefrom. Barlow v. St. Mary Abbot, Kensington (11 App. Cas. 257), applied and followed. Allen v. London County Council, 64 L. J., M. C. 228; [1895] 2 Q. B. 587; 14 R. 749; 73 L. T. 101; 43 W. R. 674; 59 J. P. 644—C. A.

The appellant's house was built at the corner of S. road and C. road. The superintending architect of the Metropolitan Board of Works gave his certificate under the 75th section of the Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862, that the building line in the C. road exceeded fifty feet from the highway. At the date of this certificate all the houses on the west side of the S. road, including the appellant's house, had a uniform line of frontage to that road only, and there was no access to the appellant's house from any other road. The appellant's house was within fifty feet of the C. road, and it was found as a fact that the site on which the appellant's house was built was in the C. road:—Held, that, although the appellant's house faced the S. road, as it was within the building line of the C. road, it was bound to follow the building line in C. road, and that the magistrate had power to order the removal of the house, or so much of it as projected beyond the building line in the C. road. Gilbart v. Wandsworth Board of Works, 60 L. T. 149; 53 J. P. 229.

Addition to Old Buildings — Distance from Centre of Road — "Existing Street."] — The appellant was the owner of a house and garden abutting upon an old public carriage-way. The house of the appellant as well as several others were erected on either side of the road prior to the passing of the Metropolis Management Act, 1878. In 1889, the appellant pulled down the wall that separated his garden from the road and erected a new fence a few feet further back from the road; he subsequently commenced to build shops upon the site of the garden, and extended his boundary fence to its original position, which was less than the prescribed distance from the centre of the roadway within the meaning of s. 6 of the above act:—Held, that the road was an "existing street" within that section, and therefore that the appellant could not be required to set back his boundary fence. Ellis v. London County Council, 67 L. T. 558; 57 J. P. 24.

Forecourt—Notice to Set Back.]—Sect. 14 of the London Building Act, 1894, does not apply to all the offences created by s. 13, sub-s. 1, and where the external boundary of a "forecourt" is within the prescribed distance from the centre of a roadway the county council has no power under s. 14 to serve a notice upon the owner or occupier requiring him to set back the forecourt so that every part of the external boundary thereof shall be at a distance from the centre of the roadway not less than the distance permitted by the act. London County Council v. Aylesbury Dairy Co., 67 L. J., Q. B. 24; [1898] 1 Q. B. 106; 77 L. T. 440; 61 J. P. 759.

"Building, Structure, or Erection"—Boundary-wall or Fence.]—Sect. 75 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1862, is not intended, under the conditions specified in the section, to prevent an owner from erecting beyond the "building line" such a wall or fence as would be a reasonable ascertainment of, and protection to, his property; it must be left to the magistrate to say whether a wall or fence is made for that purpose, or whether, by not being bonâ fide confined to that object, it becomes a "building, structure, or erection" within the meaning of the section. Ellis v. Plumstead Board of Works, 5 R. 237; 68 L. T. 291; 41 W. R. 496; 57 J. P. 359.

—— Wall intended as Screen for Advertisements.]—It is not a condition precedent to the issue of a summons under s. 75 of the Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862, for building beyond the general line, that the architect should have decided a line. London County Council v. Cross (61 L. J., M. C. 160) followed. It is a question of fact whether a particular wall is a "building, structure, or erection," within the section. A wall eighteen inches thick and eleven feet high, intended, inter alia, as a screen for advertisements, and built in the place of a dwarf boundary wall nine inches thick and between two and three feet high with iron railings of about five feet high on the top which, semble, was not a "building, structure, or erection":—Held, to be a "building, structure, or erection." Lacy v. London County Council, 64 L. J., M. C. 262; [1895] 2 Q. B. 577; 14 R. 634; 73 L. T. 106; 43 W. R. 677; 59 J. P. 630—C. A.

—— Conservatories.] — By 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 75, no building, structure, or erection, shall, without the consent in writing of the Metropolitan Board of Works, be erected beyond the general line of buildings in any street, place, or row of houses in which the same is situate, such general line of buildings to be decided by the superintending architect of the Metropolitan Board of Works for the time being. A magistrate having decided that a small conservatory, consisting of an iron frame (glazed) projecting beyond the wall of the house, but not beyond the shop-front, was not an erection within the statute, and that it was not beyond the general line of buildings in the street, the court upheld his decision. St. George's, Hanover Square, Vestry v. Sparrow, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 209; 33 L. J., M. C. 118; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 771; 10 L. T. 504; 12 W. R. 832.

—— Rights of Owner as affected by General Line of Buildings.]—A "building, structure, or erection" within s. 75 of the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1862, existing at the time when a "general line of buildings" is made manifest, can be continued, completed, or altered after the general line of buildings becomes manifest, and is not within the mischief of the section. But if what has been already put up is not a "building, structure or erection," then if it is in advance of the general line of buildings subsequently determined, any completion will be a "building, structure or erection" in advance of the general line of buildings, and so liable to demolition pursuant to the section. Wendon v. London County Council, 63 L. J., M. C. 117; [1894] 1 Q. B. 812; 9 R. 292; 70 L. T. 440; 42 W. R. 370; 58 J. P. 606—C. A.

Projections—Pilaster encroaching on Public Footway.]—By 57 Geo. 3, c. xxix. (Michael Angelo Taylor's Act), s. 72, power is given to the persons having the control of the pavements of streets of the metropolis to regulate and remove (inter alia) all projections from the fronts of houses which in their judgment are inconvenient or incommodious to passengers along the footways; and a penalty is imposed upon any owner or occupier who refuses or neglects to remove any such projection after notice.—By s. 26 of the Metropolitan Building Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 122), "The following rules shall be observed as to projections. . . . (2) In any street or alley of a greater width than thirty feet any shop front may project ten inches and no more. (5) Except in so far as is permitted by this section in the case of shop fronts, and with the exception of. . . .

window dressings and other like architectural decorations, no projection from any building shall extend beyond the general line of fronts in any street, except with the permission of the Metropolitan Board of Works. . . ." The respondent built upon one side of a public street four houses or shops upon four plots of ground of which he was lessee, and erected against the fronts of them five stone pilasters, forming parts of shop fronts, the bases of which pilasters encroached upon the public footway to the extent of six inches in depth. The appellants, having passed a resolution declaring the pilasters to be inconvenient and incommodious to passengers along the footway, served the respondent with a notice to remove them, and upon his default took out a summons against him, under s. 72 of Michael Angelo Taylor's Act, for not removing them. The magistrate dismissed the summons:—Held, that s. 26 of the Metropolitan Building Act, 1855, did not amount to a repeal pro tanto of s. 72 of Michael Angelo Taylor's Act; that it only authorised projections in cases where, but for a statutory prohibition, they would be lawful, and did not authorise projections which would interfere with the user by the public of a public footway; and that the decision of the magistrate was wrong. St. Mary, Islington, v. Goodman, 58 L. J., M. C. 122; 23 Q. B. D. 154; 61 L. T. 44; 54 J. P. 52.

By 57 Geo. 3, c. 29, s. 72, the commissioners or trustees having the control of the pavements of the streets in the metropolis are empowered to regulate or remove, in such manner as they shall from time to time judge proper, any projections from the fronts or sides of any house in any street which, in their judgment, are inconvenient or incommodious to the passengers along the carriage or footways of the streets, and a penalty of not less than 40*s.* nor exceeding 5*l.* is imposed upon any owner or occupier refusing or neglecting "immediately" to remove any such projections, on being required to do so by a notice from the commissioners or trustees. By the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 119), it is provided that if any projection or obstruction placed against or in front of any house shall be an annoyance in consequence of the same projecting into any street, it shall be lawful for the vestry to give notice in writing to the owner or occupier of such house to remove the projection or obstruction; and if the owner or occupier "neglect or refuse within fourteen days after such notice" to remove the projection or obstruction, he is made liable to a penalty not exceeding 5*l.*, and a further sum not exceeding 40*s.* for every day during which the projection or obstruction continues after the time when he may be convicted. By the Metropolitan Building Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 122), s. 26, "The following rules shall be observed as to projections; (2) in any street or alley of a width greater than thirty feet, any shop-front may project ten inches and no more. . . . (5) Except in so far as is permitted by this section in the case of shop-fronts, . . . no projection from any building shall extend beyond the general line of fronts in any street," except with the permission of the Metropolitan Board of Works. The appellant having obtained a lease of certain surplus land which had been acquired by the metropolitan board for the purpose of widening a public street, proceeded to erect thereon seven shops, and, as part of the fronts of such shops, erected six pilasters which projected beyond the general line of buildings to the extent of nine inches of the footway. Upon a complaint by the respondents against the appellant under s. 72 of 57 Geo. 3, c. 29, the magistrate convicted the appellant:—Held, that the section had been impliedly repealed by s. 119 of the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855, that any proceedings should therefore have been taken under the latter section, and that the conviction must, upon this ground, be quashed:—But held further, that the projections erected by the appellant were expressly authorised by s. 26 of the Metropolitan Building Act, 1855, and that proceedings could not therefore be successfully taken against him under the latter enactment. St. Mary, Islington, v. Goodman (23 Q. B. D. 154) dissented from. Fortescue v. St. Matthew, Bethnal Green, 60 L. J., M. C. 172; [1891] 2 Q. B. 170; 65 L. T. 256; 55 J. P. 758.

—— Bow Windows—Violation of Local but not of General Act—Implied Repeal.]—A defendant was convicted under a local act of 35 Geo. 3, for having added to his house a bow window extending beyond the general line of the fronts of the houses in the street; but it appeared that the projection did not overhang the ground of any other owner, nor in any other respect violate any requirement of the general Metropolitan Building Act, 7 & 8 Vict. c. 84:—Held, that the conviction could not be sustained, as the general act must be considered to have repealed pro tanto the local act. Reg. v. Pratt, 3 C. L. R. 826.

—— What are—Shed and Seats.]—See Le Nere v. Mile End Old Town Vestry, ante, col. 1052.

Rebuilding on Old Site.]—The 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 75, does not apply to ground formerly covered with buildings, unless the owner has relinquished his right of rebuilding on the same site. Auckland (Lord) v. Westminster Board of Works, 41 L. J., Ch. 723; L. R. 7 Ch. 597; 26 L. T. 961; 20 W. R. 845.

If, therefore, the district board of works threatens to proceed under s. 75 to demolish houses which are being rebuilt on an old site, on the ground that they are beyond the general line of buildings, it is acting ultra vires, and may be restrained by the court of chancery. In such a case the metropolitan board ought to proceed under s. 74, which provides for compensation to the landowners. Ib.

A railway company took land covered with houses, and pulled down houses for the purpose of constructing their railway, and then sold the land as building ground:—Held, that the purchaser had not lost the right to rebuild the houses on the same site as that occupied by the houses before they were pulled down; and that for this purpose the yard of a house was held to be equivalent to a house. Ib.

—— Abandonment of Intention — Vacant Land.]—G. owned two houses in Kensington and land therewith. Colby House came up to, and in part projected beyond, the building line of Kensington Road. Kensington House stood farther back. In 1873 G. pulled down the two houses, and erected a mansion on part of the land, farther back from the road than the original house, throwing into the street the site of the projection of Colby House, and leaving the rest of the site of Colby House and of part of Kensington House to be laid out as a garden, except that a small lodge was built upon part thereof. The mansion and lodge were in 1880 pulled down, and the premises turned into a building estate. In 1891 the plaintiff took a lease of part of the site of the two original houses, and began to build up to what was formerly the frontage of Colby House (except so far as it formerly projected). The London County Council fixed the building-line of the plaintiff's land farther back than the former frontage. The plaintiff brought an action to restrain the defendants from taking steps, under s. 75 of the act above named, to compel him to set back his building, on the ground that he was building on an old site, and that therefore, on the authority of Auckland v. Westminster Board of Works (L. R. 7 Ch. 597), s. 75 did not apply:—Held, that the plaintiff's building was a new building erected on a vacant space, and not a restoration of an old building or an erection on land upon which it had always been intended to build, and that the case was within s. 75, and the court could not interfere. Worley v. St. Mary Abbot, Kensington, 61 L. J., Ch. 601; [1892] 2 Ch. 404; 66 L. T. 747; 40 W. R. 566.

A forecourt forty feet long, and a back garden seventy feet long, formerly belonging to an old building, but subsequently forming part of a new street, in respect of which a building-line has been duly certified, cannot, where such building has been pulled down, and the owner has shown an intention to abandon his right to rebuild on the actual site of the old building, be treated either as part of the curtilage of the building, and in that sense as part of the building itself, within the meaning of s. 74 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1862, but must be treated as "vacant land" within the meaning of s. 75; and the owner is not entitled, after the old building has been pulled down, to erect another building which will cover the old site and also the "vacant land" on each side of it, if by so doing such building will go beyond the building-line which has been certified. Auckland (Lord) v. Westminster District Board of Works (41 L. J., Ch. 723; L. R. 7 Ch. 597) distinguished. London County Council v. Pryor, 65 L. J., M. C. 89; [1896] 1 Q. B. 465; 74 L. T. 234; 60 J. P. 292—C. A.

Effect of Special Act—Railway Station.]—A company was empowered by their special act to widen a branch of their railway passing through London, and to build additional stations. In conformity with the powers so given, the company proceeded to erect a station on their land by the side of a highway, within the distance required to be left between buildings and highways in London by the Metropolis Management Act, which had passed shortly after the special act of the company:—Held, that the powers conferred on the company by their special act were not controlled by the latter statute, and that the company was authorised so to build their station. London and Blackwall Ry. v. Limehouse Board of Works, 3 Kay & J. 123; 26 L. J., Ch. 164; 5 W. R. 64.

By a statute passed prior to the railway act, the trustees of the particular highway had power to prevent any building being erected so near to the road as the station was being built. The Metropolis Management Act repealed this statute, and vested this authority in the managing body thereby constituted:—Held, that the trustees of the road must be taken to have been present at the passing of the railway act, as well as of the metropolis act, and therefore the powers given by the railway act must prevail. Ib.

A railway company were empowered by a special act passed in 1887 to make a subway in the metropolis, with all necessary approaches, and to use such of the lands delineated on the deposited plans as might be required for that purpose:—Held, that the act empowered the company to erect on land compulsorily acquired within the limits of deviation a station beyond the general line of buildings of the street in which the same was situate, notwithstanding s. 75 of the Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862. City and South London Ry. v. London County Council, 60 L. J., M. C. 149; [1891] 2 Q. B. 513; 65 L. T. 362; 40 W. R. 166; 56 J. P. 6—C. A.

—— School Board Site.]—The provisions of s. 6 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1878, by which building within twenty feet of the centre of the highway is prohibited, are inconsistent with a special act empowering the London School Board to acquire compulsorily a particular site, defined by metes and bounds, for the purpose of providing school accommodation. Consequently the school board take such site, or so much of it as is necessary for school accommodation, free from the restriction imposed by the general act. City and South London Ry. v. London County Council ([1891] 2 Q. B. 513) followed. London County Council v. London School Board, 62 L. J., M. C. 30; [1892] 2 Q. B. 606; 5 R. 1; 40 W. R. 604; 56 J. P. 791.

Exemptions—Government Buildings.]—Buildings erected by the commissioners of lieutenancy of the city of London, under 1 Geo. 4, c. 100, s. 39, and 17 & 18 Vict. c. 105, s. 2, for the custody of the arms and stores of the militia, are within the exemption in 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, s. 6, as employed for her Majesty's use or service; and it is not necessary to give notice to the district surveyor before commencing the buildings. Jay v. Hammon, 8 El. & Bl. 469; 27 L. J., M. C. 25; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 407.

—— Chancel of a Church.]—The ecclesiastical commissioners have no power, by virtue of the exceptions contained in 19 & 20 Vict. c. 112, s. 3, to contravene the provisions of 14 Geo. 3, c. 78, or of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 143, by erecting the chancel of a church, part of which projects beyond the general line of buildings in a street, without the sanction of the board of works, as required by the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 143. Ecclesiastical Commissioners v. Clerkenwell Vestry, 3 De G. F. & J. 688; 30 L. J., Ch. 454; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 810; 4 L. T. 599; 9 W. R. 681.

Demolition—"Order in Writing."]—A magistrate made a verbal order under s. 75 directing the builder to demolish part of a house within eight weeks. The builder was present when the order was made, but it was not reduced into writing till the day when the eight weeks expired; after that day a copy was served upon him or came to his knowledge:—Held, that the order was not "an order in writing made on" the builder within the meaning of s. 75, and was therefore invalid. Barlow v. St. Mary Abbot Vestry, 55 L. J., Ch. 680; 11 App. Cas. 257; 55 L. T. 221; 34 W. R. 521; 50 J. P. 691—H. L. (E.)

c. Construction.

Building Contracts anterior to London Building Act, 1894.]—Contracts to erect and complete houses at certain dates year by year for several years, entered into before the passing of the London Building Act, 1894, are, by s. 212, preserved from the operation of the provisions of that act. The application of s. 212 is not to be narrowed down to specific structural works in progress at the date of the passing of the act. Tanner v. Oldham, 65 L. J., M. C. 10; [1896] 1 Q. B. 60; 15 R. 603; 73 L. T. 404; 44 W. R. 63.

Union of Two Buildings.]—The alteration of an old building by an addition is not an uniting of two buildings within r. 2 of s. 28 of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, unless the addition was at some time a separate building in itself. Scott v. Legg, 46 L. J., M. C. 267; 10 Q. B. D. 236; 36 L. T. 456; 25 W. R. 594—C. A.

Sect. 9 confines the operation of r. 4 of s. 27 to cases where an addition to an old building, taken by itself, contains more than the statutory number of cubic feet. Ib.

For many years before the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122 came into operation, the houses Nos. 66 and 67 in A. had been united by means of an opening in the party-wall between them. In June, 1862, B., being the occupier of these two houses, and of No. 6 in a lane, made two openings in the wall dividing No. 6 and No. 66. The three houses together contained more than 216,000 cubic feet, but Nos. 6 and 66 taken alone did not contain so much:—Held, that the two houses Nos. 66 and 67 must be considered as one building, and that the openings between Nos. 6 and 66 must be made in accordance with the requirements of the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, s. 28. Ashby v. Woodthorpe, 33 L. J., M. C. 68; 9 L. T. 409; 12 W. R. 209.

Public Buildings.]—The rules of construction contained in the first schedule of the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, have no reference to public buildings, which class of buildings are to be constructed as may be approved by the district surveyor, with an appeal, in case of disagreement between him and the builder, to the Metropolitan Board of Works. Reg. v. Carruthers, 4 B. & S. 804; 33 L. J., M. C. 107; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 767; 9 L. T. 825; 12 W. R. 372.

Height—"Erected on the Side of any new Street."]—A building erected at the corner of two streets, one being a new street, is a building "erected on the side of" the new street within s. 85 of the Metropolis Management Act Amendment Act, 1862, and consequently such building must not be higher than the width of the new street. London County Council v. Lawrence, 62 L. J., M. C. 176; [1893] 2 Q. B. 228; 5 R. 494; 69 L. T. 344; 41 W. R. 688; 57 J. P. 617.

Incombustible Material — Construction of Walls.]—By 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, s. 12, and schedule 1, "every building shall be inclosed with walls constructed of brick, stone or other hard and incombustible substance": — Held, that these words amount to a prohibition against building the walls of wood or other combustible substance. Stevens v. Gourley, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 99; 1 F. & F. 498; 29 L. J., C. P. 1; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 147; 1 L. T. 33; 8 W. R. 85.

—— Construction of Roofs—"Duroline"—Woven Iron Wire with Oleaginous Coating.]—Sect. 19 of the Metropolitan Building Act, 1855, provides that the roof of every building in the metropolis shall be externally covered with slates, tiles, metal, or other incombustible materials:—Held, that a roof covered with a material composed of woven iron wire, with a coating which, on the application of a hot coal or a lighted stick, ignited and burnt away, leaving the wirework foundation bare, was not covered with an incombustible material within the meaning of the act. Payne v. Wright 61 L. J., M. C. 7; [1892] 1 Q. B. 104; 65 L. T. 612; 40 W. R. 191; 56 J. P. 120.

Thickness of Walls.]—See Foot v. Hodgson, 59 L. J., Q. B. 343; 25 Q. B. D. 160; 55 J. P. 116 (infra, col. 1080).

By-Law—Removal of Animal Matter from "Site" underneath Foundations.] — By the Metropolis Management and Building Acts Amendment Act, 1878, s. 16, the Metropolitan Board of Works were empowered to make by-laws with respect to "the foundations of houses, buildings, and other erections, and the sites of houses, buildings, and other erections to be constructed after the passing of this act, and the mode in which and the materials with which such foundations and sites shall be made, formed, excavated, filled up, prepared, and completed for securing stability, the prevention of fires, and for purposes of health." By s. 14 the term "site" is defined to mean "the whole space to be occupied by such house, building, or other erection between the level of the bottom of the foundations and the level of the base of the walls." The Metropolitan Board of Works made the following by-law: "No house, building, or other erection shall be erected upon any site or portion of any site which shall have been filled up or covered with any material impregnated or mixed with any fæcal, animal or vegetable matter, or which shall have been filled up or covered with dust, or slop, or other refuse, or in or upon which any such matter or refuse shall have been deposited, unless and until such matter or refuse shall have been properly removed by excavations or otherwise from such site":—Held, that the meaning of the word "site" in the by-law was governed by the interpretation of that word in the act, so that the by-law did not authorise the Metropolitan Board of Works to direct the removal of fæcal, animal or vegetable matter in the soil below the level of the bottom of the foundations. Blashill v Chambers, 14 Q. B. D. 479; 53 L. T. 38; 49 J. P. 388.

Grant of Licences for Hoardings.]—B. having contracted to erect a building (the new postoffice), which would take two years in its erection, applied to the commissioners of sewers of the city for a licence to erect a hoarding to inclose the space, under the City of London Sewers Act, 1848, which hoarding would run into four streets. The commissioners refused to grant a licence, except upon the terms that there should be a distinct licence for the hoarding in each of the four streets, that it should continue for two months, that a fee of 10*l.* should be paid for each licence, and that no placards or other materials for advertising should be placed against the hoarding:—Held, first, that the commissioners ought not to have required four licences for the hoarding, but only one licence. Reg. v. Sewers Commissioners, Brass, Ex parte, 22 L. T. 582.

Held, secondly, that they ought not to have limited the duration of the licence to two months, but should have granted the licence for such a length of time as would be reasonably requisite for the erection of the building. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that they had no right to impose the condition that no placards, or other materials, should be placed against the hoarding. Ib.

d. Party-Walls.

See London Building Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. ccxiii.), ss. 87—101, &c.

i. Generally.

Classification of.]—The word "party-wall" may be used in four different senses: (1) A wall of which the two adjoining owners are tenants in common—this is the most common and the primary meaning of the term; (2) A wall divided longitudinally into two strips, one belonging to each of the adjoining owners; (3) A wall which belongs entirely to one of the adjoining owners, but is subject to an easement in the other to have it maintained as a dividing wall between the two tenements; (4) A wall divided longitudinally into two moieties, each moiety being subject to a cross easement in favour of the owner of the other moiety. Watson v. Gray, 49 L. J., Ch. 243; 14 Ch. D. 192; 42 L. T. 294; 28 W. R. 438; 44 J. P. 537.

Wall Extending above adjoining Building.]—A wall may be a party-wall as to a portion of its height, and cease to be a party-wall for the rest of its height; and s. 75 of the London Building Act, 1894, does not make it a party-wall above the line where it ceases to divide buildings. Drury v. Army and Navy Stores, 65 L. J., M. C. 169; [1896] 2 Q. B. 271; 74 L. T. 621; 44 W. R. 560; 60 J. P. 421.

United Buildings—Appeal.]—By s. 9 of the Metropolitan Buildings Act, 1855, an addition to an old building is subject to the regulations of the act; by s. 27, r. 4, certain buildings containing more than 216,000 cubic feet are to be divided by party-walls; and by s. 28, r. 2, no buildings shall be united, if when so united they will be in contravention of the act. A new building was added to an old building, the united building containing more than 216,000 cubic feet:—Held, that the united building was not within the words of the act, and need not be divided by a party-wall. An appeal from the decision of a magistrate will lie under s. 106 of the act, although there has not been a conviction. Scott v. Legg, 46 L. J., M. C. 267; 10 Q. B. D. 236; 36 L. T. 456; 25 W. R. 594—C. A.

Adjoining Properties.]—The builder of a house on a new foundation may not erect half his flank or side wall on his neighbour's vacant ground. Barlow v. Norman, 2 W. Bl. 959.

The 14 Geo. 3, c. 78, did not make party-walls common property; and if one proprietor added to the height of such a party-wall, and the other pulled down the addition, the first might maintain trespass for pulling down so much of it as stood on the half of the wall which was erected on the plaintiff's soil: the property in a wall erected at a joint expense follows the property of the land whereon it stands. Matts v. Hawkins, 5 Taunt. 20; 14 R. R. 695.

Measurement of Height of Wall—Storey.]—By schedule 1 of the Metropolitan Building Act, 1855, the thickness of the external and party walls of dwelling-houses and warehouses throughout the different storeys is regulated in accordance with rules there laid down, the necessary thickness varying with the height and width of the wall; by r. 5, provision is made for the mode of measuring the height of every topmost storey, and by r. 6, "the height of every wall is to be measured from the base of the wall to the level of the top of the topmost storey":—Held, that a "topmost storey" need not necessarily be contained within four vertical walls, and that floors or rooms enclosed on three sides by vertical walls and in front by the sloping roof of the house were storeys within the meaning of the schedule and rules. Foot v. Hodgson, 59 L. J., Q. B. 343; 25 Q. B. D. 160; 55 J. P. 116.

Must be Vertical.]—A party-wall must be a vertical and not a horizontal division. Holland v. Wallen, 10 R. 583; 70 L. T. 376.

7 & 8 Vict. c. 84.]—The 7 & 8 Vict. c. 84, is an act of a local and personal nature. Richards v. Easto, 3 D. & L. 515; 15 M. & W. 244; 15 L. J., Ex. 163; 10 Jur. 695.

See also BOUNDARIES.

ii. Liability for Expenses.

Where Wall Insufficient for all Purposes.]—Where a party-wall is defective for all purposes, the expense of pulling down and rebuilding, &c., must be borne by the building and adjoining owners. Seawell v. Webster, 29 L. J., Ch. 71; 7 W. R. 691.

Where Wall Insufficient for New Building Only.]—Where a party-wall, sufficient for all other purposes, is incapable of bearing the structure to be placed upon it by the building owner, he has a right, under s. 83 of the Metropolitan Building Act, 1855, upon notice to the adjoining owner, to pull down the same compulsorily, bearing the expense. Ib.

Owner of Improved Rent.]—The owner of the improved rent, not of the ground rent, was liable to pay the expenses of a party-wall, under 14 Geo. 3, c. 78. Peck v. Wood, 5 Term Rep. 130.

The assignee of the lessee of premises, at a fixed rent, which he considerably improved, and thereby rendered of greater annual value, was not the owner of the improved rent within that statute. Lambe v. Hemans, 2 B. & Ald. 467.

An executor or an administrator might be liable, as the owner of the improved rent, for the expenses of pulling down and rebuilding a party-wall under 14 Geo. 3, c. 78, s, 41, even though he had no other assets than the improved rent. Thackar v. Wilson, 4 N. & M. 659; 3 A. & E. 142; 1 H. & W. 131; 4 L. J., K. B. 149.

The lessor of a house at rack-rent (there being no other person entitled to any kind of rent) was liable to contribute to the expenses of a party-wall, under 14 Geo. 3, c. 78, though the lessee had improved the house demised. Beardmore v. Fox, 8 Term Rep. 214.

As between Landlord and Tenant.]—If a landlord declared on a general covenant to repair a messuage, and assigned a breach, per quod he was put to expense, it was sufficient for the tenant to plead performance of all, except as to the repairs of a party-wall, and that those repairs were rendered necessary, and were done under 14 Geo. 3, c. 78. Moore v. Clark, 5 Taunt. 90.

A lessee for twenty-one years, at a peppercorn rent for the first half-year, and a rack-rent for the rest of the term, who by agreement was to put the premises in repair, and convenated to pay the land-tax, and all other taxes, rates, assessments and impositions, having assigned his term for a small sum in gross, was not liable to pay the expense of a party-wall, either by the 14 Geo. 3, c. 78, or by the covenant; but that charge must in such case be borne by the original landlord. Southall v. Ledbetter, 3 Term Rep. 458.

The tenant of a house covenanted in his lease to pay a reasonable share and proportion of supporting, repairing and amending all party-walls, and to pay all taxes, duties, assessments, and impositions, parliamentary and parochial, "it being the intention of the parties that the landlord should receive the clear yearly rent of 60*l.* in net money, without any deduction whatever." During the lease the proprietor of the adjoining house built a party-wall between that house and the house demised, under the statute:—Held, that the tenant (not the landlord) was bound to pay the moiety of the expense of the party-wall. Barrett v. Bedford (Duke), 8 Term Rep. 602.

A tenant under covenant to repair could not maintain an action under the statute, against his landlord, for a moiety of the expense of rebuilding a party-wall, which, being out of repair, the tenant pulled down and rebuilt at the joint expense of himself and the occupier of the adjoining house, to whom he had given the notice required by the statute, in his landlord's name, but without his authority. Pizey v. Rogers, R. & M. 357.

Under Building Agreement.]—A lessee of land from N. entered into an agreement with G., who was to build houses and pay him 20*l.* a year, and G. then employed the lessee to build the houses:—Held, that the lessee was liable to contribute to a party-wall to which the houses were attached. Collins v. Wilson, 4 Bing. 551; 1 M. & P. 454; 6 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 107.

A tenant who rebuilt a house in London, without a lease or an agreement for a lease, and therein made use of the party-wall of the adjoining house, could not be sued for half the cost as owner of the improved rent; though he afterwards obtained, in consideration of the rebuilding, a beneficial lease at a low ground rent, habendum from a day before the rebuilding. Taylor v. Reed, 6 Taunt. 249.

A., a builder, proposed to B., the occupier of the adjoining house, to build a party-wall, and stated the expense; B. answered "Very well, I expect to pay what is right and fair," and the wall was built:—Held, that A. was entitled to recover from B. his share of the expense, without reference to the statute. Stuart v. Smith, 2 Marsh. 435; 7 Taunt. 158; Holt, 321.

Sub-Tenancies.]—A tenant of premises having built a party-wall thereon, let a portion of them upon a building agreement for 50*l.* a year. The sub-tenant built a house on his part of the ground, and in so doing made use of the party-wall; the agreement contained no stipulation in case of this being done. The sub-tenant underlet the house, when finished, at a rent exceeding 50*l.*:—Held, that the original tenant was not entitled to compensation from his lessee, under the statue, for the use of the party-wall, since he himself, and not the sub-tenant, was the owner of the improved rent within that clause. Williams v. Pocklington, 2 B. & Ad. 878; 1 L. J., K. B. 28.

If the lessee of a house at a rack-rent underlet it at an advanced rent, he was liable to contribute to the expenses of a party-wall built under the statute; nor was the operation of the statute at all varied by any covenants to repair, entered into between the landlord and his tenant. Sangster v. Birkhead, 1 Bos. & P. 303.

Recovery of Money Paid.]—A tenant who has been compelled by the building owner to pay the proportion of the expenses of a party-wall or structure which was payable, under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, by his landlord, "the adjoining owner," may maintain an action against the latter to recover the sum so paid, and is not bound (though entitled) to deduct it from rent due or accruing due. Earle v. Maugham, 14 C. B. (N.S.) 626; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 208; 8 L. T. 637; 11 W. R. 911.

When notice of pulling down and rebuilding a party-wall was given under 14 Geo. 3, c. 78, and the tenant of the adjoining house, who was under covenant to repair, finding it necessary, in consequence, to shore up his house, and to pull down and replace the wainscot and partitions of it, instead of leaving such expenses to be incurred and paid by the owner of the house, giving notice in the manner prescribed by the act, and afterwards paying the same to him upon demand, employed workmen of his own to do those necessary works, and paid them for the same:—Held, that he could not recover over against his landlord such expenses incurred by his own orders, and paid for by him in the first instance; all the powers and authorities given by the act in respect to any works to be done being given to the owner of the house intended to be pulled down and rebuilt, and the landlord of the adjoining house being only liable by the act to reimburse his tenant money paid by him to the other owner, for such works as were authorised to be done by such other owner in respect of such adjoining house. Robinson v. Lewis, 10 East, 227.

Amount of Expenses—Objection to.]—A structure within the metropolis having been surveyed by the board of works under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, ss. 69, 73, an order was made by a magistrate for the owner to take down or otherwise secure the party-walls. Upon his default the board themselves executed the works and took out a summons against the owner for the expenses incurred :—Held, first, that upon the hearing of such summons the owner could not object to his being made liable for expenses actually incurred, by merely showing that they included items which were in excess of the market price of labour and materials at the date of the execution of the works. Secondly, that he could not require that the other owners of the party-walls should be summoned in order that the expenses might be distributed among them. Debenham v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 50 L. J., M. C. 29 ; 6 Q. B. D. 112 ; 43 L. T. 596 ; 29 W. R. 353 ; 45 J. P. 190.

iii. Right to Pull Down and Rebuild.

Party Wall, what is.]—The plaintiff was the owner of a boundary wall built on his own land, against which he had built some closets, and the defendant, his adjoining neighbour, had recently built a substantial structure :—Held, that, so far as these buildings extended against both sides of the wall, it was a "party-wall" within the Metropolitan Buildings Act (18 & 19 Vict. c. 122), and the defendant was entitled, on giving the proper notices under the act, to take down such part as might be necessary for the purposes of necessary rebuilding. Knight v. Purssell, 48 L. J., Ch. 395 ; 11 Ch. D. 412 ; 40 L. T. 391 ; 27 W. R. 817.

Notice to "Adjoining Owner."]—A tenant in possession, having an equitable interest only under an agreement for a lease for a term is, in equity, an adjoining owner under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, and three months' notice must be given to him before any alteration affecting his premises can be commenced by his neighbour, under the powers of that act. Cowen v. Phillips, 33 Beav. 18 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 657 ; 8 L. T. 622 ; 11 W. R. 706.

A lessee of a house for a term of ninety-nine years, having demised some portions of the house to separate persons for terms varying from seven to twenty-one years, is the owner of the house within 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122. Hunt v. Harris, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 13 ; 34 L. J., C. P. 249 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 485 ; 12 L. T. 421 ; 13 W. R. 742.

——Person in Possession under Building Agreement.]—A person in possession of land for the purpose of building under a usual building agreement, where the grant of the lease is conditional upon the performance of the agreement, is, notwithstanding the fact that he is not an actual lessee, an "owner" within the London Building Act, 1894, s. 5, sub-s. 29, and as such entitled under s. 90 to party-wall and structure notices from a building owner of adjoining land. List v. Tharp, 66 L. J., Ch. 175 ; [1897] 1 Ch. 260 ; 76 L. T. 45 ; 45 W. R. 243 ; 61 J. P. 248.

—— House Let in Separate Tenements.]—A tenant in possession of part of a house for a greater interest than an interest from year to year is an "adjoining owner" within s. 82 of the Metropolitan Building Act, 1855, and is therefore entitled under s. 85, sub-s. 1, to three months' notice from the building owner in respect of any intended alteration to a party structure. Fillingham v. Wood, 60 L. J., Ch. 232 ; [1891] 1 Ch. 51 ; 64 L. T. 46 ; 39 W. R. 282.

Landlord—Notice to Surveyor.]—A landlord is justified, under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, s. 83, in entering premises in the occupation of his tenant from year to year, and pulling down and rebuilding the party-wall between it and other premises belonging to him, without giving the notice required by s. 85 ; such tenant not being an owner within the interpretation clause, s. 3, and it is no objection that he has neglected to give the notice to the district surveyor required by s. 38. Wheeler v. Gray, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 584 ; 27 L. J., C. P. 267 ; 6 W. R. 676. Affirmed on appeal, 6 C. B. (N.S.) 606 ; 28 L. J., C. P. 200 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 916 ; 7 W. R. 325—Ex. Ch.

Restraining from Proceeding on Notice.]—The defendants gave notice, under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, s. 85, to the plaintiffs, that they intended to pull down and rebuild a wall of the plaintiffs, which they described in the notice as a party-wall. The wall was not a party-wall, but an external wall, and the notice was therefore invalid. The defendants were frequently applied to by the plaintiffs to withdraw the notice, but they refused to do so, though they said they did not intend to act upon it :—Held, that the plaintiffs were justified in filing a bill in equity to restrain the defendants from proceeding on the notice. Sims v. Estate Co., 14 L. T. 55 ; 14 W. R. 419.

Wall Insufficient for New Building only.]—Where a party-wall, sufficient for all other purposes, is incapable of bearing the structure to be placed upon it by the building owner, he has a right, under s. 83 of the Metropolitan Building Act, 1855, upon notice to the adjoining owner, to pull down the same compulsorily, bearing the expense. Seawell v. Webster, 29 L. J., Ch. 71 ; 7 W. R. 691.

Building Burnt and more than half taken down—Party Wall less than half taken down—Thickness of Party Wall on rebuilding.]—Subsequently to the commencement of the London Building Act, 1894, a building within the administrative county of London which had been partially burnt, was taken down for more than half its cubical extent, but the party-wall between it and the adjoining building was taken down to the extent of less than one half thereof, and re-erected in conformity with the previous building acts. The district surveyor ordered the party-wall to be rebuilt from the ground upwards in accordance with the act of 1894 :—Held, that, under s. 208 of that act, the surveyor had no jurisdiction to order the remaining part at least of the party-wall to be pulled down and rebuilt in accordance with the requirements of that act. Crow v. Redhouse, 59 J. P. 663—C. A.

iv. Liability for Damages.

Protection of Exposed Rooms.]—A building owner who pulls down a party-wall under the authority of the Metropolitan Building Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 122), is not bound to protect by a hoarding or otherwise the rooms of the adjoining owner which are left exposed to the weather during the time that the wall is being pulled down and rebuilt. Thompson v. Hill, 39 L. J., C. P. 264 ; L. R. 5 C. P. 564 ; 22 L. T. 820 ; 18 W. R. 1070.

Injury to Adjoining Property.]—By 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, s. 88, sub-s. 2, if a party structure is pulled down and rebuilt by reason of its being so defective as to make it necessary to pull down the same, the expense of pulling down and rebuilding shall be borne by the building and adjoining owners in due proportion :—Held, that the building owner was not liable to make good damage caused to the adjoining owner's premises by such pulling down and rebuilding. Bryer v. Willis, 23 L. T. 463 ; 19 W. R. 102.

A building owner, in pulling down and rebuilding a defective party-wall, caused considerable damage to the adjoining owner's house : —Held, that, as the damage was not caused in executing works for the sole benefit of the building owner, there was no statutable liability imposed on him to repair. Ib.

When a statute authorised a company to remove and erect buildings, and provided a specific remedy for parties injured by such removal and erection, the occupier of a house adjoining one which had been pulled down and rebuilt by the company was not entitled to such remedy in respect of an injury sustained by reason of the removal of a party-wall between the two houses, after a notice given under the 14 Geo. 3, c. 78, although the company might not have strictly complied with the requisitions of the act in respect of such party-wall. Rex v. Hungerford Market Co., 2 N. & M. 340 ; 1 A. & E. 668 ; 3 L. J., K. B. 50.

—— Liability of Builder.]—The plaintiff, an owner in fee-simple of a house in London, brought an action against builders claiming damages on the ground that they, in the course of rebuilding an hotel, had caused injury to the plaintiff's house by cracking and displacing the wall; and also asking for an injunction. On the motion for injunction an inquiry as to damage was directed to be taken before a special referee, and the referee assessed the structural damage at 40*l.*, without prejudice to any question of liability. The defendants in their defence raised the contention that the works were executed under the provisions of the Metropolitan Building Act, and that the damage (if any) to the plaintiff's premises was "a necessary consequence of carrying out the said works," and that the plaintiff's remedy (if any) was only against the building owner by whom the defendants were employed :—Held, that the Metropolitan Building Act did not exonerate a builder from liability for damage which had arisen from his negligence and want of care and skill. The maxim "Respondeat superior" does not absolve the inferior, if by his negligence a loss has been sustained. If, in doing the act, he is guilty of negligence whereby loss and damage are occasioned to another, he is personally liable. White v. Peto, 58 L. T. 710.

Obstruction of Ancient Lights.]—The 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, does not enable the owner to rebuild a party structure so as to obstruct the ancient lights of the adjoining owner. Crofts v. Haldane, 8 B. & S. 194 ; 36 L. J., Q. B. 85 ; L. R. 2 Q. B. 194 ; 16 L. T. 116 ; 15 W. R. 444.

So the 14 Geo. 3, c. 78, s. 43, which authorised the building or raising of a party-wall, did not protect a party from liability for any collateral damage resulting from the building so erected ; and an action was maintainable by the occupier of an adjoining house, for heightening and building on a party fence wall, whereby his windows were darkened. Wells v. Ody, 1 M. & W. 452 ; 7 Car. & P. 410 ; 5 D. P. C. 95 ; 2 Gale, 12 ; 1 Tyr. & G. 715 ; 5 L. J., Ex. 199.

In an action for such an injury, no notice of action was necessary, nor was it necessary to bring it within three months from the time of the building of the wall. Ib.

—— Artizans' Dwellings — Right to Compensation.]—See Wigram v. Fryer, 56 L. J., Ch. 1098 ; 36 Ch. D. 87 ; 57 L. T. 255 ; 36 W. R. 100.

v. Proceedings.

Action within Three Months.]—The Building Act, 14 Geo. 3, c. 78, s. 100, limits actions to be brought within three months. A. began to build a party-wall on B.'s land more than three months before action, but did not complete it till within that time :—Held, that B. might recover for such part of the trespass as was committed within the time limited, but that if nothing had been done within the three months, he must bring ejectment. Trotter v. Simpson, 5 Car. & P. 51.

—— Notice of Action.]—If a person, bonâ fide intending to pursue the authority given by 14 Geo. 3, c. 78, erected a party-wall, without, in fact, pursuing the directions of the statute, and thereby injured his neighbour, he was liable to an action ; but the action must have been brought after twenty-one days' notice, and within three months after the injury done. Pratt v. Hillman, 6 D. & R. 360 ; 4 B. & C. 269 ; 3 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 253.

Mandamus for Reinstatement.]—Where a party had pulled down a party-wall, thereby destroying the internal decorations of his next neighbour's house, and rebuilt the wall without replacing the decorations :—Held, that it was not competent for the person so injured to compel by mandamus the reinstatement of his apartments under 14 Geo. 3, c. 78, s. 41, but his remedy was by action. Reg. v. Ponsford, 1 D. & L. 116 ; 12 L. J., Q. B. 313 ; 7 Jur. 767.

Settlement of Disputes by Arbitration.]—Although a co-owner of a party-wall could not at common law maintain an action against the other co-owner for temporarily undermining the foundation of the wall and replacing it with a new foundation when the work was unattended with danger to the security of the wall, yet when within the area of the Metropolitan Building Act (18 & 19 Vict. c. 122), such a work being a right in relation to a party structure within s. 83, sub-ss. 7, 11, cannot be carried on when a difference arises between the building owner and the adjoining owner (unless they concur in the appointment of one surveyor), except by the award of two surveyors and a third selected by them, or of any two of such surveyors, as provided by s. 85, sub-s. 7. Standard Bank of British South America v. Stokes, 47 L. J., Ch. 554 ; 9 Ch. D. 68 ; 38 L. T. 672 ; 26 W. R. 492.

But the rights and duties of adjoining owners as defined by the Metropolitan Building Act, 1855, are in substitution of those which existed at common law, and are not merely an addition thereto. Ib.

—— Appointment of Umpire.]—Where surveyors had been nominated under the Metropolitan Building Act, 1855, s. 85, to settle differences in dispute between a building owner and an adjoining owner as to the erection of a party-wall, and such surveyors had refused to appoint an umpire, the court appointed an umpire, under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, notwithstanding that an action was pending to settle the right of one of the parties to an ancient light in the party-wall. M'Bryde, Ex parte, 46 L. J., Ch. 153; 4 Ch. D. 200; 35 L. T. 543.

—— Appeal from Award.]—Where an award is made under the 85th section of the act, the only appeal from that award is to the county court, and from that court to the superior tribunals. Seawell v. Webster, 29 L. J., Ch. 71; 7 W. R. 691.

—— Contract—Specific Performance.]—Where building owners contract to do a work, but upon proceeding to arbitration under the Metropolitan Building Acts are compelled by the award then made to proceed in a manner different from the contract; although a bill for specific performance will lie, the court will not restrain the progress of the work until they have fulfilled the contract. Ib.

Semble, although the court cannot compel a party to do an act contracted for on the ground of impossibility, it will restrain him from doing something different. Ib.

e. Surveyor's Fees and other Charges.

See London Building Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. ccxiii.), s. 154—162, and sched. 3, I. (1) and (3).

Liability of Owner.]—In 1866 notice was given by a builder to the district surveyor of his intention to erect three houses, under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, s. 38. The surveyor inspected the houses, and the roofs were covered in on the 9th of July, 1866; and on the 9th of August, 1866, the surveyor became entitled to certain fees from the "builder, owner, or occupier," under s. 51. T. first became owner in 1869; and the surveyor, after due demand, took out a summons against T. for the fees:—Held, that "owner" meant owner for the time being when the fees became due; and that T. was, therefore, not liable. Tubb v. Good, 39 L. J., M. C. 135; L. R. 5 Q. B. 443; 22 L. T. 885.

C. being seised in fee of certain building land situate within the limits of the Metropolitan Building Act, 1855, entered into an agreement with L. to grant leases of ninety-nine years of certain plots of the land, so soon as L. should have erected houses thereon, at a peppercorn rent until the 24th of June, 1870, and afterwards at 28*l.* a year. L. built houses which were roofed in about September, 1870, and C. became entitled to receive the first quarter's ground rent on the 29th of September; the houses were surveyed by the district surveyor, and he, on the 26th of October, 1870, delivered a bill for his fees to L., who afterwards became insolvent. The surveyor afterwards claimed payment of his fees from C.:—Held, that he was not liable to pay the fees, as he was not the owner of the houses within the meaning of ss. 3, 51; for that L., the lessee for ninety-five years, whether he had a legal or only an equitable title, had the power to let the houses and receive the profit, and was therefore owner. Caudwell or Canwell v. Hanson, 41 L. J., M. C. 8; L. R. 7 Q. B. 55; 25 L. T. 595; 20 W. R. 202.

E., the owner in fee of land, agreed to let it to S. on a building lease for eighty-one years, at a peppercorn rent for the first year, 6*l.* for the second, and 12*l.* for the remainder of the term. S. built houses upon the land, in respect of which, during the first year of the term, certain fees became payable to the district surveyor, under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, s. 51, from the builder, or from the owner or occupier of the building:—Held, that E. was not liable to the fees as owner within ss. 3 and 51. Evelyn v. Whichcord, El. Bl. & El. 126; 27 L. J., M. C. 211; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 808; 6 W. R. 468.

Railway—Exemption of Buildings.]—Where arches under a railway viaduct constructed by and on land of a company acting under a statute were enclosed by walls with gates, the enclosed space being divided into stories and used as a stable by a lessee of the company, and after the passing of the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, alterations were made in the walls:—Held, that the district surveyor could not claim fees in respect of such alterations, the arches being a building belonging to and used for the purposes of a railway within s. 6, and therefore exempt from part 1, and the additions not of themselves constituting a building nor, within s. 9, an alteration of or addition to an old building, that section applying only to old buildings within the act. North Kent Ry. v. Badger, 27 L. J., M. C. 106. S. C., nom. Badger, In re, 8 El. & Bl. 728; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 454; 6 W. R. 246.

Separate Sets of Chambers—One Building.]—Separate sets of chambers under one roof, intended to be separately occupied, and having no communication with each other except by means of a common staircase, are not separate buildings within the Metropolitan Building Act, 1855, so as to entitle the district surveyor to charge a separate fee in respect of each of them. Moir v. Williams, 61 L. J., M. C. 33; [1892] 1 Q. B. 264; 66 L. T. 215; 40 W. R. 69; 56 J. P. 197—C. A.

Amount of.]—Under the Building Act (18 & 19 Vict. c. 122), s. 49, and the schedule thereto, the district surveyor is entitled to a fee of 10*s.* "for inspecting the arches or stone floors over or under public ways":—Held, that, where a builder is employed to construct a series of arches for cellars under a public street or streets surrounding a vacant piece of land which is to be let for building, the district surveyor is entitled to a fee of 10*s.* in respect of each distinct building to which any given number of the arches is intended to be appropriated—a matter of fact which is to be ascertained and determined by the magistrate before whom the fee is sought to be recovered. Power v. Wigmore, L. R. 7 C. P. 386; 27 L. T. 148.

The decision of the magistrate upon such a summons is the subject of an appeal under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, notwithstanding s. 106 (the appeal clause) of the Building Act. Ib.

Penalty for Excessive Demand.]—By 7 & 8 Vict. c. 84, if any surveyor demand or wilfully receive any higher fee than he shall be entitled to under this act, or if in his capacity of surveyor he receives a fee for any act or omission in respect of which he is not entitled to any remuneration, he shall be subject to fine, or to be discharged from his office:—Held, by Erle, J., that the second clause applied to cases where the demand was knowingly made without a colour of right; and by Coleridge, J., and Wightman, J., that it was confined to the case where the surveyor received a fee wholly unauthorised by the statute, even if he had done or omitted to do the act on the doing or omitting to do which he founded his claim to receive it. Reg. v. Badger, 6 El. & Bl. 137; 25 L. J., M. C. 81; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 419.

f. Consent of Council.

Neglect of Conditions—Order to Demolish.]—Where B. applied to the Metropolitan Board of Works for consent to build a house, which was granted, but without procuring the conditions upon which the consent was granted, he built the house higher than those conditions permitted:—Held, that a magistrate, upon a summons charging him with having erected a building beyond the general line of buildings in the street, and contrary to the conditions on which the consent of the board of works was obtained, might order him, under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 75, to demolish so much of the house as was beyond the general line of buildings, although this line had only been decided by the superintending architect on the day previously to the hearing of the summons. Bauman v. St. Pancras Vestry, 36 L. J., M. C. 127; L. R. 2 Q. B. 528; 15 W. R. 904.

—— Notice.]—The power given by 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 76, by which a district board is authorised to demolish a house, on neglect of the builder to give seven days' notice of his intention to build, does not empower the board to demolish the house without first giving the person guilty of the omission an opportunity of being heard. Cooper v. Wandsworth Board of Works, 14 C. B. (N.S.) 180; 32 L. J., C. P. 185; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1155; 8 L. T. 278; 11 W. R. 646.

Application for Consent after Erection.]—The London County Council have no power to entertain an application under s. 13, sub-s. 4, of the London Building Act, 1894, for their consent to "the erection, formation, or extension of a new building or structure within twenty feet of the centre of a carriage highway," when such new building or structure has already been erected within that distance without their consent. Reg. v. London County Council, 66 L. J., Q. B. 516; 76 L. T. 472; 45 W. R. 605; 61 J. P. 439.

Modification of Plan—Obligation to Rebuild.]—Where a man, under contract to build according to a specified plan, and according to the metropolitan building acts, commenced building according to the plan, which was in some particulars in contravention of the building acts, and upon being cautioned by the board stopped building, and refused to proceed:—Held, that he was bound to rebuild in conformity with the plan, modified so as to meet the requirements of the statutes. Cubitt v. Smith, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1123; 11 L. T. 298.

Removal of Building—Notice of Intention to Erect.]—The 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, ss. 83 and 85, do not apply to the case of the mere removal of a building from an adjoining building without disturbing the party structure, and no previous notice under the act need in such case be given. Major v. Park Lane Co., L. R. 2 Eq. 14 L. T. 543.

—— After Leave to Erect.]—In 1876 T. applied to the Metropolitan Board of Works for leave to erect an iron building, called a skating rink, at the back of his premises, pursuant to 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, s. 56, and the board granted leave on T. giving the board an undertaking to remove the building within two years. The time elapsed, and the board called on T. to remove the building, but he failed to do so:—Held, that ss. 45 and 46 applied only to a building in the course of erection, and not to this case, and there was no power given to a magistrate to enforce its removal. Parsons v. Timewell, 44 J. P. 296.

Licence to erect Temporary Wooden Structure.]—See Hall v. Smallpiece; London County Council v. Pearce; London County Council v. Humphreys; and London County Council v. Chandler, ante, col. 1068.

g. Dangerous Structures.

Delegation of Powers to Architect.]—Where a public duty vested in a public body is not discretionary, but merely ministerial, the public body may delegate it to one of its officers. The duties of the London County Council as to dangerous structures under Part IX. of the London Building Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. 213), are merely ministerial, and may therefore be delegated to the council's superintending architect. London County Council v. Hobbis, 75 L. T. 687; 45 W. R. 270; 61 J. P. 85.

Service of Summons—Owner of Premises.]—The rule to be observed in the service of a summons under s. 107 of the London Building Act, 1894, is that where the owner of the premises can by reasonable and ordinary inquiry be discovered the procedure must be under s. 1 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848; but that where, after such inquiry, the owner cannot be ascertained, the procedure under s. 188, sub.-s. 1, of the act of 1894, is applicable, and the summons may be served by affixing a copy thereof on some conspicuous part of the building to which it relates. Reg. v. Mead, 66 L. J., Q. B. 874; [1898] 1 Q. B. 110; 77 L. T. 462; 46 W. R. 61; 61 J. P. 759.

Not adjoining Public Thoroughfare—Order to Demolish — Jurisdiction.]—The jurisdiction of magistrates acting under the Metropolitan Building Act, 1855, to make orders for the demolition of dangerous structures, extends to cases where the premises do not adjoin upon a highway or public thoroughfare, and do not constitute a danger to the public at large. London County Council v. Herring, 63 L. J., M. C. 230; [1894] 2 Q. B. 522; 10 R. 455; 58 J. P. 721.

Notice by County Council to Secure—Counter-notice requiring Arbitration—Time for Report.]—If an owner upon whom a requisition to pull down a building as dangerous has been served under the London Building Act, 1894, makes a counter-requisition under s. 107 of the act, requiring the matter to be referred to arbitration, but fails to name a surveyor in such counter-requisition, the counter-requisition drops. If the owner's surveyor and the district surveyor fail to report within seven days, the matter falls to be dealt with by the arbitrator if the surveyors have appointed one before entering on the matter. If they have not appointed an arbitrator, then again the counter-requisition drops, as the owner is in default. Any difficulty arising as to the arbitrator who has been duly nominated not reporting within fourteen days, either on account of illness or other unavoidable cause, can be cured by an order of the court under the Arbitration Act, 1889. London County Council v. Bernstein, 61 J. P. 630.

"Expenses Incurred in Respect of"—What are.]—A structure within the metropolis having been surveyed and reported dangerous, notice was served on the owner under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, ss. 69, 73; and not having repaired it, he was summoned by the Metropolitan Board of Works before a magistrate; the summons was adjourned from time to time, and ultimately withdrawn, the owner having in the meantime duly repaired the structure. The board sought to charge against the owner, under s. 73, as "expenses incurred in respect of a dangerous structure," in addition to the surveyor's fees allowed by ss. 77, 79, the following items, which, by resolution of the board, had been resolved should be charged against owners in respect of dangerous structures, viz., 3*s.* 6*d.* for preparation of notices and forms; 2*s.* 6*d.* for clerk's time in service of notices; and 2*s.* 6*d.* for general office expenses:—Held, that the board was not entitled to charge the last item, but was entitled to charge the other two. Metropolitan Board of Works v. Flight, 43 L. J., M. C. 46; L. R. 9 Q. B. 58; 29 L. T. 608.

Expenses of Demolition.] — See Tubbs v. Wynne, 66 L. J., Q. B. 116; [1897] 1 Q. B. 74.

h. Proceedings.

Remedy for Building beyond Line.]—L. erected a brewery in a new street in the metropolis. At the time of commencing the building, and up to the completion of it so as to prepare it for being roofed in, the general line of frontage of the buildings intended to be erected in the street had not been fixed on and indicated by the surveyor to the local board of works under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 75. When the building was so ready to be roofed in the surveyor fixed upon and indicated the line of frontage, of which L. had notice, but continued nevertheless constructing such edifice so as to cause it to project beyond the line, until the building was nearly completed, without having obtained the permission of the Metropolitan Board of Works for such protection, as required by 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102. For this offence in contravention of the provisions of the statutes he was indicted:—Held, that the statute creating the offence pointed out the remedy whereby the buildings complained of might be demolished by order of a justice, and that that was the only remedy that could be pursued, and an indictment therefore would not lie. Reg. v. Lovibond, 24 L. T. 357; 19 W. R. 753.

Against whom.]—When there is a known owner or occupier, the proper person to proceed against for an infringement of the Metropolis Local Management Amendment Act (25 & 26 Vict. c. 102), s. 75, is such owner or occupier, and not the builder, and a summons upon the builder is only valid whilst he is engaged in the work. Bruton v. St. George, Hanover Square, Vestry, 41 L. J., Ch. 134; L. R. 13 Eq. 339; 25 L. T. 552; 20 W. R. 84.

Time for—Under s. 107 of Metropolis Management Act, 1862.]—The offence, six months after the commission or discovery of which complaint is, under s. 107, to be made, is committed when first an intrusion is made upon the general line of building, and the time begins to run from the day such intrusion is discovered. Ib.

Where, therefore, a vestry having on the 25th of August discovered that an owner of a house had on the 24th of August put up the framework of a conservatory which intruded on the space beyond the general line, and was finished on the 23rd of September, but such vestry, not having received the certificate of the superintending architect until the 2nd of March, took no step till the 4th of March, when they issued a summons against the builder, who had in the meantime been paid, and had gone abroad:—Held, first, that the summons was issued against the wrong person. Ib.

Held, secondly, that it was out of time. Ib.

The limitation clause in 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 107, imposing a limit of six months for making a complaint for the payment of any penalty or forfeiture for an offence against that act, does not apply to a complaint for the erection of a building beyond the general line of buildings of a street without the consent of the Metropolitan Board of Works, contrary to s. 75, which provides the means of obtaining an order for the demolition of such buildings. Bermondsey Vestry v. Johnson, 42 L. J., M. C. 67; L. R. 8 C. P. 441; 28 L. T. 665; 21 W. R. 626.

—— Under s. 75 of Metropolis Management Act of 1862.]—Although there is nothing in the Metropolis Management Act, 1862, to limit the time within which proceedings under s. 75 must be taken, yet s. 11 of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43 applies, and they must therefore be taken within six calendar months. Morant v. Taylor (1 Ex. D. 188) followed. Paddington Vestry v. Snow, 45 L. T. 475; 30 W. R. 46; 46 J. P. 87.

When a building is erected beyond the general line of buildings the matter of complaint arises as soon as the building is erected above the level of the ground so as to project beyond the building line, even though at that time the superintending architect has not certified as to the general line of buildings. C. began to erect a house before the 27th April, 1891, and at that date the building was erected as far as the joists of the first floor; the certificate of the superintending architect of the London County Council as to the general line of building was given on the 6th August, 1891, and on the 28th October, 1891, the London County Council took out a summons before a magistrate, complaining that C. had unlawfully erected the building beyond the general line of buildings, contrary to the 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 75. By s. 11 of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, it is provided that in all cases where no time is specially limited for making a complaint such complaint shall be made within six calendar months from the time when the matter of such complaint arises:—Held, that the matter of complaint had arisen more than six months before the 28th October, 1891, when the complaint was made, and the summons must be dismissed. London County Council v. Cross, 66 L. T. 731—C. A. Reversing 61 L. J., M. C. 160; 56 J. P. 550.

It is not a condition precedent to the issue of a summons under s. 75 of the Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862, for building beyond the general line, that the architect should have decided a line. London County Council v. Cross (61 L. J., M. C. 160) followed. Lavy v. London

County Council, 64 L. J., M. C. 262; [1895] 2 Q. B. 577; 14 R. 634; 73 L. T. 106; 43 W. R. 677; 59 J. P. 630—C. A.

—— Continuing Offence.] — A conviction under the Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862, for a continuing offence under s. 85 of that act (relating to the height of buildings), is valid, although a complaint in respect of the original offence has not been preferred and a conviction obtained within the six months limited by s. 107 of the act. London County Council v. Worley, 63 L. J., M. C. 218; [1894] 2 Q. B. 826; 10 R. 510; 71 L. T. 487; 43 W. R. 11; 18 Cox, C. C. 37; 59 J. P. 263.

Where a temporary structure had been erected within the metropolitan district without the licence of the Metropolitan Board of Works, but no complaint of such erection was made until after the expiration of six months from its completion:—Held, that the offence was a continuous one as long as the structure remained existent, and that proceedings for the recovery of the penalties might be taken within six months of the time within which it continued to exist. Metropolitan Board of Works v. Anthony, 54 L. J., M. C. 39; 33 W. R. 166; 49 J. P. 229.

—— Non-compliance with Notice.]—G., the builder of a new house in the metropolis, on 1st April sent notice to B., the district surveyor, with plans. On 4th August, B. served a forty-eight hours' notice on G. to amend the work and have sufficient area space pursuant to 45 Vict. c. 14, s. 14. The house was then covered in, and nothing was done under the notice. On 1st February following, information of an offence was laid by B.:—Held, that the offence was the refusal to do the work ordered on 4th August, and the information was within the six months' limitation. Bovill v. Gibbs, 51 J. P. 485.

—— Wooden Structure erected and continued without Licence.]—A liability to penalties for erecting a wooden structure without licence under s. 13 of the Metropolitan Building Act, 1882, which existed on January 1, 1895, when the London Building Act, 1894, came into operation, is saved by s. 215 of the latter act; but proceedings which have been delayed for more than six months after January 1, 1895, cannot be taken for the recovery of such penalties owing to the operation of s. 11 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848. Reg. v. Cluer; London County Council, Ex parte, 67 L. J., Q. B. 36; 77 L. T. 439.

Jurisdiction of Justices.]—In a proceeding before a magistrate for erecting a building, without the consent of the Metropolitan Board of Works, beyond the general line of buildings in a street, the certificate of the superintending architect of the board is not absolutely conclusive, but the magistrate is entitled to judge for himself whether the line fixed by such certificate is in fact the general line of buildings in the street. Simpson v. Smith, 40 L. J., M. C. 89; L. R. 6 C. P. 87; 24 L. T. 100; 19 W. R. 355.

An order by a justice under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, s. 73, after reciting that a complaint had been made by the assistant commissioner that he had caused notice in writing to be given to F., the owner of a structure, requiring him to repair it, and that he had failed so to do, ordered F. to repair the same. On a summons before a second justice to recover from F. the expenses incurred by the commissioner in repairing the structure, on F. having failed to repair, the justice dismissed the summons, on the ground that the order, which was put in in evidence, was defective for not containing any averment that F. had been summoned to answer the complaint, or any adjudication that the complaint was true:—Held, that such second justice had jurisdiction, upon the hearing of the summons, to enter into the question of the sufficiency of the order; and that the order was insufficient and bad upon the face of it, on the above grounds. Labalmondiere v. Frost, 1 El. & El. 527; 28 L. J., M. C. 155; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 789; 7 W. R. 205. And see ante, cols. 1069, 1070.

Notice by Surveyor after Building completed.]—Sects. 45 and 105 of the Metropolitan Building Act, 1855, do not empower a district surveyor to give notice, after a building is completed, requiring the builder to make alterations in the work. Smith v. Legg, [1893] 1 Q. B. 398; 5 R. 233; 68 L. T. 347; 41 W. R. 464; 57 J. P. 295.

A magistrate has no jurisdiction under s. 46 of the Metropolitan Building Act, 1855, to make an order on a builder to do certain works required by the district surveyor under s. 45 after the builder has ceased to be engaged in erecting the building. Wallen v. Lister, 63 L. J., M. C. 51; [1894] 1 Q. B. 312; 10 R. 127; 70 L. T. 348; 42 W. R. 318; 58 J. P. 283.

Even if the magistrate had jurisdiction to make the order under s. 46, he has a discretion under s. 47 to refuse to enforce the order or inflict a penalty for non-compliance where such order is made inadvertently through ignorance of the facts. Ib.

Appeal to Quarter Sessions from Order for Demolition.]—An appeal to quarter sessions will not lie against the order of a justice directing the demolition of buildings under s. 75 of the Metropolis Local Management Amendment Act, 1862. By s. 231 of the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855, any person aggrieved by any adjudication of a justice "with respect to any penalty or forfeiture under the provisions of the act" may appeal to quarter sessions. By s. 75 of the Metropolis Local Management Amendment Act, 1862 (which, by s. 110, is to be construed as one act with the act of 1855), where a building is erected beyond the general line of buildings in a street without the consent of the Metropolitan Board of Works, a justice of the peace is empowered, upon complaint made and after inquiry held as the act directs, to order the owner or occupier to demolish the building, and in default of compliance with the order the vestry of the parish or board of works for the district shall demolish the building, and may remove and sell the materials, and recover the expenses of so doing from the owner or occupier:—Held, that the order of a justice directing the demolition of a building under s. 75 of the act of 1862 was not an adjudication "with respect to a penalty or forfeiture" within s. 231 of the act of 1855, and therefore that no appeal to quarter sessions would lie against the order. Reg. v. Middlesex JJ., Elsdon, Ex parte, 51 L. J., M. C. 94; 9 Q. B. D. 41; 30 W. R. 657; 46 J. P. 551.

Appeal to Court of Appeal on Case stated.]—No appeal lies to the court of appeal from a decision of the queen's bench division on a case stated by a magistrate upon a summons taken out under s. 46 of the Metropolitan Building Act, 1855, for a contravention of the provisions of s. 19 of that act; for the decision of the queen's bench division is a decision in a "criminal cause or matter" within s. 47 of the Judicature Act, 1873. Payne v. Wright, 61 L. J., M. C. 114; 66 L. T. 148; 17 Cox, C. C. 460; 56 J. P. 564.

3. Sewers.

a. What are.

Sewer — Demolition.]—A marsh wall or an embankment which keeps back the river Thames at high tide from inundating the Isle of Dogs is a sewer within 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 204, which prohibits the erection of any building "in, over, or under any sewer vested in the Metropolitan Board of Works, or in any district board, without their consent," and empowers the board in whom such sewer is vested to demolish the same. Poplar Board of Works v. Knight, El., Bl. & El. 408; 28 L. J., M. C. 37; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 196.

"Drain" or "Sewer"—Approval of Metropolitan Board of Works.]—Although the proviso of s. 69 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, enacts that "no new sewer shall be made without the previous approval of the Metropolitan Board of Works," the mere fact that the requisite consent was not obtained to the construction of a sewer since that date does not prevent it from being a sewer when made, and as such repairable by the vestry. Reg. v. St. Matthew, Bethnal Green, Vestry, 65 L. J., M. C. 129; [1896] 2 Q. B. 95; 74 L. T. 701; 44 W. R. 559; 60 J. P. 442. See S. C. in C. A., infra, col. 1098.

—— Drainage by Combined Operation.]—The owner of a plot of ground within the metropolitan district, on which he was about to build fifteen contiguous houses, sent to the local board notice of his intention to lay down upon it a pipe drain running parallel to the houses, through which the houses would be drained into the main sewer belonging to the Metropolitan Board. The local board signed their approval of the scheme by letter, and entered their approval in their books, but made no formal order. The owner completed the drain:—Held, by North, J., that s. 74 of the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855, which enables a district board to order a group or block of contiguous houses to be drained by a "combined operation," is supplemental to s. 73, and, like that section, applies only to existing houses; that the local board had therefore no power to make an order for draining by a "combined operation" a set of houses in course of erection, and that, if they had, their approval of a scheme proposed by the owner did not amount to an order; that the drain in question was therefore not a "drain for draining any group or block of houses by a combined operation under the order of any vestry or district board," and was a "sewer," and not a "drain," within the meaning of s. 250, and by virtue of s. 68 vested in the local board:—Held, on appeal, by Cotton and Lindley, L.JJ. (diss. Lopes, L.J.), that although s. 74 did not give the board power to order drainage by a combined operation except in the case of existing houses, the general words of s. 76 gave them this power in the case of houses about to be built; that their approval of the scheme was an order, and that the drain in question was therefore a "drain," and not a "sewer," within the meaning of s. 250, and did not vest in the local board. Bateman v. Poplar Board of Works, 56 L. J., Ch. 149; 33 Ch. D. 360; 55 L. T. 374—C. A.

A drain for draining a group or block of houses by combined operation laid and constructed in 1838 is, in the absence of evidence that it had been constructed by the order or direction or with the sanction or approval of the metropolitan commissioners of sewers, or, since January 1, 1856, of the vestry, a "sewer" repairable by the vestry, and does not fall within the definition of "drain" in s. 250 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, as extended by s. 112 of the Amendment Act, 1862, so as to be repairable by the private owner. Appleyard v. Lambeth Vestry, 66 L. J., Q. B. 27; 45 W. R. 173; 60 J. P. 807. See S. C. in C. A., infra.

A drain was constructed in the metropolis in 1839 for draining a group of houses by combined operation, and was a "sewer" within the meaning of s. 250 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), and so repairable by the vestry of the parish, unless constructed before January 1, 1856, "with the sanction or approval of the metropolitan commissioners of sewers" within the meaning of s. 112 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1862:—Held, that the expression "metropolitan commissioners of sewers" in the latter act refers to the metropolitan commissioners of sewers created in 1848 by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 112, and does not include commissioners of sewers having authority in the metropolis previously to that act, and that the drain was therefore a "sewer" within the meaning of the act of 1855, and repairable by the vestry. Appleyard v. Lambeth Vestry, 66 L. J., Q. B. 347; 76 L. T. 442; 45 W. R. 370; 61 J. P. 276—C. A.

Plans of six semi-detached houses were deposited with the local authority, showing a separate drain for each pair of houses. The plans were passed subject to the execution of the drainage works to the satisfaction of the board's surveyor. The houses were then built, and one of them afterwards became the property of the defendant. A nuisance arose from the defective condition of the drain of the defendant's house, and on opening up the drain it was found that three others of the houses drained into it:—Held, that from the injunction the drain was a sewer, vested in and repairable by the local authority, and that the defendant was not estopped from saying so on account of the circumstances connected with the original making of the drain, to which he was not a party. Kershaw v. Taylor, 64 L. J., M. C. 245; [1895] 2 Q. B. 471; 14 R. 698; 73 L. T. 274; 44 W. R. 28; 59 J. P. 726—C. A.

A drain for the drainage of four houses by combined operation was constructed under the order of a vestry. A pipe which carried off rainwater from the roof of a fifth house was, without the sanction of the vestry, turned into and connected with this drain:—Held, that the rainwater pipe was a drain within s. 250 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, and that its unauthorised connection with the drain belonging to the four houses converted the latter from the point of junction and onwards into a sewer. Holland v. Lazarus, 66 L. J., Q. B. 285; 61 J. P. 262.

Evidence of an order by the vestry, or of some action equivalent to an order, must be shown to bring the construction within the description of "drainage by a combined operation under the order of any vestry" in s. 250 of the same act. Reg. v. St. Matthew, Bethnal Green, Vestry, 65 L. J., M. C. 129; [1896] 2 Q. B. 95; 74 L. T. 701; 44 W. R. 559; 60 J. P. 442. See S. C. in C. A., infra, col. 1098.

—— Change in Use—Approval of Local Authority.]—The mere fact that a pipe which once carried the drainage of two or more houses has ceased to carry the drainage of more than one house is not sufficient to change the character of that pipe from a "sewer" to a "drain." St. Leonard, Shoreditch, Vestry v. Phelan, 65 L. J., M. C. 111; [1896] 1 Q. B. 533; 74 L. T. 285; 44 W. R. 427; 60 J. P. 244.

Semble, the absence of any evidence that an ancient pipe conveying the sewage of two or more houses was so constructed under the sanction of the local authority, does not raise any presumption in favour of its having been so constructed. Ib.

—— Drainage of "Premises within the same Curtilage."]—The drainage of a double row of houses and shops on each side of a passage passed from each house into a brick drain which ran down the centre of the passage. The passage, and the houses on each side of it, belonged to one owner, and were arched over by a common roof; and the only access to the houses was by passing along the passage. There were gates at each end of the passage, which were closed to the public at night and on Sundays, but open to the tenants of the houses at any time:—Held, that the drain under the passage was not a drain used for the drainage of one building only, or of premises within the same curtilage, within the definition in s. 250 of the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855, and was, therefore, a sewer, and repairable by the vestry, and not by the owner of the houses. St. Martin's-in-the-Fields Vestry v. Bird, 64 L. J., Q. B. 230; [1895] 1 Q. B. 428; 14 R. 146; 71 L. T. 868; 43 W. R. 194; 60 J. P. 52—C. A.

Two blocks of buildings, belonging to one owner, who let them out in forty-six sets of apartments, were separated by a causeway or yard twenty feet wide. On one side the causeway opened into the street; otherwise it was enclosed by the buildings and a wall or railing. One of these blocks had doors opening into the causeway; there was no access to the causeway from the buildings in the other block. Twelve branch drains ran from the buildings on each side of the causeway into a main drain which ran underneath the causeway between the two blocks into the sewer in the adjoining street:—Held (Rigby, L.J., dissenting), that the main drain in question was a drain repairable by the owner, and not a sewer repairable by the vestry, the two blocks being premises within the same curtilage within s. 250 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855. Per Rigby, L.J.: The curtilage of a building may have other subsidiary premises within it, but the same piece of ground cannot be the curtilage of more than one building. Pilbrow v. St. Leonard, Shoreditch, Vestry, 64 L. J., M. C. 130; [1895] 1 Q. B. 433; 14 R. 181; 72 L. T. 135; 43 W. R. 342; 59 J. P. 68—C. A.

b. General Powers.

New Sewers — Approval of Metropolitan Board.]—By 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 69, the vestry of every parish mentioned in schedule (A.) shall make such sewers as may be necessary for effectually draining their parish, provided that no new sewer shall be made without the previous approval of the Metropolitan Board of Works. A mandamus to a vestry of a parish commanding them to make such sewers as might be necessary for draining a particular part of the parish, and to take all necessary steps in that behalf, is defective, first, because it does not show a duty to make the sewers; and, secondly, because it ordered the vestry to make them without showing that the approval of the metropolitan board had been obtained. Reg. v. St. Luke's Vestry, Chelsea, 1 B. & S. 903; 31 L. J., Q. B. 50; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 308; 5 L. T. 744; 10 W. R. 293.

The proviso in s. 69 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, that "no new sewer shall be made without the previous approval of the Metropolitan Board of Works," does not apply to a sewer made by a private person. Reg. v. St. Matthew, Bethnal Green, Vestry, 65 L. J., M. C. 215; [1896] 2 Q. B. 319; 75 L. T. 60; 44 W. R. 697; 60 J. P. 582—C. A.

A new sewer made by a private person within the district of a vestry in the metropolis, branching into a sewer belonging to the vestry, vests in the vestry by virtue of s. 68 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, and they are liable to maintain it, although their sanction to its construction had not been obtained as required by s. 47 of the Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862, if they knew that the sewer had been made and assented to it. Ib.

—— Power of County Council to order Vestry to make.]—Sect. 138 of the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855, does not empower the London County Council to make an order directing a metropolitan vestry to make a new sewer. The section merely enables the council to make orders regulating the mode of construction and arrangement of local sewers, and does not take from vestries the initiative in deciding whether or not a new sewer should be made. Reg. v. St. George's, Hanover Square, Vestry, 64 L. J., Q. B. 715; [1895] 2 Q. B. 275; 15 R. 504; 73 L. T. 62; 44 W. R. 16; 59 J. P. 535.

—— Mandamus to submit Plans to Metropolitan Board of Works.]—The making and branching of sewers within the district of a vestry or district board is by s. 47 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1862, made subject to the sanction in writing of the vestry or district board being first obtained. But a vestry or district board cannot give such sanction by the provisions of s. 48, without the approval of the Metropolitan Board of Works:—Held, that it is no answer to a mandamus requiring a district board to submit to the Metropolitan Board of Works plans and sections of sewers laid before them in pursuance of s. 47, to aver that the board has refused to sanction the making of the roads in which the proposed sewers are intended to be made; and that therefore, the district board having no other objection, it was their duty under s. 48 to submit the plans and sections to the Metropolitan Board of Works. Reg. v. Wandsworth Board of Works, 49 J. P. 806.

Compensation — Without Purchase.] — The powers conferred on the Metropolitan Board of Works by 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 135, are uncontrolled by ss. 150 to 153, and the board is empowered under the former section to make such sewers as they shall think fit, on compensating the owners of property for the damage occasioned thereby, without being required, under the latter sections, to buy the land under which they carry their works, or easements therein, from the owner. Hughes v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 986; 4 L. T. 318; 9 W. R. 517.

The metropolitan board may execute any works comprised within the terms of 18 & 19 Vict c. 120, s. 135, making compensation for damage, without first acquiring the land under ss. 150—153, and the Lands Clauses Act, 8 & 9 Vict. c. 18, notwithstanding that the works may be of such a character as to involve an actual taking of land, and may be within the powers of ss. 150 and 153. North London Ry. v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 1 Johnson, 405; 28 L. J., Ch. 909; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1121; 7 W. R. 640.

Right to Lateral Support.]—A sewer made by the metropolitan commissioners of sewers under the powers vested in them by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 112, was transferred to the Metropolitan Board of Works by 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120:—Held, that these acts gave the board no right to any lateral support for the sewer by the land of the adjacent owners. Metropolitan Board of Works v. Metropolitan Ry., 37 L. J., C. P. 281; L. R. 3 C. P. 612; 19 L. T. 10; 16 W. R. 1117. Affirmed on appeal, 38 L. J., C. P. 172; L. R. 4 C. P. 192; 19 L. T. 744; 17 W. R. 416—Ex. Ch.

Approval of—Costs of Inspection.]—A district board of works has no power under the Metropolis Management Act, 1862, if it approve of the plans and sections of sewers proposed to be constructed by a private landowner and branched into the main system, to withhold their sanction in writing to the construction of the same until such private landowner shall pay a sum of money to the board to cover the expenses of the board in supervising such works. Reg. v. Greenwich Board of Works, 1 Cab. & E. 236.

Improper Construction—Committee—Resolution to serve Notice of Necessary Work—Subsequent Approval of Vestry.]—The previous approval of a metropolitan vestry to a resolution of its public health committee (duly appointed under the provisions of s. 58 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855), whereby notice is served on the owner or occupier of premises to put a drain into proper condition, under s. 85 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, is not necessary for the authorisation of such notice, provided that the action taken by the committee be one which can properly be ratified by the vestry. Firth v. Staines, 66 L. J., Q. B. 510; [1897] 2 Q. B. 70; 76 L. T. 496; 45 W. R. 575; 61 J. P. 452.

Connecting Houses with—Right of Vestry to do Work.]—A builder made drains from certain houses in a road to the boundary of the forecourts of the houses. The road was what is known as a builder's road, made and coated with gravel and ballasted. The footpaths were made with gravel and kerbed with granite. The houses on either side of the road were not completed and inhabited, but the road was open for carriages and foot-passengers. It was lighted by the parish, but had not been taken to as a public road. The vestry made branches from the drains into a sewer which belonged to them and ran along the centre of the road, and for that purpose they opened the road and footway. The builder declined to repay to the vestry the expenses incurred thereby:—Held, (1) that the road was not the less a street within the definition in s. 250 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, and s. 112 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1862, because it came within the definition of a new street in the last-mentioned section; (2) that s. 78 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, which authorises the opening of the pavement of any street for the purpose of branching private drains into a sewer, applies equally to streets and to new streets; (3) that, looking to the definition of the word "pave" in s. 112 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1862, the road was paved:—That, consequently, the vestry had opened a part of the pavement of a street, and were entitled under s. 78 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, to recover the expenses incurred by them. St. John's, Hampstead, v. Hoopel, 54 L. J., M. C. 147; 15 Q. B. D. 652; 33 W. R. 903; 49 J. P. 471.

Sweeping Mud into.]—By s. 205 of the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855, it is provided that no scavenger or other person shall sweep, rake, or place any soil, rubbish, or filth, or any other thing into or in any sewer or drain, or use any grate communicating with any sewer or drain . . . and every scavenger who shall so offend shall . . . forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 5*l*. Scavengers having swept mud to the side of a street, and forced it by means of water through a grating into a sewer, were convicted of an offence against the act:—Held, that "mud" came within the meaning of the words in the above section, and that the conviction was right. Metropolitan Board of Works v. Eaton, 50 L. T. 634; 48 J. P. 611.

Drain—Choice of Materials—Contravention of Notice.]—A vestry, in exercise of the powers given by 19 & 20 Vict. c. 120, s. 76, served the plaintiff with a notice, requiring him, in the construction of the drainage to certain houses which were being erected by him in their district, to use stoneware pipes of the best quality. The plaintiff used pipes of the Aylesford manufacture, as coming within the description of stoneware mentioned in the notice; but to them the vestry, who required pipes of Lambeth manufacture, or of manufacture similar to that of Lambeth, to be used, objected; and they refused, unless their requisitions were complied with, to make an opening into the main sewer for his drainage. The plaintiff thereupon made the opening himself, and completed his drainage by means of Aylesford pipes:—Held, that the act gave the vestry the right to determine which of the two materials should be used; and it appearing that the evidence of scientific men as to the comparative merits of the two manufactures was conflicting, refused to grant an injunction, but dismissed the bill with costs. Austin v. St. Mary, Lambeth, Vestry, 27 L. J., Ch. 677; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 274, 1032.

—— Notice to Repair by Inspector.]—A., the sanitary inspector of S., a metropolitan parish, gave a notice in his own name as inspector to H., an owner of a house, to reconstruct drains, &c., in three days, and afterwards, on default,

A. did the work, and the S. vestry took out a summons against H. to recover the expenditure. No resolution of the vestry or of any committee thereof to give the notice was proved, but only a meeting of three members of a sub-committee, who were proved to have met and resolved that the inspector should enter and execute the works himself:—Held, that the notice given by the inspector was bad, and the statute not being complied with, the summons against H. was properly dismissed. St. Leonard's Vestry v. Holmes, 50 J. P. 132.

—— Drainage into "nearest Common Sewer."]—In s. 61 of the City of London Sewers Act, 1848, the words "nearest common sewer" mean the nearest which the house-owner can, by exercising his ordinary proprietary rights, get at, and not necessarily that literally nearest. Where, therefore, an insufficient drain ran under a neighbour's house to the sewer that was literally nearest:—Held, that the commissioners of sewers were entitled to require the owner to construct a drain communicating with a sewer which, though further off, had no house or other private property intervening. Bathard v. Sewers Commissioners, 54 J. P. 135.

Mandamus to Vestry.]—The owner of premises alleged that a defective drainage pipe on his premises was a sewer within the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, and therefore repairable by the vestry. The vestry denied that the pipe was a sewer:—Held, that a prerogative writ of mandamus ought not to be issued to the vestry directing them to repair the pipe. The proper proceeding was for the owner of the premises to bring an action against the vestry for a declaration of right and for a mandamus. Reg. v. St. Giles, Camberwell Vestry, 66 L. J., Q. B. 337; 45 W. R. 335; 61 J. P. 217.

c. Liability for Nuisance.

No Authority to Create a Nuisance.]—The Metropolitan Board of Works is not authorised by 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 135, to turn into a navigable river or stream the sewage of an entire district (which has not previously been drained into such river or stream), so as to create a nuisance. Att.-Gen. v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 1 H. & M. 298; 9 L. T. 139; 11 W. R. 820.

Pollution of Private Stream.]—A local board of works, in executing drainage works in its district, polluted a stream, which in its onward course flowed through the plaintiff's land, out of the district, and by such pollution caused an injury to the plaintiff:—Held, that his remedy was by action, and not under the compensation clauses of the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, the local board not having any power to foul a stream belonging to other persons. Cutor v. Lewisham Board of Works, 5 B. & S. 115; 34 L. J., Q. B. 74; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 340; 13 L. T. 212; 13 W. R. 254—Ex. Ch.

Right of Local Board to Drain into Metropolitan Sewers.]—The Metropolitan Board of Works took into their drainage system a natural brook, called the Stamford Brook. That brook was the natural means of drainage for the Acton district, which was outside the metropolitan area, and the inhabitants of that district and the defendant board, on becoming the sanitary authority of the district, had used for that purpose that part of the brook which was in their district. By this means, as the Acton district increased, the sewers of the metropolitan board, as they said, became overburdened with sewage coming from outside their area, and they requested the defendant board to send their sewage some other way. They, however, refused to do so, and claimed a right to drain into the metropolitan board's sewers. These proceedings then were instituted by the metropolitan board:—Held, that the defendant board, although they had a statutory duty to compel the drainage of their district, were in no different position as regards the plaintiff board than an ordinary riparian owner was as regards another riparian owner lower down on the same stream, and that, apart from the sewage of such persons as had acquired a prescriptive right to drain into the sewers of the plaintiff board, they could not be made to receive the sewage of the Acton district; and that an injunction must be granted to restrain the defendant board from draining into the plaintiff board's sewers in the future. As to existing drains, as to those which were made before the defendant board came into existence, they could not be interfered with; and as to those made since, under the circumstances of the case, they would not be interfered with. Att.-Gen. v. Acton Local Board, 52 L. J., Ch. 108; 22 Ch. D. 221; 47 L. T. 510; 31 W. R. 153.

Right to Drain into Main Sewer.]—The Metropolis Management Act, 1855, vested in the plaintiffs an open sewer, called the Stamford Brook. The Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862, s. 61, enacted that no person should make or branch any sewer or drain, or make any opening into any sewer vested in the plaintiffs, without their previous consent in writing; provided that any person might, with such consent, at his own expense, make or branch any drain into any such sewer in such manner as the plaintiffs should direct. After the passing of the act of 1855, the plaintiffs allowed four old cottages belonging to the defendants, on land just outside the metropolitan area and bounded by the Stamford Brook, to continue to drain through an eighteen inch brick drain into Stamford Brook. They subsequently, at the request of the defendants, who paid half the cost, covered in the brook and converted it into a main sewer. When they did this, they made a drain eye in the newly covered in sewer as a communication for the eighteen inch drain. The defendants afterwards built other cottages on the same land, and claimed the right to use the eighteen inch drain for the purpose of draining the new cottages through the communication into the sewer:—Held, 1. That as the defendants had not proved any prescriptive right to use the eighteen inch drain for the sewage of the new cottages, nor obtained the written consent of the plaintiffs for that purpose under s. 61 of the act of 1862, they were not entitled to use the eighteen inch drain for any other purposes than those for which they used it when the brook was covered in. 2. That, therefore, the plaintiffs were entitled to an injunction to restrain the defendants from permitting their additional cottages, or any buildings other than the four old cottages, to drain into the Stamford Brook. Metropolitan Board of Works v. L. &

N. W. Ry., 50 L. J., Ch. 409; 17 Ch. D. 246; 44 L. T. 270; 29 W. R. 693—C. A.

Semble, that if the plaintiffs had given their written consent and fixed the size of the communication under s. 61 of the act of 1862, the defendants could then have used the eighteen inch drain to the full extent of its capacity for all purposes. Ib.

Held, by the vice-chancellor, that the words, "any person" in s. 61 of the act of 1862 must be construed as meaning "any person" entitled to the benefits of the act, and accordingly as limited to owners or occupiers within the metropolitan area. S. C., 49 L. J., Ch. 355; 14 Ch. D. 521; 42 L. T. 830.

Held, also, that the drainage from each additional cottage or building was a separate making or branching of a drain within the meaning of the section. Ib.

Interference with Drain—Threatened Trespass and Proceedings — Injunction.]—A dispute having arisen between the defendants, a local authority, and the plaintiff, about a drain which the plaintiff had interfered with, the defendants gave notice to the plaintiff that they would enter on his land and reinstate the drain; but they afterwards abandoned their intention, and instead took proceedings against him before the magistrates. The plaintiff then brought an action against the defendants, claiming an injunction to restrain defendants from trespassing and proceeding before the magistrate. In the statement of claim the plaintiff did not in terms allege that the defendants threatened and intended to trespass on the land:—Held, that as no intention to commit a trespass was proved or alleged, the plaintiff had not made out his case for an injunction against the trespass; and that being so, the court had no jurisdiction to restrain the proceedings before the magistrate. Stannard v. St. Giles, Camberwell, Vestry, 51 L. J., Ch. 629; 20 Ch. D. 190; 46 L. T. 243; 30 W. R. 693—C. A.

Vesting of Sewers in Board—Connection with Drain illegally made.]—The duty imposed by s. 72 of the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855, on a district board, to keep the sewers which are by the act vested in them so as not to be a nuisance, is not an absolute duty, but only a duty to use all reasonable care and diligence to keep the sewers in a proper condition. If, therefore, a drain which was originally a private drain, has, by reason of another drain being connected with it, become a "sewer," and therefore by the act vested in the district board, the board will not be liable for a nuisance caused by the drain, if it is shown that the connection was made illegally without the knowledge of the board, and that before action brought they did not know, and could not by the exercise of reasonable care have discovered, that the drain was a "sewer." Hammond v. St. Pancras (L. R. 9 C. P. 316, post, col. 1152) followed. Bateman v. Poplar Board of Works, 57 L. J., Ch. 579; 37 Ch. D. 272; 58 L. T. 720; 36 W. R. 501.

Allowing Sewage to cause Nuisance in adjoining District—Stopping Existing Drains.]—A detached portion of the parish of C. had no separate main drainage system, but certain houses therein were drained by means of pipes carrying the sewage into cesspools, the overflow pipes from which communicated with main pipes within such detached portion. The drainage of the houses, including such communications, was constructed with the sanction of the C. vestry, as the local authority under the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855. The main pipes communicated with watercourses, within the adjoining district of the F. local board, and the sewage from the cesspools passed through the main pipes into the watercourses, and caused a nuisance in such adjoining district. The F. local board brought an information and action (to which the owners and occupiers of the houses were not parties) against the C. vestry, for an injunction to restrain them from permitting, authorising, or directing any sewage to pass from the detached portion of C. into the watercourses so as to cause a nuisance:—Held, that, inasmuch as the cesspools and drains were acting properly quâ cesspools and drains, no proceedings could be successfully taken by the C. vestry against the owners or occupiers of the houses under s. 85 of the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855; and that, as the cause and effect of the nuisance were not both within the area of the jurisdiction of the C. vestry, it was doubtful whether proceedings could be taken by them against the owners or occupiers of the houses under the Nuisances Removal Act, 1855; and that, assuming the C. vestry could take proceedings under the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855, or the Nuisances Removal Act, 1855, the case of Att.-Gen. v. Dorking (20 Ch. D. 595, 609) was an authority that the vestry could not be compelled by injunction to take such proceedings. Att.-Gen. v. Clerkenwell Vestry, 60 L. J., Ch. 788; [1891] 3 Ch. 527; 65 L. T. 312; 40 W. R. 185.

Drain repaired so as to be a Nuisance—Liability of Builder.]—A builder who is employed by the owner of a dwelling-house to repair a drain, and who repairs it so as to be a nuisance and injurious to health, is "the person who undertook or executed such repair" within s. 42 of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, and may be proceeded against under that section, although the owner is not summoned. Young v. Foster, 5 R. 430; 69 L. T. 147; 41 W. R. 589; 58 J. P. 8.

Public Sewer.]—The provisions of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, for the abatement of nuisances do not apply to a nuisance alleged to arise from a public sewer vested in the London County Council, and a court of summary jurisdiction has no power to entertain a complaint based upon such an alleged nuisance. Fulham Vestry v. London County Council, 66 L. J., Q. B. 515; [1897] 2 Q. B. 76; 76 L. T. 691; 45 W. R. 620; 61 J. P. 440.

Abatement—Covenant by Lessee—Liability.]—See Smith v. Robinson, post, col. 1143.

4. URINALS.

Power of Vestry to provide—Nuisance—Injunction.]—Under the Metropolis Local Management Act (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), s. 88, the vestry has power to provide and maintain urinals in situations where they deem such accommodation to be required:—Held, by Malins, V.-C., that any question whether one place or another was more fit for the erection of a urinal must be left to the decision of the vestry; but that the vestry would be controlled by the court if they acted in an unreasonable manner and occasioned a nuisance to the owners of adjoining property. But held, by the court of appeal, that as the erection of a urinal was not necessarily a nuisance, the provision of the act authorising the vestry to erect urinals did not empower them to erect one where it would be a nuisance to the owners of adjoining property, there being no words in the act which expressly or by necessary implication authorised them to create a nuisance. Vernon v. St. James, Westminster, Vestry, 50 L. J., Ch. 81; 16 Ch. D. 449; 44 L. T. 229; 29 W. R. 222—C. A.

A vestry, acting under the powers of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 88, resolved to erect a urinal in a situation where the vestry deemed such accommodation was required by the public, but where B. and other occupiers of houses considered that it would be a private nuisance; and the court granted an injunction, on the grounds that the act conferred no power to enable the vestry to erect that which would be a nuisance to anyone; that the vestry had no power to suppress nuisances; and that the act conferred no arbitrary power, which appeared to have been exercised, on the metropolitan vestries. Biddulph v. St. George's, Hanover-square, Vestry, 3 De G. J. & S. 493; 33 L. J., Ch. 411; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 434; 8 L. T. 44; 11 W. R. 524.

But, on appeal, the court, being satisfied upon the evidence that the urinal intended would not of necessity be a public nuisance, and also that it was neither certain nor probable that the vestry was exceeding nor would exceed its powers, and that the vestry was not influenced by any improper motive, dissolved the injunction. S. C., 3 De G. J. & S. 493; 33 L. J., Ch. 411; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 953; 8 L. T. 558; 11 W. R. 739.

The intended erection by a vestry, acting under the powers given by s. 88 of 19 & 20 Vict. c. 120, of a urinal in a mews (which, in the opinion of the court, was a highway within s. 96 of the act) at a distance of eight feet from the back door of the plaintiff A. and the cellar entrance of the plaintiff B., and quite close to a narrow passage down which several young females had to pass daily on their way to the show-rooms of the plaintiff C.:—Held, to be such a nuisance as to afford ground for a perpetual injunction. Vernon v. St. James, Westminster, Vestry, supra.

Power of Vestry to order Alterations—Public-house.]—The vestry of Paddington, having served notice under s. 73 of 5 Geo. 4, c. cxxvi., upon the appellant, the occupier of a public-house within the parish of Paddington, to effect certain alterations in a urinal forming part of and constructed in the outside flank wall of the house, and accessible only from the side street, preferred a complaint under the said section against him, on his refusing to carry out such order and direction, before one of the metropolitan police magistrates, who inflicted a penalty upon him. On the application of the appellant the magistrate stated a case for the opinion of the high court:—Held, that the decision of the magistrate was wrong; that the urinal formed part of the house, and was not in front thereof and abutting on the street within the meaning of s. 73 of the act 5 Geo. 4, c. cxxvi. The section applies to a structure that does not form part of the house, but is an adjunct thereto. The vestry cannot, under s. 73, order the occupier of a public-house to erect a urinal inside, but only outside the house. Wellstead v. Paddington Vestry, 66 L. T. 194; 40 W. R. 254; 56 J. P. 295.

5. WATER-CLOSETS.

Power to Order.]—Under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 81, the vestry or district board of a parish is empowered, in the case of an insufficient privy, to direct its conversion into a water-closet. St. Luke, Middlesex, Vestry v. Lewis, 1 B. & S. 865; 31 L. J., M. C. 73; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 432; 5 L. T. 608; 10 W. R. 249.

Power to make General Rules.]—A metropolitan district board of works has not authority under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, to lay down any general or arbitrary rule requiring owners or occupiers of houses situate within its district to convert privies into water-closets. Tinkler v. Wandsworth Board of Works, 2 De G. & J. 261; 27 L. J., Ch. 342; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 293; 6 W. R. 390.

A district board of works made an ex parte order on a party to turn into water-closets the privies attached to cottages belonging to him, and on his failing to do so, they proceeded to enter upon the premises for the purpose of doing it themselves. The order appeared to have been made, not with regard to the state of this particular property, but in consequence of a previous determination to substitute water-closets for privies throughout the district:—Held, that the board was exceeding its statutory powers, and ought to be restrained from entering on the property for the purpose of making the alteration. Ib.

Notice by Sanitary Authority—Jurisdiction of Magistrate.]—A vestry gave notice to the owner of a house under s. 81 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, to furnish a water-closet on his premises with sufficient doors and coverings, and, on his neglect to comply therewith, summoned him before a magistrate under s. 64 of the Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862. The magistrate, being of opinion that the water-closet was already provided with sufficient doors and coverings, held that the vestry had no jurisdiction to order further doors and coverings, and that he was not bound by the decision of the vestry, and dismissed the summons:—Held, that the vestry had jurisdiction to make the order, and that the magistrate had only jurisdiction to inquire whether the order had in fact been made and obeyed. St. James' Vestry, Clerkenwell v. Feary, 59 L. J., M. C. 82; 24 Q. B. D. 703; 62 L. T. 697; 54 J. P. 676.

Upon the hearing of a summons under s. 37 of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, against the owner of premises for failing to comply with a notice served upon him by the sanitary authority in respect of the water-closet accommodation upon the premises, the magistrate is bound by the decision of the sanitary authority that the accommodation is insufficient, and has no jurisdiction to inquire as to its sufficiency or otherwise. St. John's, Hackney, Vestry v. Hutton, 66 L. J., Q. B. 74; [1897] 1 Q. B. 210; 75 L. T. 686; 45 W. R. 92; 61 J. P. 54.

—— Notice not in accordance with By-Laws of County Council.]—Upon a summons taken out against a house-owner for non-compliance with directions purporting to be given by a sanitary authority under the provisions of s. 41 of the Public Health Act, 1891, the magistrate has jurisdiction to inquire into the validity of such directions. Such directions, if relating to a closet in existence at the time of the passing of the said act, cannot be justified under a by-law which is prospective only, and must, under s. 39, sub-s. 3, of the act, be held to be void as "not being in accordance with the by-laws" authorised under the act. Fulham Vestry v. Solomon, 65 L. J., M. C. 33; [1896] 1 Q. B. 198; 60 J. P. 72.

Quære, whether the words "cleansing, alteration, or amendment," in s. 41, sub-s. 2, would in any event authorise a requisition for structural improvements. Ib.

6. Removal of Dust, &c.

Obligation to Remove—Right of Contractor to "Tots."]—By the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, s. 127, a duty is imposed on a vestry of collecting and removing all dirt, ashes, rubbish, and filth in or under houses and places within their parish. Plaintiff contracted with defendants for the purchase of the dust, filth, and refuse which should be collected by their servants from the houses, &c., in the parish of P. In each house there was a receptacle called a dust-bin, the contents of which were put into baskets by the scavengers, and thence into carts by the vestry, and conducted to the brickfields of the plaintiff. The dust-bins contained, in addition to dust, a number of articles known as "tots," of more or less value, thrown away by the occupiers of the houses or their tenants, for the purpose of being taken away by the dust-carts and got rid of:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to these "tots" under the terms of his contract with the vestry, inasmuch as there was no obligation on the part of the latter, under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 125, to remove them, and the contract must be construed to include only such things as the vestry were compelled by the statute to take away. Collins v. Paddington Vestry, 48 L. J., Q. B. 345; 40 L. T. 843; 27 W. R. 504.

"Refuse of a Trade," what is.]—Ashes arising from coals burnt in the furnace of a steam-engine used for the purpose of sawing and lifting timber and other material for carrying on the business of a pianoforte manufacturer, are "refuse of a trade, business, or manufacture," within the Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), s. 128. Gay v. Cadby, 46 L. J., M. C. 260; 2 C. P. D. 391; 36 L. T. 410.

Semble, that the ashes of coals consumed in an hotel or a bakery are refuse within the meaning of the same section. Ib.

—— Clinkers Produced in Hotel Furnaces.]—Clinkers produced in the furnaces of boilers in an hotel used to generate steam for supplying power for the electric lighting of the hotel, for heating the public rooms and passages, for cooking, and for working the lift and pumping water to the top of the hotel, are not "refuse of any trade, manufacture, or business" within the meaning of s. 128 of the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855; and, therefore, the vestry within whose district the hotel is situated are not entitled to be paid for the removal of them. Gay v. Cadby (2 C. P. D. 391) considered. St. Martin's Vestry v. Gordon, 60 L. J., M. C. 37; [1891] 1 Q. B. 61; 64 L. T. 243; 39 W. R. 295; 55 J. P. 437—C. A.

House Refuse—Liability of Local Authority—Contract with Scavenger.]—The duty imposed on vestries and district boards by s. 125 of the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855, as to the removal of house refuse within their parish or district is discharged by their entering into a bonâ fide contract with scavengers to execute and perform the work; and such vestries and district boards cannot, in such cases, be made liable in damages for the scavengers' neglect to properly carry out their contract. Holborn Union v. St. Leonard's, Shoreditch (2 Q. B. D. 145), distinguished. Ellis v. Strand Board of Works, 67 L. T. 307—C. A.

—— Removal of—Refusal to allow Scavengers to enter House—"Wilful Obstruction."]—Under the provisions of s. 16 of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, the London County Council made a by-law that the sanitary authority should remove at least once in every week the house refuse on premises within their district, but they had made no by-law as to the duties of occupiers of houses for the purpose of facilitating the removal of such refuse, and an authority under this by-law appointed a certain day in each week for the removal of such refuse, and gave due notice of the same. The respondent objected to the weekly removal of refuse as being an unnecessary annoyance, and on a certain day he refused to allow the scavengers of the authority to enter his house for the purpose of removing the refuse:—Held, that the respondent, in so refusing, was guilty of "wilfully obstructing" the officers of the authority in the execution of the act within the meaning of s. 116 of the act, and was liable to the penalty imposed by that section. Borrow v. Howland, 74 L. T. 787; 18 Cox, C. C. 368; 60 J. P. 391.

7. Hospitals.

Power of Board to erect—Nuisance.]—The Metropolitan Poor Act, 1867 (30 Vict. c. 6), authorises the formation of districts and district asylums for the care and cure of sick and infirm poor, creates corporations for that purpose, gives authority to the Poor Law Board (now the Local Government Board) to issue directions to these corporations, enables them to purchase lands and erect buildings for the purposes of the act, and makes the rates of parishes and unions liable for the outlay thus incurred. But it does not, by direct and imperative provisions, order these things to be done, so that if, in doing them, a nuisance is created to the injury of the health or property of persons resident in the neighbourhood of the place where the land is purchased, or the buildings erected, it does not afford to these acts a statutory protection. And therefore, where such nuisance was found as a fact:—Held, that the district board could not set up the statute, nor the orders of the Poor Law Board the under it, as an answer to an action, or to prevent an injunction issuing to restrain the board from continuing the nuisance. Metropolitan Asylum District v. Hill, 50 L. J., Q. B. 353; 6 App. Cas. 193; 44 L. T. 653; 29 W. R. 617; 45 J. P. 664—H. L. (E.)

8. Commons and Recreation Grounds.

Commons—Validity of By-laws for the Preservation of Order on.]—By a scheme made under the Metropolitan Commons Act, 1866, and confirmed by the Metropolitan Commons Supplemental Act, 1877, it was provided that a common should be dedicated to the use and recreation of the public as an open and uninclosed space for ever, and the Metropolitan Board of Works were empowered to frame by-laws and regulations for the prevention of nuisances and the preservation of order on the common. The Metropolitan Board of Works made a by-law prohibiting the delivery of any public speech, lecture, sermon, or address of any kind, except with the written permission of the board first obtained, and upon such portions of the common and at such times as might be by such written permission directed and sanctioned by the board:—Held, that such by-law was valid. No right on the part of the general public to hold meetings on a common is known to the law. De Morgan v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 49 L. J., M. C. 51; 5 Q. B. D. 155; 42 L. T. 238; 28 W. R. 489; 44 J. P. 296.

Recreation Grounds.]—26 Vict. c. 13 only applies to cases where land by act of parliament or otherwise has been vested in trustees, or irrevocably set apart for the use and enjoyment of the inhabitants of a square or a street, and it gives no power to deprive the owner of his beneficial interest in property where he has not given it up. Tulk v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 37 L. J., Q. B. 272; L. R. 3 Q. B. 682; 19 L. T. 18; 16 W. R. 985—Ex. Ch.

Parks—Conviction for Infringing Rules.]—By the Parks Regulation Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 15), s. 9, any rule made in pursuance of the first schedule to this act shall be forthwith laid before both houses of parliament, if parliament be sitting, or if not, then within three weeks after the beginning of the next ensuing session of parliament; and if any such rules shall be disapproved of by either house of parliament within one month after the same shall have been so laid before parliament, such rules, or such parts thereof as shall be disapproved of, shall not be enforced:—Held, that rules made during the recess came into operation and remained in force until disapproved of by parliament; and a conviction for infringing such rules was valid. Bailey v. Williamson, 42 L. J., M. C. 49; L. R. 8 Q. B. 118; 28 L. T. 28; 21 W. R. 404.

Held, also, that there was no right in the public to hold meetings in the royal parks, and therefore there was no right interfered with within s. 11; and that the conviction was therefore right. Ib.

9. Dairies.

"Person carrying on business of Dairyman"—Farmer.]—A person carrying on the business of a farmer within the metropolitan police area, and keeping cows in a shed upon his premises as incidental to such a business, is not "a person carrying on the business of a dairyman" within the meaning of s. 20 as defined by s. 141 of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, so as to require a licence. Umfreville v. London County Council, 66 L. J., Q. B. 177; 75 L. T. 550; 18 Cox, C. C. 464; 61 J. P. 84.

10. Slaughter-houses.

By-Laws—Breach by Servant—Liability of Master to Penalty.]—The Slaughter-houses, &c. (Metropolis), Act, 1874, which contains in terms no prohibition as to the manner in which the slaughter of cattle is to be performed, enacts by s. 4 that the local authority may make by-laws regulating the conduct of any business specified in the act, and the by-laws made under the act prohibit the occupier of a slaughter-house from slaughtering or permitting to be slaughtered any animal contrary to certain regulations laid down in them:—Held, that these by-laws were not repugnant to the common law, and that upon breach of them the occupier of a slaughter-house was liable for the act of his servant, although the offence of the servant was committed without the knowledge and contrary to the express order of his master. Collman v. Mills, 66 L. J., Q. B. 170; [1897] 1 Q. B. 396; 75 L. T. 590; 18 Cox, C. C. 481; 61 J. P. 102.

11. Unsound Food.

Unsound Meat—Exposure for Sale.]—The appellant, a farmer, sent to a salesman on the London Central Meat Market, meat for the purpose of being sold for human food, such meat being unwholesome and unfit for the food of man. The salesman did not expose the meat for sale, but placed it on one side, and gave notice to an inspector of nuisances, who caused the meat to be removed and condemned by a justice. The appellant was then summoned before a justice on an information under the Nuisances Removal Act, 1863, charging him with being the owner of meat "unlawfully deposited in the London Central Meat Market for the purpose of sale and intended for the food of man, the same being diseased, unsound, unwholesome and unfit for the food of man," and was convicted:—Held, that there having been no sale or exposure for sale of the meat, the appellant was wrongly convicted. Barlow v. Terrett, 60 L. J., M. C. 104; [1891] 2 Q. B. 107; 65 L. T. 148; 39 W. R. 640; 55 J. P. 632.

—— Sale by Commission Agent to Retail Dealer—Offence.]—The selling of unsound meat by a commission agent to a retail dealer is an offence under sub-s. 3 of s. 47 of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, and a prosecution should be instituted under that sub-section and not under sub-s. 2. Billing v. Prebble, 66 L. J., Q. B. 180; 45 W. R. 187; 61 J. P. 86.

Fruit unfit for Food—Sale or Exposure for Sale—"Liable to be seized"—Evidence.]—A person cannot be convicted of the offence created by s. 47, sub-s. 3, of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, unless at the time the articles are found in the possession of his purchaser they are intended for the food of man, and are sold or exposed for sale or deposited in some place for the purpose of sale or of preparation for sale, and are "liable to be seized" under sub-s. 1. Reg. v. Dennis, 63 L. J., M. C. 153; [1894] 2 Q. B. 458; 10 R. 316; 71 L. T. 436; 42 W. R. 586; 18 Cox, C. C. 21; 58 J. P. 622—C. C. R.

The terms of the contract of sale may be evidence to go to the jury to show that the articles sold are not intended for the food of man. Ib.

12. Fire.

Fire Brigade—Power to take Possession of Property on Premises.]—A fire broke out on premises in a part of which the plaintiff carried on the business of a licensed victualler, but the plain-tiff's goods were not destroyed by the fire. In an action against the defendants for the wrongful conversion of the plaintiff's goods by their servants, the men of the fire brigade, the jury found that the fire brigade had custody of the premises for the purpose of extinguishing the fire; that the injury to the plaintiff's goods was caused by the felonious acts of the men of the fire brigade; that the officers were guilty of negligence in not preventing the felonious acts by the men, and they assessed the damages at 15*l.*:—Held, that under 28 & 29 Vict. c. 90, it is not the imperative duty of the fire brigade to take possession of property on premises where a fire breaks out, but the statute gives them power to do so. Joyce v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 44 L. T. 811; 45 J. P. 667.

Application of Fire Insurance Monies.]—Sect. 83 of the Metropolitan Building Act (14 Geo. 3, c. 83), which was not repealed by the Metropolitan Building Act (7 & 8 Vict. c. 84), extends to the whole of England and not to the metropolis only. Gorely, Ex parte, 4 De G. J. & S. 477; 34 L. J., Bk. 1; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1085; 11 L. T. 319; 13 W. R. 60.

13. Smoke.

Negligence of Owner or Occupier.]—In order to support a charge against an owner or occupier of trade premises within the metropolis of negligently using a furnace employed thereon so that the smoke is not effectually consumed, contrary to 16 & 17 Vict. c. 128, s. 1, evidence must be given of negligence on his part, evidence of negligence on the part of a servant being insufficient. Chisholm v. Doulton, 58 L. J., M. C. 133; 22 Q. B. D. 736; 60 L. T. 966; 37 W. R. 749; 16 Cox, C. C. 675; 53 J. P. 550.

14. Music Halls.

Protection from Fire—Certificate—Building not Licensed—Jurisdiction of Magistrate.]—A hall within the metropolis was kept open for public music, but was not licensed under 25 Geo. 2, c. 36. The London County Council applied for a summons against the proprietor for keeping it open without a certificate, under s. 12, of the Metropolis Management, &c., Amendment Act, 1878, that the building was in accordance with their regulations in respect to protection from fire. The magistrate considered that as the hall was not licensed under 25 Geo. 2, c. 36, s. 12 of the act of 1878 had no application, and declined jurisdiction:—Held, that upon the true construction of ss. 11, 12, and 13 of the act of 1878, the words "to be kept open" in s. 12 were used in the sense of "required or authorised to be kept open," that the hall was within the purview of s. 12, and the regulations as to protection from fire were applicable. Reg. v. Hannay, 60 L. J., M. C. 167; [1891] 2 Q. B. 709; 40 W. R. 14; 56 J. P. 151.

Unauthorised Performance—Evidence—Penalty—Liability of Agent.]—In an action for a penalty under 10 Geo. 2, c. 28, s. 2, for performing or causing to be performed plays, &c., without letters patent:—Held, that proof that a party was acting manager of a theatre and paid the salary of, and dismissed one of, the performers, was sufficient evidence that he caused the performances, and that if he did so it was immaterial whether he acted as the agent of others or not. Parsons v. Chapman, 5 Car. & P. 33.

Music and Dancing Licences—County Council.]—See ante, cols. 1042, 1043.

15. Sky Signs.

A structure that is wholly or in part erected over a house for a purpose other than advertisement is not thereby taken out of the definition of "sky-sign" contained in s. 2 of the London Sky Signs Act, 1891, and therefore requires a licence from the county council. London County Council v. Carwardine, 62 L. J., M. C. 40; 5 R. 70; 68 L. T. 761; 57 J. P. 181.

The owner of a waxwork exhibition in London fixed the letters "Madame Tussaud's" to a galvanized iron trellis support on the palisade, which surmounted one of the end walls of a large building. The dome of the building was some thirty feet higher than and separated from these letters. At one small part of the street the letters were visible against the sky, but the letters were not over the building:—Held, the magistrate was wrong in finding that this was a sky sign within the meaning of the London Sky Signs Act, 1891. Tussaud v. London County Council, 57 J. P. 184.

On the 7th June, 1895, there was on the roof of the Savoy Hotel a structure composed of a board, or series of boards, to which were attached embossed glass letters in metal frames, forming the words "Savoy Hotel and Restaurant," such board, or series of boards, and each individual letter thereon, being fixed on the roof by iron supports and secured by the rods to the roofs and chimney-stack. The board, or series of boards, was visible against the sky from the street; no portion of the letters was visible against the sky, but only against the boards. The structure had been erected before the passing of the London Building Act, 1894, and no licence had been obtained from the London County Council for its retention:—Held, that it constituted a sky sign within the London Building Act, 1894. London County Council v. Savoy Hotel Co., 60 J. P. 457.

16. Vehicles.

Stage Carriage—Use of Manager's Name—Injunction.]—The plaintiff, as manager of an omnibus company, became, under the provisions of the statutes and rules for the regulation of metropolitan stage-carriages, the licensee of their vehicles. Having ceased to be such manager:—Held, that he was entitled to an injunction to restrain the company from continuing to use his name upon the number plates affixed to their carriages. Hodges v. London Tramways Omnibus Co., 12 Q. B. D. 105; 50 L. T. 262; 32 W. R. 616.

Hackney Carriage—Liability of Proprietor for Negligence of Driver.]—The effect of the Metropolitan Hackney Carriage Act (6 & 7 Vict. c. 86) is to render the registered proprietor of a hackney carriage liable to third persons for the negligence of a licensed driver of the carriage as if the latter were his servant, though the relation of master and servant does not in fact exist. King v. Spurr (8 Q. B. D. 104) distinguished. King v. London Improved Cab Co., 58 L. J., Q. B. 456; 23 Q. B. D. 281; 61 L. T. 34; 37 W. R. 737; 53 J. P. 788—C. A.

Liability of Owner—Injunction.]—It is the duty at common law of the owner of vacant land to prevent his land from being a public nuisance, although such a nuisance may be caused by the acts of other persons; and the attorney-general, on behalf of the public, is entitled to an injunction to prevent such owner from committing a breach of that duty. Att.-Gen. v. Tod-Heatley, 66 L. J., Ch. 275; [1897] 1 Ch. 560; 76 L. T. 174; 45 W. R. 394—C. A. Reversing, 61 J. P. 24.

The fact that a sanitary authority under the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, have power, or a duty, to themselves abate a nuisance, or to take proceedings to procure its abatement, does not, having regard to ss. 13 and 138 of the act, prevent them from obtaining, in an action brought by them as relators with the attorney-general, an injunction to prevent the continuance of the nuisance. The principles laid down in Reg. v. Watts (1 Salk. 357) and Reg. v. Bradford Navigation Co. (6 B. & S. 631; 34 L. J., Q. B. 191) applied. Ib.

—— Sublessee — Premises not Let at Rack-rent.]—Where premises not let at a rack-rent are sublet for the whole term, less a few days, the rent payable and the covenants and conditions being the same in the lease and sublease, the sublessee and not the lessee is the "owner" of the premises within the meaning of s. 141 of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891. Truman v. Kerslake, 63 L. J., M. C. 222; [1894] 2 Q. B. 774; 10 R. 489; 43 W. R. 111; 58 J. P. 766.

—— Owner of Foreshore of Navigable River —Thames Conservators.]—By s. 4, sub-s. 1, of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, the sanitary authority, if satisfied of the existence of a nuisance liable to be dealt with summarily under that act, are to serve a notice requiring its abatement on the person by whose act, default, or sufferance the nuisance arises or continues, or, if such person cannot be found, on the occupier or owner of the premises on which the nuisance arises; sub-s. 3 (b) contains a proviso that where the person causing the nuisance cannot be found, and it is clear that it does not arise or continue by the act, default, or sufferance of the occupier or owner of the premises, the sanitary authority may themselves abate it. The appellants were a public body having certain jurisdiction and powers over the river Thames, the bed and soil whereof and of the shores within the flux and reflux of the tides were vested in them by statute. The acts by which their duties were regulated gave them various powers for the improvement of the navigation of the river, but gave them no power of scavenging or removing nuisances in the portion of the river hereafter referred to, and their power of raising funds, and the application of the funds, when raised, were strictly limited by statute and did not include a power of raising money for the sanitary improvement of such portion of the river. A nuisance injurious and dangerous to health existed between high and low water-marks in a tidal creek running inland about 400 or 500 feet from the line of the river; it consisted of an accumulation of foul mud, which was largely composed of decomposing organic matter, and was chiefly derived from matter held in suspension in the water or floating on its surface and left when the tide receded; it was impossible to fix upon any person or persons as having caused the accumulation. An order having been made upon the appellants as owners of the premises upon which the nuisance existed for its abatement:—Held, that s. 4, sub-s. 1, must be read with the proviso in sub-s. 3 (b); that where the person causing the nuisance could not be found, the liability of the owner of the premises to abate it only arose where it was shown that it continued by his act, default, or sufferance, and that the order upon the appellant was therefore wrongly made:—Held, further, that under their acts of parliament the appellants were owners of the soil and foreshore of the river for certain specified purposes only, and were not owners for the purposes of s. 4 of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891. Thames Conservators v. Port of London Sanitary Authority, 63 L. J., M. C. 121; [1894] 1 Q. B. 647; 69 L. T. 803; 58 J. P. 335.

Summons—Service.] — A summons issued in respect of a nuisance upon complaint of the sanitary inspector of a district, under the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, comes within the words "any notice, order, or other document" of s. 128 of that act. Such a summons may, therefore, be served in any of the modes mentioned in that section, and may be addressed to the "owner" of the premises without any further description. Reg. v. Mead, 63 L. J., M. C. 128; [1894] 2 Q. B. 124; 10 R. 217; 70 L. T. 766; 42 W. R. 442; 58 J. P. 448.

Conviction without Notice to abate—Brick Burning.] — In proceedings under the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, to abate a nuisance, the notice provided by s. 4 is only required to be given in respect of the nuisances mentioned in s. 2, and need not be given in cases of trade nuisance provided for by s. 21. Bird v. St. Mary Abbot's Vestry, 64 L. J., M. C. 215; [1895] 1 Q. B. 912; 15 R. 438; 72 L. T. 599; 59 J. P. 391.

Entry on Premises to Abate—Previous Complaint to Justices, whether Necessary.]—In January, 1857, the board of works for the Wandsworth district served the plaintiff with a notice, intituled in "the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855, and the Nuisances Removal and Diseases Prevention Act, 1855," and signed by their inspector of nuisances to the effect that the board required the plaintiff to commence, within fourteen days from the date thereof, works therein particularly specified, in abatement of a nuisance, and stated that in default of such commencement and completion forthwith, compulsory proceedings would be taken under the above acts. In June the local board of works served the plaintiff with another notice, intituled in "the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855, and the Nuisances Removal and Diseases Prevention Act, 1855," and signed by their inspector of nuisances, stating that as the time mentioned in the former notice had expired without the works being completed, the board gave notice of their intention to enter the premises and adopt that course which the law provided. The workmen of the board of works accordingly, in November, entered the premises and broke the ground; and thereupon the plaintiff filed a bill for an injunction to restrain the board of works from proceeding with the works, on the ground that they had not proceeded in conformity with the provisions of the Nuisances Removal and Diseases Prevention Act. By that act it is provided, that where a nuisance is ascertained by the local authorities to exist, complaint is to be made to a justice of the peace, who is thereupon to issue a summons for the party to appear before two justices in petty sessions, with an appeal to the quarter sessions. The board of works contended that their powers were derived under the Metropolis Management Act, by which act an appeal was given from the order of a district board to the Metropolitan Board of Works, and that as the plaintiff had that statutory remedy, he had no right to an injunction. But the court held that the 211th section of the Metropolis Management Act could not be considered as imperative, or as superseding the enactments in the Nuisances Prevention Act, which gives jurisdiction to the justices of the peace; and an injunction was granted until answer or further order, the plaintiff undertaking to proceed to construct such works as should be deemed proper and sufficient by a justice or justices of the peace under the Nuisances Prevention Act. Tinkler v. Wandsworth District Board of Works, 1 Giff. 412; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1292; 6 W. R. 50. See S. C., cor. L.JJ., ante, col. 1106.

Giving into Custody—Notice of Action for.]—The 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, having created several acts misdemeanors, inflicts a penalty, on summary conviction, on various other offences, and among them the laying shells in a thoroughfare. It likewise enacts that any person found committing any offence punishable either upon indictment or as a misdemeanor upon summary conviction by virtue of the act, may be apprehended by the owner of the property on or with respect to which the offence shall be committed, or by his servant, or any person authorised by him, and detained until he can be delivered to a constable; and notice in writing must be given of all actions against any person for anything done in pursuance of the act. A person employed by the owner to keep clean a thoroughfare, finding that another person was in the habit of laying oyster-shells upon it, consulted an inspector of police, and by his advice gave that party into custody:—Held, that he was entitled to notice of action, this being an act done in pursuance of the statute. Danvers v. Morgan, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1051; 4 W. R. 21.

An owner of property is not justified in giving a person into custody found (popularly speaking) committing a nuisance against his premises, nor is he entitled to notice of action for having done so, unless he is fairly justified in believing that the person had the intention to soil or deface them, within the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 54, or the intention to commit damage or injury or spoil to them within the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 52. Bayley v. Aldred, 10 L. T. 523.

A. had communicated to B. & Co., who were distillers, a method of rectifying spirits, and they were to pay him an annuity, and sixpence a gallon on all spirits rectified by his method, and to keep an account. A. having a sum due to him, B. & Co. offered to pay it at their solicitor's office, and to produce the account there. A. sent B. & Co. a letter, stating that he should come to the distillery for a sight of the account and for payment; to which G., one of the firm of B. & Co., replied by letter, stating that if A. came to the distillery, and either rang or knocked he would be punished. A. went to the distillery and gently rang the gate-bell, when H., who was the cashier of the firm, gave A. into the custody of a policeman, on a charge of having rung the bell, contrary to 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 54:—Held, that this was not a case within that act, and that G. and H. were not justified under that act, and that they were not entitled to notice of action. Home v. Grimble, Car. & M. 17.

Ringing Door Bells.]—The mere fact of a man being instructed to deliver papers at the house of a third person is no answer to a complaint against him under s. 28 of the Town Police Clauses Act, 1847, charging him with having "wilfully and wantonly" disturbed the party and his family by violently knocking and ringing at the door at an unreasonable hour of the night. Clark v. Hoggins, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 545. See also Home v. Grimble, supra.

Overcrowded House—"Premises"—Inmates.]—A notice directed to a person officially in charge of a night shelter that "the premises were so overcrowded as to be injurious or dangerous to the health of the inmates," and a summons and order founded upon such notice, are sufficient to convey to the recipient that the nuisance complained of related to the overcrowding of a house or part of a house, as referred to in the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, s. 2, sub-s. 1 (e). The temporary occupiers of such night shelters are equivalent to "inmates" of such house. Reg. v. Slade, 65 L. J., M. C. 108; 74 L. T. 656; 18 Cox, C. C. 316; 60 J. P. 358.

—— Night Refuge—House—Superintendent of Philanthropic Association—Liability to abate Nuisance.]—A building used during the day for religious services and at night as a refuge for the destitute poor, but which contains no sleeping accommodation, is nevertheless a house within the meaning of clause (e) of s. 2, sub-s. 1 of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891. The superintendent of the philanthropic work of a religious association, owners of such a building, who gives orders to the caretaker as to the admission of destitute persons at night, may, in the event of the building being so overcrowded as to be injurious to health, be summoned as the person by whose act, default, or sufferance a nuisance has arisen. Reg. v. Mead, Gates, Ex parte, 64 L. J., M. C. 169; 59 J. P. 150.

Arising from Sewage and Drainage.]—See ante, col. 1101.

C. RATES.

57 & 58 Vict. c. 53, is the London (Equalisation of Rates) Act, 1894.

1. JURISDICTION.

District Boards—Finality of Decision.]—The effect of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, is to substitute districts for the parishes of which they are composed, for all purposes of management, taxation and expenditure, and not for purposes of management only. The rates leviable in the component parishes under the order of a district board, are raised for the benefit of the whole district, though apportioned between the parishes; primâ facie, the rates ought to be apportioned between the parishes according to their respective rateable value and not according to the outlay in them respectively, subject to allowances, at the discretion of the board in cases falling within s. 159. An order of a district board on a parish, distinguishing between the sums required for sewerage, and for other expenses, is good under s. 158, and is final if made by the board after an impartial exercise of the discretion given to it by s. 159, the decision of the board, so arrived at, as to the amount proper to be required from a parish, being, if erroneous, conclusive. St. Botolph. Aldgate v. Whitechapel Board of Works, 3 El. & El. 89; 29 L. J., M. C. 228; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1073; 2 L. T. 504; 8 W. R. 691.

Transfer of Powers to New Authorities.]—Under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, the powers of the trustees of the parish of Islington conferred by a local act are transferred to the vestry:—Held, that a demand of an inhabitant to be inserted in the rate-book of the poor-rate should be made upon such vestry, and not upon the overseers. Reg. v. Islington Overseers, 3 B. & S. 46; 32 L. J., M. C. 257; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 155; 8 L. T. 331; 11 W. R. 760.

By a local act, the vestrymen, governors, and directors of the poor, or any nine of them, or on their failure, the churchwardens, were to make a rate on the parish, called the composition rate, for raising a sum for payment of the rector's stipend, and for the repairs and expenses of the church. By a prior act the governors and directors of the poor were made vestrymen:—Held, that the power of making this rate was by 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 90, and 19 & 20 Vict. c. 112, s. 3, transferred to the new vestry elected under those statutes; though it might be that, if the new vestry failed to make any rate, the churchwardens might still make one under the powers of the local act. Reg. v. Stretfield, 32 L. J., M. C. 236; 11 W. R. 736.

—— Transfer of Debt.]—By an act the whole area of Grosvenor-square was placed under the management of trustees, and they, many years ago, in pursuance of powers contained in the act, borrowed money, which, together with interest, was charged on the rates to be levied under the act, such rates being payable one-half by the owner and the other by the occupier of each house in the square:—Held, that ss. 90, 93, 94, 180 and 239 of the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, though it left in the trustees the inclosed ground and footway round it, together with all duties and powers in relation to the future maintenance of such ground, and to levy rates for defraying the expenses incurred in the execution of such duties and powers, transferred the debt charged on the rates under the special act to the vestry of the parish; and the court granted a peremptory mandamus to the vestry to take the necessary steps for paying the principal and interest. Reg. v. St. George's, Hanover Square, 32 L. J., Q. B. 160; 11 W. R. 722.

—— Collection of Arrears.]—Under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, s. 18, a board was elected on 26th March, 1855, to serve the office of surveyors of the highways in a parish for the year ensuing. On 23rd November, 1855, they made a highway rate. In August, 1855, the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, passed, and, by s. 251, it came into operation on 1st January, 1856. On 28th November, 1855, under ss. 31, 32, a district board of works was elected for the district, comprehending the parish, which was included in part 1 of schedule B. After 25th March, 1856, application was made, on the part of the late highway board, to a party rated to the highway rates for payment of arrears, under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 97. Payment not having been made, a summons was taken out against him, but the magistrate refused to issue a warrant for levying the arrears. Afterwards the party paid the arrears to the district board of works. A rule having been obtained for an order directing the magistrate to issue the warrant, the court discharged the rule, on the ground that the collection of such arrears was not to be made by the late highway board. Reg. v. Ingham, 7 El. & Bl. 5; 5 W. R. 69.

—— Rights of Overseers.]—By a local act, the hamlet of Spitalfields was constituted a distinct parish, and the rector, churchwardens and overseers for the poor of the parish for the time being were constituted the vestrymen for the time being of the parish. A subsequent local act authorised the churchwardens and overseers of the poor, and vestrymen of the parish, to meet together in the vestry room and make poor-rates; the same persons were to appoint thirty vestrymen as governors and directors of the poor, to make regulations for their management and relief; and the act continued in force in the parish the laws relating to the relief of the poor except where altered by the act. A subsequent act empowered the churchwardens, overseers and vestrymen of the parish to sue for rates in the name of the collector. The poor-rates were made as directed by these acts, to the passing of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120. Under s. 2 of this statute a new vestry was duly elected for the parish of Spitalfields, and thenceforth made poor-rates for the parish, from time to time, in making which the overseers, as such, took no part:—Held, that such rates were lawfully made; that the new vestry alone had authority to make them, and that the overseers were not entitled to vote, as such, at the making of them. Vaughan v. Imray, 1 El. & El. 633; 28 L. J., M. C. 78; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 980; 7 W. R. 240.

Parish outside Metropolis.]—Part of a parish, A., was included in a sewerage district or level, by the metropolitan commissioners of sewers, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 112, who pursuant thereunto borrowed, for the purposes of the act, money upon the security of the rates of the several districts, and apportioned the same amongst the different parishes therein comprised. On the passing of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, when the powers of the commissioners under the former act expired, the whole of the parish was excluded from the metropolis as therein defined, the sums borrowed by the commissioners, in pursuance of their act, still remaining due and unpaid. By s. 181, the board is empowered to assess rates upon parishes formerly portions of districts under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 112, but now excluded from the metropolis, for the purpose of discharging their liabilities; such rates to be assessed and levied "in like manner as the expenses of the board in the execution of the act." The metropolitan local board having made a rate upon A., purporting on the face of it to be for "defraying the expenses of the board in the execution of the act":—Held, that the rate was void, the parish of A. for such purposes being beyond the jurisdiction of the board, and liable only to rates for the special purposes contained in s. 181. Reg. v. Ingham, 4 B. & S. 205; 32 L. J., M. C. 214; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1288; 11 W. R. 855.

Serjeants' Inn.]—By the City of London Sewers Act, 11 & 12 Vict. c. 163, the city is placed under commissioners, who have the sole power to cleanse, pave and light the whole, and to deepen, alter, and manage sewers over the whole; and they are empowered to direct the alderman, or his deputy, and the major part of the common councilmen of every ward within the city, to make a sewers-rate, upon the owners and occupiers of property within the city, whether such persons be liable to be assessed to the poor-rate or not liable thereto by reason of such premises being situate in any precinct or extra-parochial place or otherwise. By the act the city of London includes all precincts and places within the city and liberties:—Held, that Serjeants' Inn, which is an extra-parochial place within the city, was liable to be rated, though not in any ward of the city; and that the commissioners might, in their warrant or precept to the officers of the adjoining ward, direct them to rate the owners and occupiers of Serjeants' Inn. Moss v. London Sewers Commissioners, 4 El. & Bl. 670; 24 L. J., M. C. 84; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 701.

Appointment of Collector.]—By 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 181, the Metropolitan Board of Works has power, in default of the overseers, to appoint a person to make a rate over parishes beyond the metropolis, but within the limits of the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 112, for the purpose of paying off debts due under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 112. Reg. v. Glossop, 32 L. J., M. C. 92; 11 W. R. 345.

Lighting and Watching Turnpike Road.]—The commissioners under 57 Geo. 3, c. 29 (the Metropolitan Paving Act), have no power to make a rate for lighting and watching the footpaths on the side of any turnpike road within the operation of the act. Loveridge v. Hodsoll, 2 B. & Ad. 602; 9 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 285.

2. VALIDITY.

What Rates Allowed.]—Under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 161, the only rates which a vestry is authorised to make are a sewers-rate, a lighting-rate, and a general rate; and no other rates but the sewerage and lighting rates can be made independently of and distinct from such general rate. Reg. v. G. W. Ry., El. Bl. & El. 600; 28 L. J., M. C. 59; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 386; 6 W. R. 774.

Works already done—Law Expenses.]—The commissioners may make a rate to defray the expenses of works already done; in order to justify such a rate it is not necessary that there should have been a previous presentment by a jury of those works. It is no valid objection to such a rate that it is made to defray previous law expenses of the commissioners, bonâ fide incurred by the commissioners in the discharge of their duty. Nor that the rate is in the alternative, to defray the expenses of works done or to be done, for the word "or" must be read "and." Rex v. Tower Hamlets Commissioners, 1 B. & Ad. 22; 9 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 30.

Rates made by Guardians as Overseers.]—Under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, a precept was directed by the Metropolitan Board of Works to the vestry of a parish to raise a sum of money, as being the proportion chargeable on the parish for the expenses of the board, and the vestry made a precept, directed to the overseers of the parish, requiring them to make a rate for that purpose. By a local act, the affairs of the poor of the parish were committed to guardians; the precept was delivered to the guardians, who made a rate in obedience to it, signed by their own names:—Held, that the guardians were overseers within the act, and the rate was not objectionable on these grounds. Christie v. St. Luke's, Chelsea, Union, 8 El. & Bl. 992; 27 L. J., M. C. 153; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 733; 6 W. R. 333.

Evidence of Authority.]—The rate did not state on the face of it the issuing of the precept:—Held, that the rate was sufficient, though not showing on the face of it the source of the authority of those who made it. Ib.

Form of Orders.]—By 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 158, vestries and boards of works, in ordering overseers of the poor to levy and pay sums of money, by means of rates, for expenses of lighting, shall distinguish, in their orders, sums required for defraying expenses connected with sewerage:—Held, that this enactment is to be construed as requiring that there be distinguished in the orders, the sum required for lighting the whole parish, which sum is to be ordered to be levied by a separate lighting rate made over the whole parish. St. James, Westminster v. St. Mary, Battersea, 6 C. B. (N.S.) 878; 29 L. J., M. C. 26; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 100.

Issuing Precept.]—By the Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), s. 158, every vestry and district board shall from time to time "by order under their seal require" the overseers of their parish to levy the sums which such vestry or board may require for defraying the expenses of the execution of the act. By s. 161 the overseers "to whom any such order as aforesaid is issued shall levy the amount mentioned therein according to the exigency thereof":—Held, that such an order became effective when sealed, and service of it on the overseers was not necessary to authorise them to levy rates, but that rates made by overseers in pursuance of such order, after notice of it having been sealed, were valid. Glen v. Fulham Overseers, 54 L. J., M. C. 9; 14 Q. B. D. 328; 51 L. T. 856; 33 W. R. 165; 49 J. P. 519.

3. APPORTIONMENT.

According to Benefit Derived.]—Under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 159, it is the duty of the vestry, on making a general rate, to apportion the burthen according to the benefit derived, and if the fact of inequality of benefit exists, although it has not appeared to the vestry, the party rated would, upon appeal, be entitled to have the rate amended. Howell v. London Dock Co., 8 El. & Bl. 212 ; 27 L. J., M. C. 177 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 205 ; 5 W. R. 753.

Under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, property is exempt from sewers rates where it derives no benefit therefrom. But ratability once established no question as to the exact amount of benefit, based upon the particular use to which the property has been applied, can arise. Reg. v. Head, 3 B. & S. 429 ; 32 L. J., M. C. 115 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 871 ; 7 L. T. 708 ; 11 W. R. 339.

By the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, s. 158, vestries and district boards are directed from time to time by order to require the overseers of the several parishes within their district to levy the sums which such vestries or district boards may require for defraying the expenses of the execution of the act ; and, by s. 159, where it appears to any vestry or district board that all or any part of the expenses for defraying which any sum is by such vestry or board ordered to be levied, have or has not been incurred for the equal benefit of the whole of their parish or district, such vestry or board may by any such order direct the sum or sums necessary for defraying such expenses, or any part thereof, to be levied in such parts, or exempt any part of such parish or district from the levy, or require a less rate to be levied thereon, as the circumstances of the case may require. By s. 161, the overseers are to make equal pound rates. A precept to overseers under the above sections, for the levy of a rate stated that the expenses, in respect of which it was needed, were not required for the equal benefit of the parish, and directed the rate to be levied as regarded such parts of the parish as consisted of land used as arable, meadow, or pasture land only, or as woodland, orchard, market-garden, hop, herb, flower, fruit, or nursery ground in proportion of one-fourth part only of the nett annual value of such land. The classes of land mentioned in the precept did not lie together, or form any division marked out by metes or bounds, but were scattered through the parish :—Held, that the precept was good. Reg. v. L. B. & S. C. Ry., 49 L. J., M. C. 32 ; 5 Q. B. D. 89 ; 41 L. T. 577 ; 28 W. R. 288 —C. A.

The 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, ss. 158, 159, enables vestries and district boards to exempt from rates parts of any parish within their district, which are not benefited by the expenditure ; but it is discretionary with the vestry or district board, whether they will make the order ; and where it appears that a board has considered a claim of exemption and refused to make the order, the court will not compel them to make the order. Reg. v. Wandsworth District Board of Works, 6 W. R. 576.

By 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 170, the metropolitan board of works is directed, in apportioning the expenses of the board amongst the different parts of the metropolis, to have regard to the annual value of the property in the several parts of the metropolis, and in the case of the expenditure on works of drainage, to the benefit derived from such expenditure by the several parts of the metropolis affected thereby. By s. 181, the money necessary to discharge the liabilities of the metropolitan commissioners of sewers is to be raised in like manner as the expenses of the board. The metropolitan commissioners of sewers had, whilst acting under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 112, borrowed 200,000*l.* out of which they had expended 67,000*l.* on drainage works for the benefit of the Surrey and Kent sewerage district, which, formed by them, comprised nineteen parishes and parts of parishes. On the passing of the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, the metropolitan board had to provide for the payment of the liabilities of the metropolitan commissioners of sewers, and acting under ss. 179 and 181, they apportioned the 67,000*l.* amongst the parishes in the Surrey and Kent sewerage district, according to the ratable value of the property in those parishes, and not according to the proportion of the sum expended in them, or to the benefit derived by them from the expenditure, and made a rate accordingly upon each parish :—Held, that the rate so made was valid. Pew v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 6 B. & S. 235 ; 34 L. J., M. C. 97 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 346 ; 12 L. T. 140 ; 13 W. R. 580.

Road Divided into Sections.]—A board of works passed a resolution that a road should be repaired, and having done so, divided it into four sections, making a separate estimate for each section, and apportioning the rate to pay the expenses of each section on the owners of property situate therein :—Held, this apportionment of the expenses was not warranted by 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 105, and 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, ss. 77, 112, and that the board, having repaired the whole of the road, should have made one general and entire apportionment on all the owners. Whitchurch v. Fulham Board of Works, 35 L. J., M. C. 145 ; L. R. 1 Q. B. 233 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 353 ; 13 L. T. 631 ; 14 W. R. 277.

4. ASSESSMENT.

Exemptions—Generally.]—The 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, does not affect an exemption from rates which existed previously, unless it is proved that there is equality of benefit for equality of rate. Howell v. London Dock Co. 8 El. & Bl. 212 ; 27 L. J., M. C. 177 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 205 ; 5 W. R. 753.

—— Metropolitan Board of Works.] — The metropolitan board of works is not ratable to the poor rate or the general district rate in respect of the land occupied by the sewers of the metropolis ; but it is ratable in respect of land and buildings which are occupied by it in connection with the sewers, and which have an occupation value. Reg. v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 38 L. J., M. C. 24 ; L. R. 4 Q. B. 15 ; 19 L. T. 348 ; 17 W. R. 527.

For Main Drainage—Parochial Assessment.] —In the absence of any estimate or basis of a county rate in the city of London, the metropolitan board of works, under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 104, s. 10, may make the parochial assessment the basis or estimate of a rate for raising the necessary sums for the purpose of the main drainage rate. Sewers Commissioners v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 16 L. T. 351.

Sewer Rate — On Property Benefited.] — In assessing property to the sewer rate under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, the law of sewers must in general prevail, that if property is situate within the area benefited by the sewers, it must contribute without any reference to the amount of benefit derived ; and if the property does not fall within the classes mentioned in s. 163, or within any exemption or reduction mentioned in s. 164, it must be assessed at its full value as ascertained by the poor rate for the time being. Reg. v. Head, 3 B. & S. 419 ; 32 L. J., M. C. 115 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 871 ; 7 L. T. 708 ; 11 W. R. 339.

Therefore, the mains and pipes of a gas company, laid in the ground for the purpose of supplying gas to customers, must be assessed at their full value, and are not entitled to any deduction on the ground of deriving less benefit from the sewers than house property. Ib.

The 11 & 12 Vict. c. 112, s. 76, has not altered the principle of rating to the sewers rate ; and in assessing property under that statute the commissioners must consider whether any benefit is derived by the property from the sewers. Metropolitan Board of Works v. Vauxhall Bridge Co., 7 El. & Bl. 964 ; 26 L. J., Q. B. 253 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1216.

—— Separate Levels.]—Where a district within one commission of sewers is divided into separate levels, each drained by a separate line of sewers, and deriving no benefit from the sewers in the others, each level must be separately rated. Rex v. Tower Hamlets Commissioners, 4 M. & Ry. 365 ; 9 B. & C. 517 ; 7 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 131.

Where commissioners of sewers have effected a union of the sewers of one level with the sewers of another, which were not beneficial to the latter, though after the union it derived benefit from the sewers in the entire united level, assessing the owners and occupiers in the latter in respect of their property benefited, is valid. St. Katherine Dock Co. v. Higgs, 10 Q. B. 641 ; 16 L. J., Q. B. 377 ; 11 Jur. 991—Ex. Ch.

Lighting Rate—Assessing Land at lower Rate than Houses.]—By 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 165, it is enacted that in any parish in which at the time of the passing of that act, the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 90, is in force, "the owners and occupiers of houses, buildings, and property other than land, shall be rated to every lighting rate made under this act at a rate in the pound three times greater than that at which the occupiers of land shall be rated in such lighting rate." Part only of Fulham parish was under the latter act before the passing of the former act, and after the passing of the former act the whole of that parish was, with another parish, formed into a district, and the other part of it was assessed to a lighting rate : —Held, that such part was not entitled to have its land assessed at a lower rate than its houses ; but that all the assessable property should be assessed at the higher rate. Reg. v. Fitch, 1 L. T. 327.

—— Water Companies.]—By 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 165, owners and occupiers of houses, buildings and property other than land shall be rated to a lighting rate at a rate in the pound three times greater than that at which the owners and occupiers of land shall be rated in such lighting rate :—Held, that "property other than land" meant property ejusdem generis, as houses and buildings, and that a water company was ratable for its pipes laid under ground as occupiers of land, and therefore at the lower rate. Reg. v. Southwark and Vauxhall Water Co., 6 El. & Bl. 1008 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 411 ; 5 W. R. 71.

Parties were rated, under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 161, in respect of their mains and other pipes and apparatus fixed in the ground, and for the land occupied by them by means of their mains and apparatus ; they had been held not ratable to a lighting rate under a local act :—Held, that this was a case of land "wholly exempted" within s. 165, and therefore they were not liable to be rated. East London Waterworks Co. v. Mile End New Town Overseers, 2 El. & El. 447 ; 29 L. J., M. C. 66 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 222.

—— Premises Unoccupied or Incomplete.]—By a local act, all hereditaments whatsoever in a parish were made ratable upon one and the same scale to poor rates ; but in respect of paving, watching and lighting rates under the act, premises unoccupied, or in certain stages only of completion, were to be assessed respectively at certain lower rates than the rest :—Held, that under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 161, all hereditaments in the parish were ratable upon one scale, without any exemption. Reg. v. G. W. Ry., El. Bl. & El. 600 ; 28 L. J., M. C. 59 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 386 ; 6 W. R. 774.

Separate Occupation—Sets of Rooms.]—The Westminster chambers consist of seven blocks of buildings, having seven principal entrances. Each block is divided into two ranges by an internal staircase, which has only one door at the principal or street entrance. The blocks are structurally divided into 117 different sets of rooms, which are quite distinct from each other, like chambers in the Inns of Court, and are capable of being let and occupied separately as residences or offices. Each set has an outer door opening on to one of the internal staircases, and also an inner private hall or passage. There are no means of communication between the sets except the internal staircase. The outer or street door to each block is kept locked at night, and a porter, who is hired by the lessors, resides in a distinct set of rooms in the basement of each block, and has a key of, and access to the sets of rooms, for the purpose of a general superintendence, and as the servant of the occupiers respectively, by whom he is employed in some cases to look after the rooms. The lessors provide gas for the staircase, halls and passages, and water for the entire buildings, and pay all rates and taxes, charging their tenants higher rents in consequence. The sets of rooms are let under an agreement, by which the lessors let for a certain time, at a certain rent, with a covenant by the lessors to pay the rates, and a covenant by the lessee to repair internally, and a power to the lessors to enter to paint outside and to inspect the state of the inside, with a proviso for re-entry on the nonpayment of rent or breach of the other covenants. The premises are taken subject to the following regulations :—The care of each entrance and the rooms connected therewith will be in charge of a resident porter appointed by the lessors. There are duplicate keys to the outer door of each set of chambers, one of which is to be always in the hands of the porter, and the other in the care of the tenant while the rooms are in use. The tenants have the right, free of charge, to the general services of the porter ; viz. he is to be constantly in attendance, to cleanse the general stairs, &c., every morning, to receive and deliver all letters and parcels, to receive the keys of the outer doors of the several sets of rooms from the tenants on their leaving at night, to attend to the regular and proper supply of coals to the several apartments. Coals are supplied by the lessors at a certain price, tenants are not allowed to have stores of coals in their rooms :—Held, that each set of rooms was separately occupied by its tenant, and was therefore a ratable hereditament, and ought to be separately inserted and assessed in the valuation list under the Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 67). Reg. v. St. George's Assessment Committee, 41 L. J., M. C. 30; L. R. 7 Q. B. 90; 25 L. T. 696; 20 W. R. 179.

Commutation Tithe Rent-charge.]—A commutation tithe rent-charge is liable to the general rate and lighting rate levied under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 161, but not to the sewers rate, being within the exemption of s. 164, when the practice, before the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 112, was to exempt the tithes of the parish from the sewers rate. Reg. v. Goodchild, El. Bl. & El. 1; 27 L. J., M. C. 251; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1050.

Improvement Scheme—Acquisition of Property by Local Authority—Liability for Poor Rate.]—The local authority, under the Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1890, is liable, upon acquiring property for an improvement scheme under Parts I. and III., to make good any deficiency to the poor rate arising therefrom, as provided in the case of promoters of undertakings by s. 133 of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845. The deficiency is to be ascertained by taking the full ratable value of the property acquired, without deduction of the commission of 25 per cent. allowed to owners who pay the rate under the Poor Rate Assessment Act, 1869, s. 3. St. Leonard's, Shoreditch, Vestry v. London County Council, 64 L. J., Q. B. 615; [1895] 2 Q. B. 104; 15 R. 516; 72 L. T. 802; 43 W. R. 598; 59 J. P. 423.

5. VALUATION LISTS.

Delay in Making, Transmitting, &c.]—J. and P. were the occupiers of ratable property situate in a parish within the limits of the Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 67). Upon the 27th of September, the overseers made and deposited a valuation list, in which the property was assessed at certain amounts. The list was transmitted to the assessment committee on the 18th of October. On the 7th of December the assessment committee met, when J. and P. objected to the amounts at which their property was assessed, and these were reduced by the committee; after the meeting of the assessment committee no special sessions were held to which J. and P. could have appealed, but they appealed to the assessment sessions, who confirmed the list:—Held, that delay in making, depositing, transmitting and approving the valuation list within the times prescribed by s. 42 of the Metropolis (Valuation) Act, 1869, did not make it a nullity, for the provisions of that section were directory and not imperative. Reg. v. Ingall, 46 L. J., M. C. 113; 2 Q. B. D. 199; 35 L. T. 552; 25 W. R. 57.

Alteration of Totals.]—The scheme of the Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869, is that the total shall remain as assessed in the valuation list, although there may have been alterations in some of the individual assessments. The list cannot be reopened by shewing that the particular rating of an individual ratepayer has been altered on appeal. Reg. v. Woolwich Union, 60 L. J., Q. B. 665; [1891] 2 Q. B. 712; 65 L. T. 460; 40 W. R. 155; 55 J. P. 552.

—— Assessment of Parishes — Compromise —Refusal to enter Judgment.]—The London county council, objecting to the totals of the assessments of certain parishes within their jurisdiction as too low, appealed to the quarter sessions of the county of London. A compromise was, however, effected, and the magistrates were asked to enter judgment in accordance with the agreement, and to alter the totals in the valuation list to those agreed upon. This they refused to do in the absence of detailed accounts, shewing how the new totals were arrived at:—Held, that the magistrates, in regarding the incongruity between the totals and the details, which would result from the alterations agreed upon, acted upon a consideration apart from the facts which they ought not to have taken into account, and had therefore not heard and determined according to law. Reg. v. Edlin, 65 L. T. 83; 55 J. P. 790.

Supplemental List — Alteration in Value.]—During the first year after a quinquennial valuation list in the metropolis had come into operation, some new houses were connected by means of service pipes with a water company's mains previously existing and assessed in the quinquennial list. Such connections caused an increase of the company's gross receipts arising from the additional rentals derived from the new houses; but no alteration was made in the mains themselves, the service pipes being the property of the owners or occupiers of the houses:—Held, that the increased rental so derived constituted an alteration of the matters stated in the valuation list, within s. 46 of the Valuation of Property (Metropolis) Act, 1869, and was properly taken into account in a supplemental list made under that section, whereby the ratable value of the company's mains was assessed at a greater amount than it had stood at in the quinquennial list. Reg. v. New River Co., 48 L. J., M. C. 123; 4 Q. B. D. 309; 40 L. T. 322; 27 W. R. 785.

On an appeal from the assessment committee as to a supplemental valuation list under the Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 67), evidence of a falling off in receipts of tonnage rates on vessels coming to certain docks during the twelve months preceding the making of the supplemental list when the rates were the same, and which, as compared with former years, shews a continuous and not accidental falling off, is sufficient if not explained or rebutted to shew an alteration in the ratable value of the docks during that period within the meaning of s. 46. When such alteration has been established, and it has therefore to be entered in a supplemental list, the ratable value of the docks is to be ascertained, not by opening up the previous quinquennial or supplemental list, but by assuming the value in the list then in force to be the correct value at the commencement of the twelve months preceding, and by deducting from it the diminution in value from the alteration during that period. Reg. v. East and West India Dock Co. or Poplar Union, 53 L. J., M. C. 97; 13 Q. B. D. 364; 51 L. T. 97; 48 J. P. 564—C. A.

Where a requisition is made to the overseers of a parish to make and send to the assessment committee a provisional list under s. 47 of the Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869, containing the gross and ratable value of an hereditament, on the ground that the value has been increased or diminished during the year, the overseers are not bound to comply with the requisition if they are of opinion that no such alteration in value has taken place, and a mandamus will not be granted to compel them to do so. Reg. v. St. Mary, Bermondsey, 54 L. J., M. C. 68; 14 Q. B. D. 351; 33 W. R. 414; 49 J. P. 38.

Sects. 46 & 47 of the Valuation of Property (Metropolis) Act, 1869, are not confined to or applicable only to structural deterioration in property. Therefore a ratepayer who can shew a primâ facie case of reduction in the ratable value of his property from other causes than of a purely structural nature is entitled to call upon the assessment committee to appoint a person to make a provisional list, shewing the gross and ratable value of his property, as reduced since the making of the valuation list in force. Reg. v. St. Mary, Islington, 56 L. J., Q. B. 597; 19 Q. B. D. 529; 57 L. T. 270; 35 W. R. 664; 51 J. P. 789.

Contents of.]—In making out the valuation list under the above act, the gross value and ratable value, as defined by s. 4 of each hereditament, must be inserted, without reference to any privilege of being assessed on an exceptional principle of valuation. Reg. v. Foundling Hospital Governors, 41 L. J., M. C. 41; L. R. 7 Q. B. 83; 25 L. T. 562; 20 W. R. 92.

Cost of Preparing.]—The preparation of a valuation list under the Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 67), is not a duty of the vestry clerk. The vestry may appoint the vestry clerk to make a valuation list, and may pay him a lump sum to include his expenses and labour. Reg. v. Cumberlege, 46 L. J., M. C. 214; 2 Q. B. D. 366; 36 L. T. 700; 25 W. R. 605.

Notice of Objection—Assessment Committee — Objection not Specified in Notice — Right of Appeal.]—Where a notice of objection to a valuation list—given under the Union Assessment Committee Act, 1862, as amended by the Valuation of Property (Metropolis) Act, 1869—specifies an objection to the ratable value of the hereditaments only, the assessment committee have no power, in the absence of consent by the overseers, to hear an objection as to the gross value, and there is no appeal to quarter sessions upon the question of gross value, the objector not being a person "aggrieved by any decision of the assessment committee, on an objection made before them to which he was a party," within the meaning of s. 32 of the act of 1869. Reg. v. London JJ.; East London Waterworks Co., Ex parte, 66 L. J., Q. B. 262; [1897] 1 Q. B. 433; 45 W. R. 247; 61 J. P. 228.

6. Proceedings.

Demand.]—A rate was voted in vestry on the 25th of June, and duly signed on the 10th of July:—Held, that a written demand of payment of the sum assessed, stating a demand of the sum as for the composition rate for the current year made at Midsummer, was a sufficient demand, and that the error in the date of the rate was immaterial. Reg. v. Stretfield, 32 L. J., M. C. 236; 11 W. R. 736.

Jurisdiction of Justices — Assessment unappealed against.]—There is an appeal to the quarter sessions against an assessment made by assessors appointed under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 120, s. 168, in the same way as against a rate made by overseers under s. 161. Where there is a rate good upon its face, and duly allowed and published, a justice who is called upon to enforce it cannot go into any questions affecting its validity, which are matters of appeal. The question whether or not a rate has been duly published is one of fact, and if there is any evidence to support the decision of the justice, the court will not interfere. Empson v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 3 L. T. 624.

A distress warrant was granted by a metropolitan police magistrate to recover a special sewer rate made under s. 159, and issued pursuant to a precept of a district board of works, under s. 161 of the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855, for a special district in a parish. The rate had not been appealed against:—Held, that the magistrate was right. The rate was good on the face of it, and he had no power to entertain an objection that the expenses for which it was levied were recoverable only under ss. 52 & 53 of the Metropolis Local Management Act Amendment Act, 1862, in which case the property rated would have fallen within the exemption in s. 52. Such a question could only be determined on appeal to quarter sessions. Bates v. Plumstead Overseers, 64 L. J., M. C. 127; 72 L. T. 393; 59 J. P. 118.

Appeal—Special Sessions.]—An appeal does not lie to special sessions from the determination of the assessment committee on an objection to a provisional list made under s. 47 of the Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869. Fulham Union v. Wells, 57 L. J., M. C. 112; 20 Q. B. D. 749; 59 L. T. 103; 36 W. R. 858; 52 J. P. 663.

—— Quarter Sessions—Jurisdiction—Time.]—The London quarter sessions, by s. 42, sub-s. 13, of the Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869, has jurisdiction, in cases in which the requisite formalities have been complied with, to hear and determine all appeals remaining to be heard upon 31st March in any year, if the court has been unable through press of business or other unavoidable cause to hear and determine them by that date. Reg. v. County of London JJ., and London County Council, 63 L. J., Q. B. 148; 9 R. 14; 69 L. T. 682; 58 J. P. 69—C. A. See S. C. in H. L., next case, infra.

—— Against Totals — Evidence as to Particular Hereditaments.]—Persons deeming themselves "aggrieved" within the meaning of s. 32 of the Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869, by reason of the total of the gross or ratable value of any parish being too high or too low, are not entitled to obtain an alteration of the totals by shewing that particular hereditaments have been under or over assessed. London County Council v. St. George's Assessment Committee, 64 L. J., Q. B. 48; [1894] A. C. 600; 6 R. 310; 71 L. T. 409; 59 J. P. 116—H. L. (E.)

—— Compromise—Right of Assessment Committee to appear and consent by their Clerk.]—Under the Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869, s. 62, a clerk to an assessment committee (not being of counsel nor a solicitor) is not entitled as of right to appear upon behalf of the assessment committee before a court of quarter sessions and consent to a compromise between the committee and an appellant from a decision of the committee with respect to an assessment of the appellant's premises. Reg. v. County of London JJ., 65 L. J., M. C. 120; [1896] 1 Q. B. 659; 74 L. T. 523; 44 W. R. 485; 60 J. P. 420—C. A.

Right of Appeal as to Objection not Specified in Notice of Objection.]—See Reg. v. London JJ.; East London Waterworks, Ex parte, ante, 1127.

Notice of Appeal — Service on Persons other than the Appellant.]—The assessment committee of a union appealed, under s. 32 of the Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869, to the general assessment sessions against the valuation list of the respondent parish, and against the total gross and rateable values appearing therein, on the ground that those values were too low, and it appeared from the case stated by the appellants in compliance with the rules made under the act that they sought to have the total values increased by shewing that the assessments in the valuation list of a large number of specified hereditaments were too low:—Held, that the appeal did not "relate to the unfairness or incorrectness of the valuation of any hereditaments occupied by any person other than the appellant" within the meaning of s. 33 of the Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869; that those words applied only to appeals in which it was objected that the valuation of particular hereditaments was unfair or incorrect so far as it affected the assessment of the ratepayers of a parish inter se; and therefore that the appellants need not serve notice of appeal under s. 33 upon the occupiers of the specified hereditaments. Reg. v. General Assessment Sessions, 17 Q. B. D. 394; 35 W. R. 12; 50 J. P. 724.

Refusal of Magistrate to issue Warrant pending Appeal.] — The ratable value of certain property having been re-assessed at a much higher sum, the owners appealed. Before the hearing of the appeal it was agreed that a special case should be stated for the opinion of the queen's bench division, and that in the meantime rates should be paid on the former valuation, and these terms were embodied in an order made by a judge on the 23rd March, 1881. In 1883 the overseers applied to the magistrate for a distress warrant for the amount of the rates according to the new assessment, but the application was refused, on the ground that as the appeal was still pending the overseers were bound by the order of the judge. The overseers then applied to the queen's bench division for a mandamus to the magistrate to issue the warrant:—Held, that in consequence of the provisions of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 67, s. 44, which enacts that pending any appeal from any new assessment, the rate shall be paid according to the new assessment, the judge had no jurisdiction to make the order, and that the consent of the assessment committee to that order did not bind the overseers. Reg. v. Marsham, 50 L. T. 142; 32 W. R. 157; 48 J. P. 308—C. A.

Held, also, that the issue of the warrants being a merely ministerial, and not a judicial, act of the magistrates, the application for a mandamus was properly made under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, s. 5. Ib.

D. EXPENSES.

1. GENERALLY.

Repair of Wall inclosing Sewer Water.]—A wall had been erected from time immemorial on land adjacent to a tidal river, and it kept out from such land the river at high water, the land being drained into the river by drains at a considerable distance from the wall. Before 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, the wall was within the jurisdiction of the metropolitan commissioners of sewers, and it was within a district mentioned in the schedule (B). K., the occupier of the land on which the wall stood, cut away part of the wall, and built houses thereon, without the consent and in violation of the express prohibition of the board of works of the district. The board demolished the houses, reinstated the wall, and claimed the expenses from K.:—Held, that the wall was a sewer, and that the district board was entitled to claim the expenses, under ss. 61, 204. Poplar Board of Works v. Knight, El. Bl. & El. 408; 28 L. J., M. C. 37; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 196.

Held, also, that the board might recover these expenses under s. 76, although no foundation for the houses had been dug out, but they were simply erected on the surface of the ground. Ib.

—— Acknowledgment of Jurisdiction.]—K. had applied for permission to the district board of works, and had in his correspondence with them treated the matter as exclusively within their jurisdiction, and the metropolitan board of works had not interfered or exercised any jurisdiction over the wall:—Held, that it was not competent to K. to resist the claim of the district board, on the supposed ground that the statute vested the wall in the metropolitan board of works. Ib.

New Sewer—Fresh Drains.]—The vestry of a parish, contained in schedule (A) of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, passed a resolution, that certain premises not being drained by sufficient drains communicating with a sewer, notice to be given to the owners to drain by separate drains into a new sewer, and to discontinue the old sewer. The owners made default, whereupon the vestry executed the work and summoned the owners to pay the expense:—Held, that the drains were required by reason of the new sewer, and that the drains were constructed under s. 69, and not under s. 73, and that the owners of the houses were not liable. Marylebone Vestry v. Viret, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 423; 34 L. J., M. C. 214; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 907; 12 L. T. 673; 13 W. R. 1064.

A metropolitan vestry, in pursuance of a resolution to alter the public sewers in their district, under s. 69 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, constructed a new sewer in substitution for one which was to be discontinued. They then sought to recover from the owner of a house which was drained into the old sewer the cost of constructing a new drain connecting his house with the new sewer, under s. 73 of the act, on the ground that his old drain was insufficient:—Held, that the work was in fact done as part of a scheme for the improvement of the drainage system of the whole district under s. 69, and not because the vestry had arrived at the conclusion that the old drain was insufficient; and therefore that, even assuming the old drain to have been insufficient, the cost of replacing it must be borne by the vestry. St. Martin-in-the-Fields

Vestry v. Ward, 66 L. J., Q. B. 97; [1897] 1 Q. B. 40; 75 L. T. 349; 45 W. R. 81; 61 J. P. 19—C. A.

Repair of Streets after Construction—Liability of Board.]—Under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 105, the vestry of a district board of a parish or district, after having once compelled the owners of the houses forming a new street, to pay the cost of providing and laying the pavement, is bound for the future to keep it in repair, and this obligation may be enforced by mandamus. Reg. v. Hackney Board of Works, 42 L. J., M. C. 151; L. R. 8 Q. B. 528.

A board of works, acting under the powers of the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 105, paved and flagged a new street, charging the expense on the adjoining owners. The board afterwards neglected to repair the road on the ground that a barrier had been erected upon it by the owner of the soil:—Held, that the board, having exercised their power to pave a new street at the expense of the adjoining owners, was bound to keep it in repair, and that the obstruction by the owner of the soil did not exonerate the board from the performance of such duty. Ib.

In front of a house situate in a London square was an area and a cellar. The cellar was formed of brick walls, one forming the outer wall of the area, and another running parallel to such outer wall. The covering to the cellar was formed of large flagstones, the ends of which rested on the walls. From 1830, when the houses were built and the flagstones were laid down, the flagstones were used by the public as a footway, and became by reason of the traffic worn down, cracked and dangerous. The vestry called upon the owner to repair the cellar and its covering. He refused to do so, whereupon the vestry did the work, and proceeded against him to recover the expenses:—Held, that the vestry was bound to keep the flagstones in repair, and could not recover from the owner any part of the expenses of doing so. Hamilton v. St. George's, Hanover Square, Vestry, 43 L. J., M. C. 41; L. R. 9 Q. B. 42; 29 L. T. 428; 22 W. R. 86.

How Recoverable—Charge on Individuals or General Rates.]—When within the metropolis, as defined by 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 250, a new street is paved for the first time, the vestry or district board executing the work cannot at their discretion charge the costs upon the general rate, under ss. 96, 98; they are bound to charge the expense of laying the pavement upon the owners of the adjoining houses and land, under s. 105, as varied by 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 77. Dryden v. Putney Overseers, 1 Ex. D. 223; 34 L. T. 69.

In 1855 a road within the metropolis as defined by 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 250, ran between an irregular line of houses and market gardens upon the south side, and market gardens upon the north. Between that year and 1874, a continuous line of houses was built along the north side, and several houses along the south. The district board, within whose jurisdiction the road lay, in 1874 paved a footpath by the side of the road, and paid for the cost of the work under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, ss. 96, 98, out of the general rate levied upon the inhabitants:—Held, first, that between 1855 and 1874 the road had become a new street within 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 105. Held, secondly, that the district board had no power to charge the cost of paving the footpath upon the general rate, but that it was compulsory upon them to obtain payment from the owners of the adjoining houses and land, under that section, as varied by 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 77. Ib.

—— Effect of Charging General Rate.]—When within the metropolis a road has become a new street within the Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), s. 105, and the district board has improperly charged the cost of paving the footpath of such new street upon the general rate of the parish in which it is situated, the court will order the district board to restore to the general rate the amount so expended, and to levy the same upon the owners of the adjoining houses and land, as provided by that section as varied by s. 77 of the Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 102). Att.-Gen. v. Wandsworth District Board of Works, 46 L. J., Ch. 771; 6 Ch. D. 539.

Expenses not incurred for equal benefit of whole Parish.]—By the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, s. 158, vestries and district boards are directed from time to time by order to require the overseers of the several parishes within their district to levy the sums which such vestries or district boards may require for defraying the expenses of the execution of the act; and by s. 159, where it appears to any vestry or district board that all or any part of the expenses for defraying which any sum is by such vestry or board ordered to be levied, have or has not been incurred for the equal benefit of the whole of their parish or district, such vestry or board may by any such order direct the sum or sums necessary for defraying such expenses, or any part thereof, to be levied in such part, or exempt any part of such parish or district from the levy, or require a less rate to be levied thereon, as the circumstances of the case may require. By s. 161 the overseers are to make equal pound rates. A precept to overseers under the above sections for the levy of a rate stated that the expenses, in respect of which it was needed, were not required for the equal benefit of the parish, and directed the rate to be levied as regarded such parts of the parish as consisted of land used as arable, meadow, or pasture land only, or as woodland, orchard, market-garden, hop, herb, flower, fruit, or nursery ground in proportion of one-fourth part only of the net annual value of such land. The classes of land mentioned in the precept did not lie together, or form any division marked out by metes or bounds, but were scattered through the parish:—Held, that the precept was good. Howell v. London Dock Co. (8 El. & Bl. 212) commented upon. Reg. v. L. B. & S. C. Ry., 49 L. J., M. C. 32; 5 Q. B. D. 89; 41 L. T. 577; 28 W. R. 288; 44 J. P. 136—C. A. See cases ante, cols. 1121, 1122.

2. Persons Liable.

a. Position of Premises.

"Bounding or Abutting"—Railway—Line and Slopes.]—A line of railway was situate in a deep cutting at a place where a road passed over the line. The road was carried over on a bridge from one boundary of the line to the other, but supported on stone piers erected on the slope of the cutting. On an information under s. 77 of the Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862, against the railway company for not contributing to the paving of the road:—Held, that the line and the slopes of the cutting did not bound or abut upon the road within the meaning of the act. L. B. & S. C. Ry. v. St. Giles', Camberwell Vestry, 48 L. J., M. C. 184; 4 Ex. D. 239; 41 L. T. 162.

A railway which ran in a cutting, and was adjoining a new street which the vestry was about to pave, and was separated from it by a wall, through which there was no communication between the street and the railway, bounded the street within the meaning of the 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 77:—Held, that the company was liable to contribute to the expense of paving the street; and, the vestry having charged the company in the same proportion as the owners of house property, that the court had no power to control the discretion vested in them by the act. L. & N. W. Ry. v. St. Pancras Vestry, 17 L. T. 654.

A railway line ran in a deep cutting much below the level of a highway, which was carried over the railway (nearly at right angles) by a bridge built by the railway company under statutory powers and in pursuance of ss. 46-51 of the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 20). The parapets of the bridge consisted of two walls resting upon arches, which had their foundations (outside the lines of the roadway) in the railway company's land. The walls were not used by the company otherwise than as fences for the bridge. The district board of works having paved the highway, which was admitted to be a new street within s. 105 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120):—Held, that, assuming the fence walls to be the railway company's land, the company were not "owners of land bounding or abutting on" the highway within s. 77 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 102), and were not liable as owners of the fence walls to contribute to the expenses of paving. G. E. Ry. v. Hackney Board of Works, 52 L. J., M. C. 105; 8 App. Cas. 687; 49 L. T. 509; 31 W. R. 769—H. L. (E.)

Held, also, by Lords Blackburn and Watson, that the railway line and slopes being much below the level of the highway, the company were not in respect of such line and slopes "owners of land bounding or abutting on" the highway within the above section, and were not liable as owners of the line and slopes to contribute to the expenses of paving. Ib.

A railway in the metropolitan district was carried across a new street by an arch. On one side of the street the railway was carried forward on arches, and on that side was a strip of land ten feet wide, left open for the purpose of repairing the arches; this abutted for ten feet on the street. On the other side the railway was carried forward on an embankment, and the sloping part or buttress of the embankment abutted on the street about thirty-six feet, and at the foot of the embankment was an open space, also about thirty-six feet wide, also abutting on the street, which was left for the purpose of allowing of slips in the embankment. The vestry of the parish having determined to pave the street sought to make the railway contribute, under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 77, as an owner of land abutting on the street:—Held, that the above pieces of land, including the slope of the embankment, were land within that section. Higgins v. Harding, 42 L. J., M. C. 31; L. R. 8 Q. B. 7; 27 L. T. 483; 21 W. R. 191.

—— Private Roads.]—The Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862, s. 77, provides that where any vestry or district board shall have paved any new street, the owners of the land bounding or abutting on such street shall be liable to contribute to the expense of paving the same:—Held, that the words "land bounding or abutting on such street" include the soil of private roads leading out of a new street. Pound v. Plumstead Board of Works, 41 L. J., M. C. 51; L. R. 7 Q. B. 183; 25 L. T. 461; 20 W. R. 177.

House forming Part of a Street.]—The vestry of a metropolitan parish, having paved a new street, under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 105, assessed the London school board, in respect of a school-house, as being owners of one of the houses forming the street. The school-house did not immediately front the street, but stood back from it some seventy or eighty feet, in a large yard, the whole area being about 29,500 square feet. There was a row of eleven small houses with gardens at the back of them between this area and the street; but the only access to the school was by a private passage which ran along one side of the last house and garden into the school-yard, with gates opening from the street in question; the width of the passage being twenty feet and the length about sixty-four feet:—Held, that the school-house, though not actually one of the houses forming the street, yet practically formed part of it, within s. 105. London School Board v. St. Mary, Islington, 45 L. J., M. C. 1; 1 Q. B. D. 65; 33 L. T. 504; 24 W. R. 137.

Back Premises—Dead Wall Part of Street.]—B. was the owner of a house, which had its front and only entrance in F. street, and behind it a garden with a dead wall at the further end. A new street was made parallel to F. street, of which the dead wall, at the end of B.'s garden, was part of the line of street. This new street was a mews, which the metropolitan board allowed to be made of twenty feet in width:—Held, that B.'s land abutted on this new street, and therefore B. was liable for his proportion of expenses of paving it, &c., under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 77. Paddington Vestry v. Bramwell, 44 J. P. 815.

b. Ownership of Premises.

Future Owners.]—The assessment for paving expenses apportioned by the vestry or district board under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 106, and 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 77, are a charge upon the premises in respect of which they are assessed; and the amount may be recovered from the future owners of such premises, although there has been no arrangement to accept payment by instalments. Plumstead Board of Works v. Ingoldby, 42 L. J., Ex. 50; L. R. 8 Ex. 63; 27 L. T. 656; 21 W. R. 77. Affirmed, nom. Ingoldby v. Plumstead Board of Works, 42 L. J., Ex. 136; L. R. 8 Ex. 174; 29 L. T. 375; 21 W. R. 817—Ex. Ch.

Owner.]—Under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, s. 51, an owner of land in fee simple, who lets it on a building lease at a peppercorn rent, is not liable, as owner, to the surveyor for fees in respect of buildings afterwards erected on such land, a peppercorn rent not being within the meaning of the words "of one whole or of any part of the rents or profits of any land or tenement," in the interpretation clause, s. 3. Evelyn v. Whichcord, El. Bl. & El. 126; 27 L. J., M. C, 211; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 808; 6 W. R. 468. And see Tubb v. Good, and Caudwell or Canwell v. Hanson, ante, col. 1087.

—— School Board.]—The London school board are "owners" of a school house within the definition of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 250. London School Board v. St. Mary, Islington, 45 L. J., M. C. 1; 1 Q. B. D. 65; 33 L. T. 504; 24 W. R. 137.

—— Land subject to Covenants.]—By the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855, s. 250, the word "owner" shall mean the person for the time being receiving the rack-rent of the lands or premises in connection with which the word is used, or who would so receive the same if such lands or premises were let at a rack-rent; and by the Metropolis Local Management Acts Amendment Act, 1862, s. 77 (which is to be read as one with the act of 1855), "owners" of land abutting on any new street are made liable to contribute towards the expenses of paving the same. The appellant, having a strip of land about four inches wide and 265 feet in length, abutting upon the north side of a new street, had erected a boundary fence upon the land along its whole extent, under a covenant to erect and for ever after maintain a fence thereon made with his vendor, who was owner of the land adjoining the strip on the north side:—Held, that the appellant was the "owner" of the strip of land within the meaning of s. 250 of the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855, and therefore liable to contribute towards the expense of paving the new street. Williams v. Wandsworth Board of Works, 53 L. J., M. C. 187; 13 Q. B. D. 211; 32 W. R. 908; 48 J. P. 439.

Lessees.]—A tenant in possession, having an equitable interest only under an agreement for a lease for a term, is, in equity, an adjoining owner under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, and three months' notice must be given to him before any alterations affecting his premises can be commenced by his neighbour, under the powers of that act. Cowen v. Phillips, 33 Beav. 18; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 657; 8 L. T. 622; 11 W. R. 706.

A lessee of a house for a term of ninety-nine years, having demised some portions of the house to separate persons for terms varying from seven to twenty-one years, is the owner of the house within 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122. Hunt v. Harris, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 13; 34 L. J., C. P. 249; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 485; 12 L. T. 421; 13 W. R. 742.

Where the appellant was tenant of premises at a rent of 30*l.* a year, which he sublet at a rent of 31*l.* a year (the sum of 25*l.* being found to be the rack-rent of the premises), the appellant is not the "owner" of the premises within the meaning of s. 250 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, so as to be liable for the expenses of paving the street in which the premises are situate. Walford v. Hackney Board of Works, 15 R. 10; 43 W. R. 110.

—— Temporary Destruction of Premises.]—A house occupied by a tenant under a lease for twenty-one years was, during the term, accidentally burnt, and being ruinous, was pulled down under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 84. By the lease the tenant was exempt from paying rent during the time that the house was untenable by reason of an accidental fire:—Held, that the expenses incurred could not be recovered from the landlord, a tenant for life of the reversion, under s. 42, which throws the burden upon "the owner of every such building, being the person entitled to immediate possession thereof." Saffron Hill Overseers. Ex parte, 24 L. J., M. C. 56; 18 Jur. 1104; 3 W. R. 64.

—— Building Lease on Conditions.]—A., the owner in fee of land, entered into an agreement with B., by which he was to have possession of such land and to build thereon a certain number of houses, and to inclose and lay out a portion of the land as an ornamental pleasure ground, for the exclusive use of the inhabitants of such houses. A lease was to be granted by A. of each house when finished, and with the lease of the last house was to be granted a lease of the inclosed pleasure ground; and until all the leases were granted, B. was to pay A. a yearly rent in respect of the whole land, but the agreement was not to operate as a demise nor to give B. any estate or interest in the premises until the leases were executed. B. inclosed and laid out the pleasure ground, and built some of the houses, of which, and of which only, leases were granted to him; but not having completed all the houses:—Held, that A. remained the owner of the land which had been inclosed as such pleasure ground within the meaning of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 250, and, therefore, as such owner, was liable under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 77, to contribute to the expense incurred by the vestry in paving a new street abutting on the pleasure ground. Holland (Lady) v. Kensington Vestry, 36 L. J., M. C. 105; L. R. 2 C. P. 565; 17 L. T. 73; 15 W. R. 1045.

An owner of houses occupied land bounding or abutting on a new street, which a board of works had paved under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 105, and sewered under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 52. Amongst other items which the board had apportioned to his contribution were costs of collecting apportioned amounts, of survey plan and obtaining names of owners, and of filling-up, printing, advertising and serving notices. These sums were all paid to persons employed for the purpose, and not servants of the board, although they had in their employ a surveyor and a clerk, and payments were requested at their office. The owner of the houses occupied the land under a building agreement, by which the owner of the land agreed to demise to the owner of the houses or his nominees the several pieces of land upon which he was to build, as the houses and buildings respectively became erected and covered, for eighty years, at the rent of a peppercorn for two years, and of sums increasing every year up to 36*4l.* in the sixth and following years. He was to be considered as holding the undemised portion on the terms of the leases. There was a power of re-entry upon non-completion of the building covenants. The houses at this time were in every stage of building progress, and some had been demised to other persons at defendant's nomination:—Held, that with the exception of the houses demised to other persons, he was liable as owner of all the premises, and that the above items were incidental costs and charges within 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 77. Poplar Board of Works v. Love, 29 L. T. 915.

Assignee of Lease—Public Body.]—A public body becoming assignees of a lease for a short term of an open space under the Metropolitan Open Spaces Act, 1881, is an "owner" within the meaning of the Metropolis Management Act, 1890, and liable to contribute to the expenses of paving a road upon which the open space abuts. St. Mary, Islington, Vestry v. Cobbett, 64 L. J., M. C. 36; [1895] 1 Q. B. 369; 15 R. 83; 71 L. T. 573; 43 W. R. 44.

Time when Ownership of Property passes.]—On the 23rd December, 1878, the metropolitan board of works served a notice on B., the owner of certain houses, stating that they would be taken compulsorily under the Artizans' and Labourers' Dwellings Improvement Act, 1875, and an arbitrator was appointed. The arbitrator made his provisional award on the 18th of March, and his final award on the 22nd July, 1880. On the 18th February, 1880, the metropolitan board of works served a notice on B. that the houses were in a dangerous state, and requiring him to take down a portion and repair them, and on the 18th March a magistrate made an order that B. should take down a part and repair the buildings. This order not having been complied with, the metropolitan board of works gave notice to B., on the 16th July, 1880, to hoard and take down the structure; and on the 19th July, the notice not having been complied with, the metropolitan board of works incurred expenses to the amount of 26*l.* 9*s.* 4*d.* in hoarding, and afterwards other expenses amounting in all to 78*l.* 9*s.* 4*d.* It was contended, on the part of B., that at the time the expenses were incurred the provisional award had been made, and therefore he was not the "owner":—Held, that the ownership in the property was not transferred until the final award was made on the 22nd July, 1880, and therefore the metropolitan board of works could recover the expenses from B. as being the owner when they were incurred. Barnet v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 46 L. T. 384; 46 J. P. 469.

Incumbent of Church.]—The incumbent of a district church in the metropolis, although the freehold of such church is vested in him under the Church Building Acts, is not the "owner" of the church within the meaning of the Metropolitan Building Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, Part II, Dangerous Structures), so as to be personally liable for the expenses incurred by the metropolitan board of works in respect of such church as a dangerous structure. Reg. v. Lee, 48 L. J., M. C. 22; 4 Q. B. D. 75; 39 L. T. 605.

—— Vesting of Site in — Consecration of Church and Part of Site.]—Land having been conveyed under the Church Building Acts to the ecclesiastical commissioners as a site for a church, a church was afterwards erected on a part of the land, and the church and part only of the land were consecrated:—Held, that upon such consecration the whole of the land so conveyed vested in the incumbent under the Church Building Acts Amendment Act (8 & 9 Vict. c. 70), s. 13; that the commissioners ceased to be owners of it, and were therefore not liable under the Metropolitan Management Acts, 1855 and 1862, to contribute in respect of it towards the cost of paving a new street. Plumstead Board of Works v. Ecclesiastical Commissioners, [1891] 2 Q. B. 361; 64 L. T. 830; 39 W. R. 700; 55 J. P. 791.

Commissioners Owning Church.]—A church, the site of which has been conveyed to the commissioners for building churches, is not liable to be assessed to the expenses of paving a new street, as the commissioners are not owners either within 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 105, or 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 77. Angell v. Paddington Vestry, 9 B. & S. 496; 37 L. J., M. C. 171; L. R. 3 Q. B. 714; 16 W. R. 1167.

Lessee of Chapel.]—By 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, s. 73, if the owner or occupier of a dangerous structure fails to comply with the order of a justice for taking down, repairing or otherwise securing the same, the commissioners may do what is necessary, and all expenses incurred by them shall be paid by the owner. By s. 3, the term owner shall apply to every person in possession or receipt either of the whole or of any part of the rents or profits of any land or tenement, or in the occupation of such land or tenement other than as a tenant from year to year, or for any less term, or as a tenant at will. The appellants, being seised in fee of a building used as a chapel, leased it for twenty-one years to N., who was then in possession of it:—Held, that N. was the owner within the meaning of the act, and therefore an order upon the appellants for expenses incurred by the commissioners, was bad. Mourilyan v. Labalmondiere, 1 El. & El. 533; 30 L. J., M. C. 95; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 627; 3 L. T. 668; 9 W. R. 341.

Trustees of Chapel—"House," "Land."]—The appellants were the trustees of a chapel which abutted on and formed part of a new street within the meaning of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120. The chapel was registered as a place of religious worship, but had not been consecrated, and there was no dedication of the land in perpetuity. Attached to the chapel was a vestry, and there were also rooms for a caretaker, besides lecture and schoolrooms underneath the chapel:—Held, that the trustees were the owners of a "house" within the meaning of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 105, or of land within 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 77, and were liable to contribute to the expense of making and paving the street. Caiger v. St. Mary, Islington, Vestry, 50 L. J., M. C. 59; 44 L. T. 605; 29 W. R. 538; 45 J. P. 570.

By the term "houses," in s. 105 of the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855, and the term "land," in s. 77 of the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1862, it is intended to include (with certain exceptions) all the frontage of a new street, so as to make all the owners of the frontage liable to contribute to the expense of paving the new street. The word "house" includes every building which is capable of being used as a human habitation. If a building, which is physically capable of being so used, is prevented, either by common law or statute, from being ever put to such a use, it is exempted from the liability to contribute to the expense. A consecrated church of the Established Church of England is exempted, because, by reason of its consecration, it becomes by the common law for ever incapable of being used as a habitation for man. But a leasehold chapel fronting on a new street, the chapel being vested in trustees, on trust to permit it to be used as a place of religious worship by a congregation of Wesleyans, is a house within the meaning of s. 105, for, by the consent of the landlord, the trustees, and the cestuis que trustent, the trusts might at any moment be put an end to. Wright v. Ingle, 55 L. J., M. C. 17; 16 Q. B. D. 379; 54 L. T. 511; 34 W. R. 220; 50 J. P. 436—C. A.

Land Company—Owners of the Soil of the Roads.]—A land company, being owners of lands, in 1863 laid them out for building purposes, and made roads and ways across them; and nearly the whole of the estate was sold in lots to different purchasers, and conveyed to them by metes, bounds and admeasurements set forth on coloured plans attached to the conveyance. Each lot had a frontage upon one of the roads. The roads had been dedicated to the public, as far as any act of the land company could do so, but no proceedings were taken to make them repairable by the parish. The board of works of the district from time to time paved the new streets formed by the houses on the estate, and apportioned the costs among the owners of houses forming the streets and the owners of land bounding and abutting on the streets; and in so doing they assessed the land company in respect of the new streets and roads, where bounding or abutting on the sides or ends of the streets paved, as lands abutting on those streets, under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 77:—Held, that assuming the soil of the roads to be in the land company, they were improperly charged under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 77; for that they were not, in respect of the roads which had been irrevocably dedicated to the public, the owners of land within the meaning of that section and s. 250 of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120. Plumstead Board of Works v. British Land Co., 44 L. J., Q. B. 38; L. R. 10 Q. B. 203; 32 L. T. 94; 23 W. R. 634—Ex. Ch.

Cemetery Company.]—By the Metropolis Management Acts, 1855 and 1862 (which are to be construed together as one act), "the owners of the land" abutting on a new street are made liable to contribute to the expenses of paving the same incurred, or to be incurred, by the vestry of the parish; and by s. 250 of the act of 1855 "the word 'owner' shall mean the person for the time being receiving the rack-rent of the lands or premises in connection with which the said word is used, or who would so receive the same if such lands or premises were let at a rack-rent." A cemetery company were, by statute, prohibited from selling or disposing of any of the consecrated land belonging to them, and such land was for ever to be set apart and used exclusively for purposes of Christian burial; but they were empowered to make profits by (amongst other things) selling or disposing of, at prices to be agreed upon, the exclusive right of burial, either in perpetuity or for a limited period, in vaults made by them, and the right to make family and other vaults, with the exclusive right of burial therein, either in perpetuity or for a limited period. The company having been called upon by the vestry of the parish to contribute to the expenses of paving a new street on which consecrated land, forming part of their cemetery, abutted:—Held, that the company were "owners" of the land within the definition of s. 250 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, and therefore liable to contribute to such expenses. St. Giles, Camberwell, v. London Cemetery Co., 63 L. J., M. C. 74; [1894] 1 Q. B. 699; 70 L. T. 734; 42 W. R. 446; 58 J. P. 382.

Payment out of General Rates—Liability of adjoining Owners.]—In 1876 a local authority caused the footpaths of a new street (within the meaning of the act of 1855) to be paved, at a cost of 1,425*l.*, raised out of the general rates, and subsequently repaired them from time to time. Ten years afterwards a resolution was passed at a vestry that these paths should be paved under the powers of s. 105 of the act of 1855 and s. 77 of the amendment act of 1862, and the costs apportioned among the adjoining owners. Upon an objection being taken by an adjoining owner that the local authority, having laid out a substantial sum in making permanent footpaths in 1876, which was then charged to the general rates, were estopped from exercising their power of paving the street again under these sections and throwing the cost upon the adjoining owners:—Held, that the work having been once done the local authority could not, ten years afterwards, throw the burden of paving upon the adjoining owners. St. Giles, Camberwell, v. Hunt, 56 L. J., M. C. 65; 52 J. P. 132.

Payment by Purchaser of Property—Implied Covenant against Incumbrances.]—The expenses of paving a new street apportioned under s. 77 of the Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862, are not a charge upon the property in respect of which they are payable, and therefore if the owner sells the property while the expenses are unpaid, and conveys as beneficial owner, and the purchaser is compelled to pay such expenses, the purchaser cannot recover the amount so paid from the vendor under the implied covenant against incumbrances contained in the conveyance by virtue of s. 7, subs. (A) of the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881. Egg v. Blayney, 57 L. J., Q. B. 460; 21 Q. B. D. 107; 59 L. T. 65; 36 W. R. 893; 52 J. P. 517.

Payable out of Capital or Income.]—A testator bequeathed leasehold houses and other personal property to trustees, in trust, after payment of "all ordinary outgoings for ground rent, repairs, taxes, expenses of insurance, or otherwise," to pay the income to his wife for life, with trusts over. One of the leasehold houses was held by the testator under a lease which threw upon the lessee all "taxes, rates, assessments, and impositions," and, after his death, the sanitary authority having served a notice under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 73, on the occupier of the house, requiring the execution of certain drainage works, the trustees of the will employed a contractor to execute the works, and deducted the expense from the income of the tenant for life:—Held, that the expense was payable out of the income of the testator's estate, and not out of the corpus, and that the deduction had been properly made. Crawley, In re, Acton v. Crawley, 54 L. J., Ch. 652; 28 Ch. D. 431; 52 L. T. 460; 33 W. R. 611; 49 J. P. 598.

Abatement of Nuisance by Occupier—Liability of Owner to Recoup.]—The plaintiff was tenant from year to year to the defendants of a house in London, in which a nuisance arose by reason of water and sewage collecting in the cellar owing to a stoppage in the drains. The sanitary authority, acting under s. 4, sub-s. 1, of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, served a notice at the premises directed to the owner or occupier, and requiring the nuisance to be abated; they did not serve on the owner a notice under s. 4, sub-s. 3, which provides for the service on the owner of a notice to abate in cases where the nuisance arises from any want or defect of a structural character. The plaintiff, who under s. 4, sub-s. 4, was liable to a penalty of 10*l.* if he made default in complying with the requisitions of the notice, did the necessary work, in the course of which it was discovered that the nuisance arose from a structural defect in the drains:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled under s. 11, sub-s. 1, of the act to recover from the defendants the costs and expenses incurred in abating the nuisance as money paid by him for the use and at the request of the defendants, although no notice under s. 4, sub-s. 3, had been served upon the defendants as owners of the premises:—Held, further, that the costs and expenses in carrying "the order" into effect must be taken to include the costs and expenses of carrying into effect the "notice" from the sanitary authority, although no "nuisance order" under s. 5 had been obtained by the sanitary authority upon complaint to a petty sessional division. Per Charles, J.: Apart from the provisions of s. 11, the plaintiff was entitled to recover at common law on the ground that he had been compelled to expend money upon work for which the defendants were legally responsible. Gebhardt v. Saunders, [1892] 2 Q. B. 452; 67 L. T. 684; 40 W. R. 571; 56 J. P. 741.

Under the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, a sanitary authority served on certain premises an intimation or warning, addressed to the owners, that, if certain necessary works were not completed within a specified time, they would commence proceedings against them "by the service of a statutory notice." Thereupon, the occupier, without forwarding the document to the owners, or informing them of it, caused the work to be executed, and then sought to recover the amount expended thereon from the owners. It was decided by Lawrance, J., on the authority of Gebhardt v. Saunders ([1892] 2 Q. B. 452) that the owners were liable. On appeal:—Held, that the occupiers, not being compellable to execute the work, had acted as mere volunteers in doing so, and had no claim to be reimbursed by the owners. Thompson and Norris Manufacturing Co. v. Hawes, 73 L. T. 369; 59 J. P. 580—C. A.

c. Landlord or Tenant.

Covenant to Discharge Taxes—Expenses of Drainage.]—A. held premises under a lease with a covenant to pay, bear and discharge "all such parliamentary, parochial and county, district and occasional levies, rates, assessments, taxes, charges, impositions, contributions, burthens, duties and services whatsoever, as during the term should be taxed, assessed or imposed upon or in respect of the premises, or any part thereof." He granted an under-lease (at a rack-rent) to B., the latter covenanting "that the covenants, conditions and agreements contained in the original lease on lessee's part to be performed and observed (except the covenants to pay rent and to insure), should during the continuance of the demise be performed and observed by him":—Held, that B. was liable for the expense of drainage works done upon the premises under the authority of the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120. Sweet v. Seager, 2 C. B. (N.S.) 119; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 588; 5 W. R. 560.

—— Paving.]—The lessee of a house in a new street within the metropolitan district for seven, fourteen, or twenty-one years, covenanted with his lessor to pay all rates and assessments taxed, rated, charged, assessed or imposed upon the demised premises, or upon or payable by the occupier or tenant in respect thereof:—Held, that the proportion of the expense of paving the new street assessed upon the demised house under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 96, was not a rate payable by the tenant under this covenant. Allum v. Dickinson, 52 L. J., Q. B. 190; 9 Q. B. D. 632; 47 L. T. 493; 30 W. R. 930; 47 J. P. 102—C. A.

A. let to B. for twenty-one years, determinable at the end of five, seven or fourteen years, at his option, a house in the parish of Paddington, yielding and paying the specified rent, "clear of all deductions in respect of land-tax, sewers-rate, and all other taxes, rates and deductions whatsoever"; and B. covenanted that he would "pay and discharge all taxes, rates, duties and assessments whatsoever, which during the continuance of this present demise shall be taxed, assessed or imposed on the tenant or landlord of the premises hereby demised in respect thereof, whether parliamentary, parochial or otherwise (except property or income tax)." The house was in a new street within the meaning of the Metropolitan Management Acts, and the vestry of Paddington paved this street and obliged the landlord to pay his proportion of the expenses, by virtue of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 105, and 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, ss. 77, 96:—Held, that the landlord was entitled to recover this money so paid from his tenant. Thompson v. Lapworth, 37 L. J., C. P. 74; L. R. 3 C. P. 149; 17 L. T. 507; 16 W. R. 312.

By an agreement of lease, the tenant agreed to pay "all rates, taxes and assessments payable in respect of the premises during the term":—Held, that a sum assessed upon the owners as their proportion of the expense of paving the street upon which the premises abutted, was not a rate, tax or assessment within the meaning of the covenant, but a charge imposed upon the owner for the permanent improvement of his property. Wilkinson v. Collyer, 53 L. J., Q. B. 278; 13 Q. B. D. 1; 51 L. T. 299; 32 W. R. 614; 48 J. P. 791. See also Batchelor v. Bigger, 60 L. T. 416.

—— Rent Payable to Vestry—Distress.]—The vestry of a metropolitan parish, having incurred expenses for paving, gave the occupier of a house liable to contribute thereto, notice, under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 86, to pay his rent to them and not to his landlord. The tenant gave notice thereof to his landlord, who nevertheless distrained. The tenant thereupon paid his rent (which was less than the paving expenses apportioned to the house) to the vestry, and the landlord then merely levied the expenses of the distress and withdrew:—Held, that his right of distress was only taken away on actual payment by the tenant to the vestry, that the distress was therefore justifiable in the first instance, and that the expenses thereof might be levied. Ryan v. Thompson, 37 L. J., C. P. 134; L. R. 3 C. P. 144; 17 L. T. 506; 16 W. R. 314.

—— Abatement of Nuisance—"Charge on Lessor in respect of Premises."]—A tenant who covenants to pay, bear and discharge all assessments, charges or impositions whatever, parliamentary, parochial or otherwise, which at any time during the continuance of the demise may be charged, assessed or imposed on the lessor, for or in respect of the premises, is liable to recoup his landlord any expenses incurred by him in complying with an order made under the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, to abate a nuisance on the demised premises, inasmuch as such expenses are a charge on the lessor in respect of the premises. Smith v. Robinson, 62 L. J., Q. B. 509; [1893] 2 Q. B. 53; 5 R. 469; 69 L. T. 434; 41 W. R. 588.

See further LANDLORD AND TENANT (COVENANTS).

d. Tenant for Life or Remainderman.

Sanitary Works.]—The cost of the execution of sanitary works required by a local authority under the powers of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, falls, as between a tenant for life and remaindermen of the premises in respect of which the works are executed, upon the corpus of the property. Lever, In re, Cordwell v. Lever, 66 L. J., Ch. 66; [1897] 1 Ch. 32; 75 L. T. 383; 45 W. R. 172.

Reinstatement of Premises.]—Where expenses had been incurred by a tenant for life, under a will in reinstating structures on a portion of the demised property, in conformity with the requirements of the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, which authorises the commissioners to sell the structures if an owner refuses or neglects to pay the expenses of reinstatement:—Held, that these expenses constituted a charge on the property, and that their repayment was a proper application of the proceeds of other lands devised to the same uses, and taken under the Lands Clauses Act. Davis, Ex parte, 3 De G. & J. 144; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1029.

3. APPORTIONMENT.

Discretion of Local Authority—Paving.]—The apportionment of the expenses of paving new streets, under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 105, and 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 77, by a vestry or district board is in the absolute discretion of such vestry or district board, and not subject to any appeal or review whatever. Nisbet v. Greenwich Board of Works, 44 L. J., M. C. 119; L. R. 10 Q. B. 465; 32 L. T. 762; 24 W. R. 223.

The principle upon which the expenses of paving a new street have been apportioned amongst the adjoining owners pursuant to the Metropolis Management Acts, cannot be questioned before any tribunal. Davis v. Greenwich Board of Works, 64 L. J., M. C. 257; [1895] 2 Q. B. 219; 14 R. 552; 72 L. T. 674; 59 J. P. 517—C. A.

An apportionment by a vestry or district board of the expenses of paving a new street under s. 77 of the Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862, is not invalid by reason of its being at a higher rate in the case of one piece of land abutting on the street than in the case of another. Such an apportionment, on the true construction of the section, need not be made on any uniform principle, but is in the absolute discretion of the vestry or board, and can only be questioned on the ground of want of good faith. Stotesbury v St. Giles, Camberwell, 57 L. J., M. C. 114; 59 L. T. 493; 53 J. P. 5.

An apportionment by a local authority of the expenses of paving a new street under s. 77 of the Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862, is not invalid by reason of its being at a higher rate in the case of one piece of land abutting on the street than in the case of another. Such an apportionment is in the absolute discretion of the local authority, and, so long as it is made bonâ fide, neither the magistrate nor the court has jurisdiction to interfere. Stotesbury v. Vestry of St. Giles, Camberwell (57 L. J., M. C. 114), approved. Metropolitan District Ry. v. Fulham Vestry, 65 L. J., Q. B. 29; [1895] 2 Q. B. 443; 14 R. 685; 73 L. T. 330; 44 W. R. 53; 59 J. P. 679—C. A.

A district board of works paved a new street under s. 105 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, and apportioned the expenses among the adjoining frontagers; upon proceedings being taken against one owner for the amount apportioned:—Held, that the magistrate was bound to admit evidence in order to ascertain whether the whole of the expenses had been incurred in respect of "paving" work. Reg. v. Marsham, 61 L. J., M. C. 52; [1892] 1 Q. B. 371; 65 L. T. 778; 40 W. R. 84; 56 J. P. 164—C. A.

—— Repairs of Road or Way not being a Street.]—In executing works of repair on a road or way not being a street, under the provisions of s. 3 of the Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1890, the vestry or district board are the sole judges as to the necessity for such works. Reg. v. Marsham ([1892] 1 Q. B. 371) distinguished. Stroud v. Wandsworth District Board of Works, 63 L. J., M. C. 88; [1894] 2 Q. B. 1; 9 R. 194; 70 L. T. 190; 42 W. R. 355; 58 J. P. 652—C. A.

Houses on both Sides of a Street—Invalid Apportionment.]—By 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 105, and 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 77, the costs of paving a new street, under the compulsory powers of the former act, are payable by the owners of the houses forming and of the land abutting upon such street, and are to be apportioned by the vestry or district board of works. By the interpretation clause of the latter act the expression "new street" is to include a part of any such street. Buildings and land belonging to the guardians of a union abutted upon a new street which the vestry directed to be paved over half its breadth only; the part paved being that nearest the guardians' premises. The vestry apportioned the whole costs of the paving upon the houses forming the guardians' side of the street, omitting those on the other side:—Held, that the apportionment was invalid, and that the owners of the houses on both sides of the street ought to have been charged. Mile End Vestry v. Whitechapel Union, 46 L. J., M. C. 138; 1 Q. B. D. 680; 35 L. T. 354; 24 W. R. 719—C. A.

—— Flagging Footway.]—The expenses of flagging a footway, under s. 1 of the Metropolis Management Act (1862) Amendment Act, 1890, are to be borne by the owners of land or houses on both sides of the road or street in which the footway is situate. Where the footway does not extend the whole length of the street, or where only a part of it is paved, the liability is limited to the owners (on both sides of the road) of houses or land bounding or abutting on that section of the street which contains the footway or part of the footway which has been or is about to be flagged. Paddington Vestry v. North Metropolitan Ry. and Canal Co., 63 L. J., Q. B. 316; [1894] 1 Q. B. 633; 10 R. 41; 42 W. R. 223; 58 J. P. 413.

Streets New and Old.]—S. was the owner of a piece of land upon which streets had been laid out since the 7th of August, 1862; building land not belonging to him bounded and abutted upon the ends of all the streets except one, which terminated at a cemetery. The district board of works laid down sewers in the streets and apportioned the whole of the costs between S., his tenants, and the owners of the cemetery. Sewer rates had for many years been levied in respect of the houses upon his land, although no sewer had previously existed in the streets thereon:—Held, that the word street in 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 53, included new streets as defined by s. 112, as well as old streets; that s. 52 did not apply, and, therefore, that the apportionment was invalid, as it did not provide that a portion of the costs of the sewers should be defrayed by the board out of the sewer rate levied in their district. Sheffield v. Fulham Board of Works, 1 Ex. D. 395.

Semble, that even if s. 52 had been applicable, the apportionment would have been invalid, since it did not charge any portion of the cost of the sewers upon the owners of the building land bounding and abutting upon the ends of the streets. Ib.

Where a vestry by resolution, after declaring their intention to construct a sewer in a street which was a "new street" within s. 112 of 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, apportioned the expense among the owners in the street, of whom the appellant was one; but for five years previous, sewer rates had been levied on the occupiers of the property therein:—Held, that the case was within s. 53 of the act and that the expense of constructing the sewer should be divided as therein mentioned. St. Giles, Camberwell, v. Weller, L. R. 6 Q. B. 168, n.; 17 W. R. 973.

The Harrow road is an ancient road, and was formerly under the management of turnpike trustees and commissioners until 1864, when the vestry of the parish took charge of it for the first time. The part of the Harrow road eastward of Elgin road had been built over for many years. In 1866, a person built a row of houses called Frankfort terrace, on the side of the Harrow road on the part westward of Elgin road. No sewer existed on that part of the road, but sewers rates had been levied and paid in respect of the land adjoining for more than five years prior to 1856. When Frankfort terrace was built, the parish constructed a sewer in that part of the road, and, upon its completion, the vestry apportioned the whole of the expense of it upon the owners of the adjoining land, under the Metropolis Local Management Amendment Act (25 & 26 Vict. c. 102), s. 52:—Held, that the vestry was right, and that the road built upon was a new street within that section; and that the owners of the adjoining land were liable to be assessed for their respective portions of the whole expense. Sawyer v. Paddington Vestry, 40 L. J., M. C. 8; L. R. 6 Q. B. 164; 23 L. T. 662; 19 W. R. 96.

Held, also, that the word "street" in s. 53 did not apply to a new street within s. 52. Ib.

The words "a street" in s. 53 of the Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 102), include "new streets" as defined by s. 112, as well as old streets. In 1872 a road in the metropolis which had up to that time been a turnpike road ceased to be a turnpike road and became a common highway. In 1883 the vestry of the parish in which the road was, constructed a sewer and apportioned part of the expense of construction on the owner of lands abutting on the road. Previously to 1883 there had been no sewer in this part of the road, Sewers rates had been levied for five years prior to the 1st January, 1856, in respect of these lands:—Held, that the case fell under s. 53 and not under s. 52 of the Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 102); that the road was a "street" within the meaning of s. 53 as defined by s. 112 of that act, and that the lands were under the proviso in s. 53 exempt from apportionment. St. Giles, Camberwell, v Weller (L. R. 6 Q. B. 168, n.) and Sheffield v. Fulham Board (1 Ex. D. 395) approved. Sawyer v. Paddington Vestry (L. R. 6 Q. B. 164) overruled. St John's, Hampstead v. Cotton, 56 L. J., Q. B. 225; 12 App. Cas. 1; 56 L. T. 1; 35 W. R. 505; 51 J. P. 340—H. L. (E.)

A road, formerly a turnpike road, which after the turnpike trust has expired becomes by the erection of houses on its side a new street within the ordinary meaning of the words, is not prevented from being a new street within the Metropolis Management Acts, by the mere fact that repairs to the footway of a temporary character have been undertaken by the vestry. Davis v. Greenwich Board of Works, 64 L. J., M. C. 257; [1895] 2 Q. B. 219; 14 R. 552; 72 L. T. 674; 59 J. P. 517—C. A.

In 1870 a road, which was then an unpaved "new street," with houses and a footpath on the north side only and vacant land on the south side, was paved to the satisfaction of the local authority under the provisions of s. 105 of the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855. The expenses of such paving were apportioned upon, and were paid wholly by the owners of the houses on the north side, and the vestry afterwards kept the whole of such pavement in repair, and paid the cost out of the general rates. In 1888 the owner of the vacant land on the south side, by an arrangement with the vestry for widening the road, set back his fence thirteen feet, and dedicated this strip, and the vestry kerbed a new footpath seven feet in width on the south side, and paved and metalled the remaining six feet, making it uniform with the carriageway already paved, and they paid the expenses, as well as the expenses of the subsequent repairs, out of the general rates. The only part left unpaved was the new footpath of seven feet, and, houses having been built on the south side of this footpath, the vestry resolved in 1894 to pave this footpath, being as they said, a "new street," and they apportioned the expenses of paving the new footpath on the owners on the north side of the road as well as on the owners on the south side:—Held, that the apportionment was upon a wrong basis; that, as in 1870 the whole breadth of the road was completely paved to the satisfaction of the local authority under s. 105, and as they had exercised their powers under the section and compelled contribution from the owners of the houses adjoining, they had no jurisdiction afterwards to declare this road a "new street," and that the only "new street" was the new footpath which formed no part of the old road, and that, as the houses on the north side did not abut on this new footpath, the owners of such houses could not be called upon to contribute to the expenses of paving the same. White v. Fulham Vestry, 74 L. T. 425 ; 60 J. P. 327.

The respondents were the owners of two plots of land abutting on a highway which had been formed and laid out in or after the year 1866. In the highway there were only two houses, and no new buildings had been erected for the last twenty years. In 1894 the appellants paved this particular road, and claimed from the respondents the proportion of such expense. The magistrate dismissed a summons by the appellants to enforce same on the ground that the road was not a new street within the meaning of s. 105 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1854, and s. 77 of the Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862 :—Held, that the magistrate was right. Battersea Vestry v. Palmer, 66 L. J., Q. B. 77 ; [1897] 1 Q. B. 220 ; 75 L. T. 362 ; 45 W. R. 110 ; 60 J. P. 774.

Sewer for New Street—What is.]—In 1867 a sewer was built in a street, formed since 1862, of some houses of which G. was owner, at his expense, under the Local Management Act, 1867 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 102), s. 44. In 1875 a metropolitan board removed this sewer, and another in the next street, and constructed a new sewer in connection with the houses in both streets. They apportioned the costs and expenses of the works upon the owners of houses and land in the two streets. G. refused to pay his apportionment, and a magistrate dismissed the summons against him :—Held, that this was not a sewer constructed in or for the drainage of a new street within s. 52, and that the apportionment was bad. Fulham Board of Works v. Goodwin, 1 Ex. D. 400 ; 35 L. T. 907.

—— Time for Apportionment.]—The Metropolis Management Amendment Act (25 & 26 Vict. c. 102), s. 53, enacts that, "where any sewer shall be constructed by any vestry or district board in a street in which previously to such construction there had been no sewer, &c., but where sewers rates had been levied previously to such construction, the expense of constructing such sewer and the works appertaining thereto shall be borne in part only by the owners of the houses situate in and of the land bounding and abutting on such street respectively, and the amount to be borne by such owners shall be determined by the vestry or district board in each particular case, and the residue of such expenses shall be defrayed out of the sewers rate," but there is no limitation of the time within which the amount payable by the owners of such land and houses is to be apportioned. Where, therefore, a sewer had been constructed within the meaning of the section in 1868, and no apportionment of the amount of the cost of constructing it, to be borne by the owners of the houses in the street, was made until 1876 :—Held, that the apportionment was valid. Bradley v. Greenwich Board of Works, 47 L. J., M. C. 111 ; 3 Q. B. D. 384 ; 38 L. T. 849 ; 26 W. R. 693.

New Street in Two Districts—Order for exclusive Management by One.]—An order of the Metropolitan Board of Works made under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 140, and 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 86, that a new street in more than one parish or district shall be under the exclusive management of one vestry or district board for the purposes of paving, and the expenses payable by each be divided equally between the two parishes or districts, is valid ; but such order does not entitle the managing vestry or board to require the other vestry or board to pay one-half of the expenses. St. Giles, Camberwell, v. Greenwich Board of Works, 56 L. J., Q. B. 636 ; 19 Q. B. D. 502 ; 36 W. R. 126.

Estimate of Expenses—Evidence of Determination.] — A metropolitan vestry, having resolved to pave a new street, and part of the expenses being apportioned on the appellant, laid a complaint before a magistrate for non-payment of such apportioned sum. An estimate was given in evidence, signed by the surveyor, who was not called as a witness, but the estimate had been acted upon by the vestry :—Held, that the signed estimate was some evidence that the surveyor had made it, and determined the amount, and that the magistrate was right in enforcing payment. Hobman v. Greenwich District Board of Works, 58 J. P. 703—C. A.

Mistake of Clerk—Estoppel.]—G., the owner of houses abutting on a new street, had a sum of 562*l.* apportioned as his share of the expense of paving. He was summoned for the same, but, by a mistake of the clerk, the sum was entered as 392*l.*, and that sum was paid by G. The actual expenses exceeded the estimate, and G. was summoned for the balance, including the amount insufficiently paid :—Held, that the magistrate was wrong in treating the mistake as an estoppel, and that G. was bound to pay the correct amount. St. Mary, Islington, Vestry v. Goodman, 58 J. P. 703.

4. Charge on Properties.

Betterment—Valuation—Licensed Premises—Takings and Covenants.]—For the purpose of creating a charge on properties benefited by improvements carried out in pursuance of the London County Council (Tower Bridge Southern Approach) Act, 1895, an initial valuation was to be made of all the properties affected apart from the proposed improvements. In making such valuation the valuer was to assess—first, the site ; secondly, the site and buildings ; thirdly, the separate value of the owner, and of every lessee having a term of not less than twenty-one years to run at the date of the valuation, excluding any trade interest. With regard to takings and payments, and tying covenants concerning licensed premises :—Held, first, that neither takings and payments, nor the tying covenant, are elements of the value of the site, and that evidence of them should not be admitted even for the purpose of testing the evidence of witnesses ; secondly, that the rule is the same as to takings and payments when considering the site and buildings ; but as to the tying covenant the valuation must be the same whether the tying covenant is considered or not, as the covenant would only affect t apportionment between the lessor and the lessee; thirdly, with regard to the third part of the valuation—namely, the interests of the owner and all lessees having twenty-one years unexpired—the fact that the house is tied ought to be considered. London County Council and City of London Brewery Co., In re, 67 L. J. Q. B. 382; 77 L. T. 463; 61 J. P. 808.

5. PROCEEDINGS.

Before Justices—Necessity of.]—An action will not lie against the owner or occupier of a house for the recovery of his proportion of the expenses of paving a street under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, but recourse must be had to the remedy pointed out by s. 225, viz. by a proceeding before two justices. St. Pancras Vestry v. Batterbury, 2 C. B. (N.S.) 477; 26 L. J., C. P. 243; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1106.

Within what Time.]—By 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, s. 73, all expenses incurred by the commissioners in respect of any dangerous structure shall be paid by the owner, and being recoverable in a summary manner, may, by s. 103, be recovered in manner directed by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43. In January, 1857, the commissioners took down a dangerous structure, in pursuance of the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, and on the 30th April, 1858, gave the owner notice of the expenses, and demanded payment. On the 11th May a complaint was laid before a police magistrate for the nonpayment of the expenses:—Held, that the matter of complaint was the nonpayment of the expenses, and therefore the six months limited by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 11, ran from the demand and refusal, and not from the completion of the works, and therefore that the complaint was in time. Labalmondiere v. Addison, 1 El. & El. 41; 28 L. J., M. C. 25; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 433.

A board of works in the metropolis in June, 1876, made a sewer and apportioned the expenses among the owners of lands, finding 407*l.* to be the sum due by M., the owner of certain lands. No demand of the sum was made on M., the owner, till the 30th December, 1878, though the occupiers had been summoned for part of the sum and the summons dismissed. On the 14th May, 1879, M. was summoned for payment of the whole sum:—Held, that the six months counted from the 14th May, 1879, and not from the notice of apportionment, and therefore the magistrate properly ordered M. to pay the same. Marr v. Greenwich Board of Works, 44 J. P. 424.

—— Payment of Instalments.]—Where a district board have paved a new street under the powers given by 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 105, and have accepted payment of the amount apportioned in respect of any house or premises by instalments spread over a period not exceeding twenty years, summary proceedings can be taken to recover any instalment, provided the information is laid within six calendar months of the demand therefor; although a previous application for the whole sum apportioned may have been made more than six months before such information was laid. Prescott v. Nicholson, 60 L. T. 563; 53 J. P. 597.

—— Nuisance Order—County Court Action.]—The limitation of six calendar months imposed by s. 11 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848, in respect of summary proceedings before magistrates, applies to a county court action brought under s. 11 of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, to recover the amount of costs and expenses incurred in and about serving a notice, making a complaint, and obtaining and carrying into effect a nuisance order, and the action must therefore be brought within six calendar months from the time when such costs and expenses were incurred. Hammersmith Vestry v. Lowenfeld, 65 L. J., Q. B. 662; [1896] 2 Q. B. 278; 75 L. T. 182; 45 W. R. 60; 60 J. P. 600.

Right of Action—Judgment against former Owner no bar.]—The Metropolis Local Management Amendment Act, 1862, ss. 77 & 96, makes certain paving expenses recoverable by the vestry by action from the present or any future owner of premises, or from any person who then or thereafter occupies the premises. The vestry had recovered a judgment against a former owner of premises in respect of such expenses, which remained unsatisfied:—Held, that such judgment was no bar to a subsequent action for the same expenses against the occupier who occupied the premises as tenant to a succeeding owner. Bermondsey Vestry v. Ramsey, 40 L. J., C. P. 206; L. R. 6 C. P. 247; 24 L. T. 429; 19 W. R. 774.

Appeal against Orders—Mode of.]—When an order of the metropolitan board of works has been made, under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 140, ordering that the whole of a street situate in more than one district should be under the exclusive management of one particular vestry, and that vestry makes an order upon one of the other districts for contribution towards the expenses, if the order is good on the face of it, the only mode of appeal open to the district is by contesting the propriety of the assessment at the audit; and the court, on a return to a mandamus ordering the payment of the sum assessed, will not go into the matter, but grant a peremptory mandamus. Reg. v. Strand Board of Works, 4 B. & S. 551; 33 L. J., Q. B. 299; 11 L. T. 183; 12 W. R. 828—Ex. Ch.

Stale Demand—Successive Occupier—Statute of Limitations.]—In 1871, a metropolitan vestry apportioned paving expenses on the then owner of a house and made demand, but the sum was not paid. In 1885, a fresh demand was made on W., the new owner, and the justices made an order on W., within six months thereafter:—Held, that there was no Statute of Limitations or other bar to the recovery of the said expenses, and that the order was right. Wortley v. St. Mary, Islington, 51 J. P. 166.

E. LIABILITY.

1. OF COUNCIL.

a. To Actions.

i. For Damages.

Neglect of Duty.]—The Metropolis Local Management Act (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 125), not only transfers to the vestry the duties of the old parish and of the surveyor of highways, but also imposes certain specified duties created by the act. In case of nonperformance of these duties an action for damages will lie against the vestry. Holborn Union v. St. Leonard, Shoreditch, Vestry, 46 L. J., Q. B. 36; 2 Q. B. D. 145; 35 L. T. 400; 25 W. R. 40.

By s. 125, vestries are required to employ a sufficient number of persons, or to contract with any company or persons, for removing all dirt, ashes, rubbish and filth within their parishes. The guardians of a union were possessed of a workhouse situate within the parish. The vestry refused to remove from it the dirt, ashes, rubbish and filth there collected; the guardians were in consequence obliged to remove the same, and thereby incurred expense:—Held, that an action was maintainable by them to enable them to recover from the vestry the expense incurred by them in removing the dirt, ashes, rubbish and filth from the workhouse. Ib.

An action lies against a board of works for not keeping a sewer cleaned, whereby it became choked up, and the overflow therefrom ran into the plaintiff's premises. Meek v. Whitechapel Board of Works, 2 F. & F. 144.

—— Statutory Duty—Penalty.]—An action is not maintainable against a sanitary authority for damage sustained through its neglect of the statutory duty imposed upon it by s. 29 of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, to remove street refuse. The penalty provided by that section for neglect of such statutory duty is the sole remedy available against such sanitary authority. Saunders v. Holborn District Board of Works, 64 L. J., Q. B. 101; [1895] 1 Q. B. 64; 15 R. 25; 71 L. T. 519; 43 W. R. 26; 59 J. P. 453.

Negligence—Surveyors of Highways.]—A water meter, which was the property of a water company and used for measuring the water supplied by the company to the defendants, the vestry of a parish, for watering the streets, was placed by the defendants in a box of theirs sunk in the footway of one of the streets and covered with an iron flap. The defendants as such vestry were, by s. 96 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), the surveyors of highways, and by s. 116 authorised to cause the streets in their parish to be watered. The plaintiff, whilst walking along the street, stepped on the iron flap, and, by reason of its having been worn smooth, and become slippery and dangerous, he fell and was injured. In an action by him against the defendants for damages for such injury:—Held, that though the defendants might not be liable as surveyors of the highway for negligence in not keeping the iron flap in a proper state, they were in their capacity as the authority for watering the street, in which capacity they had placed the iron flap there. White v. Hindley Local Board (L. R. 10 Q. B. 219) approved. Blackmore v. Mile End Vestry, 51 L. J., Q. B. 496; 9 Q. B. D. 451; 46 L. T. 869; 30 W. R. 740; 47 J. P. 52—C. A.

A declaration alleged negligence on the part of a vestry in not repairing a common highway, whereby the plaintiff suffered special damage by injury to his horse:—Held, that although the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, transferred the duties of surveyors to vestries, yet it did not put an end to the liability of parishes to indictment, and therefore an action does not lie against the vestries for nonrepair. Parsons v. St. Matthew, Bethnal Green Vestry, 37 L. J., C. P. 62; L. R. 3 C. P. 56; 17 L. T. 211; 16 W. R. 85.

—— Of Workmen.]—By 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, vestries are required to execute the office of surveyor of highways within their parishes; and if they duly execute the same, and do not personally interfere, they are not liable to a passenger for an injury caused to him by a heap of paving-stones having been negligently left on the road by the workmen employed by the acting surveyor. Holliday v. St. Leonard's, Shoreditch Vestry, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 192; 30 L. J., C. P. 361; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 79; 4 L. T. 406; 9 W. R. 694.

—— Accumulation of Water from a Sewer.]—The defendants, under the powers conferred upon them by the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), ss. 135, 136, constructed, and properly constructed, a sewer having its outfall at Deptford Creek, a little above the plaintiff's coal wharf, with water-gates, which it was the duty of the person in charge of them to open when the water within them became eight feet deep—a depth which was reached only in heavy rainfalls. On the 29th of August, 1879, there was an exceptionally heavy rainfall, and it became necessary to open the water-gates to prevent a large district from being flooded. This having been done, and the rain increasing in violence, the rush of water from the sewer carried away a portion of the plaintiff's wharf, with a barge moored thereto and a quantity of coals deposited therein and thereon:—Held, that the injury complained of was occasioned by the opening of the water-gates, and not by the act of God, and therefore the defendants were primâ facie liable for the damage done, within the principle of Rylands v. Fletcher (L. R. 3 H. L. 330); but that, as they were a public body acting in the discharge of a public duty, and as that which happened was only the inevitable result of what parliament had authorised them to do, they were not liable. Dixon v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 50 L. J., Q. B. 772; 7 Q. B. D. 418; 45 L. T. 312; 30 W. R. 83; 46 J. P. 4.

When a specified duty is imposed by statute upon a public body, it is, in the absence of express enactment, to be assumed that the legislature intended to exempt the public body from liability to make compensation for alleged omissions to fulfil that duty, unless negligence can be proved to exist. Hammond v. St. Pancras Vestry, 43 L. J., C. P. 157; L. R. 9 C. P. 316; 30 L. T. 296; 22 W. R. 826. S. P., Bateman v. Poplar Board of Works, 57 L. J., Ch. 579; 37 Ch. D. 272; 58 L. T. 720; 36 W. R. 501.

The Metropolis Management Act, 1855, s. 72, imposes upon vestries the duty of keeping the sewers in their respective parishes properly cleared, cleansed and emptied. An occupier of a messuage in one of these parishes received injury from the overflow of a sewer; the overflow happened without any default on the part of the vestry:—Held, that the occupier could not maintain an action against the vestry for the injury which he had sustained. Ib.

Interference with River Bed.]—The metropolitan board of works has no power under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 135, to erect any works on the bed or soil of the Thames, without first obtaining the consent of the admiralty, pursuant to 21 & 22 Vict. c. 104, and of the conservators of the river; and consequently the board is liable to an action by an owner of a vessel which sustains damage from grounding upon a pile negligently placed on the foreshore by a contractor employed by the board. Brownlow v. Metropolitan Board

Demolition of House—Seizure of Materials.]—A party having erected a building in contravention of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 143, a resolution of a vestry was passed, directing their surveyor to demolish the portion which encroached beyond the line. The surveyor having taken down the offending building, placed the materials within a hoarding on the carriage way, and afterwards removed them to the parish stone-yard, and detained them there as a security and pledge for the costs and expenses of so taking down the building, in the bonâ fide belief that he was entitled so to do under the resolution of the vestry ; and the case (settled by an arbitrator) having found that the plaintiff could not have obtained the materials back without paying the costs and expenses :—Held, a conversion. Tear v. Freebody, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 228 ; 6 W. R. 520.

Disturbance of Ancient Market.]—The plaintiffs were, down to 1855, seised in fee of an ancient market for the sale of cattle, known as Smithfield Market, and were entitled to certain tolls in respect of cattle exposed for sale in the market. In 1855, the Smithfield Market was, under the authority of an act of parliament, removed to Islington ; but all privileges were expressly preserved to the plaintiffs, and it was enacted that no new market for the sale of cattle should be opened within a distance of seven miles from St. Paul's Cathedral, in the city of London. For more than fifty years before the closing of Smithfield Market, the defendants, or one of them, had been in possession of a private lair near to the market, and in 1854 the business that had been there carried on was transferred to certain premises about six hundred yards distant from the Islington Market, and within the distance of seven miles from St. Paul's Cathedral ; lairs and receptacles for cattle were there provided, containing accommodation for about four hundred head. Some of the cattle were from time to time sold by the defendants upon the premises between the market days, which were held on Mondays and Thursdays. Beyond a uniform charge for lairage, there was nothing in the nature of a toll upon sales effected by other persons than the defendants ; but where the defendants themselves acted as salesmen, they charged the same commission as if the cattle had been sold in the plaintiffs' market. The cattle thus sold in the interval between the two markets would, if there had been no opportunity for sale between the two markets, have found their way to and have been sold in the market of the plaintiffs. From time immemorial cattle had been sold in certain lairs near Smithfield Market, of which that possessed by the defendants was one. The defendants now claimed to have a right either from lost grant, prescription or otherwise, to sell cattle in the manner described :—Held, on the above facts, that an action was maintainable against the defendants for a disturbance of the plaintiffs' market. London Corporation v. Low, 49 L. J., Q. B. 144 ; 42 L. T. 16 ; 28 W. R. 250 ; 44 J. P. 169.

Under Building Acts.]—See ante, PARTY-WALL.

Repair of Highway by Contractor—Knowledge of Vestry as to State of Water-pipe.]—A vestry, acting as a sewer authority, laid down a new sewer, and, in so doing, a contractor employed by them laid bare a wrought-iron service water-pipe, which was about two and a half feet below the surface. The surveyor of the vestry knew that the pipe was old and rusty, and likely, therefore, to become leaky. In filling in the trench some clay was put round the pipe, but not in such a quantity or in such a manner as to prevent it from leaking. A few months afterwards the pipe leaked, and the surrounding clay and earth, being thereby moistened, gave way under a heavily laden van, which the plaintiff was driving, and the van being overturned the plaintiff was thrown from it to the ground, and seriously injured. Upon an action brought to recover damages from the defendants :—Held, that the vestry knew, or ought to have known, the character and condition of the pipe at the time it was laid bare in constructing the new sewer, and consequently were liable for negligence in not having taken special precautions against its leaking thereafter. Coe v. Paddington Vestry, 64 L. T. 566.

Levelling Street—Cutting into Cellars—Preventing Access to Shop—Injury to Trade.]—A corporation being authorised by act of parliament to stop up or level a street for the purpose of its act, in the course of operations wrongfully cut into the cellars of a house, which were under the street, leaving them open and exposed. The corporation also, in the course of the works, partially stopped the traffic along the street. An injunction having been obtained restraining the corporation from cutting into the cellars, with an inquiry as to damages :—Held, that although the owner was entitled to damages for the structural injury to his cellars, he was not entitled to damages for depression caused to his trade by reason of the difficulty of access to his shop, it not being shewn that the depression arose from the wrongful, as distinguished from the authorised, act of the corporation. Bigg v. London Corporation, L. R. 15 Eq. 376 ; 28 L. T. 336.

Making Sewer — Alternative Method less likely to cause Damage.]—An arbitrator found that commissioners of sewers had by tunnelling made a sewer fit and proper to be made, in a workmanlike, skilful and proper manner ; but that the probability of damage would have been somewhat less if the sewer had been made by open cutting instead of tunnelling :—Held, that the commissioners were not liable for an injury to an adjoining building, occasioned by the tunnelling. Grocers' Co. v. Downe, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 34 ; 3 Sc. 356 ; 2 Hodges, 120 ; 5 L. J., C. P. 307.

Turning out Street Lamps—Accident.]—By s. 130 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, vestries have a discretion as to the time during which public street lamps shall continue lighted, and when they have bonâ fide exercised their discretion in that respect they are not liable for any accident, whether the result of nonfeasance or misfeasance, caused through the lights having been turned out at the hour they have ordered. Young v. St. Mary's, Islington, Vestry, 60 J. P. 821.

ii. On Contracts.

With Trustees.]—An action upon a contract for cleansing the streets of a parish, entered into by the trustees under a local act, is by virtue of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, ss. 29, 93, 94, 95, properly brought against the district board. Sinnott v. Whitechapel Board of Works, 3 C. B. (N.S.) 674; 27 L. J., C. P. 177; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 263; 6 W. R. 289.

In Contravention of Building Act.]—A contract for the erection of a building in contravention of the provisions of the Metropolitan Building Act of 1855 cannot be enforced. Stevens v. Gourley, 1 F. & F. 498; 7 C. B. (N.S.) 99; 29 L. J., C. P. 1; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 147; 1 L. T. 33; 8 W. R. 85.

iii. For Injunction.

Vestry repairing Road—Breaking Gas-pipes—Steam Roller.]—The plaintiffs, a gas company, having statutory powers to place mains and pipes under the highways, and a statutory obligation to supply gas within the parish of K., laid, prior to 1872, certain pipes under certain highways within the jurisdiction of the defendants, who, being the highway authority for the district, were, by virtue of 10 Vict. c. 34, 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, and 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, bound to repair the highways, and empowered to pave and alter the level of streets under their management. In 1872 the defendants began to use steam rollers of considerable weight for the purpose of repairing the highways and thereby fractured certain pipes belonging to the plaintiffs laid under the highways:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to an injunction restraining the defendants from using any steam rollers in such a way as to fracture or damage any pipes belonging to the plaintiffs which were properly laid under the highways within the jurisdiction of the defendants. Gas Light and Coke Co. v. St. Mary Abbott's Vestry, 54 L. J., Q. B. 414; 15 Q. B. D. 1; 53 L. T. 457; 33 W. R. 892; 49 J. P. 469—C. A. Affirming 1 Cab. & E. 368.

Improper Expenditure.]—It is illegal for a vestry to spend moneys out of the rates in an agitation to induce persons taking water from a water company to resist payment of a charge for fixed baths, which has been decided to be a good charge. Att.-Gen. v. Camberwell Vestry, 63 L. J., Ch. 878; 8 R. 627; 71 L. T. 478.

—— Individual Members of Vestry made Defendants, for Payment of Costs.]—A vestry, incorporated under the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, having resolved to incur certain unauthorised expenditure, an action for an injunction was commenced by the attorney-general, at the relation of a ratepayer, against the vestry and the movers and seconders of the resolution, passed by the vestry and some of their supporters. On motion on which the individual defendants were unrepresented, the vestry consented to a perpetual injunction without costs, and the plaintiffs then moved for judgment against the individual defendants in default of pleadings, and asked that they might be ordered to pay the costs of the action. The statement of claim did not ask for costs against the vestry:—Held, that it was irregular to make the individual members of the vestry defendants for the sole purpose of making them pay costs, and that as no costs were asked against the vestry there was no necessity for an indemnity to the vestry from costs occasioned to it by the individual defendants having led the vestry astray, and that the action, therefore, must be dismissed as against the individual defendants, but without costs on either side. Att.-Gen. v. Bermondsey Vestry, 51 L. J., Ch. 848; 46 L. T. 852; 30 W. R. 872. Affirmed, 52 L. J., Ch. 567; 23 Ch. D. 60; 48 L. T. 445; 31 W. R. 463—C. A.

Threat to demolish Houses unless Owner constructs Sewer.]—C., being owner of land in a parish, and wishing to build thereon, had, from a misapprehension of his duties under the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, constructed a sewer in the street to the main sewer, at his own expense. Afterwards, wishing to build another street in a parallel direction to the former, he wrote to the vestry, asking how they required the proposed new houses to be drained. The vestry required him to continue the former sewer; to which he replied, that under the act it was not incumbent on him to construct the sewer, but only to make drains from the houses into the sewer. The vestry, however, gave him notice to discontinue the erection of the houses, adding that they had power to cause the same to be demolished. A bill was filed to restrain the vestry from demolishing, destroying, altering, or injuring the houses or interfering with or preventing the completion of them. An interim order for an injunction was granted, which, on motion by consent for a decree, was made perpetual, and the costs of the suit were ordered to be paid by the vestry. Clarke v. Paddington Vestry, 5 Jur. (N.S.) 138.

Entry on Premises to abate Nuisance—Previous Complaint to Justices, whether necessary.]—See Tinkler v. Wandsworth District Board of Works, 1 Giff. 412; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1292; 6 W. R. 50 (ante, col. 1115).

Mandatory Injunction—To construct Footway.]—S. was entitled to the houses in Cecil and Salisbury Streets, and to a piece of low level ground at the south ends of these streets. The low level communicated by means of two lanes at the backs of the streets with the Strand on the north side, and by means of wharves, with the river Thames on the south side. In 1862 the Thames Embankment Act authorised the construction of the embankment road and of the ornamental gardens alongside of the river. These improvements were completed in 1870; their effect was to deprive the low level ground in question, and also the two streets, of all communication with the river or with the embankment on the south side. S., as the owner of the depreciated property, had obtained 10,000*l.* as compensation assessed by an umpire: but under s. 62 of the act of 1862, S. was entitled besides to full and free communication to the embankment road and the river, and he claimed that such right belonged to him in respect as well of the houses in Cecil and Salisbury Streets as of the low level ground, and that the right in dispute was to a wheel or a cart-way, and not to a footway merely. The makers of the improvements had offered to construct a convenient footway across the gardens to the embankment road, but such offer had not been entertained. A wheel or cart-way would have seriously injured the ornamental gardens:—Held, that having regard to the circumstances of the property in 1862, and to an act of Geo. 3, relative to the buildings upon it, the act of 1862 did not reserve any right of way, much less a wheel or cart-way, to the low level; and that a mandatory injunction to construct a convenient footway for the occupiers of Cecil and Salisbury Streets could not be granted on the state of the pleadings, or an inquiry directed at that stage of the suit. Salisbury (Marquis) v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 21 W. R. 259.

—— Sewage—Adjoining Districts—Cutting off Communications already sanctioned.]—A nuisance was caused in watercourses within the district of the sanitary authority for B. by the discharge of sewage from cesspools within the district of the sanitary authority for C., by means of connecting-pipes laid with the sanction of that authority, which carried the sewage through main pipes laid in private roads in the C. district to the watercourses in question:—Held, that the authority for C. had not power to stop up or cut off the communications between the cesspools and the main-pipes. Att.-Gen. v. Clerkenwell Vestry, 60 L. J., Ch. 788; [1891] 3 Ch. 527; 65 L. T. 312; 40 W. R. 185.

No action will lie for an injunction to compel the sanitary authority for C. to exercise their statutory powers or perform their duties, and therefore that the authority for B. were not entitled to a mandatory injunction to restrain the authority for C. from permitting the continuance of the nuisance. Ib.

iv. Procedure.

Board, how Sued.]—Under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 112, which enacted that the metropolitan commissioners of sewers may sue and be sued "in the name of the clerk for the time being," as explained by 12 & 13 Vict. c. 93, s. 15, which enacted, that the chief clerk to the commissioners shall be called the "secretary," and the word "clerk," in any of the acts relating to the commissioners, shall include "secretary," the commissioners must sue and be sued in the name of their secretary. Clements v. Pollard, 10 Ex. 817; 3 C. L. R. 420.

Notice of Action—Riparian Owners.]—The provisions of 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 106, requiring one month's notice to be served before instituting any proceeding against the Metropolitan Board of Works or any district board in respect of anything done or intended to be done under their parliamentary powers, do not affect the right of a riparian owner, whose stream is being polluted by the drainage works of a district board, to summary relief by injunction. Att.-Gen. v. Hackney Local Board, 44 L. J., Ch. 545; L. R. 20 Eq. 626; 33 L. T. 244.

The authority over sewers, and the drainage powers given by parliament to local boards, do not authorise the committal of a nuisance by the boards in their exercise of such powers. Ib.

—— Third Party.]—By 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 106 no writ or process shall be sued out against or served upon . . . the Metropolitan Board of Works, or any vestry or district board, or their clerk, or any clerks, surveyor, contractor, officer, or person whomsoever, acting under their or any of their directions, for anything done or intended to be done, under the powers of such board or vestry under the metropolitan acts, until one month after notice:—Held, that the section intended only some act done by virtue of the powers vested in the board or vestry and under their authority, and that, therefore, a person who had received notice from a district board to drain into a sewer, and in doing so committed a trespass, was not entitled to notice of action. Doust v. Slater, 10 B. & S. 400; 38 L. J., Q. B. 159; 20 L. T. 525.

—— Action for Injunction.]—Per North, J. Sect. 106 of the Metropolis Local Management Acts Amendment Act, 1862, which requires that before any proceeding is instituted against a district board a month's notice shall be served on them by the person intending to take the proceeding, does not apply to actions in equity:—Per Lopes, L.J. (Cotton and Lindley, L.JJ., not dissenting), that that section does not apply to an action for an injunction to restrain a nuisance. Bateman v. Poplar Board of Works, 56 L. J., Ch. 149; 33 Ch. D. 360; 55 L. T. 374.

—— Negligence.]—The plaintiff was a driver employed by contractors who had contracted with the defendants, a metropolitan vestry, to provide them with horses and drivers for their carts used in watering the streets under the powers of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120. The defendants negligently supplied a cart with a defective axle, and by reason thereof the plaintiff, whilst driving the cart for the purpose of watering the street, was thrown off and injured:—Held, that the defendants were entitled to notice of action under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 106, because the supply of the water-cart to the plaintiff for the purpose of watering the streets was a thing "done or intended to be done" under the powers of the vestry under the act empowering them to water the streets. Edwards v. St. Mary, Islington, 58 L. J., Q. B. 165; 22 Q. B. D. 338; 60 L. T. 725; 37 W. R. 347; 53 J. P. 180—C. A.

—— Sufficiency.]—In a notice of action served, under s. 106 of the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1862, upon a vestry, the description of the place where the defect complained of existed should be clear and explicit: but a discrepancy not calculated to mislead, such as a statement that a sewer was in S. street, whereas it was twenty feet away from the point indicated and in another street, is not fatal to the notice, nor a ground for nonsuit. Madden v. Kensington Vestry, 61 L. J., Q. B. 527; [1892] 1 Q. B. 614; 66 L. T. 347; 40 W. R. 390; 56 J. P. 471.

—— By Person suing as Incumbrancer on Rates.]—Clauses in local act providing that person aggrieved by the commissioners appointed to carry it into execution, should appeal to the quarter sessions, and that twenty-one days' notice should be given before any action or suit was commenced for anything done in pursuance of the act, do not apply to the case of a person claiming as an incumbrancer of the rates which the act gave authority to assess and levy and instituting his suit in order to give effect to his incumbrance. Drewry v. Barnes, 3 Russ. 94; 5 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 47; 27 R. R. 20.

b. For Compensation.

Obstruction of Light—No Agreement.]—By two acts of Geo. 3, a vestry was empowered to alter the levels of streets without compensating those injured by such alteration. The Metropolis Local Management Act enables a vestry to purchase any right or easement over any land which may be necessary for the execution of works undertaken by them; it also incorporates the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, but excludes the operation of ss. 16—68, being those sections which relate to "the taking of lands otherwise than by agreement"; and by s. 247, it repeals all acts which are inconsistent with it. The vestry, in raising the level of a street under its statutory powers, obstructed the light of and the entrances to the plaintiff's houses, and refused to enter into any agreement with him or to pay any compensation:—Held, that in the absence of any agreement between the plaintiff and the vestry, the plaintiff was not entitled to compensation, as s. 68 of the Lands Clauses Act was not incorporated; and that the vestry was acting under the acts of Geo. 3, which were not repealed by the Metropolis Local Management Act. Baker v. St. Marylebone Vestry, 35 L. T. 129; 24 W. R. 848.

Temporary Obstruction.]—The mere temporary obstruction of access to premises, though it may cause some inconvenience and loss of business to the occupier, is not a damage in respect of which he is entitled to claim compensation under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, ss. 135, 225. Herring v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 510.

Obstruction of Public Way.]—Where the occupier of premises near the Thames had been used to draw water from the river, and to bring barges to a draw-lock, as public rights, and not as rights attached to the premises, and was obstructed in the enjoyment of these rights by the works of the embankment:—Held, that he could not claim compensation under the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, s. 68. Reg. v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 10 B. & S. 391; 38 L. J., Q. B. 201; L. R. 4 Q. B. 358; 17 W. R. 1094.

Construction of Sewer.]—By 11 & 12 Vict. c. 112, s. 38, power is given to the commissioners of sewers to construct sewers, and to make compensation for damage done thereby, and compensation was to be made out of rates to be levied under the act. By 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 145, the Metropolitan Board of Works was appointed to take the place of the commissioners of sewers, and no action against the commissioners was to abate, but to continue against the metropolitan board. By s. 148, the property of the commissioners is vested in the board, and money recoverable from the former is made recoverable from the latter, and all liabilities which, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 112, were charged on or payable out of any rates levied thereunder, are continued in full force and charged on the district as before. In an action against the metropolitan board for damage done by the commissioners of sewers in the construction of works several years before action:—Held, that the Metropolitan Board of Works was liable. Pettiward and Metropolitan Board of Works, In re, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 489; 34 L. J., C. P. 301; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 932; 12 L. T. 764.

The mere construction of a sewer by the Metropolitan Board of Works does not give the owners of the adjacent lands a right to compensation under the Sewers Act (11 & 12 Vict. c. 112), ss. 69 and 70. Metropolitan Board of Works v. Metropolitan Ry., 37 L. J., C. P. 281; L. R. 3 C. P. 612; 19 L. T. 10; 16 W. R. 1117. And see cases ante, cols. 1097, et seq.

Draining Pond.]—In a field, situate upon a bed of gravel, there had existed from time immemorial a pond, formed in the gravel surface, underlying which was a natural basin of clay. The pond was the result of the percolation of water from the adjoining high lands into the gravel, whence, being confined by the substratum of clay, it rose to the surface, and formed the source of a rivulet supplying the owner's house, garden, &c. The Metropolitan Board of Works, in pursuance of their powers under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 112, and in order to drain a district within the limits of their commission, constructed a sewer along the highway at a short distance from the pond, cutting through the beds of clay and gravel, and thereby draining and diverting the percolating water, so as to leave the pond and rivulet permanently dry:—Held, that the case was to be treated as though the pond had never been in existence, and that the owner was not, therefore, entitled to compensation for the abstraction of the water. Reg. v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 3 B. & S. 710; 32 L. J., Q. B. 105; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1008; 11 W. R. 492.

The Metropolitan Board of Works constructed a sewer on the high road, and the Lewisham District Board made a branch sewer running into it. The combined effect of the two was, to drain an ornamental pond and rivulet on the adjoining lands of the plaintiff:—Held, first, that neither of the boards was, in respect to the diversion of the water, to be treated as clothed with the rights or obligations of adjoining landowners. Stainton v. Woolrych, 23 Beav. 225; 26 L. J., Ch. 300; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 257.

Held, secondly, that they had not exceeded their statutory right, so as to be liable to be restrained by injunction. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that if either of the boards was producing injury to the plaintiff by the unskilful or improper construction of the sewer, the court would interfere to prevent it. Ib.

Held, fourthly, that such not being the case, the rights of the plaintiff were limited to a claim for compensation under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 112, s. 50, and 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 86. Ib.

Compulsory Purchase of Lands—Making of Streets.]—By certain local acts power was given to trustees to purchase land to make a road, paying the owners a rent; land was so acquired from the plaintiffs' predecessors, and a rent paid for it till 1863; in that year, by the Metropolis Roads Act, 1863, so much of the road as was within any of certain parishes was to be maintained by that parish, "and all quit rents and other outgoings payable in respect thereof" to be paid as part of the expenses of maintaining the same. Part of the land acquired from the plaintiffs' ancestors was in a parish:—Held, that an action lay for the rent, but that only a proportionate part of the rent could be recovered from the parish. Sansom v. St. Leonard's, Shoreditch, 38 L. J., C. P. 286; L. R. 4 C. P. 654; 18 W. R. 40.

By an act of 1877, with which the Lands Clauses Act was incorporated, the Metropolitan Board of Works were authorised to effect certain street improvements, and by s. 5 were authorised to "enter upon, take, use, and hold" any of the lands in the deposited plans and books of reference, with the exception of certain specified lands. By s. 33, after reciting that it was expedient to make provision for the accommodation of such of the labouring classes as would be displaced by the improvements, the board were directed to acquire or appropriate lands, and sell them or let them on building lease for the purpose of the erection of suitable houses for the labouring classes. And it was provided that before the board should, without the consent of one of the secretaries of state, "take for the purposes of this act" fifteen houses or more occupied at the passing of the act wholly or partially by persons of the labouring classes, they should prove to the satisfaction of such secretary of state that suitable accommodation had been provided elsewhere for the same number of persons as had been accommodated in the houses to be taken. The board served on the plaintiff notice to treat for the purchase of more than fifteen houses belonging to him, which were occupied at the passing of the act by the labouring classes. The plaintiff sent in his claim, without prejudice to any question as to the right of the board to exercise their powers before complying with the proviso of s. 33. The board then served notice of their intention to summon a jury. It was admitted that the conditions of the proviso had not yet been complied with. The plaintiff brought his action to restrain the board from proceeding on their notices till they had complied with the conditions: — Held, by Chitty, J., that the word "take" in the proviso was not confined to taking possession, but included purchasing, and that the board ought to be restrained from taking any steps to acquire a title to the land till they had complied with the conditions precedent. An injunction was therefore granted. But on appeal, held, by Jessel, M.R., and Bowen, L.J. (dissentiente Cotton, L.J.), that as the conditions precedent to taking the plaintiff's land were conditions which the board were able and compellable to comply with, the land in question was land which the board were "authorised to purchase or take" within the meaning of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, s. 18, and that they were entitled to serve a notice to treat and summon a jury. Spencer v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 52 L. J., Ch. 249; 22 Ch. D. 142; 47 L. T. 459; 31 W. R. 347—C. A.

Held, by Jessel, M.R., and Bowen, L.J., that the prohibition against "taking" the land till the conditions had been complied with did not prohibit the board from taking before such compliance any proceeding prior to the conveyance, Jessel, M.R., giving no opinion whether they were prohibited from taking a conveyance or only from taking possession, and Bowen, L.J. (with whom on this point Cotton, L.J., concurred), holding that the getting a conveyance from the landlord without entering into possession, came within the meaning of the word "take":—Held, therefore, by Jessel, M.R., and Bowen, L.J. (dissentiente Cotton, L.J.), that the injunction must be dissolved. Ib.

—— Time for Summoning Jury.]—The authorities of the city of London seeking to take property under powers given by 10 & 11 Vict. c. cclxxx., respecting which they have given notice to treat, are bound to summon a jury within a resonable time after receiving particulars of the plaintiff's claim. Nor is it any reason for refusing or delaying to do so, that the plaintiff's only interest in the lands sought to be taken is a residue of a few months in an unexpired term. Reg. v. London Corporation, Mathew, Ex parte, 16 L. T. 673.

—— Action for Mandamus to compel Board to issue Warrant to Sheriff—Declaration, sufficiency of—Notice to Treat given under mistaken belief.]—By 57 Geo. 3, c. xxix., ss. 80 & 82 (taken along with 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 90), the defendants are authorised to alter, widen, &c., streets, &c., within the parish and "if any houses, walls, &c., shall be adjudged" by them "to project into, obstruct, or prevent them from so altering, turning, widening, &c., the said streets, &c., and that the possession, occupation, and purchase of such houses, walls, &c., will be necessary for that purpose"; they are to treat with the owners for their purchase, and if the owners refuse to treat the vestry is empowered, and they are thereby "required to issue" their warrant to the sheriff for having the value of the houses, &c., assessed by a jury. In an action for a mandamus to compel the defendants to issue their warrant, a declaration which avers that defendants had given plaintiff notice to treat, is not bad, because it does not allege that the house had been adjudged to project into, obstruct, or prevent defendants from altering the streets, or that the possession, occupation, and purchase of the house was necessary for altering, &c., the streets. Birch v. St. Marylebone Vestry, 20 L. T. 697; 17 W. R. 1014.

Quære, whether it would not have been a sufficient reply to the action, that the defendants gave the notice to treat under a mistaken belief in the existence of the circumstances necessary to give them power to purchase. Ib.

The fact that the vestry is a public body does not exempt them from the obligation imposed by a notice to treat. Ib.

The statute containing no provision that the owner or occupier should give particulars of his estate and interest, pleas that such particulars were not given were held bad on demurrer. Ib.

—— Paving—Petition for Payment out of Purchase-money—Jurisdiction as to Costs.]—The court of chancery has jurisdiction under s. 89 of the Metropolitan Paving Act (57 Geo. 3, c. xxix.), to order payment of the costs of a petition for payment out, and to separate accounts of the purchase-money of houses taken by a vestry under the powers of the act for the purpose of widening a street. Saunders' Estate, In re, L. R. 8 Eq. 681.

—— Time for Proceedings.]—The limitation section (136) in 57 Geo. 3, c. xxix., overrides those in the various existing local paving acts. The time of commencing proceedings, therefore, for anything done under any local paving act, is confined to three months from the time of the fact committed. Burns v. Carter, 5 Bing. 429; 3 M. & P. 1; 7 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 161.

—— Construction of Sewers.]—The commissioners of sewers are not entitled under 57 Geo. 3, c. xxix., s. 80, to adjudge the whole of a house to be "necessary" to be taken for the widening of a street, and to take in pursuance of such adjudication—when in fact only a portion of the house physically obstructs such widening—with the object of reselling the remainder of the house at an increased price, and so enabling a scheme for widening the street to be carried out, the "necessity" contemplated by the act being a purely physical necessity. The right of pre-emption given by s. 96 of the same act to the persons from whom lands have been purchased under the powers of the act, is not taken away by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 91, s. 54. Thomas v. Daw, (L. R. 2 Ch. 1) and Galloway v. London Corporation (L. R. 1 H. L. 34) distinguished. Gard v. Sewers Commissioners, 49 L. T. 325.

—— Expenses—Interim Investments.]—The court has jurisdiction, under ss. 84 and 89 of the General Metropolitan Paving Act (57 Geo. 3, c. xxix.), to order payment of the costs of an interim investment in consols (including the costs of a petition for the purpose) of purchase-money of land taken by a board of works under the powers of the act. Mercerон, In re, 47 L. J., Ch. 114; 7 Ch. D. 184; 38 L. T. 15; 26 W. R. 187.

The court will allow an investment in metropolitan consolidated stock (under 34 & 35 Vict. c. 47, s. 13) of purchase-money paid into court by a school board. Redhead, In re, 39 L. T. 60.

Abolition of Office—Emoluments.]—The services of a clerk of the works to paving commissioners were discontinued, and he ceased to act as their clerk. The powers of the commissioners having been determined in 1856 by 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, he applied for compensation for the loss of his office to the district board of works, who rejected his application on the ground that he was not an officer of the commissioners at the time of the act coming into force. He appealed to the Metropolitan Board of Works, who made an order awarding compensation for the loss of emoluments as such officer arising from the passing of the act:—Held, that the question whether he was an officer or not was necessarily within the jurisdiction of the Metropolitan Board of Works as a court of appeal. Reg. v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 8 El. & Bl. 529; 27 L. J., Q. B. 5; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 25.

The Metropolitan Bridges Act, 1877, provided that compensation should be paid to certain officers, including clerks, but not including solicitors, of the private companies or corporations whose bridges were taken over by the Metropolitan Board of Works under the act, upon a scale to be calculated on the basis of the emoluments actually received by them in the two years previous to the passing of the act. The Deptford Creek Bridge was taken over by the board, and thereby the plaintiff, who had been clerk to the Deptford Creek Bridge Company, lost his office. He had received a salary as clerk, and also payments for legal business done by him as solicitor for the company, and commission on the rents of the company's property which he received. The Deptford Creek Bridge Company had by their act power to appoint a solicitor and receiver as well as a clerk; they had never appointed such officers, and the legal business of the company had always been done and the rents received by the clerk, who had always been a solicitor:—Held, that, by the practice of the company, these duties had been attached to the office of clerk, and that the plaintiff was entitled to compensation in respect of the payments received for discharging them as part of the emoluments of his office; but, as to the payments for legal business done by him, only in respect of his proportion as partner in the firm of solicitors of the net profits after deducting all office expenses necessarily incurred in earning the money. Drew v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 50 L. T. 138—C. A.

Held, also, that the board were not entitled to have the bills of costs taxed before the amount of compensation was assessed, as the bills had been paid by the company without taxation. Ib.

Proceeding by Arbitration—Time for.]—A proceeding for settling by arbitration the amount of compensation payable by the Metropolitan Board of Works in respect of land and buildings damaged by the sewage works of such board, under the powers of their act, is not a proceeding against the board within 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 106, which limits the time for issuing process or instituting any proceeding against such board for anything done under the powers of the board under their acts. Delany v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 37 L. J., C. P. 59; L. R. 3 C. P. 111; 17 L. T. 262; 16 W. R. 137—Ex. Ch.

—— Jurisdiction where Liability Disputed.]—The 69th section of the Metropolitan Commissioners of Sewers Act (11 & 12 Vict. c. 112), which provides that compensation shall be made to persons damaged by the exercise of the powers of the act, and "in case of dispute as to amount, the same shall be settled by arbitration in the manner provided by this act," does not give jurisdiction to proceed by arbitration in a case in which the commissioners dispute their liability to make any compensation. Reg. v. Sewers Commissioners, 22 L. J., Q. B. 234; 1 W. R. 286.

2. OF SURVEYORS, CONTRACTORS, &C.

Repairs by Contractor — Subsequent Subsidence.]—The defendant, under a contract with the Metropolitan Board of Works, opened a public highway, not being a turnpike road, in a metropolitan parish, for the purpose of constructing a sewer; three or four months after the work was finished damage ensued by the plaintiff's horse stumbling in a hole in the road. The filling in of the road had been properly done by the defendant, and the hole was owing to the natural subsidence of the materials which sometimes takes place sooner or later, after such an excavation:—Held, that he was not liable for the damage; for that, there being no clause in the Metropolitan Management Acts directly applicable to such a case, the obligation of the defendant, as between him and the public, ceased as soon as he had properly reinstated the road, it being the duty of the parish authorities to look after the subsequent repairs, whether rendered necessary by subsidence or ordinary wear and tear. Hyams v. Webster, 8 B. & S. 272; 36 L. J., Q. B. 166; L. R. 2 Q. B. 264; 16 L. T. 118; 15 W. R. 619. Affirmed on appeal, 38 L. J., Q. B. 21; L. R. 4 Q. B. 138; 17 W. R. 232—Ex. Ch.

Delegate of Board—Public Nuisance.]—A district board of works being a public body cannot delegate its powers; and, therefore, a third person, though acting with their licence and under the superintendence of their surveyor, cannot justify himself for acts creating a public nuisance, although the acts so done are within their statutory powers and would be legal if done by themselves. Quære, as to the construction of 21 & 22 Vict. c. 104, s. 24. Head v. Bush, 13 W. R. 651.

Contract with Owner of Premises.]—The owner of premises within 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, was authorised under s. 77, to make a drain from his house into one of the public sewers. He employed a contractor to do the work, and in the course of doing it a trench was cut across the public footway, which was afterwards insufficiently reinstated, and in consequence a party sustained an injury:—Held, that the owner of the premises as well as the contractor was liable, by reason of the statutory duty cast on the owner to reinstate the highway properly. Gray v. Pullen, 5 B. & S. 970; 34 L. J., Q. B. 265; 11 L. T. 569; 13 W. R. 257—Ex. Ch.

Held, also, that the penalty imposed by s. 111 was cumulative, and did not take away the right of action. Ib.

Injury to Premises—Damages or Compensation.]—If in carrying out the working of a sewer authorised to be made by 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 135, due and proper care is not used, and in consequence of the want of such due and proper care damage is done to property, the owner of such property is entitled to bring an action, and is not put to his compensation under ss. 135, 225. Clothier v. Webster, 12 C. B. (N.S.) 790; 31 L. J., C. P. 316; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 231; 6 L. T. 461; 10 W. R. 624.

Notice of Action—Persons Entitled to.]—If an act of trespass complained of was done with a bonâ fide intention to pursue the directions of the former Building Act, 14 Geo. 3, c. 78, though not justified by it, the defendant was entitled to notice of action. Wells v. Oddy, 2 C. M. & R. 128, 184; 7 Car. & P. 22; 1 Gale, 137; 5 Tyr. 725; 3 D. P. C. 799; 4 L. J., Ex. 149.

By 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, s. 108, no writ or process shall be sued out against any district surveyor, or other person for anything done or intended to be done under the provisions of the act until one month after notice; and every such action shall be brought within six months after the accrual of the cause of action. By s. 83 (8) a building owner has a right to cut into any party structure upon condition of making good all damage occasioned to the adjoining premises by such operation. By s. 94, a building owner who fails to make good any damage he may occasion to adjoining premises by works authorised to be executed by him incurs a penalty not exceeding 20*l.* for each day during which such failure continues. The defendant in fulfilling a contract with a building owner to build a house adjoining a house of the plaintiff, so negligently dug the ground for the foundation of the house about to be built, and underpinned the party-wall, that the plaintiff's house was injured:—Held, that the words "other person," in s. 108, included only official persons discharging official duties cast upon them by the act, or persons doing some act in respect of which they were performing or intending to perform a statutory duty, and that the defendant therefore was not entitled to notice of action under that section. Williams v. Golding, 1 H. & R. 18; 35 L. J., C. P. 1; L. R. 1 C. P. 69; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 952; 13 L. T. 291; 14 W. R. 60.

A contractor employed by the Metropolitan Board of Works to enlarge a sewer running into a tidal creek, erected a dam in the sewer, the water above which was removed by pumping. Owing to his negligence in not working the pumps, the sewage flowed back into the plaintiff's premises and injured them. No notice had been given to the contractor before commencing the action:—Held, that the injury was occasioned by acts "done or intended to be done under the powers of the Metropolitan Board of Works," within the 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 106; and that he, therefore, was entitled to a notice of action. Poulsum v. Thirst, 36 L. J., C. P. 225; L. R. 2 C. P. 449; 16 L. T. 324; 15 W. R. 766.

—— Person erecting Urinal by Direction of Vestry Officer—Authority of Officer.]—By the directions of an officer of a vestry, the defendant in the honest belief that such officer was authorised to give such directions, erected a urinal on the wall of the plaintiff, such a work being within the powers of the vestry under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 88. The officer had no express orders to do the work, but the parish afterwards paid the expenses of it:—Held, that the defendant was a person within the meaning of 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 106, entitled to notice of action. Chambers v. Reid, 13 L. T. 703; 14 W. R. 370.

Held, also, that the words in 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 106, "their or any of their directors" are not to be limited to the "board or vestry," but to be extended to the words following, "clerk, surveyor, contractor, officer," &c. Ib.

—— Negligence.]—The defendant was a contractor engaged in making a sewer for a vestry; one of his men who was employed to take care of a horse and cart, and who had no right to go home to dinner or leave the horse and cart, took them to his house and left them outside while he dined. The horse ran off and damaged the plaintiff's railings:—Held, first, that there was evidence to warrant the jury in finding that the man was in the defendant's employ at the time of the negligence and accident. Whatman v. Pearson, 37 L. J., C. P. 156; L. R. 3 C. P. 422; 18 L. T. 290; 16 W. R. 649.

Held, secondly, that the defendant was not entitled to notice of action under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 106. Ib.

Actions within Three Months.]—The 14 Geo. 3, c. 78, s. 100, limited actions to be brought within three months. A. had begun to build a party-wall, partly on the soil of B., more than three months before the action, but had not completed it till within that time:—Held, that B. might recover for such part of the trespass as was committed within the time limited; but that, if nothing had been done within the three months, he must have brought ejectment. Trotter v. Simpson, 5 Car. & P. 51.

I. WHAT ARE MINERALS.

Freestone.]—In a conveyance of land in Northumberland, a reservation was made to the grantor of all "mines or seams of coal, and other mines, metals or minerals," under the land granted, with liberty to dig, bore, work, lead, and carry away the same, and to make pits, &c. :—Held, that the term "minerals" included freestone, but that the grantor had liberty only to get the freestone by underground mining, and not by working in an open quarry. Bell v. Wilson, 35 L. J., Ch. 337; L. R. 1 Ch. 303; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 263; 14 L. T. 115; 14 W. R. 493.

Slate.]—A testator bequeathed to his wife all shares in mines of which he should die possessed. At the date both of the bequest and of his death he was possessed of shares in a Welsh slate company, but other than these of no shares in mines. The slate worked by this company had at first been obtained by open quarrying, but for several years back the excavations in the stratum had become so steep as to make it necessary to carry on the works by means of ordinary underground mining operations. The slate works were rated to the relief of the poor, whereas mines are exempt from such rating :—Held, that these slate works came under the definition of a mine, such definition depending upon the mode of working, and not upon the material obtained from the mine; and that the intention of the testator being also regarded, the shares passed under the bequest. Cleveland v. Meyrick, 37 L. J., Ch. 125; 17 L. T. 238; 16 W. R. 104.

Stone.]—A canal company was empowered by act of parliament to prevent the owners of land adjoining the canal from working the mines and minerals within ten yards of it, but was required to give compensation for stopping any such workings :—Held, that stone used for mending roads, and worked by quarrying from the surface, was within the description of mines and minerals. Midland Ry. v. Checkley, 36 L. J., Ch. 380; L. R. 4 Eq. 19; 16 L. T. 260; 15 W. R. 671.

Stones got from quarries are minerals. Micklethwait v. Winter, 6 Ex. 644; 20 L. J., Ex. 313.

Granite—Open Working.]—By an inclosure act passed in 1812, certain common lands in Wales were allotted, an allotment being made to the king as lord of the manor in respect of his right to the soil. The act gave the commissioners of woods and forests the right to sell the allotment made to the king, subject to the rights of the king to the "mines, ores, minerals, coal, limestone, or matter whatsoever," in or under the same; and contained a proviso reserving to the king his rights to any "mines, ores, minerals, coal, limestone, or slate" in the common land, and all rights and royalties previously belonging to the king, and gave a right of compensation to the owners of the land for any damage done in digging, raising and carrying away such mines, &c.:—Held, that the word "minerals" included granite, and (Fry, L.J., doubting) that the crown was entitled to win the granite by open workings. Att.-Gen. v. Welsh Granite Co., 35 W. R. 617—C. A.

Limestone.]—In an agreement for a partition of lands, and in the deeds carrying out the agreement, the mines of lead and coal, and other mines and minerals, were excepted: and in another part of the deed it was agreed that the profits of the mines excepted should be taken between the parties according to their respective estates:—Held, that minerals meant substances of a mineral character which could only be worked by means of mines as distinguished from quarries, and that limestone quarries out of the surface were not within the exception. Darrill v. Roper, 3 Drew. 294; 24 L. J., Ch. 779; 3 W. R. 467.

"Minerals" in ss. 77 and 78 of the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 20), includes minerals which are got by open quarrying. Limestone is a mineral within the same sections. Midland Ry. v. Robinson, 59 L. J., Ch. 442; 15 App. Cas. 19; 62 L. T. 194; 38 W. R. 577; 54 J. P. 580—H. L. (E.)

In a fee-farm grant of lands with the appurtenances, reserving to the grantor all mines and minerals:—Held, that beds of limestone are included in the definition of "mines and minerals," whether got by quarrying or surface working. Hext v. Gill (L. R. 7 Ch. 699), considered and approved. Fishbourne v. Hamilton, 25 L. R. Ir. 483—C. A.

Coprolites.]—Coprolites beneath the surface of a copyhold tenement are minerals. Att.-Gen. v. Tomline, 46 L. J., Ch. 654; 5 Ch. D. 750; 36 L. T. 684; 25 W. R. 802.

Clay.]—The word "mines" in s. 77 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, includes minerals, whether got by underground or by open workings; and therefore a bed of clay, on which the railway had been made, was as a mine, excepted out of the conveyance of the land to the railway company, and might, unless the company were willing to make compensation to the landowner, be dug and worked by him. Midland Ry. v. Haunchwood Brick and Tile Co., 51 L. J., Ch. 778; 20 Ch. D. 552; 46 L. T. 301; 30 W. R. 640.

Clay is a mineral within the meaning of s. 77 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845. Loosemore v. Tiverton and North Devon Ry., 51 L. J., Ch. 570; 22 Ch. D. 25; 47 L. T. 151; 30 W. R. 628.

Sect. 18 of the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847, provides that "the undertakers shall not be entitled to any mines of coal, ironstone, slate, or other minerals under any land purchased by them." The appellants, by virtue of the act and a conveyance containing a reservation of the "whole coal and other minerals in the land in terms of the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847," purchased from the respondent a parcel of land for the purpose of erecting waterworks. Under the land was a seam of valuable brick clay. The respondent worked this clay in the adjoining land, and having reached the appellants' boundary, claimed the right to work out the clay under the land purchased by the appellants:—Held (Lord Herschell, diss.), that common clay, forming the surface or subsoil of land, was not included in the reservation in the act, and that the appellants were entitled to an interdict restraining the respondent from working the clay under the land purchased by them. Glasgow (Lord Provost) v. Farie, 58 L. J., P. C. 33; 13 App. Cas. 657; 60 L. T. 274; 37 W. R. 627—H. L. (Sc.)

Brick-Earth and Clay.]—A conveyance in fee of land reserved "all mines of coal, culm, iron and all other mines and minerals whatsoever except stone quarries," with power to work the same, and to make roads, watercourses, and other works, through, over, or upon the land, for the purpose of raising and carrying away the coal, culm, iron, or other minerals, provided that the surface or soil of the land should not be disturbed without the previous consent in writing of the grantee, his heirs or assigns, except only for the making, constructing, repairing, and using one road only, and one watercourse only, for all or any of the purposes aforesaid, the grantor, his heirs or assigns, doing as little damage as might be to the surface of the lands, and making compensation for all such damage. The defendants obtained from the owners of the land the right to put down a sewer which passed through a bed of brick-earth and clay. The plaintiff, as owner of the reserved minerals, claimed compensation for the damage he had sustained and might sustain by reason of the acts of the defendants, and obtained an award in his favour under the Public Health Act, 1875. In an action on the award:—Held, applying the rule of construction laid down in Hext v. Gill (L. R. 7 Ch. 699), that, there being nothing in the context to show that the reservation should have a more limited meaning, it included brick-earth and clay, which were substances which could be got from underneath the surface of the earth for the purpose of profit; that the plaintiff, therefore, was owner of the brick-earth and clay, and was entitled to compensation. Jersey (Earl) v. Neath Union, 58 L. J., Q. B. 573; 22 Q. B. D. 555; 37 W. R. 388; 53 J. P. 404—C. A.

A lease for lives renewable, and a fee farm grant into which it was subsequently converted, reserved all mines of lead, ore, tin, and other minerals, coal, and all quarries of marble, freestone, limestone, and building-stones, slates, and other quarries whatsoever, . . . as also all marl, fuller's earth, bogs, turfs, mosses, and turbaries:—Held, that brick clay lying about fifteen inches below the surface was included in the reservation. Shaftesbury v. Wallace, [1897] 1 Ir. R. 381.

Clay and Sand.]—The Act of Settlement of the Isle of Man, 1703, confirmed to the tenants their customary estates of inheritance, "saving always all mines and minerals, of what kind and nature soever, quarries and delfs of flag, slate or stone":—Held, that a custom by the tenants to dig for clay and sand did not contravene the saving clause, and that such tenants were entitled to dig for clay and sand. Att.-Gen. (Isle of Man) v. Mylchreest, 48 L. J., P. C. 36; 4 App. Cas. 294; 40 L. T. 764.

II. RIGHTS TO.

1. Of Crown.

Passing by Grant.]—A grant by letters-patent by the crown as lord of the manor of "all those coal mines found, or to be found, within the commons, waste grounds, or marshes within the lordship," &c., with a proviso that the grant should be construed strictly against the crown, and most strictly and beneficially for the grantee, passes coal lying under the foreshore of the estuary of the River Dee, between high and low water marks, and forming part of the manor. Att.-Gen. v. Hammer, 27 L. J., Ch. 837; 6 W. R. 804.

The prerogative right of the crown to gold and silver found in mines will not pass under a grant of land from the crown unless the intention that it shall so pass is expressed by apt and precise words. Woolley v. Att.-Gen. (Victoria), 46 L. J., P. C. 18; 2 App. Cas. 163; 36 L. T. 121; 25 W. R. 852.

The act for regulating the sale of waste land belonging to the crown in the Australian colonies (5 & 6 Vict. c. 36) contains no reference to the rights of the crown in the precious metals to be found under the soil:—Held, that the statute has not so modified the common law that a sale of waste lands under it must be taken to include a grant of the gold and silver that may be found under the lands so sold. Ib.

Gold Mine—Gold mixed with base Metals.]—The relaxation in favour of the subject of the royal prerogative in respect of royal mines, which was effected by the acts 1 Wm. & M. c. 30 and 5 Wm. & M. c. 6, does not apply to a mine which is worked simply as a gold mine, even though the gold is found mixed with the ores of the baser metals mentioned in the acts, if the quantity of the baser metals is so small as to be valueless for the purpose of working. In such a case the ancient prerogative of the crown remains unaffected, and the mine cannot be worked by a subject, even on his own land, without the licence of the crown. Att.-Gen. v. Morgan, 60 L. J., Ch. 126; [1891] 1 Ch. 432; 64 L. T. 403; 39 W. R. 324—C. A.

—— Right of Pre-emption.]—In cases to which the acts apply the crown cannot be called upon to exercise the right of pre-emption given to it by the act until the ore has been "washed and made clean and merchantable." It is not sufficient to offer the crown quartz rock in the rough just as brought up from the mine. Att.-Gen. v. Morgan, 59 L. J., Ch. 772; [1891] 1 Ch. 432; 63 L. T. 337; 39 W. R. 169.

Lease by.]—A lease granted by the crown of all mines in the province of Nova Scotia:—Held, to include mines in the island of Cape Breton. Taylor v. Att.-Gen., 8 Sim. 413.

2. Of Ecclesiastical Persons.

Parson cannot open without Consent.]—The parson, with the consent of the patron and ordinary, may cut timber and open mines. Marlborough (Duke) v. St. John, 5 De G. & Sm. 174; 21 L. J., Ch. 381; 16 Jur. 310.

The incumbent of a living cannot open mines without the consent of the patron and ordinary. Holden v. Weeches, 1 John. & H. 278; 30 L. J., Ch. 35; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1288; 3 L. T. 437; 9 W. R. 94.

Quære, whether he can do so with such consent without the sanction of the ecclesiastical commissioners. Ib.

Restraining Opening.]—The patron of the living is the proper person to institute a suit to restrain the opening of mines, and generally the only proper person, but, semble, the ordinary may take proceedings to prevent waste by collusion between the patron and incumbent. Ib.

The patron's right is only to restrain further waste, and does not extend to an account of past profits before the filing of the bill. Ib.

Upon a bill by patron to have an agreement between himself and the incumbent for opening and working mines declared void and cancelled, and to restrain future working, the court declared that the workings were not lawful, and that the proceeds ought to be laid out for the permanent benefit of the living; but being of opinion that if duly authorised the workings would be beneficial to the living, directed an inquiry what steps should be taken to obtain the concurrence of all necessary parties, and gave liberty to continue the workings in the meantime, subject to account. Ib.

Lessee for years sans waste, remainder in fee to a bishop. Lessee enjoined from digging the ground for brick. London (Bishop) v. Webb, 1 P. W. 527.

Presumption of Grant.]—The coal under parts of the glebe of a vicarage had at different times since 1756, with the consent of the vicars for the time being, been gotten by the persons working adjoining collieries, and royalties had been paid to the vicars for the time being, the working being conducted solely by underground passages from the adjoining collieries without entering on the surface of the glebe:—Held, that no presumption could be drawn from these facts that there had been any grant authorising the vicars to open mines. Bartlett v. Phillips, 4 De G. & J. 414.

Contract for Sale of Lands.]—A contract for the sale of lands, with their appurtenances, belonging to a rectory, was entered into under 38 Geo. 3, c. 60, and 39 Geo. 3, c. 6, which enabled ecclesiastical corporations to sell lands for the redemption of land tax. Before the payment of the purchase-money into the Bank of England, as directed by the acts, and the execution of the conveyance, the 39 Geo. 3, c. 21, was passed, which enacted that all minerals under lands belonging to any ecclesiastical corporation which should be sold, should be absolutely excepted and reserved; and that the provisions of that act should, in the execution of the former acts, be applied as if they had been specially enacted in those acts:—Held, that the minerals passed to the purchaser. Wilson v. Grey, 36 L. J., Ch. 62; L. R. 3 Eq. 117.

The 39 Geo. 3, c. 21, s. 12, in effect provides that upon sales of lands by ecclesiastical corporations for redemption of land tax, the minerals shall not pass by the conveyance of the lands, but shall be always absolutely excepted or reserved to such ecclesiastical corporations. A conveyance of prebendal land, executed under this statute in 1799, contained a general exception of minerals, but purported to except out of such exception the clay under twenty perches of the land:—Held, that the exception out of the exception was not rendered effectual by 57 Geo. 3, c. 100, s. 25, for that act was intended to remedy defects in the mode of conveyance, and not in the subject-matter conveyed, and that the property in the clay under the twenty perches did not pass by the deed of 1799. Whidborne v. Ecclesiastical Commissioners, 47 L. J., Ch. 129; 7 Ch. D. 375; 37 L. T. 346.

3. Of Tenants in Common.

Sharing Profits.]—Where one of two tenants in common of coal mines is sole owner of the surface on which their tenant has sunk a shaft, the profits arising from landing foreign coal through that shaft do not belong exclusively to the owner of the surface, but must be shared by both co-tenants. Clegg v. Clegg, 8 Giff. 322; 31 L. J., Ch. 153; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 92; 5 L. T. 441; 10 W. R. 75.

Working.]—It is not destructive waste for a tenant in common of a coal mine to get, or to licence another to get, the coals, he, the working tenant, not appropriating to himself more than his share of the proceeds. Job v. Potton, 44 L. J., Ch. 262; L. R. 20 Eq. 84; 32 L. T. 110; 23 W. R. 588.

The plaintiff, a tenant in common of a coal mine, had notice of a negotiation, which was followed by a lease for three years (in which he did not join) by his two co-tenants, dated in December, 1865, of two undivided thirds of the coal with licence to work the coal. Under this licence some coal, but considerably less than two-thirds of the whole, was raised, and one-third of the royalty was kept by the license for the plaintiff. A negotiation for a further license was on foot, when, in October, 1872, the plaintiff filed a bill against his co-tenants and the licensee, praying for an inquiry as to the value of the coals raised, and an account against all the defendants as trespassers, for an injunction and receiver, and for damages:—Held, that the working was not a trespass, and the plaintiff electing to dismiss the bill with costs against his co-tenants, a decree was made without costs against the licensee for an account of the value, at the pit's mouth, of the coal raised less costs of getting and raising, and for payment of one-third to the plaintiff. Ib.

Contract to Lease.]—A contract by the owner of one undivided moiety of a colliery, for a lease of the whole colliery, will not (in the absence of fraud or collusion) be decreed to be specifically carried out as to his own moiety, either with or without compensation. Price v. Griffith, 1 De G. M. & G. 80; 21 L. J., Ch. 78; 15 Jur. 1093.

4. Of Tenants for Life.

Right of Working.]—Where a mine or quarry has been opened for a restricted or definite purpose, as to obtain fuel, or as the means of repairing a particular tenement on the estate, that would not give a tenant for life, or other owner of an estate impeachable for waste, the right to work it for commercial profit. But when a mine or quarry is once open, so that the owner of an estate impeachable for waste may work it, the sinking of a new pit on the same vein, or the breaking ground in a new place on the same rock, is not necessarily the opening of a new mine or a new quarry. Elias v. Snowdon Slate Quarries Co., 48 L. J., Ch. 811; 4 App. Cas. 454; 41 L. T. 289; 28 W. R. 54—H. L. (E.)

Where the lease of a quarry reserves, not the payment of a fixed sum by way of rent, but a share of the profits of the quarry, it is to be treated as opened for purposes of commerce. Ib.

One seised in fee conveys the lands and all trees and mines to trustees in fee to the use of A. for life, remainder over. A. cannot open the mines or cut down the trees. Whitfield v. Bewit, 2 P. W. 242.

Tenant for life not entitled to get stone from quarries on the settled estates (except for repairs, &c.), nor to open or work any mines of coal or minerals not opened or in work at death of testator. Ferrand v. Wilson, infra.

A tenant for life has a right to work clay pits (for making bricks), if they had been worked by the author of the settlement; but he has no right to open them himself. If they had been abandoned by the settlor, whether the tenant for life can work them, quære. Viner v. Vaughan, 2 Beav. 466.

A tenant for life of coal mines may open new pits or shafts for the working old veins of coals; for it is hazardous to grant an injunction to stay the working of a coal mine, as it may ruin the colliery for ever. So one seised of lands, wherein there are coal mines not opened, settled those lands on A. in tail, remainder to B. for life. A. opened the mines and worked them, and died without issue; B. may continue to work all the mines lawfully opened. Clavering v. Clavering, 2 P. W. 388; Sel. Ch. Ca. 79; Mos. 219.

A tenant for life, impeachable for waste, may properly work opened mines; whether he may also work dormant or abandoned mines must depend upon the circumstances under which, and the period of time during which, the mines have been abandoned. The cutting of timber also by him does not necessarily amount to waste. Bagot v. Bagot, 32 Beav. 509; 33 L. J., Ch. 116; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1022; 9 L. T. 217; 12 W. R. 35.

Semble, that a mine, the working of which had been discontinued for twenty or thirty years in consequence of its not having been remunerative, might after that time be worked by a succeeding tenant for life; but a mine, where the working of it has been abandoned by the owner of the inheritance for the advantage of the property, cannot be worked by a succeeding tenant for life. Ib.

A mine not worked for twelve months, or two years previously to the tenant for life coming into possession, must be considered as an open mine; but a mine which has not been worked for a hundred years cannot be properly so treated. Ib.

A lease was granted of two seams of coal, and all other the seam and seams of coal under an estate. After the death of the grantor, a third seam, lying under the two seams, was discovered, which could only be worked by opening a new shaft:—Held, as between the tenant for life and remainderman, under the will of the lessor, that the working of this new seam was not opening a new mine. Spencer v. Scurr, 31 Beav. 334; 31 L. J., Ch. 808; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 9; 10 W. R. 878.

Restraining Working.]—If a person only threaten to open mines, plaintiff may come into court to restrain him from doing it. Gibson v. Smith, 2 Atk. 182.

It is not necessary to stay till waste is actually committed, where the intention appears, and the person insists on his right to do it. Ib.

Though no proof appears of waste, yet, if tenant for life insists on a right to do it and has none, the reversioner may have an injunction. Ib.

Right to Proceeds.]—Tenant in tail entitled to moneys realised by tenant for life from stone not used for repairs and minerals from newly opened mines. Ferrand v. Wilson, 4 Hare, 388; 15 L. J., Ch. 41; 9 Jur. 860.

A client devised all his real estates in such manner that the plaintiff was entitled in tail in remainder expectant on a life estate. The plaintiff by his bill, which impeached the purchase by the solicitor, offered to confirm certain sales of minerals which had been made by the solicitor after the death of the client:—Held, that the plaintiff having adopted the sales of the minerals, could not claim to be entitled in præsenti to the moneys arising from them on the ground that the working mines was an act of waste, but was entitled to them only after the death of the tenant for life. Gresley v. Mousley, 3 De G. F. & J. 433; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 320; 6 L. T. 86; 10 W. R. 222.

Where a tenant for life has committed waste by opening mines, the produce of the mines belongs to the remainderman, and the tenant for life is not even entitled to the interest; but if the remainderman adopts the acts of the tenant for life for other purposes, he may be debarred from enforcing his rights to that extent. Ib.

Real estates were limited to A., the eldest son of the settlor for life; remainder to his first and other sons in tail male; remainder to B., C. and D., the second and other sons of the settlor for life; remainder to their first and other sons, severally and successively, in tail male; with an ultimate remainder to the heirs of the settlor. The tenants for life were impeachable for waste. The settlor died in 1806. Upon his death, A., who was also his heir-at-law, entered into possession of the settled estates, and died in 1861 without issue. B. and C. died in A.'s lifetime without issue. D. had a son born in 1847, who thereupon became tenant-in-tail in remainder expectant upon the determination of the prior life estates. A. committed various acts of waste, by cutting timber and working unopened mines. Upon a bill by the infant tenant-in-tail to make the estate of the deceased tenant for life liable for the moneys improperly received, an inquiry was directed as to what timber had been improperly cut, and minerals improperly won, by the late tenant for life, distinguishing between timber which had been cut and minerals won, prior and subsequently to the birth of the plaintiff. Bagot v. Bagot, supra.

Rents and Royalties.]—Rents and royalties of brick-fields, one of which had been leased by the testator and the other by the trustees of his will under a power, belong to the tenant for life. Cowley (Earl) v. Wellesley, 35 Beav. 638.

The produce of gravel, loam, peat, and bog-earth sold by the trustees according to the course pursued by the testator, is income and not corpus. S. C., 35 Beav. 639.

A testator directed his trustees to pay to his wife "the whole annual produce and rents of the residue of his estates, both heritable and movable." Coal and iron mines were leased by the testator before his death. His trustees afterwards leased others. In a question whether the wife was entitled to the rents of those opened after the testator's death:—Held, that in law she was not entitled. Campbell v. Wardlaw, 8 App. Cas. 641—H. L. (Sc.)

5. Of Termors.

No express power to Work.] — Perpetual injunction granted to restrain the tenant of a farm, in part of which was a pool, through which ran a stream from the mountains, depositing in its passage mineral substances, from taking and carrying away from and out of the bed and bottom of the pool, or any part thereof, any soil, oxide of iron, ochre, shine deposits, or other mineral substances, and from puddling, loosening, disturbing, and floating, and from causing to be puddled, loosened, disturbed, or floated off any soil, oxide of iron, ochre, shine deposits, or mineral substances already deposited or thereafter to be deposited upon the beds of the said pool, the right of the plaintiffs to the several mineral substances having been established by a verdict in an action at law brought by them against the defendant, and not in an issue or action directed by the court. Thomas v. Jones, 1 Y. & Coll. C. C. 510. And see Liardet v. Johnson, Ib., 527, n.

Lessee committed waste by opening a mine, and continued to work into the other land of the lessor, not comprised in his lease. Injunction was granted as to both. Cited in Hanson v. Gardiner, 7 Ves. 308.

The jurisdiction against waste by injunction and account applied to trespass, by exceeding a limited right to enter and take stone from a quarry, being a destruction of the inheritance as in the case of timber, coal, &c., and the distinction between waste and trespass therefore disregarded. Thomas v. Oakley, 18 Ves. 184; 11 R. R. 181. See also Cowper (Earl) v. Baker, 17 Ves. 128. Grey v. Northumberland (Duke), 17 Ves. 281. Crockford v. Alexander, 15 Ves. 138; 10 R. R. 44. Mitchell v. Dors, 6 Ves. 147.

Lessee for years, sans waste, remainder in fee to a bishop: lessee enjoined from digging the ground for brick. London (Bishop) v. Webb, 1 P. W. 527.

A tenant for lives renewable for ever having demised for years part of the lands upon which there was at the time an open quarry, which he was in the habit of working for sale, without any reservation or exception in the sublease:—Held, the subtenant was not entitled to work the quarry for sale, and that his landlord had the right to enjoin him. There is no analogy between open quarries and mines. Mansfield v. Crawford, 9 Ir. Eq. R. 271.

The lands of A., on which there was an open quarry of limestone at the time of the demise, were demised for the term of three lives, renewable for ever, reserving to the lessor and his heirs all royalties. The lessee was restrained by injunction from raising the limestone for sale. Parcell v. Nash, 1 Jones, 625; 2 Jones, 116.

A lease of land (without mentioning mines) will entitle the lessee to work open but not unopened mines. If there are no open mines, a lease of land, together with all mines therein, will enable the lessee to open mines. If there are open mines, a lease of land with the mines will not extend to unopened mines. Clegg v. Rowland, 35 L. J., Ch. 396; L. R. 2 Eq. 160; 14 L. T. 217; 14 W. R. 530.

A termor of land, with no grant of a power to work quarries on the land, cannot open any in order to work them; but if the quarries have been worked before the commencement of the term, he may continue the working. Elias v. Snowdon Slate Quarries Co., 48 L. J., Ch. 811; 4 App. Cas. 454; 41 L. T. 289; 28 W. R. 54—H. L. (E.)

Where the lease of a quarry reserves, not the payment of a fixed sum by way of rent, but a share of the profits of the quarry, it is to be treated as opened for purposes of commerce. Ib.

Semble, where a mine or quarry has been opened for a restricted or definite purpose, as to obtain fuel, or the means of repairing a particular tenement on the estate, that would not give a tenant for life, or other owner of an estate impeachable for waste, the right to work it for commercial profit. But when a mine or quarry is once open, so that the owner of an estate impeachable for waste may work it, the sinking of a new pit on the same vein, or the breaking ground in a new place on the same rock, is not, necessarily, the opening of a new mine or a new quarry. Ib.

To enable a termor to work mines, it must be shewn that the reversioner had commenced the working of the mines with a view to making a profit; and there is no difference in this respect between a mine and a quarry. Elias v. Griffith, 8 Ch. D. 521; 38 L. T. 871; 26 W. R. 869.

In 1802 the owner of land demised it to a mortgagee for 500 years at a peppercorn rent. In 1811 the mortgagor granted a lease for twenty-one years to a third party of the mines and quarries under the land. Before that date a slate quarry had been opened and worked by the mortgagor on the property; and after that date, but at what time was uncertain, a second quarry was opened, and was worked till the commencement of the suit. In 1820 the mortgagee foreclosed the equity of redemption in the term of 500 years, and took possession of the property. In 1873 the reversioner on the term of 500 years, filed a bill to restrain the termor from working the slate quarries during the term, and for an account of profits:—Held, that if the quarries had been opened by the termor without the authority of the reversioner, he would have been entitled to the relief prayed, notwithstanding the lapse of time. Ib.

Held, also, that the result of the evidence was that both the quarries had been opened by the authority of the reversioner, and that the termor was, therefore, entitled to continue to work them for the remainder of the term. Ib.

An intermediate assignee of the term, who had not worked the quarries himself, but had received royalties under sub-leases granted before he came into possession, and had parted with his interest before the commencement of the suit, was held not to be liable to account either for the profits made, or for the royalties paid to him during his possession of the term. Ib.

6. In Cornwall.

In ejectment, for a mine and land in Cornwall, the defendant cannot defend for a right of entry to dig for mines, and take the minerals known there by the name of tin-bounds. Doe d. Falmouth (Earl) v. Alderson, 1 M. & W. 210; 4 D. P. C. 701; 1 Tyr. & G. 543; 5 L. J., Ex. 153.

Though the lord of a manor in Cornwall may by conveyance and acts of ownership establish his right to all tin mines within the manor, as well under the freehold tenements as under customary tenements, and the wastes; yet, consistently therewith, the tenants of certain tenements in a vill within the manor, some of them freehold and some customary, may, by acts of ownership for more than twenty years past, establish their right to copper mines, as well under the waste and customary lands as under the freehold lands within the vill. Curtis v. Daniel, 10 East, 273; 10 R. R. 291.

The rights of tin-bounders, according to the customary law of Cornwall, to use the water within their tin-bounds, for the purpose of streaming their tin, will not prevent the acquisition by another of a prescriptive right under 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 71, to the enjoyment of the water by a twenty years' user, nor will this right be affected by an agreement with the tin-bounders for a money payment to abstain from fouling the water by streaming their tin therein. Gaved v. Martyn, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 732; 34 L. J., C. P. 353; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 1017; 13 L. T. 74; 14 W. R. 62.

An ancient mine worked from a remote period by tin-bounders, under the custom of Cornwall, had from time immemorial been supplied with water by a stream originally artificial; and when the bounders ceased to work and mine, possession thereof was taken by the owners of the minerals:—Held, that the right thus acquired by prescription to the use of the water in question was the right of the owner of the minerals. Irimey v. Stocker, 34 L. J., Ch. 633; L. R. 1 Ch. 396; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 419; 14 L. T. 427; 14 W. R. 743.

7. In the Forest of Dean.

Line of Boundary.]—An award made under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 43, defined the southern boundaries of a level colliery thus: "commencing at the point where the level struck the coal, and extending in an eastward direction as deep as the level will drain." There was an old existing excavation (termed by miners a level), not horizontal, but running upward into the coal eastward from the point where it struck the coal bed. This excavation was described on the plan annexed to the award as the line of boundary:—Held, that this existing old level was the boundary meant by the award, and not an imaginary mathematical line drawn horizontally eastward from the point where the old excavation struck the coal. Brain v. Harris, 10 Ex. 908; 24 L. J., Ex. 177—Ex. Ch.

Subsequent Grant—Working.]—By virtue of an award made by the commissioners under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 43, the plaintiffs were galees of a section of upper veins of coal in the Forest of Dean; and by the rules attached to the award, any underlying veins not galed "might be galed to other parties, but to be so worked as not to impede or injure the working of the tracks already allotted, or hereafter to be allotted or galed":—Held, that the rule reserved to the crown the power of granting to subsequent galees of the lower veins a right to sink a shaft through the upper veins previously galed, and that the restriction as to the mode of working must be so construed as not to render the reservation nugatory; i.e. as a restriction only upon the mode of working the lower seams, when reached, and not as limiting the right of the crown to grant liberty to sink a shaft through the upper veins in order to reach the lower. Gould v. Great Western Deep Coal Co., 2 De G. J. & S. 600; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 865; 13 L. T. 109; 13 W. R. 1111.

Surface Damage.]—The 1 & 2 Vict. c. 43, s. 68, provides that every free miner entitled to any gale within any inclosed lands shall pay to the owner of such lands compensation for surface damage occasioned by opening or working any gale therein or thereon, which compensation shall be determined by the gaveller or deputy gaveller; and if not paid within ten days after an award by him, and a copy thereof served on the party required to pay the same, the amount may be recovered by action. A declaration in an action under that section alleged that the deputy gaveller awarded that the amount of compensation for surface damage done to the inclosed lands of the plaintiff, by the working of a gale therein or thereon by the defendant, was 60*l.* The plea set out the award, by which the deputy gaveller, after reciting that application had been made to him, to determine the compensation for surface damage to lands and buildings of the plaintiff, alleged to be inclosed lands, awarded that the amount of compensation for surface damage to the lands and buildings by reason of the working thereon and thereunder by the defendant was 60*l.*, but whether the lands and buildings were inclosed lands within the statute, he had made no award:—Held, first, that the award was good, although the deputy gaveller had not found that the lands were inclosed. Allaway v. Wagstaff, 4 H. & N. 307; 29 L. J., Ex. 51.

Held, secondly, that assuming surface damage to mean damage on the surface, the award was not bad, because the deputy gaveller had found that the damage was occasioned by working under the lands, for by such working there might be damage on the surface. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that as the word "lands" comprehends buildings, the declaration was good, although it appeared by the award that the compensation was in respect of the lands and buildings. Ib.

The plaintiff, an owner of a house standing in an open common within the hundred, but adjoining on one side a yard of the plaintiff inclosed by a wall, the defendant, a free miner, in working his gale, got the coal from under the house, in consequence of which a subsidence took place, the foundation of the house sank and the walls cracked:—Held, that the defendant was liable to an action for causing a subsidence of the surface, but that the damage so done to the owner's house was not surface damage within the meaning of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 43, s. 68, and that the deputy gaveller had no jurisdiction to award compensation. Allaway v. Wagstaff, 4 H. & N. 681; 29 L. J., Ex. 51.

Adjoining Owners.]—The plaintiffs and defendant possessed adjoining collieries in the Forest of Dean, which were gales subject to 1 & 2 Vict. c. 43, and the rules made thereunder. The defendant's gale being drained by a steam-engine, he was bound by rule 19 to work the engine, so as to prevent the water of his gale from falling into plaintiff's gale. The defendant stopped his engine, whereby the plaintiff's gale was flooded and damaged. Sect. 29 provides that a person working his gale contrary to the rule shall be liable to forfeit it, and may be evicted by her majesty; and in addition thereto "the compliance with such rules may be enforced by and on behalf of her majesty, or by any other person, by injunction of her majesty's court of exchequer, or otherwise, in such manner as the court shall on application think fit":—Held, that the plaintiffs had a statutory private right which had been violated by non-compliance with the rules on the part of the defendant; that s. 29 gave no specific remedy for such breach of duty, and that the plaintiffs were therefore entitled to maintain an action at common law to recover damages. Ross v. Rugge-Price, 45 L. J., Ex. 777; 1 Ex. D. 269; 34 L. T. 535; 24 W. R. 786.

—— Liability of Mortgagee for Injury done by Mortgagor to adjoining Mine.]—The statute 1 & 2 Vict. c. 43, and the rules made under it, regulate the use of adjoining gales in the Forest of Dean. By s. 29, compliance with the rules may be enforced "by or on behalf of her majesty, her heirs or successors, or by any other person or persons, by injunction of her majesty's court of exchequer or otherwise, in such manner as the said court shall, on application, think fit." The plaintiffs brought an action for damages against the defendants, as owners of adjoining gales in the Forest of Dean, for injury sustained by the plaintiffs through the stopping of the engines in the defendants' gale contrary to one of the rules. Some of the defendants were mortgagors in possession of and working the gale. The other defendants were mortgagees who had never been in possession of or worked it:—Held, that, with respect to the defendants, who were mortgagors, the specific remedy given by s. 29, for enforcing compliance with the rules, did not exclude the plaintiffs' right to recover damages for injuries caused to them by an antecedent breach of the rules. Brain v. Thomas, 50 L. J., Q. B. 662—C. A.

Held, also, that the mortgagees were not liable in the action. Ross v. Rugge-Price (supra) approved and followed. Ib.

Gale exhausted.]—When a free miner in the Forest of Dean has had three gales of allotments granted to him, and has surrendered one of such gales on the ground that there was not sufficient coal to make the gale worth working, he will be entitled to another gale equally as if the coal in one of the three gales had been exhausted within the language of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 43, s. 61. Ellway v. Davis, 43 L. J., Ch. 75; L. R. 16 Eq. 294; 21 W. R. 806.

Forfeiture of Gale.]—Where a gale is forfeited for non-user, under the provisions of the Forest of Dean acts, the forfeiture is complete on service of the notice of forfeiture without actual re-entry on the part of the crown. Young and Grindell, Ex parte, 50 L. J., Ch. 221; 43 L. T. 725.

An application for a gale in the Forest of Dean must be made at a time when the gale is vacant. Where a gale had become liable to be forfeited under s. 29 of the Forest of Dean Act, 1838, for non-working:—Held, that the forfeiture was not complete nor the gale become vacant until the crown had intimated its intention of enforcing the forfeiture. Actual resumption of possession by the crown is not necessary to complete the forfeiture of a gale, and this independently of the Queen's Remembrancer Act (22 & 23 Vict. c. 21),

s. 25. James v. Young, 53 L. J., Ch. 793; 27 Ch. D. 652; 51 L. T. 75; 32 W. R. 981.

The gaveller of the Forest of Dean granted a gale or colliery to a free miner, he paying for all coal brought out 2*d.* per ton, and so working the colliery as to gain 24,000 tons a year; provided that if the coal gotten should not amount to that quantity, a minimum rent of 200*l.* should be paid; provided also, and the grant was made upon the further condition, that the gale should be worked in manner therein mentioned. The gale not being worked, the galee paid the minimum rent for several years; but upon arrears of rent becoming due, the gaveller declared the gale forfeited, and entered into possession thereof. Ten months after declaration of forfeiture the galee tendered the arrears of rent, which were refused:—Held, that the grant was properly made upon conditions, one of which was the payment of rent; that upon breach of that condition by nonpayment, there had been a legal forfeiture and a right of the crown to re-enter; and that the arrears not having been tendered, nor any proceedings taken within six months, there was no power in the court to relieve against the forfeiture. Brain, In re, 44 L. J., Ch. 103; L. R. 18 Eq. 389; 31 L. T. 17; 22 W. R. 867.

Interest of Galee.]—The interest of a galee in the Forest of Dean is, under the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 40, of the nature of real estate, and is capable of occupation. Morgan v. Crawshay, 40 L. J., M. C. 202; L. R. 5 H. L. 304; 24 L. T. 889; 20 W. R. 554.

In an action by the galee of iron mines in the Forest of Dean against the overseers of the parish, for having seized his goods as a distress for a poor-rate:—Held, that the galee was an occupier, and not a mere licensee of the mines, the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 40, s. 1, having enacted that a gale of these mines shall be deemed to confer "an interest of the nature of real estate" on the grantee. Ib.

Where, by virtue of a custom, persons called free miners were at liberty to apply to the gaveller of the hundred of St. Briavels to allot them a particular spot of land for a coal-pit, and, when the spot was agreed upon, the gaveller cut a turf, and, having cut a stick, so many notches were cut on it as there were to be partners in the intended work, and also one for the king and one for the gaveller; the stick was fastened down with pegs on the spot where the turf was pared off, and the turf laid down again, after which that spot was considered appropriated; when coal was found, a money payment was made to the king, in lieu of his share of the coal. A share in a coal-pit so appropriated was held to be freehold. Doe d. Thompson v. Pearce, Peake's Add. Cas. 242; 4 R. R. 908.

Title Transmissible by Will.]—A free miner of the Forest of Dean applied for an unoccupied gale. The gaveller acceded to the application, duly entered it in his book, and gave notice of his intention to make the grant upon a certain day. Conflicting claims being set up, the actual grant of the gale was delayed, and, in the meantime, the free miner died. The devisees under his will then presented their petition of right, praying that the gale might be granted to them in right of their testator:—Held, that 1 & 2 Vict. c. 43, s. 38, applied only to the state of things at the passing of the act, and that the free miner had acquired a title transmissible by will. James v. Reg., 43 L. J., Ch. 754; L. R. 17 Eq. 502; 30 L. T. 84; 22 W. R. 466.

By 1 & 2 Vict. c. 43, s. 23, free miners shall have the exclusive right of having gales granted to them to open mines in the Forest of Dean, and it shall be lawful for such free miners to sell, transfer, assign or dispose of such gales, and s. 60 enacts that the gaveller or deputy gaveller shall grant gales to free miners in the order of their application. In 1872 D., a free miner, applied for a gale. In 1873 the deputy gaveller gave notice of his intention to grant the gale to D., but D. died before the grant could be perfected, having by will given all his real and personal estate to certain trustees who were not free miners:—Held, that D. had not acquired any transmissible interest, and the grant could not be made to his devisees. James v. Reg., 46 L. J., Ch. 516; 5 Ch. D. 153; 36 L. T. 903; 25 W. R. 615—C. A.

Free Miners.]—The defendants claimed, as owners in fee of a manor which was without the limits of the Forest of Dean, that the office of woodwards or foresters of B. walk, within the forest, was annexed to the ownership of the manor; and that, as such woodwards or foresters, they had a right to grant to persons called "free miners," gales or licences for working stone within B. walk, and to take gale rents, and apply them to their (the defendants') own purposes, without accounting to the crown. The soil of B. walk was in the crown:—Held, first, that such a right could not be maintained, unless shewn that the grantees of the gales or licences had a capacity to accept the same. Att.-Gen. v. Mathias, 4 Kay & J. 579; 27 L. J., Ch. 761; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 628; 6 W. R. 804.

Held, secondly, that the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 43, extinguished the rights and capacities of the free miners. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the office of woodward, even if grantable by the crown in gross, could not have been assigned to a third person by any such grantee from the crown, being an office of trust. Ib.

Held, fourthly, semble, that such an office could not be annexed to a manor so as to pass to every person who, as grantee, devisee or assignee, might become entitled to the manor. Ib.

Held, fifthly, that even independent of the operation of the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 43, upon the alleged rights of the free miners, no right could ever have been established, by any custom, however ancient, uniform and clear, to the exercise of the custom as now claimed by the defendants, viz. a right in one person to enter upon the soil of another person, and carry away portions of it. Ib.

Held, sixthly, neither can such a right be established by prescription. Ib.

Held, seventhly, nor by any assumption of a lost grant. Ib.

—— Effect of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 43.]—The 1 & 2 Vict. c. 43, for confirming the titles to and granting leases of encroachment in the Forest of Dean, was not intended to affect equities to which the property might be subject in the hands of those who, at the passing of the act, were the holders of such encroachments, or the rights of parties claiming in remainder expectant upon the determination of their estates. Yem v.

Edwards, 1 De G. & J. 598; 27 L. J., Ch. 23; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 647; 6 W. R. 20.

A. having made an encroachment on the lands of the crown in the Forest of Dean, died seised of it, leaving a will by which he devised it to his widow for life, with remainder to the plaintiff. The widow entered into possession, and afterwards, under the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 42, authorising the making grants from the crown for nominal considerations to the holders of the encroachments, she procured a conveyance from the crown to herself in fee under s. 8, and died, having devised the property to the defendant:—Held, in the construction of the statute, that it contained nothing to take the case out of the general rule, according to which, the grant having been obtained by the widow by virtue of a possession referrible to her husband's will, must be treated in equity as made for the benefit of his devisees, and that, therefore, on the death of the widow, the plaintiff was entitled to the land. Ib.

Sect. 12 was intended to provide for disputes between parties claiming adversely the legal right (speaking without regard to the crown's title) to be in possession and treated as holders. It has no reference to the case of parties claiming as equitably interested, or as entitled in remainder. Ib.

8. In the High Peak.

Right of Miner to remove Mining Buildings.]—Under the mining customs set out in the schedule to, and confirmed by, the High Peak Mining Customs and Mineral Courts Act, 1851, all persons are entitled to search for veins of lead ore, "under all manner of lands" situate within the limits of the act, "of whose inheritance soever they may be," and the "first finder" of any such vein is entitled to have allotted to him by a certain mining official, called the "barmaster," a certain proportion of such vein. Upon allotment, the allottee becomes entitled to the exclusive right of working so much of the vein as is allotted, so long as he continues to work it; and further (by the fifth of the Scheduled Mining Customs) he is, so long as he works such mine, entitled, without making any payment for the same, to the exclusive use of so much of the surface land as is necessary for the proper working of the mine. If the miner ceases to work his mine, the barmaster may (under the 19th of the above-mentioned customs) give him notice that his mine will be forfeited, unless within a certain specified time the working be resumed, and in the event of non-compliance with the notice, the barmaster may give the mine to any other person who is willing to work it:—Held, that a miner who, in exercise of his rights under custom 5, has erected upon the land of the surface owner buildings reasonably necessary for the working of his mine, is entitled as against such surface owner to pull down and remove the materials of such buildings at any time whilst he continues to work the mine, or within a reasonable time after he has ceased to do so, and before he has done any act shewing an intention to abandon the mine other than the act of pulling down such buildings, notwithstanding that such buildings may be built of brick or stone, with foundations sunk into the soil; but that he is not entitled to remove them after he has allowed such reasonable time to expire or has otherwise indicated an intention to abandon the mine, although he may have received no notice of forfeiture from the barmaster under custom 19. Wake v. Hall, 52 L. J., Q. B. 494; 8 App. Cas. 195; 48 L. T. 834; 31 W. R. 585; 47 J. P. 548—H. L. (E.)

Spoil—Rights of Miner and of Landowner.]—The plaintiffs were owners of land in the district of K. F., which land was contiguous to the district of the wapentake of W. These two districts, though distinct, and governed by different acts of parliament, form part of the High Peak of D. The defendants sank a shaft and commenced mining operations in the plaintiffs' land, in the district of K. F., but subsequently extended them to the adjoining district of W. By the custom of the districts the right to dig and search for lead ore is conceded to all persons, who may use a specified portion of the above-lying surface for the purpose of dressing the ore and placing the spoil or refuse, which spoil when not used by the miners becomes the property of the surface owner. The defendants having sunk a shaft originally in the land of the plaintiffs, carried on the operations into another district and under the surface of another landowner, and claimed to use the plaintiffs' land for the purpose of dressing the ore, and for depositing the refuse got from under the surface in the other district, and belonging to the other landowner:—Held, that, as the two districts of K. F. and of W. were quite distinct, and governed by separate acts of parliament, it was not competent for the miner sinking his shaft in one district, to use the surface land in that district to dress the ore and place the spoil or refuse got from another district into which he had extended his operations. Wake v. Redfearn, 43 L. T. 123; 44 J. P. 681.

Even if the mine worked by the defendants were within the same, instead of being in a separate and independent district, the right asserted by them of using the plaintiffs' land for the purpose of treating the mineral got from the land not below their surface land, but that of another landowner, could not be maintained—Per Cockburn, C.J. Ib.

III. LEASES OF MINES.

1. Grant of, and Specific Performance.

Power to Demise—Crown.]—By 36 & 37 Vict. c. 36, the crown has power to grant mining leases for sixty-three years.

—— Of Trustees.]—An estate, with the mines and minerals, was settled, and power was given to the trustees to demise the hereditaments and the coal and minerals, but so as the lessees should not be dispunishable for waste:—Held, that the last clause was repugnant, and that the trustees might demise mines, both opened and unopened, at the date of the settlement. Daly v. Beckett, 24 Beav. 114; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 754; 5 W. R. 514.

Where there was a conveyance to trustees of land, together with the mines thereunder, and a power to grant leases for fourteen years without mentioning mines:—Held, that the trustees had no power to grant leases of unopened mines. Clegg v. Rowland, 35 L. J., Ch. 396; L. R. 2 Eq. 160; 14 L. T. 217; 14 W. R. 530.

—— Of Tenant for Life.]—A power was reserved in a deed of settlement to a tenant for life to lease collieries and coal mines, "together with all such powers, authorities, accommodations, liberties, and privileges as shall be necessary, or are usually contained in leases of collieries or mines in the county, place or neighbourhood where the collieries or mines are situate, for seeking, winning, working, drawing, taking and carrying away the coals within and under the same": the leases were not, except in the cases provided for, to be made dispunishable for waste by any express words. A mining lease, granted in pursuance of this power, authorised the lessee to build and erect all such engines, workmen's cottages, &c., as should be necessary and proper for the carrying out the works, and also to dig and take building materials for buildings required for the purpose of the colliery. The lessees built several cottages for workmen. It was found by a jury that the power to build cottages in places convenient to the works of the mine was a necessary and usual power in mining leases:—Held, that the lease was valid. Morris v. Rhydydefed Colliery Co., 3 H. & N. 885; 28 L. J., Ex. 119; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 339; 7 W. R. 95—Ex. Ch. See Jegon v. Vivian, 36 L. J., C. P. 145; L. R. 2 C. P. 422; 16 L. T. 236; 15 W. R. 457—Ex. Ch.

—— Committee of Lunatic.]—Agreement by committee of a lunatic, that coal under lunatic's estate should be worked by owner of adjoining land, established under circumstances. Tabbart, Ex parte, 6 Ves. 428.

—— Under Powers.]—See POWERS.

—— Under Settled Estates Act.] — See SETTLED LAND.

Specific Performance.]—Whether an agreement for the digging of stone be a mere licence to dig, or a lease, is immaterial in a court of equity, which will decree performance of such a contract. Nelson v. Bridges, 1 Jur. 753.

Specific performance of an agreement to let the workings of quarries, and account of moneys due for working the quarries in a particular manner refused; the party's remedy being at law. Booth v. Pollard, 4 Y. & Coll. 61.

A contract for a lease of "coals, &c.," or "minerals," is too ambiguous to be carried out by the court. A contract by the owner of one undivided moiety of a colliery, for the lease of the whole colliery, will not (in the absence of fraud or collusion) be decreed to be specifically carried out as to his own moiety, either with or without compensation. Semble, in such a case the parties will be left to damages at law. Price v. Griffith, 1 De G. M. & G. 80; 21 L. J., Ch. 78; 15 Jur. 1093.

A. demised to B. and his heirs certain lands, reserving thereout all mines and minerals, with liberty to enter and dig for the same, and to hold 200 or 300 acres contiguous to the mines when found, making an allowance or abatement to B. for the same, according to the rate of rent reserved. A. found mines and selected land, and the court decreed a specific performance of the contract, deciding that the clause in the lease was a covenant, and not a condition of re-entry. Sed quære, whether it is not a condition and not a covenant. Croker v. Orpen, 3 Jo. & Lat. 589; 9 Ir. Eq. R. 563.

Semble, A. must take the lands in one place and at one time; and the court will not enter into the question of motives for enforcing the contract, or whether the mines can be profitably worked; though if colourably worked to give a claim to the land, the contract would not be enforced. Ib.

The abatement of rent was made in proportion to the quantity, not the quality, of the land, and A. was not bound to give compensation for improvements. Ib.

A bill was filed for the purpose of enforcing a contract for a lease of mines, at a rent of one-fifteenth of the minerals obtained. The defendant had subsequently granted a lease to another party at the same rent. The bill charged that, under an act of parliament, it was directed that the best rent should be obtained by the owner of the mines; and although one-fifteenth was a fair rent when the plaintiff's contract was entered into, that afterwards, the mines having become more valuable, the amount was not then a fair rent, and the lease granted by the defendant was therefore contrary to the act:—Held, upon a demurrer for want of equity, that a party coming for performance of a contract could only have it as it actually existed, and that, as the rent reserved in the plaintiff's contract was not the best that could be obtained, it was contrary to the act, and in effect fraudulent. The plaintiff, therefore, could not have his contract enforced, and the demurrer was allowed:—Held, also, that it was an undeniable proposition, that when a party entered into a contract without having the power of performing it, and afterwards acquired the right to do so, he was then bound to perform it. Carne v. Mitchell, 15 L. J., Ch. 287; 10 Jur. 909.

—— Warranty.]—A., on the application of B. and C., agreed to grant them a lease of a vein or seam of coal, called the S. vein, "about two feet thick, with the overlying and underlying beds of clay," on and under a farm called X., at 100*l.* per annum as certain or dead-rent, and royalties of 9*d.* per ton for the coal and 4*d.* per ton for the clay; the lessees to have any part of the farm at the rent of 10*l.* per acre, and to expend not less than 500*l.* in the erection of a manufactory and buildings for the purpose of working the coal and clay; way-leave of 1*d.* per ton for foreign coal and clay; lessees to have power to determine the lease at the end of three years on giving one year's notice. On action by A. for specific performance, B. and C. alleged that the S. vein did not exist under the farm, and it was proved that on search it had not been found, but counter-evidence was given to shew that the searches were insufficient:—Held, that under the agreement B. and C. had, in consideration of the dead-rent reserved, obtained a licence to enter and search for the vein, but not a warranty that such vein was to be found; and accordingly, that A. was entitled to specific performance of the contract whether the S. vein existed or not. Jeffreys v. Fairs, 46 L. J., Ch. 113; 4 Ch. D. 448; 36 L. T. 10; 25 W. R. 227.

—— Cannot be resisted on ground of Mine being Worthless.]—A person contracting for the lease of a mine cannot resist its performance on the ground of his ignorance of mining matters and of the mine turning out worthless. Haywood v. Cope, 25 Beav. 140; 27 L. J., Ch. 468; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 227; 6 W. R. 304.

The taking possession of a mine by the intended lessee is not an acceptance of the title. Ib.

A. had worked the coal under his estate, but abandoned it as unprofitable. Twenty years afterwards B. cleared the pit and examined the coal in the shaft with two other persons and subsequently contracted for a lease. The colliery turned out worthless :—Held, that B. could not resist a specific performance on the ground that A. had not communicated the fact of his having worked the mine and found it unprofitable. Ib.

—— Restraining Lessee from Ceasing to Pump.]—In an action for specific performance of an agreement to grant a colliery lease where the lessee had long retained possession, and had worked the coal and then threatened to cease pumping :—Held, that a motion for an injunction to restrain the lessee from ceasing pumping was a proper motion for the preservation of the property pending the action under Ord. LII. r. 3. Strelley v. Pearson, 49 L. J., Ch. 406 ; 15 Ch. D. 113 ; 43 L. T. 155 ; 28 W. R. 752.

Rescission—Time Essence of Contract.]—In a contract for the lease of working mines, time, though not named, is, from the fluctuating nature of the property, considered as of the essence of the contract, and the intended lessee may therefore fix a reasonable time for completion, and on the lessor's default may rescind the contract. Macbryde v. Weeks, 22 Beav. 533 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 918.

Agreement for Mining Lease—Lessee in Possession—Payment of Royalties into Court.]—The plaintiffs commenced an action against the defendant for specific performance of an agreement for a lease of a coal mine by the plaintiffs to the defendant at a royalty, as the plaintiffs alleged, of 10*d.* per ton. The defendant counterclaimed to have specific performance with a royalty of less amount. The defendant was in possession, and raising and selling large quantities of coal, but he alleged that he had expended on the mine more than the value of the coal raised. He also brought an action against the plaintiffs in the Queen's Bench Division to obtain damages for misrepresentations alleged to have been made to him for the purpose of inducing him to enter into the agreement, which action was still pending. The plaintiffs moved for an interlocutory order that the defendant might be ordered to pay into court the amount of royalties at 10*d.* per ton on the coal he had raised, but the court refused the motion :—Held, on appeal, that although it would not be right, while the right of royalty was in dispute, to order the defendant to pay into court the amount of royalties at the rate claimed by the plaintiffs, he ought to be ordered to pay in the amount of royalties at the rate which he himself alleged to be the one agreed upon, and that as his carrying away coal diminished the value of the property, he would not have the usual option of giving up possession instead of paying money into court. Lewis v. James, 56 L. J., Ch. 163 ; 32 Ch. D. 326 ; 54 L. T. 260 ; 34 W. R. 619 ; 50 J. P. 423 —C. A.

2. Of what Lands and Mines.

Where Subject-matter non-existent.]—When the thing let turns out to be a nonentity, the lessee is not bound. Gowan v. Christie, L. R. 2 H. L. Sc. 273.

In such a case it is perfectly reasonable that the lease should be subject to reduction. Ib.

When there is a total destruction or an exhaustion of the subject-matter of a lease, the lessee is entitled to abandon it. Ib.

The lessee of a mine, although entitled to rely on the existence of the subject-matter, takes all risk of its failure, either as to quantity or value, unless either is expressly warranted. Ib.

Where Mine "unworkable to Profit."]—At common law, the mere fact of "unworkability to profit" affords no ground for reducing or throwing up a lease of minerals, which are in their nature subject to many vicissitudes. There is in such a case no legal warranty on which the lessee can rely. Ib.

Mineral Lease is really a Sale.]—What is termed a mineral lease is really a sale out and out of a portion of the land. Ib.

Parcels.]—By a deed of the 29th of September, 1854, R. demised to C. a fire-brick manufactory, and he granted to C. power to dig fire-clay from under lands therein described, the term of the demise and licence being twenty-one years from the 6th of April, 1854. By a deed of the 31st of August, 1862, R. demised to B. all the coal mines and seams of coal, "and also all the mines, seams, veins, or beds of ironstone and fire-clay found in connection with such coal seams as are workable as coal seams," under the same lands as those to which C.'s licence applied, for forty-two years from the 22nd of November, 1858. In 1866 C. commenced opening an old pit, called the Montague Pit, with the intention of reaching a seam known as the Stone Coal Seam, in order to work the fire-clay in connection with that seam. Previously to this, in 1864, B. had sunk a pit through the Stone Coal Seam, to get at a lower coal seam, and he had taken samples of the fire-clay in the Stone Coal Seam, some of which samples he had sent to C. to be tested, and he had afterwards sold some of the fire-clay to C. for the purpose of being manufactured. After C. had expended a considerable amount of money on his works at the Montague pit, but before he had reached the Stone Coal Seam, B. gave notice to him that he had already proved the Stone Coal Seam, and was about to work it, and that it would be an invasion of his rights if C. was to work that seam. Ultimately C. filed in equity a bill to restrain B. from working the fire-clay or the coal in the Stone Coal Seam under any part of the lands to which C.'s licence applied during the continuance of C.'s term :—Held, that the words "coal seams workable as coal seams" must be construed regard being had to all and every the powers conferred by the lease in which those words were found, and that, looking at those powers and at the evidence, which, in the opinion of the court, showed that the Stone Coal Seam was workable at a profit when both the coal and the fire-clay were taken into account, that seam must be considered to be comprised in B.'s lease. Carr v. Benson, L. R. 3 Ch. 524 ; 18 L. T. 696 ; 16 W. R. 744.

The mines under a farm of 181 acres were supposed to be divided by a fault running north and south in such a way as to leave about eighty-three acres on the west and ninety-eight acres on the east ; and the owners, by several agreements, agreed to demise to S. the mines lying to the westward of the fault, "supposed to be eighty-three acres or thereabouts," and to D. the mines lying to the east of the same fault, "supposed to be ninety-eight acres or thereabouts," and each lessee was to pay, in addition to a royalty, a dead-rent amounting to about 2*l.* per acre on the estimated area of the mines demised to him. No lease was executed to either of the lessees, but they entered upon and commenced working the mines agreed to be demised to them respectively. S. in the course of his workings arrived at a fault, which, if taken as the boundary between the mines agreed to be demised to him and those agreed to be demised to D., would leave him only eight acres, instead of eighty-three; and he worked through the fault. D. filed a bill for an injunction to restrain him from so working:—Held, that, assuming the fault worked through by the defendant to be the same as the fault indicated in the agreement (which was not clear), the plaintiff was not entitled to a lease of mines so largely exceeding the estimated acreage of the mines agreed to be demised to him as the mines lying to the eastward of the fault, and he could not be considered as constructively in possession of more than the lessors had by their agreement bound themselves to demise. Davis v. Shepherd, 35 L. J., Ch. 581; L. R. 1 Ch. 410; 15 L. T. 122.

A lease of two seams of coal, and all other the seam and seams of coal under the D. estate, will authorise the opening an unworked seam; and after the decease of the grantor, the rents and profits of the same mines under a new lease will belong to the tenant for life under his will. Spencer v. Scurr, 31 Beav. 334; 31 L. J., Ch. 808; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 9; 10 W. R. 878.

An agreement to lease "two seams of coal lying under lands, to be hereafter defined, in the Bank End estate," construed as an agreement to lease "two seams of coal lying under the lands of the Bank End estate, the boundaries of which are to be hereafter defined," and specific performance was decreed. Haywood v. Cope, 25 Beav. 140; 27 L. J., Ch. 468; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 227; 6 W. R. 304.

—— Meaning of Words "or thereabouts."]—In construing the words "or thereabouts," when used to qualify the statement of the estimated quantity of mines agreed to be demised, the same principles ought to be acted upon as would guide the court in construing the same words in an agreement for a sale or a demise of the surface. Davis v. Shepherd, 35 L. J., Ch. 581; L. R. 1 Ch. 410; 15 L. T. 122.

—— Where Lessee's Enjoyment is restricted.]—A lessor demised for sixty years, at certain rents and royalties, the following parcels, viz. first and secondly, certain cottages and an engine-house; thirdly, all the mines which then were or thereafter during the term might be discovered within all the lands, about 514 acres, described in the map; and also liberty for the lessees to dig and carry and sell all iron and coal, in, from, over, upon, or under the lands, and to open and dig any pits or levels into, upon, about, or under the mines and lands, except in or upon the demesne lands coloured red in the plan (being a piece of four acres), on which a capital mansion-house and buildings were erected:—Held, that this was a demise of the whole mines under the whole 514 acres, but with a restricted right of enjoyment in the lessees, so that the lessor could not demise the red part to any other persons, but the lessees had no right to work the mines under the red. Dugdale v. Robertson, 3 Kay & J. 695; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 687.

—— "Described in Map annexed."]—A lease professed to demise to lessees all mines and minerals "in, upon, or under all or any part of the messuages or tenements, fields, closes, or parcels of land described and set forth in the map thereunto annexed; and also, in, upon, or under all or any part of that large tract of land, called Mold mountain; all which premises are situate, &c., and are bounded, &c.; and all which are particularly described, delineated, and distinguished in the map or plan, annexed to these presents, and which, by agreement of all parties thereto, was meant and intended to be taken as part of that indenture":—Held, that the words of the demise were not to be controlled or restrained by the map, but might receive full effect, and be held to include a particular spot, the boundary of which could not be traced with strict accuracy upon the map, by reason of the smallness of the scale upon which it was drawn. Taylor v. Parry, 1 Scott (N.R.) 576; 1 Man. & G. 604; 9 L. J., C. P. 298; 4 Jur. 967.

3. Fixtures and Spoil Bank.

Fixtures.]—Miners working under customs established by the High Peak Mining Customs and Mineral Courts Act, 1851 (14 & 15 Vict. c. 94), lawfully erected machinery and buildings accessory thereto on surface land, of which the miners were entitled to the exclusive use for mining purposes, but the freehold of which belonged to others. The buildings were attached so as to be part of the soil, and so that they could not be removed without some disturbance, which would not amount to a destruction, of the soil. The buildings were from the first intended to be accessory to the mining, and there was nothing to show that the property in them was intended to be irrevocably annexed to the soil:—Held, that the maxim, quicquid plantatur solo, solo cedit, was not applicable, and that the miners were entitled to pull down and remove the buildings while their interest in the mine continued, and were not liable to the surface owners for so doing. Wake v. Hall, 52 L. J., Q. B. 494; 8 App. Cas. 195; 48 L. T. 834; 31 W. R. 585—H. L. (E.)

A lease of coal mines and ironworks contained a covenant by the lessee, to yield up to the lessor, at the expiration or sooner determination of the term, all ways and other roads in or under the demised hereditaments in such good order, repair, and condition as that the coal and iron works might be continued and carried on by the lessor:—Held, that tram-plates, fastened to iron or wooden sleepers, which were not let into the ground, but rested thereon, were not included in the terms, works, or ways, or roads, and consequently might be taken up, sold, or removed by the lessee. Beaufort (Duke) v. Bates, 3 De G. F. & J. 381; 31 L. J., Ch. 481; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 270; 6 L. T. 82; 10 W. R. 200. See Rolleston v. New, 4 K. & J. 640.

—— Removal of—Tenant for Life of Mines and Collieries—Remainderman.]—A tenant for life of real estate, who was entitled to hold and enjoy the working stock and plant of certain iron mines and collieries situate on the estate, and carry on such iron mines and collieries, erected on the estate, machinery, &c. blast furnaces, and a railway of considerable length connecting the mines and collieries. On his death the question arose whether, in an account between his executors and the remainderman, the former should be credited with the value of the machinery, &c. or whether the same passed to the remainderman as things annexed to the soil:—Held, that the interest of the tenant for life was a right of enjoyment in the chattels, and not a right to carry on a business; and that therefore his position with respect to the trustee was that of a donee of consumable chattels:—Held, also, that the machinery annexed to the soil for the purpose of rendering the minerals merchantable, if such machinery was capable of being removed therefrom by disturbing the soil without destroying the land, was machinery which could not be said to be so attached to the land as to become part of it and belong to the owner of the land, but was to be deemed to be trade fixtures which passed to the executor as personalty, on the authority of Wake v. Hall (8 App. Cas. 195). Ward v. Dudley (Countess), 57 L. T. 23.

Spoil Bank.]—The lessee of a coal mine, under covenant to remove the spoil bank at the end of his term, has a property in the material of the bank, giving him a right of action against a stranger removing part of it for brick-making. Robinson v. Milne, 53 L. J., Ch. 1070.

—— Parol Licence to search for Minerals.]—A party claiming ownership in a field granted to the plaintiff a parol licence to search therein for minerals. The plaintiff acting under this licence dug pits in the field, and threw up sand and gravel mixed with ore, which the defendant took away, professing to act under the authority of a third party. Before the defendant took away the sand, gravel, and ore, the party who gave the plaintiff the parol licence granted him a similar licence by deed:—Held, that under these circumstances the plaintiff was entitled to maintain an action for the gravel, sand, and ore as against the defendant, who was a wrong-doer. Northam v. Bowden, 11 Ex. 70; 24 L. J., Ex. 237.

4. Covenants.

Usual—What are.]—A proviso for re-entry on non-observance of the lessee's covenants is not a usual clause in a mining lease, to be inserted in the absence of express stipulation. Hodgkinson v. Crowe, 44 L. J., Ch. 680; L. R. 10 Ch. 662; 33 L. T. 388; 23 W. R. 885.

In a lease of a colliery in Derbyshire a proviso that when the mines demised are incapable of being worked to a profit, the lessee should be entitled to determine the lease is not "usual." The court will make a declaration that a clause ought not to be inserted in a lease which it refers to chambers to settle. Strelley v. Pearson, 49 L. J., Ch. 406; 15 Ch. D. 113; 43 L. T. 155; 28 W. R. 752.

Whether an agreement for a lease does or does not provide that the usual covenants shall be inserted in the lease, each party is entitled to have such covenants inserted as are incidental to and necessary to protect the rights given or reserved to each. Accordingly, under an agreement for a lease of minerals, the payments to be accelerated with an increase in the quantity of work, it was held that the lessor was impliedly entitled to have a right of entry and inspection secured to him by this lease. Blakesley v. Whieldon, 1 Hare, 179; 11 L. J., Ch. 164; 6 Jur. 54.

Liability of Assignees.]—A mining licence was granted by deed to three persons as joint tenants, and the licensees covenanted jointly and severally to pay compensation in respect of damage to the surface. Two out of the three licensees assigned over. Damage having been done:—Held, that the covenant was one running with the subject-matter of the grant, and that the assignee from the two licensees was liable under the covenant for the whole compensation due to the grantor. Norval v. Pascoe, 4 N. R. 390; 34 L. J., Ch. 82; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 792; 10 L. T. 809; 12 W. R. 973.

A mining lease contained a covenant by the lessee not to assign without the consent of the lessor. The lessee made an agreement with three other persons to give up his right in the lease to them, and to execute all necessary deeds to carry the arrangements into effect, and that, in the meantime, the agreement should have the same force as if such deeds had been executed. No consent of the lessor had been obtained, nor were any such deeds executed. The three entered into possession and worked the mines, and after a time they assigned their interest in the mines and other property comprised in the lease to a man of straw:—Held, that the three being mere equitable assignees of the lease were not liable to the lessor for the rents and covenants in the original lease for the time they were in possession of the property. Cox v. Bishop, 8 De G. M. & G. 815; 26 L. J., Ch. 389; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 499; 5 W. R. 437.

As to Working.]—See infra.

5. Rent and Royalties.

Liability of Lessee.]—Rent of a colliery commencing the first quarter day after a certain quantity of coal had been dug, ordered to be paid from the quarter day prior to which that quantity would have been dug, but for fraudulent delay of the lessee. Green v. Sparrow, 3 Swanst. 408; 19 R. R. 248.

—— Where Coal deficient.]—The plaintiff was lessee of a coal mine at the rent of 300*l.* a year, and subject to a royalty of 10*s.* for every wey of coals raised in each year above 600, that being the quantity considered to be paid for by the 300*l.* a year, and the plaintiff was authorised to determine the lease on the coal being worked out. The plaintiff worked the mine for several years; and when it was nearly exhausted, he was prevented by accidents and defects in it from continuing to work it, except at a ruinous expense. The court refused to restrain the defendant from suing for the rent of 300*l.* a year, although the plaintiff offered to pay him 10*s.* per wey for all the remaining coal. Phillips v. Jones, 9 Sim. 519; 3 Jur. 242.

Plaintiff, lessee of a colliery, at a rate of so much per wey, the colliery becoming not worth working, and plaintiff offering to pay for all the coal that could be got, relieved against the future rent and the covenant in the lease to work the colliery, upon equitable terms of paying for all the coals remaining, and making a full satisfaction for the covenants, in case the landlord would accept the surrender of the lease. Smith v. Morris, 2 Bro. C. C. 311.

Demurrer allowed to a bill by the lessee of a coal mine, to be relieved from his rent on the ground of a deficiency of the coal to be worked. Mellers v. Devonshire (Duke), 16 Beav. 252; 22 L. J., Ch. 310; 1 W. R. 44.

A. demised a coal mine to B. at 60*l.* per acre for the coal gotten, and B. covenanted to work not less than two acres annually, or pay the rent for that quantity, "whether the same should be got or not." There was a proviso for cesser if all the coal was exhausted at the end of the term. The lessee, alleging that there was a deficiency in the coal, and that from "inevitable causes," it was impossible to get two acres annually, and that during the term he had paid for more than he had got, sought to recover back the excess. A demurrer was allowed, on the ground that the covenant was absolute, and the lessee was bound to pay whether he got the quantity or not, and that there was no allegation of an actual exhaustion of the coal. Ib.

Coal mines were demised at a certain royalty per ton upon the coal which might be got, and also at the rent of 300*l.* a year, or so much thereof as, with the royalty, should amount to that sum, such rent of 300*l.* to be a minimum rent for the coal demised, and the lessee covenanted to pay the rents and to work the mine:—Held, that a court of equity would not restrain an action by the lessor for the minimum rent, although the coal proved to be not worth the expense of working; but that if the lessor were to sue upon the lessee's covenant to work the mine, the court would interfere. Ridgway v. Sneyd, 1 Kay, 627.

In applying the rule of caveat emptor to the case of lessees of coal mines, it must be remembered that everyone acquainted with that kind of property is aware that coal mines are liable to be interrupted by faults. Ib.

If all the coal had been gotten by ancient workings, that might be a case for equitable relief. Ib.

A demise of coal mines for thirty years, yielding 400*l.* for every acre of coal, by annual payments of not less than 200*l.*, provided that in case the whole of the coals, so far as the same could be fairly wrought, should have been worked out and gotten at any time prior to the expiration of the term, and that the coal so fairly wrought should have been wholly paid for, then that the annual payment of 200*l.* should cease and be no longer payable:—Held, that the question whether the coal could be fairly wrought, did not depend upon whether it could be worked at a profit or not, or whether any such coal as that demised was worth working; but assuming that coal of the same description as that demised could be properly worked, whether, according to the usage of miners, the coal in question could be worked without extraordinary difficulty or expense. Griffiths v. Rigby, 1 H. & N. 237; 25 L. J., Ex. 284.

The judge at the trial told the jury that he would not give them any explanation as to what was meant by "fairly" wrought, and that they were better judges of the meaning of the phrase than he was. He told them what he thought it meant:—Held, that this direction was insufficient. Ib.

A. demised to B. for fifty years all his right and interest in the coals and other minerals in an estate, in as ample a manner as was demised to him, A., by D., yielding and paying yearly for every ton of coal that should be worked, raised or got by B., in each year, not exceeding 13,000 tons in any year, 8*d.* per ton, or yielding and paying that amount of money, viz. 433*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*, each year as fixed rent, whether the coal should be worked or not; and for every ton of coals that should be worked, raised or got in each year, above 13,000 tons, 9*d.* per ton: and B. covenanted that he would raise and work 13,000 tons of coal in each year, and pay 8*d.* per ton royalty for the same, or would pay that amount of money, viz. 433*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*, each year as a fixed rent, whether the coals were worked or not. There was a distinct reddendum and covenant for payment of rent in respect of other minerals. In an action on this indenture, the breach assigned was, that B. did not raise or work 13,000 tons of coal in each year, and pay at the rate of 8*d.* per ton for the same, or pay that amount of money, viz. 433*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*, each year as a fixed rent, whether the coals were worked or not, but on the contrary thereof, 216*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* of the rent for half a year became due and was unpaid:—Held, first, that the whole rent claimed was payable, although the mine was so exhausted that the lessee could not raise 13,000 tons of coal in a year. Bute (Marquis) v. Thompson, 13 M. & W. 487; 14 L. J., Ex. 95.

Held, secondly, that the breach was well assigned. Ib.

—— Excess in One Quarter—Deficiency in next.]—A mining lease contained the following covenant:—That the lessees should deliver, quarterly, to the landlord, two equal thirteenth parts of all coal which should be raised, or should pay him, quarterly, the value in money: provided, that, in case at the end of the first quarter of any year such deliveries or payments should not have equalled in value or amount 38*l.* 10*s.*, then the lessees should also pay at the end of every such quarter such additional rent or sum of money as would make up 38*l.* 10*s.*; and in case at the end of the second quarter such deliveries or payments for that and the preceding quarter should not have equalled in amount 75*l.*, then the lessees should also pay at the end of every such second quarter such further sum as would make up 75*l.*; and in case at the end of the third quarter such deliveries or payments for that and the two preceding quarters should not have equalled in amount or value 111*l.* 10*s.*, then the lessees should pay at the end of every third quarter such further sum as would make up 111*l.* 10*s.*; and in case on the 24th day of June in any year the deliveries and payments for that and the three preceding quarters should not have equalled in amount or value 150*l.*, then the lessees should pay on 24th day of June such an additional rent or sum as would make up 150*l.*, it being the intent and meaning of the parties to the lease that the royalties reserved should always amount to 150*l.* per annum at the least:—Held, that, in calculating the amount due to the plaintiff at the end of each year, the excess of royalty above 38*l.* 10*s.* occurring in one quarter was not to be set against the deficiency in a previous quarter, and deducted from the sum payable to the plaintiff in respect of the latter quarter. Bishop v. Goodwin, 14 M. & W. 260; 14 L. J., Ex. 290.

—— Coal used in Working Engine.]—A lessee of mine A., took a lease of B., an adjoining mine, from the plaintiff, by which he was entitled to get the coal from B. mine at a certain rent, and also to be at liberty to bring the coal got in the

A. mine to the surface by way of "outstroke" through the B. mine, on payment of 1½*d.* per ton for outstrokes, watercourse rent, and shaft rent. No rent was to be paid for any coal got from the B. mine which should be used or consumed on or for any engine employed in working or carrying on the mines demised:—Held, that no rent was payable for coal used in working the engine of B. mine when employed in bringing up the coal from the A. mine, such engine being at the same time used for keeping B. mine free from water. Senhouse v. Harris, 5 L. T. 635.

—— Coal brought on Land, but raised Elsewhere.]—The owner of land, with mines underneath the surface, granted a lease of part of his land, and the mines under it, to the Pontypool Iron Company, carrying on the manufacture of iron. The lease contained this covenant: "yielding and paying to the lessor, his heirs and assigns, for every quantity of 2,520 lb. of coal, ironstone, fire-clay, limestone, building stone, or any other minerals, the produce of any lands or mines not intended to be included in the present demise, but which shall be raised within the distance of twenty miles from any part of the premises hereinbefore expressed to be demised, and shall be brought through, over, or under the lands, mines and premises the royalty or sum of one halfpenny." The company afterwards granted an underlease of a part of the surface of the land to a railway company, which made sidings thereon, for the purpose of more conveniently and safely shunting trains for a time, before forwarding them to their destination. Trains containing minerals raised within the twenty miles (often mixed with minerals in no way coming within the words of the covenant, and sent by other companies upon the line) were frequently, for safety and convenience, shunted for a time on the sidings formed on the land, and afterwards taken out and conveyed to their destination:—Held, that the minerals raised within the prescribed distance did come within the words of the covenant, even though brought on the land only for the temporary purpose of being shunted there, and were therefore liable to the payment of the royalty. G. W. Ry. v. Rous, 39 L. J., Ch. 553; L. R. 4 H. L. 650; 23 L. T. 360; 19 W. R. 169.

An agreement to pay a sum by way of rent-charge or royalty, in respect of minerals which may be raised or obtained by, from or out of any mine or mines, pit or pits, in, upon, or under the property granted, does not entitle the person in whose favour the rent-charge or royalty is created to receive payment in respect of minerals brought up at the mouth of pits upon, but not procured under, the property granted. Morgan v. Davey, 1 Cab. & E. 115.

—— Reimbursement of Expenses of Winning.]—By a deed of grant and licence the licensee was empowered to win and work all and every or any of the coal mines, seam and seams of coal under certain lands, and to reimburse himself all expenses incurred in the winning out of the profits from the sale of the coal; and it was provided that after payment to the licensee of all expenses in winning the said colliery, coal mines, or coal mine, seam or seams of coal, he should pay the grantor such royalty for the coals yearly wrought out of the said coal mines seam or seams as should from time to time be awarded by two arbitrators once in every five years whilst the said coal mines, seam or seams of coal should continue to be wrought. More than one seam of coal lay under the lands. The licensee after winning one seam went on to win another:—Held, that the whole colliery was not won when the first seam was won, but that the deed was to be read separatim as to the winning of each seam, and that the licensee was entitled to reimburse himself the expenses of winning the second seam before any royalty was payable as to that seam. Elliot v. Rokeby (Lord), 51 L. J., Ch. 249; 7 App. Cas. 43; 45 L. T. 769; 30 W. R. 249—H. L. (E.)

The licensee mixed the coals gotten under the licence with those gotten from his own colliery, and sold them together. He alleged that the coals gotten under the licence were inferior in value to the other coals:—Held, that as they had been mixed by the licensee's own act, he was not entitled to an inquiry as to how much the selling price of the coals was diminished by the mixture of the coals gotten under the licence. Ib.

—— Payment in Specie.]—Where the rents of mines are reserved by means of payment of produce in specie, the profits will be considered as accruing to the lessor at the time of receiving such produce, and not at the time of the sale of it; and therefore the statute will run from the time of such receipt, and not from the time of such sale. Donys v. Shuckburgh, 4 Y. & Coll. 42.

Liability of Assignee.] — An intermediate assignee of the term, who had not worked the quarries himself, but had received royalties under subleases granted before he came into possession, and had parted with his interest before the commencement of the suit, was held not to be liable to account either for the profits made, or for the royalties paid to him during his possession of the term. Elias v. Snowdon Slate Quarries Co., 48 L. J., Ch. 811; 4 App. Cas. 454; 41 L. T. 289; 28 W. R. 54—H. L. (E.)

C. in consideration of rent granted a mining licence to three persons, who covenanted jointly and severally that they would pay him compensation for the surface of any of the land rendered permanently useless, at the rate of 100*l.* per acre. Two of the covenantors assigned the benefit of the licence to P., who worked the mines. P. having died, a suit was instituted to administer his estate, when C. claimed 100*l.* for the surface of an acre of land rendered permanently useless:—Held, that C. was entitled to stand as a creditor against P.'s estate for the amount claimed. Norval v. Pascoe, 4 N. R. 390; 34 L. J., Ch. 82; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 792; 10 L. T. 809; 12 W. R. 973.

Rights of other Persons.]—Owners of contiguous estates, who were tenants in common of the mines beneath, held equally entitled to the landing rent paid on foreign coal, raised through a shaft which had been constructed by a lessee of the mines, but which opened into the separate estate of one of the owners. Clegg v. Clegg, 8 Giff. 322; 31 L. J., Ch. 153; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 92; 5 L. T. 441; 10 W. R. 75.

A. being seised in fee of lands, under which were coal, iron, &c. and the surface of which was in the occupation of a tenant, executed a deed by which he sold and disposed of and granted and conveyed the mines under the land to B. for ninety-nine years, subject to the payment to A., his executors, administrators, and assigns, of 7,998*l.*, by twelve yearly instalments, which were secured by powers of distress and entry reserved to him, his executors, administrators, and assigns; and the latter power provided that, upon an entry being made, the grant and conveyance, and the term thereby granted and everything contained in the deed, on the part of A., his heirs, executors, or administrators, should cease, and that A., his heirs, executors, &c. should not be accountable to B. for any of the instalments or sums of money which B. should have then paid in part of the purchase money for the minerals. The subsequent part of the deed contained a covenant enabling B., at the end of the tenant's term, to enter upon the surface lands and to hold them for ninety-nine years, under the yearly rent of 110*l.*, which, as well as the power of distress by which it was secured, was reserved to A., his heirs, and assigns :—Held, that the instalments payable for the mines were not rent, and therefore not incident to the reversion, but personal debts due from B. to A. Hatherton (Lord) v. Bradbourne, 13 Sim. 599; 13 L. J., Ch. 171; 7 Jur. 1100.

An estate, with the mines and minerals, was settled, and power was given to the trustees to demise the hereditaments and the coal and minerals, but so as the lessees should not be dispunishable for waste :—Held, that the royalty reserved by the lease was in the nature of rent, and was payable to the tenant for life, and did not form corpus. Daly v. Beckett, 24 Beav. 114; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 754.

Testator being owner in fee, had agreed to grant leases of minerals to be worked by instroke only, the lessees paying a dead rent and royalties. The testator by his will settled his estate in strict settlement. The leases were not granted in testator's lifetime, but the lessees paid the dead rents. After his death the lessees were approaching the minerals by adits from an adjoining mine, and the tenant for life proposed to grant the leases according to the agreement. The tenant for life was impeachable for waste :—Held, that although the mines had not been actually opened in testator's lifetime, the tenant for life was entitled to the dead rents and to the royalties, when they should accrue, as income. Kemeys-Tynte, In re, Kemeys-Tynte v. Kemeys-Tynte, 61 L. J., Ch. 377; [1892] 2 Ch. 211; 66 L. T. 752; 40 W. R. 423.

A lessor, by a mining lease, reserved to himself, his heirs, and assigns, a surface rent, and also an annual consideration money or sum in respect of the workings, until payment of the full consideration money or sum therein mentioned. The lessor died intestate :—Held, that a sale was not intended, that the intention was that the payments should be in the nature of rent, and, therefore, that the heir was not a trustee for the next of kin. Barrs v. Lea, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 996; 10 L. T. 567; 12 W. R. 525.

A testator directed his trustees to pay to his wife "the whole annual produce and rents of the residue of the estates, both hereditable and movable." Coal and iron mines were leased by the testator before his death. His trustees afterwards leased others. In a question whether the wife was entitled to the rents of those opened after the testator's death :—Held, that in law she was not entitled. Campbell v. Wardlaw, 8 App. Cas. 641—H. L. (Sc.)

6. Duty to Work Under.

A lease of a coal mine was granted, reserving a minimum rent of 720*l.*, to be increased to 1000*l.* in case there should be pits sunk upon the estate, with a royalty upon all coal gotten beyond a certain quantity; and the lessees covenanted to work the mine uninterruptedly, efficiently, and regularly, according to the usual or most improved practice. The lessees paid the minimum rent, but only raised a small quantity of coal by working through an adjoining mine without sinking pits on the lessor's property. They being desirous of enforcing a larger amount of working, whereby an increased rent would be payable, filed a bill against the lessees for specific performance of the covenant in the lease :—Held, that there was no obligation upon the lessees to sink pits, although that might be the most efficient mode of working; and that, so long as the minimum rent was paid, the lessees could not be compelled to work the mine at all; that the lessees had committed no breach of contract; but if they had done so the remedy was at law and not in equity; and that the court of chancery could not, by a reference to chambers give effect to the covenant by directions as to the management of a coal mine. Wheatley v. Westminster Brymbo Coal Co., 39 L. J., Ch. 175; L. R. 9 Eq. 538; 22 L. T. 7; 18 W. R. 162.

A covenant in a coal mining lease to work and carry on the mines in a proper and workmanlike manner, is not to be construed as a covenant to continue working. Jegon v. Vivian, 40 L. J., Ch. 389; L. R. 6 Ch. 742; 19 W. R. 365.

In 1816 B. leased three coal mines and an iron mine for three hundred years, at a minimum rent of 50*l.*, and also certain royalties at a particular rate. The lease contained covenants, first, that the working should not be delayed beyond six years from the date of the lease; that as to three mines, the lessees should be at liberty either to work or relinquish them, and that they should not assign the lease without the consent in writing of the lessors, except to responsible tenants. In 1835 the lessees gave up working the iron mine, as it was not remunerative, and in 1845 the working the coal mines was also discontinued; but though the mines were not worked, the rent was paid and received. In the meantime considerable correspondence took place, but it was not until 1860 that any decidedly hostile step was taken by the lessors, who, in that year, brought ejectment against the lessees, but there being a receiver, it proceeded no further than the writ. Upon summons for liberty to prosecute the action :—Held, that reasonable time must be given to the lessees for the restitution of the works, for, although the lessors had a right to insist on their mines being kept in full working order, still, by their acquiescence in their abandonment and their receipt of rent, they had lost their right to proceed at law immediately. Whitehead v. Bennett, 4 L. T., 818.

A defendant agreed to grant to the plaintiff a coal lease for twenty-one years, the only rent reserved was dependent on the quantity raised, and was made payable quarterly :—Held, that the plaintiff was bound to commence working immediately, and to proceed continuously. Sharp v. Wright, 28 Beav. 150.

A lease of china clay granted to the lessees licence to "dig, work, and search for china clay," . . . and to "raise and . . . wash, cleanse, prepare, and make merchantable and fit for sale, and to dispose of the same and to exercise the powers" granted by the lease, subject to the rent and royalties thereby reserved; and the lessees covenanted to work for china clay in the most proper and effective manner, and with a reasonable number of able-bodied men kept employed on the works at all reasonable and usual working time, so that the china clay might be raised and made merchantable as speedily as possible. There was a proviso for forfeiture and re-entry on failure in the performance of the covenants. For some months no fresh clay was got, but only the old stock was worked:—Held, that the lessors could not be restrained from having possession, on the ground of forfeiture for breach of covenant. Kinsman v. Jackson, 42 L. T. 558; 28 W. R. 601—C. A.

When the thing let turns out to be a nonentity, the lessee is not bound. Gowan v. Christie, L. R. 2 H. L. (Sc.) 273.

In such a case it is perfectly reasonable that the lease should be subject to reduction. Ib.

When there is a total destruction or an exhaustion of the subject-matter of a lease, the lessee is entitled to abandon it. Ib.

The lessee of a mine, although entitled to rely on the existence of the subject-matter, takes all risk of its failure, either as to quantity or value, unless either is expressly warranted. Ib.

At common law, the mere fact of "unworkability to profit" affords no ground for reducing or throwing up a lease of minerals, which are in their nature subject to many vicissitudes. There is in such a case no legal warranty on which the lessee can rely. Ib.

The defendant demised to the plaintiff a coal mine for a term of twenty-one years, subject to the payment of a sleeping rent and of royalties according to the amount of coal worked. The lease contained a covenant by the lessee to work and get the coal "in a fair, honest, and workmanlike manner, in as large quantities as the same can be got and disposed of by due and reasonable diligence and exertions, according to the best and most improved mode of working collieries in that part of the country . . . delays or stoppages arising from accidents, turnouts, or other unavoidable cause only excepted." It also contained a proviso for re-entry in case of any material breach of the lessee's covenants. The lessee proceeded to work the mine under the lease, and continued working until stopped by water, which flowed into and drowned the mine, and, although he made every effort to pump out the water, he was at length forced to discontinue the workings. Notwithstanding his offer to continue paying the sleeping rent, the lessor refused to accept it, and commenced an ejectment against the lessee for an alleged breach of covenant in having ceased to work the mine. The lessee filed a bill to restrain the action, and the lessor demurred:—Held, that the question in the action was a purely legal one, that there was no equitable ground for restraining the action, and that the demurrer must, therefore, be allowed. Simpson v. Ingleby, 27 L. T. 695; 20 W. R. 993—L.JJ.

Working Part of Mines.]—By a lease of collieries in Cheshire, certain pits or mines, comprising the T. mine, which was uppermost, the B. mine, which was the next, and the C. mine, which was the lowest, were, with other higher and intervening mines, demised to lessees with power to work and get coal from the same at a fixed rent, and with a covenant that they should work and carry on the mines with their utmost skill and ability, in the best and most effectual manner, to the best advantage, and according to the common mode and usual practice of carrying on coal works, or collieries with effect. On a bill by the lessor, alleging that the defendants, after having for some time worked the three mines, had ceased working the T. mine, and also that they were working the C. mine in advance of the B. mine, and praying injunctions accordingly:—Held, that, under the terms of the covenant, the defendants were entitled to work any of the mines without working all, or all that they had commenced to work; that, according to the evidence before the court, it was the common practice in the district to work a lower seam of coal before working a higher; that there was no ground for saying that the defendants were committing a breach of the covenant; and the bill was dismissed with costs. Abinger (Lord) v. Ashton, L. R. 17 Eq. 358; 22 W. R. 582.

7. Mode of Working.

Sinking Pit.]—Under a covenant in a coal mining lease, to work and carry on the mines in a proper and workmanlike manner, the lessee is not bound to sink a pit if he can carry on the works by headings from an adjoining colliery. Jegon v. Vivian, 40 L. J., Ch. 389; L. R. 6 Ch. 742; 19 W. R. 365.

There were various provisoes in a mining lease which spoke of pits or shafts in the demised lands, but there was no express covenant to make any such pit or shaft. There was also a covenant that the lessees would draw to bank at some of the pits or shafts of the said colliery, provided that the same should be pits or shafts from which the coals of the demised colliery should not be worked by an outstroke, and lay in some convenient place on the lands of the lessors all the manure made by the horses employed underground in working the demised mine:—Held, that there was no express or implied engagement by the lessees that bound them to sink a pit in the demised land. James v. Cochrane, 8 Ex. 556; 22 L. J., Ex. 201; 1 W. R. 232—Ex. Ch.

Instroke.]—In the absence of express contract, a lessee of a mine is entitled to work the minerals by "instroke." Whalley v. Ramage, 10 W. R. 315.

The owner of a piece of land agreed to demise the seams of coal under the land to the owners of an adjoining colliery, at a royalty on each ton of coal worked, and at a dead rent of 500*l.* if the royalties did not amount to so much; the dead rent not to be charged for the first three years if the necessary steps were bonâ fide taken with ordinary dispatch to win and work the coal. The lease was to contain a covenant by the lessee for working the coal in a proper and workmanlike manner. The lessees proceeded to work the coal by instroke or headings from their adjoining colliery, which was situated to the rise of the seams agreed to be demised; the lessor alleged that the lessees ought to sink a pit and work the coal from the deep, and filed a bill to restrain them from working from the adjoining colliery, and to compel payment of the dead rent, on the ground that they had not taken the necessary steps to win and work the coal:—Held, that, under the circumstances, working the coal by instroke was working in a proper and workmanlike manner, and that if the lessor had intended to compel the lessees to sink a pit it should have been provided for in the agreement. Lewis v. Fothergill, L. R. 5 Ch. 103.

Held, also, that as the lessees were actually working the coal, irremediable damage would not be presumed. Ib.

Alteration in—Dissolution of Partnership.]—A colliery partnership being dissolved by decree, and a sale of the colliery, as a going concern, directed, the court will not, until it be found impossible to effect a sale, direct such an important alteration in the working as the cutting through a fault, although the evidence was all on one side as to the economy of working to ensue on such a course, there being no immediate necessity for such cutting in order to carry on the concern. Lees v. Jones, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 954.

Covenants by Lessee to Work as long as Mine ought to be Worked.]—Where lessees of land and of coal mines found or to be found therein, covenanted "forthwith to proceed to sink for coal as far as could and ought to be accomplished by persons acquainted with the nature of collieries," and, as in such cases was usual and customary, to erect fire-engines for the purpose, by the 24th of June, 1806, or in default to pay so much to the lessor as arbitrators should award; and after the day past, without any new pits sunk, &c. the parties named arbitrators to award concerning the damage, loss, and delay to the lessor, if any, and whether any rent or other satisfaction should be made to him on that account; and the lessees gave a bond to the lessor, conditioned to perform the award, and afterwards the arbitrators awarded that the lessees had not performed their covenant, by not having proceeded to sink for the said coal "as far as could and ought to be accomplished," &c. (in the words of the covenant), on or before the 24th of June, 1806, for which they awarded to the lessor 150*l.* on account of all damages and losses then incurred on account of such breach; and further, "that the lessees should sink coal mines and erect fire-engines, for getting the coals demised on or before the 24th of June, 1807, and in default, and until the same should be done, they should pay a yearly rent of 200*l.* to the lessor," as a compensation for the lord's share reserved under the lease:—Held, that, to an action on the bond, it was a sufficient answer by the lessees, to save the condition, that they had paid the 150*l.* awarded for the breach of the covenant up to the 24th of June, 1806, and as to the subsequent period, thence till the 24th of June, 1807, that "they did well and truly sink for coal in the lands demised, as far as could and ought to be accomplished," &c. (in the words of the covenant), and were ready and willing to have sunk and completed the pits, and to have erected the necessary fire-engines, within the time limited by the award; but that at the time of making the lease, and thenceforth, there were no mines of coal under the lands that could or ought to be worked by any person acquainted with the nature of collieries, or that in such cases it was usual or customary to work, or that would have defrayed the necessary expenses of working and getting the same, all which premises the lessees ascertained and proved by due and sufficient experiments and trials then and there made. Hanson v. Bootlman, 13 East, 22.

A tenant agreed to work a coal mine so long as it was fairly "workable." There was coal in the mine, but of such a description that it would not pay to work it:—Held, that the tenant was not bound to work the mine, and that under the words "fairly workable," a tenant was not bound to work at a dead loss. Jones v. Shears, 7 Car. & P. 346. See Phillips v. Jones, 9 Sim. 519; 3 Jur. 242.

Covenant by Lessee of Furnaces to Work unless prevented by Quality of Material.]—A lessee of furnaces, iron-works and ironstone mines covenanted to work the furnaces effectually, unless prevented by inevitable accident or want of materials, or unless the ironstone should be insufficient in quantity or quality, or would not by itself, or with a proper mixture or process, make good common pig-iron:—Held, that the mixture intended was not necessarily of ingredients procurable on the demised premises. Foley v. Addenbrooke, 13 M. & W. 174; 14 L. J., Ex. 169.

The lease also contained a covenant to raise a quantity of ironstone in each quarter of a year, and pay royalties upon it, or else to pay a fixed quarterly rent to the landlords:—Held, that the landlords having declared in respect of breaches of both these covenants, and money having been paid into court and accepted in satisfaction of the latter, they were entitled to nominal damages only in respect of the former. Ib.

Agreement to Work—Inevitable Accident.]—A declaration stated that the plaintiff let to defendants a mine of rock salt for twenty-one years from the 25th of June, 1851, and they covenanted with the plaintiff that they would, in every year during the term, get and raise from the mine 2,000 tons of rock salt; and in case of default would, at the expiration of the year, pay the plaintiff 6*d.* a ton for every ton by which the quantity was less than 2,000; and also that they would, with all reasonable diligence, sink a shaft to the salt rock, in order to get at the salt; and would also, during the continuance of the term, work the mine in a proper and workmanlike manner. The deed provided, that in case the rock salt should, during the continuance of the term, fail by any inevitable accident, then on payment of all rent due, and performance of all covenants on the part of the defendants, the term should cease. It appeared that in a writing, dated the 29th of August, 1851, the plaintiff agreed, before the 25th of March then next, to demise to the defendants the salt mine in question for twenty-one years from the 25th of June, 1851. When the agreement was executed, the defendants thereupon began to sink a shaft for the purpose of getting the salt. This sinking was, in September, 1851, discontinued in consequence of an influx of brine. The defendants thereupon began to sink another shaft, which was in the same month discontinued, from the like cause. On the 16th of November, 1852, a lease, pursuant to the agreement, was executed, being the deed declared on, and which contained the proviso for cesser stated in the second plea. In consequence of the influx of brine before mentioned, the defendants never in any manner worked the mine, nor paid any of the rents. The jury found that the defendants could not have worked the mine by any reasonable application of labour, diligence and skill, money or other means, and that they were prevented from working it by the influx of brine:—Held, first, that as the term commenced, in point of interest, on the 16th of November, 1852, though its duration as to computation of time was to be reckoned from the 25th of June, 1851, the proviso for cesser, which referred to a failure by inevitable accident during the continuance of the term, never came into operation; and that as the defendants had entered into an absolute unqualified covenant to get 2,000 tons of rock salt in each year, or pay for the deficiency, they were liable, for whether the salt could be got easily or with difficulty, or whether it existed at all, was immaterial. Jervis v. Tomkinson, 1 H. & N. 195; 26 L. J., Ex. 41; 4 W. R. 683.

Held, secondly, that the defendants having, after their inability to reach the salt by reason of the influx of brine, covenanted with all reasonable diligence to sink the shafts down to the salt, they were bound to do so, although it might be an unreasonable application of time and labour. Ib.

Semble, that if the lease had been executed before the interruption of the works by the influx of brine, that would have been "a failure by inevitable accident within the proviso for cesser." Ib.

The plaintiffs took a lease of a coal mine from the defendant, with a reservation of royalties and a sleeping rent, and covenanted to work the coal "in a fair, honest and workmanlike manner," and to use all "reasonable diligence, . . . accidents or other unavoidable causes excepted." Shortly after beginning to work the water came in in such quantities that though they made every effort to get rid of it, they could not, and were forced to give up working the coal. They paid the minimum rent for some time, but at length the defendant refused to accept it, and brought an action for breach of covenant:—The court refused an injunction restraining the action. Simpson v. Ingleby, 27 L. T. 695; 20 W. R. 993—L. JJ.

Implied Covenant by Lessor to procure other Lands.]—A lease of a colliery contained an implied covenant on the part of the lessor to procure land by compulsory powers, in order to enable the lessees to make a railway to a neighbouring canal, without which they had no access to any available market. The lessor did not procure the land, but brought an action against the lessees for rent. The lessees, acting under the advice of their solicitor, paid the rent, and subsequently proceeded to arbitration under a clause in the agreement, and an award was made in their favour. The lessor having commenced a second action for rent, the lessees applied to the court of chancery for an injunction to restrain the action; for specific performances of the agreement to provide the land; for a declaration that the award was binding, and for a rectification of the lease if necessary:—Held, that the colliery being valueless without the land, and the provision of the latter being the basis of the agreement, the documents did not carry out the intention. The whole matter was a failure, and the parties, as far as possible, must be put back in their original position. Acraman v. Price, 24 L. T. 487; 19 W. R. 364.

Covenant—For Title and Quiet Enjoyment.]—In 1844 the defendant was party to a twenty-one years' lease of coal mines, which gave certain powers over the surface incidental to the working of those mines and an adjoining colliery. The coal so demised was substantially worked out before September, 1845. In October, 1845, the defendant sold and conveyed the land to J., who knew of the workings, and the defendant covenanted with him for title, and for quiet enjoyment, and against incumbrances. In July, 1846, J. sold and conveyed to the plaintiff, who was ignorant of the workings. In 1865, in consequence of these mining operations, the land subsided, and houses built on it by J. and the plaintiff were damaged. In 1848, subsequently to the plaintiff becoming owner of the land, and within twenty years before action, the lessees, or persons acting under their authority, entered the mines and took some fire-clay (which was not included in the demise) and a few loose pieces of coal. In an action on the covenants, the declaration in which alleged that whilst the plaintiff was seised, the lessees entered upon the land, and worked, got and carried away the coal, whereby he had lost the coal, and the land subsided:—Held, that as to the breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment by the removal of coal which caused the subsidence, there was a fatal variance between the declaration and the evidence, which under the circumstances the court declined to amend. Spoor v. Green, 43 L. J., Ex. 57; L. R. 9 Ex. 99; 30 L. T. 393; 22 W. R. 547.

Held, also, by Bramwell, B., and Cleasby, B., that the fact of the coals having been worked out was no breach of the covenant for title, J. never having bought those coals; that the subsistence of the lease in respect of the coal left unwrought, and the powers (not exercised) incident to the working of their collieries, did not constitute a breach; and that the breach (if any) was complete in the time of J.; and (by Bramwell, B.) that the action was barred by the statute of limitations. Ib.

Held, also, that neither the acts of trespass in taking the fire-clay in 1848, nor the subsidence caused in 1865 by the workings in 1845, were breaches of the covenant for quiet enjoyment, on the ground that the first was a mere trespass, and that, as to the second, the subsidence gave no new cause of action, the principle of Bonomi v. Backhouse (9 H. L. Cas. 503) not applying to a case where the subsidence is caused by a wrongful taking of the plaintiff's minerals. Ib.

Held, by Kelly, C.B., first, that the subsistence of the lease was a continuing breach of the covenant for title, in respect of which the plaintiff was entitled to nominal damages; secondly, that the removal of the small pieces of coal in 1848, was a breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment, in respect of which the plaintiff was also entitled to nominal damages; and, thirdly, that the removal of the coal by the lessees being lawful, the subsidence in 1865 gave a new cause of action to the plaintiff. Ib.

—— To pay Compensation for Damage done.]—By a deed in 1857, reciting the will of S., under which the defendant became tenant for life of the W. estate, the trustees of the defendant conveyed lands at S., part of that estate, to R. in fee, reserving the coal thereunder, with power to work and carry away the same, the defendant or the person or persons for the time being entitled thereto, and his and their assigns, paying to R., his heirs and assigns, compensation for damage sustained thereby; and the defendant covenanted that, notwithstanding any act done by him or S. to the contrary, the trustees had power to grant and release the lands, and that free from incumbrances created by the defendant or any of his ancestors or testators, or any person rightfully claiming under him or them. In 1859 the plaintiff became the owner of a portion of the lands. In 1844 S. granted a lease of mines under the lands at S., whereby the lessees covenanted that they would work and carry on the colliery, coal mines and seams of coal thereby demised in a fair, proper and orderly manner, and according to the best and most approved method of working collieries of a like nature on the rivers Tyne and Wear, and so as to produce with safety the greatest quantity of merchantable coal from and out of each and every the workable seams; and would not knowingly do or suffer to be done any wilful or negligent act. matter or thing whatsoever, which might hazard or endanger the colliery, coal mines or seams of coal, or which might bring any creep or thrust upon them, or occasion any loss, damage or detriment thereto, or which might tend to hinder, stop or obstruct any of the water-courses, air-courses, passages or drifts which should be in or belonging to the same. The lessees also covenanted not to sink pits within 200 yards of any dwelling-house, building or farm-yard erected, or to be erected, upon the lands, without consent in writing, and to leave unwrought the coal under the mansion-house and park, and other parts of the superincumbent lands, but not including the lands at S. The lease contained other covenants for the security or benefit of portions of the surface, not including the lands at S., and for making compensation for damage. Dwelling-houses had been built upon the lands at S. after the purchase by R., and the lessees so worked the mines as to cause portions of the lands to subside and sink, and the dwelling-houses and their foundations to be weakened, cracked, injured, &c. In an action by the plaintiff, upon the covenant to pay compensation and the covenant for title contained in the deed of 1837, the jury having found that the lessees had worked the mines according to the best and most approved method of working collieries of the like nature on the Tyne and Wear, and that the sinking of the land was not caused by the weight of the houses:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover on the covenant for compensation. Taylor v. Shafto, 8 B. & S. 228.

Held, also, that the lessees were not only authorised but bound so to work the mines as to obtain therefrom the largest quantity of coal that could be gotten consistently with the safety of the mines, and without regard to the safety of any dwelling-house which might be erected after the date of the lease upon any portion of the surface not specially protected by any of its provisions, and therefore the covenant for title was broken by the grant of the prior lease. S. C., 8 B. & S. 247; 16 L. T. 205—Ex. Ch.

A declaration for negligently excavating and working mines under and adjacent to land of the plaintiff, whereby the land gave way and sank, and a mill, cottage and other buildings became prostrate and ruinous, and a stream of water was diverted from the land. Plea, that by an indenture of lease made before the plaintiff became possessed of the land, the owners in fee demised unto certain lessees, whose interest afterwards vested in the defendants, for thirty-eight years from the 25th of March, 1839, all and all manner of veins and seams of coal, and ironstone and other stone, and minerals of any manner or sort whatsoever, that should or might be found or discovered in or under the land with full power, liberty and authority to get the coal, ironstone, and other stone and other minerals out of all pits already sunk or open, and the like liberty and authority to bore, dig, delve and sink as many other pits as the lessees might think necessary, the lessees making reasonable satisfaction to the owners in fee, their heirs and assigns, and their tenants, for the damage done to them respectively by the surface of their land being covered with rubbish or otherwise injured, or as they might sustain as well by the injury done to the lands of the owners in fee in sinking and getting the mines and minerals, as for such damage or injury as might be done or caused in the dwelling-houses or other buildings of the said owners by so doing. The lessees covenanted in case of damage or injury to such buildings to rebuild or repair the same; and also over and besides the immediate damage to stock or crops so damaged, to pay a satisfaction for all damages sustained by the owners in fee after the rate of 40*s.* per annum for five years from the commencement of the damage, and after that time to pay such a price for the land so damaged as should be settled by arbitration:—Held, that the owners in fee granted the absolute right to work the minerals, without regard to injury to the surface, subject only to the obligation to pay compensation according to the covenant. Smith v. Darby, 42 L. J., Q. B. 140; L. R. 7 Q. B. 716; 26 L. T. 762; 20 W. R. 982.

—— To restore Surface.]—Where there is an agreement between the owner and his tenant that, when the mines are worked out, the surface shall be restored, the owner may complain if it is not restored; but that gives no claim to anyone else. Wilson v. Waddell, 2 App. Cas. 95; 35 L. T. 639—H. L. (Sc.)

—— Not to break through Barrier.]—In a lease of a coal mine the lessees covenanted to leave unworked a barrier of coal between the mine and the adjoining mines, except where the lease gave them liberty to break through it. The liberty was to make outstrokes or other communication through the barrier, for the purpose of conveying underground coal gotten in any of the adjoining collieries in the occupation of the lessees from such colliery into the mine, and by such outstrokes and communications to convey underground the coal from such adjoining collieries into the mine, and from thence to convey and carry away all such coal, and also draw to bank at any of the pits or shafts sunk or to be sunk by the lessees in any of the lands and grounds demised the coals from such adjoining colliery:—Held, that this liberty extended to authorise the lessees to break through the barrier for the winning coal of the mine, and for winning coal of such adjoining mines, though the coal of such demised or adjoining mines when won was not to be nor was brought to the surface through a pit or shaft in the demised land, and although no such pit or shaft in fact existed. James v. Cochrane, 8 Ex. 556; 22 L. J., Ex. 201; 1 W. R. 232—Ex. Ch.

The court granted an injunction prohibitory in form, but mandatory in its effect, against a lessee of coal mines acting in contravention of the covenants, in permitting a communication to remain open with an adjoining mine, and water to flow therefrom. Mexborough (Earl) v. Bower, 7 Beav. 127.

Right of Support.]—When the owner of surface and minerals beneath grants a mining lease of the minerals for a term, there is not, outside the contract, an implied reservation of any right to have the surface supported by the minerals. The contract itself must be looked at, and construed with regard to the subject-matter, in order to arrive at the extent to which the owner authorises the minerals to be removed. Eadon v. Jeffcock, 42 L. J., Ex. 36; L. R. 7 Ex. 379; 28 L. T. 273; 20 W. R. 1033.

Where a mining lease authorised the removal of all the coal beneath the surface except certain portions subject to a covenant to work the mine in a good and workmanlike manner:—Held, that the lessees, doing only what the lease authorised them to do, were not responsible to the lessor for the subsidence of the surface caused by their mining operations. Ib.

There is a primâ facie inference at common law upon every demise of minerals, or other subjacent strata, where the surface is retained by the lessor, that the lessor is demising them in such a manner as is consistent with the retention by himself of his own right to support. In the absence of express words, shewing clearly that he has waived or qualified his right, the presumption is, that what he retains is to be enjoyed by him modo et formâ, and with the natural support which it possessed before the demise. Dugdale v. Robertson, 3 Kay & J. 695; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 687.

A lease of alum mines gave the lessee the right to obtain alum from coal wastes. A subsequent lease of the coal mines provided that nothing thereby granted should injure the rights of the parties who held the alum mines. The alum existed in the coal wastes. The coal lessees could not thoroughly work the coal without removing the pillars which supported the roof; but by doing this, the alum would be rendered impossible to be reached:—Held, that the coal pillars could not be removed. Glasgow (Earl) v. Hurlet Alum Co., 3 H. L. Cas. 25.

A lease of waste land of a manor recently inclosed by the lessee, contained a reservation to the lessor, the lord of the manor, of the mines and quarries, with full power to win and work the same, with free way-leave and passage to, from and along the same, on foot or on horseback, with all manner of carriages; and a covenant by the lessor, that in working the mines and using the liberties and privileges reserved, he would do as little damage and spoil to the soil and herbage of the premises demised as he conveniently could:—Held, that the lessee was entitled to support for the surface of the land, as incident to the demise thereof. Proud v. Bates, 34 L. J., Ch. 406; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 441; 13 L. T. 61; 6 N. R. 92.

—— Liability of Lessee.]—The mere possession of a partially worked-out coal mine does not render the lessees liable to the surface-owners for damage by subsidence caused, not by any act of the lessees, but by the underground workings of their predecessors carried out at a date prior to the date of their lease. Accordingly, a person who has not been concerned in making the excavation, but who is in possession of the mine before and at the time of the subsidence, is not liable for damage caused by the subsidence simply because he did not take measures to arrest the subsidence. Greenwell v. Low Beechburn Colliery Co., 66 L. J., Q. B. 643; [1897] 2 Q. B. 165; 76 L. T. 759.

Injury to Surface of Land not within Words of Demise.]—A clause in a mining lease that the lessee may work the mines "in the usual and most approved way in which the same is performed in other works of the like kind in the county," refers simply to the mode of carrying on the underground works for mining purposes; but does not suppose a custom to work the mines so as to injure or interfere with the rights of other people. Nor did the words that the mining lessee should have liberty to enter upon the land and carry away the minerals, and to erect buildings, and "do and execute all such other acts, works, and things upon, in, or under, or above, the said premises, as shall be necessary or convenient for working and carrying away the same," making compensation, &c. enlarge the power so to deal with the mines as to let down the surface. Davis v. Treharne, 50 L. J., Q. B. 665; 6 App. Cas. 460; 29 W. R. 869—H. L. (E.)

Per Lord Blackburn:—In common right, the person who owns the surface has a right to have it properly supported below by minerals. A court of law has to look at the documents, to see whether the parties have agreed upon something different from the common right. Ib.

Covenant not to Damage Supports—Rights of Reversioner.]—By a mining lease, the lessees covenanted that they would "from time to time, and at all times during the term, work the pits, mines and shafts in a workmanlike manner, and leave pillars of the stone of sufficient strength to support the roofs of the mines, and get and clear the stone in the usual and best way in which the same is done in other works of a like character in Clayton." It also contained covenants to pay for surface damage, and at the expiration of the term to fill up the pits and shafts, and to restore the surface to a state fit for agricultural purposes:—Held, that the lessees were liable to the reversioner for damage done to the surface of the land by its cracking and subsiding in consequence of the want of sufficient pillars of stone being left to support the roofs of the mines, notwithstanding they might have worked the mines in a usual and a workmanlike manner. Hodgson v. Moulson, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 332.

In 1840 a bed of coal, called the High Hazle bed, was demised, with working powers, to persons from whom the defendants took by assignment. The lessees were to pay a minimum rent of 200*l.* as for 2 a. 1 r. 16 p., and a further yearly rent at the rate of 85*l.* per acre for coal actually got beyond the 2 a. 1 r. 16 p. "including all ribs and pillars left in working the coal, except the pillars for the support of the shafts, the pillars between the deep and counter level, the pillars, all round the estate, and the pillars under the homestead and farm buildings." These pillars of specified dimensions, the lessees bound themselves to leave during the whole of the term, and they also covenanted to work the mines according to the best of their judgment, skill and discretion, in a good and workmanlike manner. In 1857 the assignee of the lessor conveyed part of the land within which the mine lay to persons from whom the plaintiffs took with notice, reserving to the grantor the High Hazle bed, except a small portion specified, and "the mines, veins, and bed of coal, fire-clay, and other clay, stone and other minerals lying under the bed called the High Hazel bed," with powers to the grantor, his heirs and assigns, and his and their tenants and lessees, to be exercised "from and after the expiration of the term," for carrying on the works of the mine, and getting and carrying away the fire-clay, &c. so reserved; and also reserving to the grantor the coal rent under the lease of 1840, with the necessary powers. Provision was made for rent for land used or occupied by the grantor for the purposes of the mine, and for compensation for buildings required or removed for that purpose, and for surface damage to the land; but it was specially provided that the grantor, his heirs or assigns, tenants or lessees, should not be liable for any damage caused to buildings which should thereafter be erected on the land conveyed, by the sinking of the land through mining operations in getting the "coal, clay, stone and other minerals hereby excepted and removed." The pillars specified in the lease of 1840 were left; and the defendants worked according to the usual course of mining in the district; but their workings caused a subsidence, which injured the land of the plaintiffs and buildings erected since 1857. The land would have subsided without the buildings:—Held (by Martin and Cleasby, BB., Bramwell, B., dissentiente), that it appearing by the lease of 1840 to be the intention of the parties that all the coal should be removed, except the specified pillars, and the defendants having worked the mine in a proper manner, they were not liable for the injury. By Bramwell, B., that so far as concerned the houses the proviso in the conveyance of 1857 protected the defendants from liability, notwithstanding that the lease under which they held was antecedent to that deed. Eadon v. Jeffcock, 42 L. J., Ex. 36; L. R. 7 Ex. 379; 28 L. T. 273; 20 W. R. 1033.

Right of Support for Barriers in Upper Seam partly Worked.]—In June, 1866, the Duke of Rutland demised two seams of coal under a part of his Staffordshire estates to the plaintiff. The lease contained a proviso that the duke and his tenants should not be prevented from working the coal lying underneath the demised seams, provided that such workings should not prevent or unnecessarily interfere with the working by the lessees of the demised seams. Necessary interference was to be compensated for. The two demised seams had been worked out on the part of the duke's estate, adjoining the portion demised to the plaintiff, leaving the old workings filled with water. The plaintiffs worked a part of the seams, leaving a barrier of coal to keep out the water. In 1876 the duke demised the seams of coal underneath those demised to the plaintiff to the defendants, the Manners Company. The defendants claimed to work all the coal in their seams underneath the barriers. The plaintiff alleged that such working would disturb the barriers, let the water through, and drown out the mine, and brought an action to restrain it:—Held, that, without special provision, the plaintiff would have had an unqualified right to support from the underlying strata, and that, on a true construction of the provisions of the lease, the duke had granted to the plaintiff a sufficient support to the barrier to keep it substantially intact for the purpose for which it was intended as a water-tight division. An injunction, therefore, was granted to restrain the defendants from working the coal in the lower seams so as to cause the barriers to sink or crack so as to let the water through. Mundy v. Rutland (Duke), 23 Ch. D. 81; 31 W. R. 510—C. A. Affirming 46 L. T. 477.

Consent to Removal of Pillars.]—A testator devised real estates in strict settlement and empowered tenants for life (who were unimpeachable for waste) to grant mining leases. A tenant for life under this power demised in 1843 mines for a term of ninety-nine years at a peppercorn rent, by way of mortgage, to secure 6,000*l.* and interest. On the 10th of May, 1850, the tenant for life, by arrangement with the mortgagees, demised the mines to a trustee for the mortgagees for forty years, and the lessee covenanted not to remove the pillars without the consent of the tenant for life, his heirs or assigns, or the person or persons for the time being entitled to the premises:—Held, that the covenant was for the protection of the equity of redemption, and that the mortgagees had no power to consent to the removal of the pillars by the lessee. Mostyn v. Lancaster, 52 L. J., Ch. 848; 23 Ch. D. 583; 48 L. T. 715; 31 W. R. 686—C. A.

Restraining Damage—Action by Mortgagee.]—Land was at the date of a mining lease (in 1842) mortgaged in fee; the mortgagor and mortgagee joined in the mining lease. In 1856 the mortgage was transferred to the plaintiffs, with a restriction against their calling in the mortgage-money until 1863:—Held, that they might sue to restrain damage to the mansion-house from the working of the mines. Dugdale v. Robertson, 3 Kay & J. 695; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 687.

Improper Working—Proceedings for.]—By an indenture, the plaintiff demised to the defendant all mines and beds of coal which had been, or during the demise should be, discovered or opened under the lands belonging to Dyffryn House, at a yearly rent of 20*l.*, to be paid whether any coal should be worked or not, together with 7*d.* per ton for every ton of coal raised; and the defendant covenanted that he would at all times during the demise work the mines in a proper and workmanlike manner. Breach, that he did not work the mines in a proper and workmanlike manner, but, on the contrary, permitted the mines to lie, and the same were wholly ungotten. Plea, that the mines were never at any time before the demise worked or gotten, nor did he, at any time since or during the demise, work or get the mines:—Held, that inasmuch as it appeared by the pleadings that the mines had not been worked at all, he was not liable on this covenant for not working them in a workmanlike manner, the subject-matter of demise being not all the mines under the lands specified, but only such as either had been, or should be, discovered or opened. Quarrington v. Arthur, 10 M. & W. 335; 11 L. J., Ex. 418.

The defendant covenanted with the plaintiff that he would sink upon the demised premises a pit to a certain depth in search of coal, and, in case a marketable vein of coal should be reached, pay to the plaintiff a certain sum. The plaintiff sued the defendant for a breach of this covenant, and gave evidence to shew that if the defendant had sunk the pit, marketable coal might have been found :—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to more than nominal damages, and that the true measure of damage was the amount which he had lost by being deprived of the opportunity of finding marketable coal. Pell v. Shearman, 10 Ex. 766.

A lessor of a mine may maintain an action against his lessee for an injury to the reversion by improperly working the mine, notwithstanding that the injury is also a breach of the lessee's covenant upon which the lessor might have sued. Marker v. Kenrick, 13 C. B. 188 ; 22 L. J., C. P. 129 ; 17 Jur. 44.

Binding Character and Effect of Lease on Company.]—A lessor granted a lease or licence to mine under lands to two persons as trustees for a mining company. The company repudiated the lease, and alleged that they were entitled to mine under the custom of the district independently of the lease, and proceeded to mine accordingly. The applicability of the custom to the particular lands was disputed by the lessor. He filed a bill against the surviving trustee and the managing committee of the company, praying that the lease might be declared binding, not only at law on the trustee, but also in equity on the partners in the company, and that the trustee at law and the other defendants in equity were bound by the covenants in the lease ; the bill also prayed an account, and that the trustee or the company might be ordered to pay to the lessor the royalty to which he was entitled under the lease, and an injunction to restrain the working of the mine except in accordance with the lease :—Held, that the lease must be treated as binding in equity on the company, and a decree was made in accordance with the prayer against the company. Wright v. Pitt, 40 L. J., Ch. 558 ; L. R. 12 Eq. 408 ; 25 L. T. 13 ; 20 W. R. 27.

As to Right to Streams and Wells.]—By a lease, dated 1827, D. demised to W. a dwelling-house and fifteen closes of land, and granted all streams of water that might be found in four of those closes, called The Clough, The Moorin Clough, The Brow, and The Masleds, excepting out of the demise all "timber and other trees, mines and minerals, stone, gravel, sand and clay, and all streams of water, except those above granted, then being or thereafter to be found in or upon the premises demised, with power for D., his heirs and assigns, and his and their servants and workmen, from time to time to enter upon the premises, and to crop, fall, search for and make marketable all or any of the before-mentioned articles, to make any clay into bricks or tiles on the premises, and to direct or alter the course of any river, brook, spring or water." There was a plan annexed to the lease, shewing a stream of water on the north side of the premises, and flowing through their whole extent from west to east. The Clough, The Moorin Clough, The Brow, and The Masleds were situate on the banks of this stream. There was no other stream on the surface, but certain wells were in existence in those closes, and others were subsequently found :—Held, that the wells and all waters in The Clough, The Moorin Clough, The Brow, and The Masleds passed by the grant to W., and that neither D. nor his lessees could work the mines so as to cut off the springs in the closes in question. Whitehead v. Parks, 2 H. & N. 870 ; 27 L. J., Ex. 169.

8. Ways and Way Leaves.

Right to.]—The lessees of a colliery having agreed to grant to the lessees of a neighbouring colliery licence to use a right of way enjoyed by the former, and the owner of the first colliery having granted to the second lessees the same right of way during a term of years, and afterwards by assignment from the first lessees become possessed of the first colliery, and the right of way, an injunction was granted to restrain him from removing the materials and destroying the way. Newmarch v. Brandling, 3 Swanst. 99.

A lease of waste land of a manor recently enclosed by the lessee contained a reservation to the lessor, the lord of the manor, of the mines and quarries, with full power to win and work the same, with free way leave and passage to, from and along the same, on foot or on horseback, with all manner of carriages, and a covenant by the lessor that in working the mines and using the liberties and privileges reserved, he would do as little damage and spoil to the soil and herbage of the premises demised as he conveniently could :—Held, that the lessor and those claiming under him were entitled not merely to a right of way for the purpose of working the reserved minerals, but to an absolute way leave which might rightfully be used for the purpose of working minerals not under the demised property. Proud v. Bates, 6 N. R. 92 ; 34 L. J., Ch. 406 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 441 ; 13 L. T. 61.

In a crown manor, where the crown and its lessees were by custom entitled to enter on the land for the purpose of working the minerals, the defendant, the lessee of the crown mines, who was also the lessee of the Sneyd mine outside the manor, claimed a right to use a crut or an underground way beneath the land of the plaintiffs, who were copyholders of part of the manor, for the purpose of conveying minerals from the Sneyd mine to the deep pit by which the manorial mines were worked, and thence by a branch railway, constructed by the defendant over part of the same copyhold, to the main line :—Held, that such user was a trespass, and that no case of acquiescence on the part of the plaintiffs or their predecessor in title having been established, they were entitled to an injunction to restrain the defendant from carrying the Sneyd minerals over or under their copyhold land. Eardley v. Granville (Earl), 45 L. J., Ch. 669 ; 3 Ch. D. 826 ; 34 L. T. 609 ; 24 W. R. 528.

A bill by an equitable owner of an estate held under a copyhold manor to restrain a lessee of the coal mines under the manor from conveying coals, by means of an underground tramway, from under an estate A., of which the lessee was the owner, through the estate of the plaintiff, to the surface of the lessee's colliery at W. A demurrer was allowed on the ground that the plaintiff shewed no title to the place where the wrong was alleged to have been committed, and no possession of the subsoil in his estate. This decision, on appeal, was reversed. Bowser v. Maclean, 30 L. J., Ch. 273 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1220 ; 3 L. T. 456 ; 9 W. R. 112—L. C.

Implied Covenant to Procure Land.]—A lease of a colliery contained an implied covenant on the part of the lessor to procure land by compulsory powers, in order to enable the lessees to make a railway to a neighbouring canal, without which they had no access to any available market. The lessor did not procure the land, but brought an action against the lessees for rent. The lessees, acting under the advice of their solicitor, paid the rent, and subsequently proceeded to arbitration under a clause in the agreement, and an award was made in their favour. The lessor having commenced a second action for rent, the lessees applied to the court of chancery for an injunction to restrain the action; for specific performance of the agreement to provide the land; for a declaration that the award was binding; and for a rectification of the lease if necessary:—Held, that the colliery being valueless without the land, and the provision of the latter being the basis of the agreement, the documents did not carry out the intention. The whole matter was a failure, and the parties, as far as possible, must be put back in their original positions. Acraman v. Price, 24 L. T. 487; 19 W. R. 364.

IV. WORKING AND WINNING MINES.

A. BY LESSEES.—See ante, III.

B. BY OTHERS.

1. Rights and Obligations of Adjoining Owners.

a. Right to Support.

Generally.]—It is the natural right of each of the owners of adjoining mines, where neither mine is subject to any servitude to the other, to work his own mine in the manner which he deems most convenient and beneficial to himself, although the natural consequence may be that some prejudice will accrue to the owner of the adjoining mine, so long as such prejudice does not arise from the negligent or malicious conduct of his neighbour. Smith v. Kenrick, 7 C. B. 515; 18 L. J., C. P. 172; 13 Jur. 362.

The right of a person to the support of the land immediately around his house is not in the nature of an easement, but is the ordinary right of enjoyment of property, and till that is interfered with, he has no legal ground of complaint, although in fact something may have been done which (without his knowledge) has occasioned results that will afterwards affect his property. Backhouse v. Bonomi, 9 H. L. Cas. 503; 34 L. J., Q. B. 181; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 809; 4 L. T. 754; 9 W. R. 769.

The title of the owner of surface land may be so acquired as to qualify the primâ facie right to support from the subjacent strata, and to deprive him and those claiming under him of an action for damage caused by the working of the minerals underneath. Rowbotham v. Wilson, 6 El. & Bl. 593; 25 L. J., Q. B. 362; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 736. Affirmed on appeal, 8 El. & Bl. 123; 27 L. J., Q. B. 61; 5 W. R. 820—Ex. Ch.; and 8 H. L. Cas. 348; 30 L. J., Q. B. 49; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 695; 2 L. T. 642.

The principle of law to be deduced from the authorities is, that a grant or a reservation of mines in general terms confers a right to work the mines, subject to the obligation of leaving a reasonable support to the surface as it exists at the time of such grant or reservation; and, in the absence of any express stipulation enlarging or diminishing the right, the surface owner is entitled to such reasonable support from the subjacent strata for the surface in the state in which it existed at the time when the titles to the mines and to the surface came into different hands. Richards v. Jenkins, 18 L. T. 437; 17 W. R. 30.

The reservation of mines to A. in a lease of the surface to B., giving A. the right of sinking for and carrying away the minerals, making compensation for any injury thereby done to the surface or otherwise, applies only to acts done upon the surface, such as sinking pits, or other measures in order to obtain access to the minerals, and not to underground workings. Ib.

By a deed executed in 1799, the lord of a manor granted copyholds in fee, reserving all mines and minerals within and under the premises, with full liberty of ingress, egress and regress to and for the grantor, his heirs and assigns, to dig and search for, and to take, use and work the excepted mines and minerals:—Held, that the grantor was not entitled to get the china clay, inasmuch as it could be got only in a manner utterly destructive of the surface, and as the deed did not clearly reserve to him power to destroy the surface, and did not contain any provision for making compensation for injury done to the surface. Hext v. Gill, 41 L. J., Ch. 761; L. R. 7 Ch. 699; 27 L. T. 291; 20 W. R. 957.

A declaration alleged that the plaintiff was lawfully possessed of messuages, belonging to and supporting which were foundations which, by reason of his possession of the messuages, he of right had enjoyed and was enjoying, and still of right ought to enjoy, for the support of the messuages, which foundations he was of right entitled to have supported by land in which quarries were worked; and that the defendant negligently worked the quarries near to the messuages, whereby the foundations were weakened and the messuages fell. On motion in arrest of judgment:—Held, that the declaration was sufficient. Rogers v. Taylor, 2 H. & N. 828; 27 L. J., Ex. 173; 6 W. R. 249. See Woodall v. Hingley, 14 L. T. 167.

In a declaration, each count alleged that the plaintiff was possessed of a dwelling-house, and the defendant of coal mines lying near to and under it; and that the dwelling-house was supported in part by land between the same and the mines; and that the plaintiff "of right was entitled to, and of right ought to have his dwelling-house so supported in part by the land, without the hindrance or disturbance of any person." The first count alleged that the defendant "wrongfully and injuriously, in so unskilful, careless, negligent, and improper a manner, worked and excavated" the mines, that the land by which the house was in part supported was disturbed and withdrawn, and the support of the house injured and destroyed, and the foundation of the house gave way. The second count alleged that the defendant "wrongfully and injuriously made holes, excavations and cuttings in and loosened and disturbed and removed a great part of the land" by which the dwelling-house was in part supported, whereby the support of the house was injured:—Held, after verdict, a bad declaration, for not stating the grounds on which the plaintiff was entitled to have his house supported by the land above the mines. Hilton v. Whitehead, 12 Q. B. 734.

A declaration alleged that defendant, without leaving proper or sufficient pillars or supports in that behalf, and contrary to the custom of the country, worked certain coal mines under and contiguous to the close of the plaintiff, and dug for and got and moved the coals, minerals, earth and soil of and in the mines, and that by reason thereof the soil and surface of the close sank in :—Held, sufficient, without an allegation that the plaintiff was entitled to have his close supported by the subjacent strata. Humphreys v. Brogden, 15 Q. B. 739 ; 20 L. J., Q. B. 10 ; 15 Jur. 124.

A declaration stated that certain messuages and closes were in the occupation of the tenants of the plaintiffs, the reversion thereof belonging to them, and that the defendant so wrongfully, carelessly, negligently, improperly, and without leaving any proper or sufficient support, worked certain mines, and dug and got the minerals out of the mines near to the messuages and closes, that thereby the foundations of the messuages were injured, and in consequence large portions of the buildings fell down, and the ground on which the buildings stood swagged and gave way :—Held, on motion in arrest of judgment, that the declaration was good, although it contained no averment that the plaintiffs had a right to have the messuages supported by the soil under which the defendant got the mines ; for as it neither alleged nor could be inferred that the soil in which the mines were was the defendant's, or that the defendant had all the right to get the mines which the owner of the adjoining soil had, the defendant was primâ facie a wrong-doer, and therefore as against him the declaration disclosed a sufficient title. Jeffries v. Williams, 5 Ex. 792 ; 20 L. J., Ex. 14. S. P., M'Evoy v. Drogheda Harbour Commissioners, 16 W. R. 34.

Superfluous Lands.]—Where a railway sells land as superfluous, the purchaser of the surface does not acquire the right of support as against the owner of the mines and minerals. Pountney v. Clayton, 52 L. J., Q. B. 566 ; 11 Q. B. D. 820 ; 49 L. T. 283 ; 31 W. R. 664.

Obstruction to Railway Level Crossing—Embankment — Liability of Mine-owner.] — Where a mine-owner, by properly working minerals under a highway vested in a local authority, caused a gradual subsidence of the highway, and a railway company, over whose line the highway crossed on the level, placed ballast under their line to prevent it sinking and thereby obstructed the highway, the mine-owner was held not liable to the local authority for damages for the obstruction so caused. Per Collins, J. (Wright, J., dubitante), that an action for nominal damages would lie for interference with the proprietary rights of the local authority, as it would in the case of an ordinary owner, although no appreciable damage had been done by the subsidence. Att.-Gen. v. Conduit Colliery Co., 64 L. J., Q. B. 207 ; [1895] 1 Q. B. 301 ; 15 R. 267 ; 71 L. T. 777 ; 43 W. R. 366 ; 59 J. P. 70.

Injunction to restrain Interference.] — The lord of the manor granted a licence to certain persons to get china clay under the premises comprised in a deed of 1799, and under the adjoining waste land, and the licensees had entered on the premises, but the grantor asserted that they had done so by mistake, and that neither he nor they had any present intention of getting china clay on the premises, though he claimed to be entitled to do so :—Held, that this was such a threat as to empower the court to grant an injunction to restrain the grantor and his licensees from getting china clay from the premises comprised in the deed of grant. Heat v. Gill, supra.

Where houses of the plaintiffs were injured by mining operations of the defendant in adjoining land, which would have caused the soil to subside without the additional weight of the houses, a decree was made for perpetual injunction and for compensation. Hunt v. Peake, 1 Johns. 705.

An injunction to restrain the working of valuable mines refused under the circumstances, on condition of the defendants making certain admissions for the purpose of enabling the plaintiff to bring an action, although there was reason to apprehend that if the working was continued the plaintiff's houses upon the surface would be totally destroyed, or irreparably damaged, before the legal right could be decided. Hilton v. Granville (Earl), Cr. & Ph. 283. And see 4 Beav. 130 ; 10 L. J., Ch. 398.

Lessees of Land—Working on other Land.]—The defendants, having power under a reservation in a lease to get minerals under the lands of the plaintiffs, commenced workings under their own lands of such a character and in such a direction as they would have had to make under the reservation in the lease if they had chosen to exercise it, and by such workings caused the plaintiffs' land to sink :—Held, that judgment ought to be for the plaintiffs. Whitehouse v. Bayley, 34 L. T. 93.

When Injury the Result of Prior Workings.]—Between the land of the plaintiffs and that of the defendants, who were owners of a colliery, there was an intermediate piece of land, the coal under which had been worked out some years before by a third party. The effect of the cavity in the intermediate land was, that when the defendants worked the coal under their land, subsidence was caused in the surface of the plaintiffs' land. It was admitted that if the intermediate land had been in its natural state no injury would have been caused to the plaintiffs by the defendants' workings :—Held, that the plaintiffs had no right of action against the defendants. Birmingham Corporation v. Allen, 46 L. J., Ch. 673 ; 6 Ch. D. 284 ; 37 L. T. 207 ; 25 W. R. 810—C. A.

Extent of Right of Support.]—The support to which a landowner is entitled from the adjacent land is confined to such an extent of adjacent land as in its natural, undisturbed state is sufficient to afford the requisite support. Ib.

When Cause of Action first Accrues.]—A. was the owner of houses standing on land which was surrounded by the lands of B., C. and D. E. was the owner of mines running underneath the lands of all these persons. He worked the mines in such a manner (without actual negligence) that the lands of B., C. and D. sank in ; and after more than six years' interval the sinking occasioned an injury to the house of A. :—Held, that a right of action accrued to A. when this injury actually occurred, and that his right was not barred by the statute of limitations. Backhouse v. Bonomi, 9 H. L. Cas. 503 ; 34 L. J., Q. B. 181 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 809 ; 4 L. T. 754 ; 9 W. R. 769.

Successive Subsidences.]—Case in which compensation for damage done to an estate was awarded once for all, so as to take away and right of action for subsequent damage against the defendants, who were held to be not wrong-doers, but persons exercising their rights of mining operations over the land of the plaintiff, subject to paying compensation for the permanent injury thereby occasioned to the said estate. Great Laxey Mining Co. v. Clague, 4 App. Cas. 115; 27 W. R. 417—P.C.

In 1868 the defendants worked out a seam of coal in their mine, and thereby caused certain cottages of the plaintiff to subside. The defendants repaired the damage. The mine was no longer worked, and the excavation remained as it was until 1882, when there occurred a second subsidence, which was admitted to be the result of mining operations in 1868, and caused injury to the plaintiff's cottages, whereupon he sued the defendants for damages:—Held (Lord Blackburn dissentiente), that on the occurrence of the second subsidence a cause of action accrued to the plaintiff, and therefore that his right to maintain an action in 1883 was not barred by the Statute of Limitations. Darley Main Colliery Co. v. Mitchell, 55 L. J., Q. B. 529; 11 App. Cas. 127; 54 L. T. 882; 51 J. P. 148—H. L. (E.) Affirming 32 W. R. 947—C. A.

The withdrawal of any part of the stratum to the support of which the owner of the adjacent soil or house thereon is entitled, is a cause of action, as an injury to the right, although no immediate damage ensues; and no fresh cause of action accrues by the occurrence of subsequent damage. And, therefore, to an action for damage caused by such withdrawal, it is a good answer that a prior action has been brought for damage consequent upon the wrongful act, and an accord and satisfaction agreed to and performed between the parties. Nicklin v. Williams, 10 Ex. 259; 2 C. L. R. 1304; 23 L. J., Ex. 335.

Within what Time Right to Support is Acquired.]—The plaintiff's house was built (more than twenty years before) upon land under which coal mines had been worked, according to the custom of the country, leaving the soil weaker than it would otherwise have been. The defendant, knowing this, worked his coal mines under land adjacent (but not immediately adjoining), so as to cause the soil intervening to give way, and thus to cause the soil under the foundation of plaintiff's house also to give way:—Held, that the defendant was liable; and semble, that after twenty years a house acquires a right to the lateral support of the soil around it. Browne v. Robins, 4 H. & N. 186; 28 L. J., Ex. 250.

The plaintiff in 1824 built a house on a certain waste, and in the following year obtained a grant from the crown of the surface, excepting mines. The house was about thirty yards from a quarry. In 1840 the tenant of the owner of the minerals, who claimed a right to take the minerals without making compensation for damage to the surface, began to get stone from under the house, in consequence of which and of the blasting operations the house became untenantable. In 1853 the defendant cut away the supports which had been left under the house, and the house fell in. The judge left the question to the jury, who found that the plaintiff had enjoyed the right of support for his house, on the foundations on which it stood, without interruption for twenty years. On motion for a new trial, on the ground that the judge ought to have told the jury that the enjoyment was contentious and not as of right:—Held, that the question was properly left to the jury. Rogers v. Taylor, 2 H. & N. 828; 27 L. J., Ex. 173; 6 W. R. 249.

If a party builds a house on his own land, which has previously been excavated to its extremity for mining purposes, he does not acquire a right to support for his house from the adjoining land of another, at least not until twenty-one years have elapsed since the house first stood on the excavated land, and was in part supported by the adjoining land, so that a grant by the owner of the adjoining land, of such right to support, may be inferred, for rights of this sort can have their origin only in grant. Partridge v. Scott, 3 M. & W. 220; 1 H. & H. 31; 7 L. J., Ex. 101.

Surface and Minerals belonging to Different Owners.]—Where the surface of land belongs to one man, and the minerals underneath it belong to another, no evidence of title appearing to regulate or qualify their rights of enjoyment, the owner of the minerals cannot remove them without leaving support sufficient to maintain the surface in its natural state. Humfries v. Brogden, 15 Q. B. 739; 20 L. J., Q. B. 10; 15 Jur. 124.

If the surface, while unincumbered by buildings and in its natural state, subsides and is injured by the removal of the subjacent mineral strata, although the operation may not have been conducted negligently, nor contrary to the custom of the country, the owner of the surface may maintain an action against the owner of the minerals for the damage sustained by the subsidence. Ib.

Where the surface of land and the minerals under it belong to different owners, the owner of the surface is primâ facie entitled to support from the subjacent strata; and the owner of the minerals in working them is bound to leave sufficient support for the surface in its natural state. Smart v. Morton, 5 El. & Bl. 30; 3 C. L. R. 1004; 24 L. J., Q. B. 260; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 825.

Adjacent and Subjacent Mines—Rights of Owners.]—The rights and obligations of the owner or occupier of adjacent and subjacent mines are not the same. The surface owner is entitled, as against the occupier of adjacent mines or surface, to that support only which the adjacent land and mines afford to his property in its natural condition, and can acquire a right to support for buildings on his land only by possession or enjoyment for twenty years. The occupier, therefore, of adjacent mines, working them so as to subvert buildings on the surface, is not liable to an action unless the buildings have existed for twenty years before the working which has caused the injury; whereas the surface owner may maintain an action against the subjacent mine occupier for an injury to buildings on the surface, however recently erected, if it is before the commencement of the title and possession of the occupier of the mines. Richards v. Jenkins, 18 L. T. 437; 17 W. R. 30.

Damage to Land not immediately adjoining.]—When the working of mines, in however careful a manner, has occasioned the subsidence of the land of another, although not immediately adjoining, damages may be recovered in respect of the injury to buildings thereon erected or enlarged within twenty years, provided their weight did not occasion or contribute to the subsidence. Hamer v. Knowles, 6 H. & N. 454; 30 L. J., Ex. 102; 3 L. T. 746; 9 W. R. 615.

In 1833 a manufactory was erected on a close, and in 1841, and between that time and 1849, the building was enlarged. In 1843 the close and buildings, which were leased for a term, which expired in 1851, were conveyed in fee by S., the owner, to C. C. died in 1849, and in 1851 the devisees under his will conveyed the close and buildings to the plaintiff in fee, who before 1849 was assignee of the term and occupied the buildings. In 1849 and 1850 the defendants, in getting coal from their mines, near but not immediately adjoining the close, caused the surface to subside, by which the buildings were injured. The devisees of C. did not thereby, in fact, sustain any damage, inasmuch as they incurred no expense, and continued to receive the full rent from the premises, and upon the sale thereof obtained the full value, without reference to any injury thereto (of which they were ignorant) by the mining operations. Subsequently to the sale to the plaintiff, the working of the mines under lands near to, but not adjoining the close on which the building stood, occasioned a further subsidence. No damage was done by the working of the mines subsequently to 1852, but the subsidence of the ground continued, the consequence of the previous mining operations. The mining was skilfully conducted, and the buildings did not contribute to the subsidence. In 1855 the plaintiff brought an action against the defendant:—Held, that he was entitled to recover damages in respect of the deterioration in value of the manufactory, the machinery broken, the increased expense of keeping it in repair and working order, and the diminished profits both in respect of his occupation before and after the purchase. Ib.

Held, also, that the devisees of C. might maintain an action for the injury to their reversion during the subsistence of the lease as trustees, and for the benefit of the vendee. Ib.

b. Inundation of Mines.

Liability for Operations causing Damage.]—A. was the lessee of mines. B. was the owner of a mill standing on land adjoining that under which the mines were worked. He desired to construct a reservoir, and employed competent persons, an engineer and a contractor, to construct it. A. had worked his mines up to a spot where there were certain old passages of disused mines; these passages were connected with vertical shafts which communicated with the land above, and which had also been out of use for years, and were apparently filled with marl and the earth of the surrounding land. No care was taken by the engineer or the contractor to block up these shafts, and shortly after water had been introduced into the reservoir it broke through some of the shafts, flowed through the old passages and flooded A.'s mine:—Held, that A. was entitled to recover damages from B. in respect of this injury. Rylands v. Fletcher, 37 L. J., Ex. 161; L. R. 3 H. L. 330; 19 L. T. 220.

A mine-owner will not be liable to the owner of an adjacent mine for injury occasioned to such adjacent mine, where such injury proceeds from natural causes, in themselves beyond his control, though his own acts may have conduced to produce the injury, if his acts have only been those of the proper and ordinary working of his own mine, without default or negligence. Smith v. Musgrave or Fletcher v. Smith, 47 L. J., Ex. 4; 2 App. Cas. 781; 37 L. T. 367; 26 W. R. 83.—H. L. (E.)

But when for his own convenience he does something, e.g., diverts the course of the stream, he must take care that the new course provided for it shall be sufficient to prevent mischief from an overflow, so that even if that overflow should be directly and mainly occasioned by an act of nature, his own conduct in not so forming the new and diverted course for the stream of form and of sufficient capacity to carry off an accidental overflow of water, even of an exceptional kind, will be matter for consideration in determining the question of his liability. Ib.

A.'s mine was flooded by water which had, after an unusual rainfall, accumulated in an excavation made by B. on his land, and had escaped thence through his mine into A.'s, which was situated at a lower level:—Held, that although B. in making the excavation had no intention of collecting water therein, and although he had provided an outlet for such an amount of water as might be looked for in ordinary seasons, he was liable for the damage sustained by A. Ib.

The defendants, the owners of a mining property, sank a shaft by which they tapped the water which had formerly found its way into certain old workings on their own ground, and had thence percolated into the plaintiff's mines. The defendants then made a borehole at the bottom of the shaft. It was admitted that the making it was not in due course of mining, but only for the purpose of getting rid of the water. The effect of the borehole was to let off the water into the above-mentioned old workings on the defendants' ground, whence it percolated into the plaintiff's works in the same way in which it would have done if neither shaft nor borehole had ever been made:—Held, that the defendants had not by making the shaft so appropriated the water as to lay themselves under an obligation to keep it from coming upon the plaintiff's land, and that, as the effect of the defendant's operations was not to throw upon the plaintiffs' land any burden which it had not borne before, the plaintiffs' case failed. West Cumberland Iron and Steel Co. v. Kenyon, 48 L. J., Ch. 793; 11 Ch. D. 782; 40 L. T. 703—C. A.

Mines excepted out of Demise.]—Where mines were altogether excepted out of a demise of the surface:—Held, that the rights of the owner of the surface and the owner of the mines did not in any way differ from those of the owners of adjoining closes, who are strangers in title, each of whom is entitled to the water found upon his land, but neither of whom is entitled to complain of the loss of that water by natural percolation set in motion by his neighbour's excavations; for it makes no difference whether the respective closes are adjacent vertically or laterally, and the grant of the service cannot carry with it more than the ownership of the entire soil would. Ballacorkish Silver, Lead and Copper Mining Co. v. Dumbell, 43 L. J., P. C. 19; L. R. 5 P. C. 49; 29 L. T. 658; 22 W. R. 277—P. C.

Action for Injuries done by, when Maintainable.]—The defendants worked mines in two places (A. and B.), B. being to the deep of A., towards which the water from A. would naturally flow in a proper course of working, and to save pumping, stopped up the only opening between A. and B., so as to dam up the water in A., which they abandoned. The water thus dammed up rose so high as to overflow by natural gravitation into the plaintiffs' mines, through openings made by their predecessors trespassing in the defendants' mines:—Held, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to any relief, but inasmuch as the defendants had in the first instance, and until restrained by injunction, used artificial means (pipes) to send the water to the plaintiffs' mines, the bill was dismissed without costs. Lomax v. Stott, 39 L. J., Ch. 834.

The rule that a mine-owner must protect himself against water flowing from a neighbouring mine in the ordinary course of mining operations has no application to a case where the consequence of a man's mining operations is the tapping of a river bed, and the precipitating of the water of the river into his own mine and thence into that of his neighbour. Crompton v. Lea, 44 L. J., Ch. 69; L. R. 19 Eq. 115; 31 L. T. 469; 23 W. R. 53.

A bill alleged that the result of certain mining operations of the defendant must inevitably be the tapping of a river bed, and the consequent flooding of the mines of the defendant and the plaintiff; and it further alleged, in substance, that the operations in question were not legitimate mining operations, and could not result in any good to the defendant; and it prayed for an injunction against the defendant:—Held, that the bill was sustainable. Ib.

The owner of a coal mine excavated as far as the boundary (which he was by custom entitled to do), and continued the excavation wrongfully into the neighbouring mine, leaving an aperture in the coal of that mine, through which water passed into it and did damage:—Held, that the party excavating was liable in trespass for breaking into the neighbouring mine, but not in an action on the case for omitting to close up the aperture on his neighbour's soil, though a continuing damage resulted from its being unclosed. Clegg v. Dearden, 12 Q. B. 576; 17 L. J., Q. B. 233.

An owner of a mine at a higher level than an adjoining mine has a right to work the whole of his mine in the usual and proper manner for the purpose of getting out the minerals in any part of his mine; and he is not liable for any water which flows by gravitation into such adjoining mine from works so conducted. But he has no right, by pumping or otherwise, to be an agent in sending water from his mine into the adjoining mine. Baird v. Williamson, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 376; 33 L. J., C. P. 101; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 152; 9 L. T. 412; 12 W. R. 150.

A railway company, under the authority of an act, took for its line ground lying over mines, not worked, belonging to a former owner of the surface. In order to gain the level of its line, the company took away a stratum of clay, and left a surface of porous rock; they carried on the line at a slight ascent, to a brook at some distance, over which they carried the line by a flat bridge, not constructed so as to contain the waters in times of flood. Between this brook and the surface of the mine there was originally a rising ground, through which the company made a cutting for the level of its line. Afterwards, the owner of the mines began to work them, and the line began to sink; the company kept up the level of the line by heaping ashes and such substances thereon, and on the drains by the side of the line, which had also sunk. The company was bound to keep up these drains, but after they had sunk did not. A flood came, and the waters of the brook, where it is crossed by the bridge, overflowing the girders, were carried down along the hollow of the line and of the drains to the spot overlying the mines, and sinking through the porous rock, deluged the mines, and stopped the works:—Held, that the owner of the mines had a right of action against the company for the injuries arising from both the overflow from the brook and the fall of rainwater on the spot, and the overflowings of springs laid open in the cutting, and that his remedy did not lie for compensation under the act. Bagnall v. L. & N. W. Ry., 1 H. & C. 544; 31 L. J., Ex. 480; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 254; 9 L. T. 419; 10 W. R. 802—Ex. Ch.

The lessees of a colliery, being in possession of other mines adjoining, and to the rise of a particular mine, worked the mine by drivings from their own mine, and in exercise of powers contained in their lease made a channel through which the water flowed from their own to the mine by gravitation:—Held, that they were not liable to make compensation for damage caused by the water so flowing. Jegon v. Vivian, 40 L. J., Ch. 389; L. R. 6 Ch. 742; 19 W. R. 365.

A declaration stated that the plaintiffs and defendants were in possession of coal mines abutting upon each other; that the defendants, before the committing of the grievances, had trespassed upon the plaintiffs' mines, and carried away quantities of coal; that after the trespasses quantities of water accumulated in the defendants' mine, and would have inundated the plaintiffs' mine unless a sufficient barrier existed; that the defendants, by their trespasses, carried away quantities of coal, which, but for those trespasses, would have been suffered to remain and would have constituted a barrier, preventing the water in the defendants' mine from inundating the plaintiffs' mine; that, as the defendants had by their trespasses deprived the plaintiffs of their barrier, it became the defendants' duty to make such provision that none of the water accumulated in their mine should flood the plaintiffs' mine. Breach, that the defendants neglected to make such provision, whereby the water accumulated in their mine, flooded the plaintiffs' mine, and prevented them from working the same:—Held, that an action on the case would lie for the injury; and semble, that the defendants' duty was properly described in the declaration. Firmstone v. Wheeley, 2 D. & L. 203; 13 L. J., Ex. 361.

A. and B. were lessees under the same landlord of the minerals under two adjacent parts of the same estate. The soil over the mines was in its natural condition impervious to water. B. so worked his mine that the surface of the ground cracked and sank, and the rainfall and surface water flowed through the fissures and found its way into A.'s mine, which was at a lower level than B.'s:—Held, that B. was not liable for the damage so done in the natural course of user of his own land. Wilson v. Waddell, 2 App. Cas. 95; 35 L. T. 639—H. L. (Sc.)

Where mineral workings have caused a subsidence of the surface, and a consequent flow of rainfall into an adjacent lower coalfield, the injuries being entirely from gravitation and percolation are not a valid ground for any claim of damages. Ib.

Right to Injunction.]—On a bill for an injunction to protect the plaintiffs' coal mines from injury by the water flowing to them from the defendants' colliery, the court, on motion, granted an injunction restraining the defendants from working their coal mines in any places which might injure or endanger the plaintiffs' mines until answer or further order, but gave no directions for the trial of the right in a court of law. The parties went into evidence and the cause was brought to a hearing, when the court refused until the plaintiffs had established their right at law to make the injunction perpetual, but retained the bill for a year, giving the plaintiffs liberty to bring such action as they might be advised, continuing the injunction in the meantime. Beaufort (Duke) v. Morris, 6 Hare, 340. Varied on appeal, 2 Ph. 683; 12 Jur. 614.

In a suit for an injunction to restrain the defendant from making a drift from his colliery, which would have the effect of conveying water from his colliery to the colliery of the plaintiff, the injunction was granted, the bill retained for a year, with liberty for the plaintiff to bring such action as he might be advised. The plaintiff brought his action on the case for damages, but failed in the action in consequence of its appearing from the evidence, that, by the plaintiff having ceased to work his engines before the making of the drift, the water in his own colliery had risen above the level of the water in the defendant's colliery. The plaintiff therefore failed in proving actual damage; but the question as to the legal right to make the drift was not decided. The answer stated that the drift was completed, and that no injury had arisen to the plaintiff. Lord Chancellor refused to direct an issue or a special case, and dismissed the bill, no injury from any future acts of the defendant being apprehended. S. C., 14 Jur. 607.

Injunction granted, prohibitory in form, but mandatory in its effect. Tenant of a mine restrained, on motion, from permitting a communication with an adjoining mine to continue open, and water to flow through the same, the effect intended being to compel the defendants to close the communication. Mexborough (Earl) v. Bower, 7 Beav. 127.

The proprietors of a coal mine had so worked their mine by opening cuttings to draw off the water therein, that they had caused the neighbouring and adjoining mine to be flooded, and from such openings they had also abstracted coal from their neighbours' mine, and sold the same for their own benefit. An injunction was granted to restrain them from further proceeding: to stop up the existing openings and cuttings; from making another further opening which would have the effect complained of; for compensation for what damage had been sustained, and for an account of the value of the coal abstracted. Plant v. Stott, 21 L. T. 106.

The barrier between two mines having been perforated, the owner of one of them artificially conducted his water so as to pass by the perforations into the other, that mode of removing it from his mine being most beneficial to himself, thereby causing irreparable damage to the plaintiff:—Held, that the court would, on an interlocutory application, grant a mandatory injunction, so as to keep things in the state in which they were ante litem motam until the hearing. Westminster Brymbo Coal and Coke Co. v. Clayton, 36 L. J., Ch. 476.

2. GRANT OF SURFACE—RESERVATION OF MINES.

Generally.]—No presumption of a grant of mines against an express reservation on a sale many years ago, merely from permitting expenditure without claim. Norway v. Rowe, 19 Ves. 156; 12 R. R. 157.

Primâ facie, the owner of the surface is entitled to the surface itself, and all below it, ex jure naturæ; and those who claim the property in the minerals below must do so by some grant or conveyance by him, or from the crown. Rowbotham v. Wilson, 8 H. L. Cas. 348; 30 L. J., Q. B. 49; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 965; 2 L. T. 642. Affirming 5 W. R. 820—Ex. Ch.

The rights of a grantee of the minerals, by whomsoever granted, must depend upon the terms of the deed of conveyance; but primâ facie it will be presumed, if the minerals are to be enjoyed, that a power to get them was also granted or reserved as a necessary incident. Ib.

Where the owner conveys land to a person, reserving the "liberty of working the coal" in those lands, he must be taken to have reserved the estate of coal (unless there are clear words in the deed qualifying that right of property) with which he stands vested at the date of the conveyance. Hamilton (Duke) v. Dunlop, 10 App. Cas. 813—H. L. (Sc.)

When a landowner sells the surface, reserving to himself the minerals with power to get them, he must, if he intends to have power to get them in a way which will destroy the surface, frame the reservation in such a way as to shew clearly that he is intended to have that power. Hext v. Gill, 41 L. J., Ch. 761; L. R. 7 Ch. 699; 27 L. T. 291; 20 W. R. 957. S. P., Harris v. Ryding, 5 M. & W. 60; 8 L. J., Ex. 181.

If the owner of a piece of land sells the surface and reserves the minerals below it, with power to get them, he must, if he intends to have the power of destroying or letting down the surface by subsidence in getting them, frame his power in such language that the court may be able to say from the titles that such was clearly the intention of the parties. The rule established in Rowbotham v. Wilson (8 H. L. Cas. 348) and Buchanan v. Andrew (L. R. 2 H. L. (Sc.) 286) cited. Aspden v. Seddon (L. R. 10 Ch. 394) approved, but distinguished. Dixon v. White, 8 App. Cas. 833—H. L. (Sc.)

A lease contained an exception in favour of the lessor, of the mines and quarries under the demised property, with full power to win and work, and also with free way leave and passage to, from and along the same. The lessor covenanted, in using the excepted rights, to do as little damage and spoil to the soil as possible:—Held, that the lessor was not entitled so to work the reserved mines as to let down the surface. The right to support is incident to a grant of the surface, and cannot be taken away, except by a clear indication in the instrument of such an intent. Proud v. Bates, 6 N. R. 92; 34 L. J., Ch. 406; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 441; 13 L. T. 61.

Where an owner of land has granted the surface, reserving the coal mines and seams of coal, and a right of entry for the purpose of working and winning the same, making compensation for the damage caused in so doing, he is not entitled to work out all the coal so as to cause the surface to sink, unless the established course and practice of good mining at the time of the reservation justifies him in so doing.

Smart v. Morton, 5 El. & Bl. 30; 3 C. L. R. 1004; 24 L. J., Q. B. 260; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 825.

A deed of the 9th December, 1671, which severed the surface from the minerals, contained a reservation of the mines to the grantor, with free and full power and liberty to work, sink, dig for or win the same, and to drive drifts, make water-courses, or do any other act necessary or convenient for the working, winning, or getting the same, with a covenant by the grantor to pay to the grantee treble the damages, loss, or prejudice which the grantee should sustain by reason of such digging or working:—Held, that the reservation was subject to the implied right of the grantee of the surface to support from the minerals, and did not empower the grantor to remove the whole of the minerals without leaving a support for the surface. Ib.

A. conveyed to B. in fee, a messuage, buildings, yard, gardens and homestead, with the appurtenances, and certain closes of land, excepting all mines of coal under the lands and hereditaments; with liberty to enter and sink pits for getting all such coal, and to erect engines and make drains necessary for working the coal; except as to such lands as lay within 150 yards of the messuage and buildings, and except any homestead:—Held, that the seller thereby reserved to himself the right to dig coals under the messuage, buildings, and homesteads, and within 150 yards of the same, but was not entitled to sink pits, erect engines, or make drains within 150 yards of the messuage or buildings, or within the homestead. Bowler v. Woolley, 15 East, 444.

A., being seised in fee of lands, granted the lands to P., his heirs and assigns, reserving to himself, his heirs and assigns, "all and all manner of coals, seams and veins of coal, iron ore, and all other mines, minerals, and metals which then were, or at any time, and from time to time thereafter, should be discovered in or upon the premises, with free liberty of ingress, egress, and regress, to come into and upon the premises, to dig, delve, search for, and get the mines and every part thereof, and to sell, dispose of, take, and convey away the same at their free will and pleasure; and also to sink shafts for the raising up works, carrying away and disposing of the same or any part thereof, making a fair compensation to P. for the damage to be done to the premises, and the pasture and crops growing thereon":—Held, that under this reversion, A. was not entitled to take all the mines, but only so much as he could get, leaving a reasonable support to the surface. Harris v. Ryding, 5 M. & W. 60; 8 L. J., Ex. 181.

Where mines were altogether excepted out of a demise of the surface:—Held, that the rights of the owner of the surface and the owner of the mines did not in any way differ from those of the owners of adjoining closes, who are strangers, in title, each of whom is entitled to the water found upon his land, but neither of whom is entitled to complain of the loss of that water by natural percolation set in motion by his neighbour's excavations; for it makes no difference whether the respective closes are adjacent vertically or laterally, and the grant of the surface cannot carry with it more than the ownership of the entire soil would. Ballacorkish, Silver, Lead and Copper Mining Co. v. Dumbell, 43 L. J., P. C. 19; L. R. 5 P. C. 49; 29 L. T. 658; 22 W. R. 227.

By a deed dated in 1783, the plaintiff's predecessors in title revoked the old uses of certain lands, and granted and appointed such lands to the defendant's predecessors in title and his heirs, saving and reserving to themselves and their heirs full and free liberty to get and carry away the minerals thereunder:—Held, that the clause of reservation operated, not as an exception of the minerals, but as a regrant of a non-exclusive licence to get them, and that the defendant could not be restrained from working the mines. Sutherland (Duke) v. Heathcote, 61 L. J., Ch. 248; [1892] 1 Ch. 475; 66 L. T. 210—C. A.

Contract Expressly Exempting from Liability.] A feu of land was granted reserving the subjacent minerals, and stipulating that the feuar should have no claim against the superior or his tenants in respect of any damage that might arise from the working of the minerals. Damage having arisen, the feuar is not entitled to an interdict prohibiting the workings complained of, as he has by his contract bound himself to submit to the consequences. Buchanan v. Andrew, L. R. 2 H. L. Sc. 286.

Mode of Working.]—In a conveyance of land in Northumberland, a reservation was made to the grantor of all "mines or seams of coal, and other mines, metals, or minerals," under the land granted, with liberty to dig, bore, work, lead, and carry away the same, and to make pits, &c.:—Held, that the term "minerals" included freestone, but that the grantor had liberty only to get the freestone by underground mining, and not by working in an open quarry. Bell v. Wilson, 35 L. J., Ch. 337; L. R. 1 Ch. 303; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 263; 14 L. T. 115; 14 W. R. 493.

Case in which grants of land reserving the minerals, each reservation varying in substance and expression, were held to have secured or not to have secured, a right to carry outside minerals underneath and through the land granted. Remarks as to whether the rights reserved were rights of property, or rather in the nature of privileges, servitudes or easements. Ramsay v. Blair, 1 App. Cas. 701—H. L. (Sc.)

When in a feu charter the superior reserves the coal and limestone, with the right to work them, giving satisfaction for damage, the right reserved is a right of property, or an absolute ownership, and not a mere servitude or easement; the surface and the minerals becoming separate tenements severed in title, and in such a case the superior, as absolute proprietor of the reserved coal and limestone, may make a tunnel through them for the conveyance of other minerals belonging to him in the lands adjacent. Hamilton (Duke) v. Graham, L. R. 2 H. L. (Sc.) 166.

—— "Unnecessary Interference."] — The owner of land under which there were several strata of coal, demised one of the upper strata to the plaintiff, reserving to himself and his lessees the right of working any coal not included in that demise, and the same powers and privileges with respect to such last-mentioned coal as if that demise had not been made; provided always, that in exercising such powers and privileges the working of the coal then demised should not be prevented or unnecessarily interfered with, and that compensation should be made to the plaintiff for any necessary interference with the workings. The landowner afterwards demised some of the strata of coal, underlying the coal demised to the plaintiff, to the M. company.

The plaintiff brought an action for an injunction against the landowner and the company :—Held, by Kay, J., on the construction of the lease, that working under a barrier between the demised coal and an adjoining worked-out mine, in such a way as might probably endanger the barrier, and thereby let in a sufficiently large quantity of water to delay and impede the working of the upper strata, was an "unnecessary interference" within the meaning of the proviso in the lease. But held, by the court of appeal, that the proviso in the lease was unintelligible and could not determine the rights of the parties; that if a lessor wished to reserve rights in derogation of his grant, he must do so in plain terms; and that on that ground the plaintiff was entitled to an injunction if he could prove that the works threatened by the defendants would in all probability affect the security of his mine. Mundy v. Rutland (Duke), 23 Ch. D. 81; 31 W. R. 510—C. A. Affirming 46 L. T. 477.

Estate Sold in Lots.]—The conveyance of an estate in a mining district, sold in lots, contained an exception of all mines and minerals under the land included in the lot conveyed, with full power for the grantor to work, get, and dispose of them, without entering upon the land sold, and without being answerable for any injury to the land, or any buildings on it, by reason of working or getting the excepted mines or minerals, and without being liable to any action or suit for any such injury :—Held, that a purchaser of two of the lots was not entitled against the grantor to either vertical or lateral support for the surface of his land. Williams v. Bagnall, 12 Jur. (N.S.) 987; 15 W. R. 272.

Covenant or Condition.]—The plaintiffs were seised in fee of lands to which their predecessors derived title under a conveyance in the reign of Elizabeth, wherein the grantor reserved to himself and his heirs male a rent-charge of 7*s.* 8*d.*, and which contained a proviso that the grantee and his heirs should not dig or get any coal upon the lands for sale, but only such as should be burned or employed thereon. The defendant, claiming title under a demise from a descendant of the grantor, had for more than twenty years worked from mines of his own under adjacent lands into, and had taken coals from, the mines under the plaintiff's lands :—Held, that the proviso in the original conveyance was a covenant, and not a repugnant condition, and that it did not affect the amount of damages which the plaintiffs were entitled to claim, as, under it, the grantee was still entitled to get all the coal for his own use, though not to sell it. Ashton v. Stock, 6 Ch. D. 719; 25 W. R. 862.

Buildings to be Erected.]—Upon a conveyance of land for the express purpose that buildings or other works shall be erected upon it—the right of working minerals being reserved to the vendor—the purchaser is entitled to support from the adjacent and underlying soil, not only for the surface land, but for the buildings erected upon it; and this right is not affected by the circumstance that the conveyance is to a company taking the land under compulsory powers, and not from the vendor voluntarily. Elliot v. North Eastern Ry., 10 H. L. Cas. 333; 32 L. J., Ch. 402; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 555; 8 L. T. 337; 11 W. R. 604.

The vendor of land adjoining other land of his own under which are mines and minerals, and who knows at the time of the sale that the vendee is about to erect upon the land so purchased substantial buildings, impliedly covenants that he will not use or permit the adjoining land to be used in such a manner as to derogate from his grant. Siddons v. Short, 46 L. J., C. P. 795; 2 C. P. D. 572; 37 L. T. 230.

A. sold land to B. for the purpose of an iron foundry. Adjoining the land so sold to B., A. had other land under which was coal. A. afterwards leased the minerals to C., who commenced working the coal within such a distance from the land of B. as to be reasonably calculated to endanger its stability :—Held, ground for an injunction against A. and C., although no actual damage had been sustained by B. Ib.

The holder of a building lease, where minerals are reserved, has a right to dig foundations for buildings about to be erected and dispose of the materials dug out, but not to do so in order to improve the surface as a building site. Robinson v. Milne, 53 L. J., Ch. 1070.

A piece of land on which a cotton mill was to be built was conveyed, the grantor reserving to himself a chief rent, and reserving all mines and minerals under the piece of land, and power to take the same at pleasure, making compensation for damages to be done to the cotton mill. The grantee covenanted to build and keep and repair the cotton mill :—Held, that the grantor would not be restrained from working and taking the minerals under the piece of land, though the buildings on the piece of land would necessarily be thereby injured. Aspden v. Seddon, 44 L. J., Ch. 359; L. R. 10 Ch. 394; 32 L. T. 415; 23 W. R. 580.

Custom whether Consistent with Reservation.]—A farm was let under a written agreement, reserving to the landlord "all mines and minerals, sand, quarries of stone, brick, earth, and gravel pits." A local custom (which, it was suggested, had grown up within the last thirty or forty years) allowed tenants of such farms, let with a similar reservation, to take away the flints that were turned up in the ordinary course of good husbandry, and to sell them for their own benefit. If the flints were not turned up and removed such farms could not be properly cultivated :—Held, that the custom was reasonable and valid; and when read into the written agreement was not inconsistent with the reservation, even assuming (but without deciding) that the reservation of "mines and minerals" included such flints. Tucker v. Linger, 52 L. J., Ch. 941; 8 App. Cas. 508; 49 L. T. 373; 32 W. R. 40—H. L. (E.)

Compensation in respect of Operations.]—W. purchased lands, formerly part of the waste of a manor, which were sold under a local inclosure act to defray the expenses of the act. The lord of the manor leased the mines under the lands so sold to K., who commenced working by sinking shafts. W. filed a bill against the lord of the manor and K., to restrain the working of the mines, or at least such a working as to cause a subsidence of the surface. It having been proved that the mines could not effectually be worked without causing a subsidence of the surface :—Held, that the lord of the manor, or his tenant, had a right to work the mines, to an extent which might cause the utter destruction of the land above, making compensation to the owner of the surface for the damage done. Wakefield v.

Semble, that there may be a valid claim by custom, or prescription in a manor, for the lord or his licensees to work mines so as to destroy the tenants' surface. Ib.

The owner in fee of an estate granted away a portion of it, which ultimately became the property of the plaintiff, but reserved a rent-charge (subsequently redeemed), and also the minerals under the land so granted, and the right to work them, paying compensation for all damage that should be done thereby to the erections on the land. The grantee (for the better securing of the rent-charge) covenanted to build a mill on the land granted to him. The owner in fee afterwards granted to the defendants' predecessor in title the minerals, rights and liberties so reserved, and also the other and adjacent portion of the estate. The defendants, who took with notice of the agreement as to the payment of compensation, worked the minerals under the plaintiff's land, and also the minerals under their own land, and by the operation of one or other of these workings, or by their joint operation, let down the surface of his land, and so injured the mill which had been built there in accordance with the covenant:—Held, first, that the right to work the subjacent mines being subject to the condition of paying compensation, the plaintiff could maintain an action for the injury done to the mill by the working of those mines. Aspden v. Seddon, 46 L. J., Ex. 353: 1 Ex. D. 496; 36 L. T. 45; 25 W. R. 277—C. A.

Held, secondly, that if the injury arose from the working of the mines under the adjacent lands, or from the combined effect of working those mines and the subjacent ones, the plaintiff was still entitled to recover. Ib.

A conveyance of land in fee was made subject to a reservation to the grantors of mines and minerals, and extensive powers of occupying and using the surface for the purpose of working the same. It was provided that it should not be lawful for the grantee to do or suffer anything to be done whereby the grantors should be prevented, hindered, or obstructed in the exercise of the powers reserved, and also that the grantors should make to the grantee annually reasonable compensation for damage or spoil of ground to be occasioned by the exercise of the reserved powers. Previously to the date of the deed of conveyance the premises were leased to the grantee, subject to similar reservations to those in the conveyance, and workings already existed which had taken place under such reservations:—Held, that no restriction was placed by the words of the conveyance on the use by the grantee of the land for any purpose to which it was applicable so long as he did not touch or interfere with the minerals, and the compensation for damage or spoil of ground occasioned by the exercise of the powers reserved must be estimated with reference to the value of the land for any purpose to which an ordinary owner might put it; and that compensation was due in respect of damage arising from the use subsequently to the conveyance of land included therein that had been previously occupied and used for mining purposes, but not in respect of the mere existence of workings in being at the time of the deed, or their subsequent user without any fresh damage. Mordue v. Durham (Dean), 42 L. J., C. P. 114; L. R. 8 C. P. 336; 28 L. T. 593.

By a deed of 1857, A., who was tenant for life under the will of S., conveyed (under a power) land to B. in fee, with a reservation out of the grant of "all and every the seam or seams of coal and other minerals under the hereditaments granted, with power to win, work, and carry away the same under or over any part of the hereditaments and premises, A., or the person or persons for the time being entitled thereto, and his or their assigns, paying to B., his heirs and assigns compensation for any damage which he or they may sustain," and a covenant by A. that he had not done or permitted any act or thing whereby the premises or the like should or might be incumbered or prejudicially affected. And B. covenanted, for himself, his heirs and assigns, "that the hereditaments and premises conveyed, or any buildings now or hereafter to be erected thereon, shall not at any time hereafter be used for the manufacture, sale, or storing of any combustible matter, or for the purpose of any offensive trade or business, the side walls to be not less than eighteen feet high, and to be in uniformity with the street." In 1844, S., A.'s testator, demised to C. and D. "a colliery and coal mines and seams of coal, as well opened as not opened" (including and comprising all seams of coal under the land conveyed by the deed of 1857), with full power to the lessees, their executors, administrators, and assigns, to win, work, and carry away the seams of coal for a term of years not yet expired. The plaintiff became possessed of the land comprised in the deed of 1857, and built four houses thereon; and, whilst he was so possessed, the houses were injured by the working and carrying away by the assignees under the lease of 1844 of the seams of coal thereunder. He thereupon brought an action against A., claiming compensation under the reservation contained in the deed of 1857. A. pleaded as to the damages and injury done to the part of the piece of ground on which the houses were built, and to the houses, and to the compensation claimed, that such damage and injury were occasioned by reason of the houses having been erected thereon:—Held, that the compensation clause in the deed of 1857 extended to houses thereafter built upon the land, and consequently that the plea was no answer. Berkley v. Shafto, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 79.

3. Wrongful Working.

By Railway — Amalgamation.] — Questions having arisen in 1862, between the lessees of two adjoining collieries, one of such lessees being the West Hartlepool Railway Company, as to the boundaries of their respective collieries, new boundary maps were prepared, and in 1864 it was by an agreement mutually agreed between the parties that all claims on account of damage of every kind, whether by trespass or otherwise, should be condoned. Pending that agreement, an act of parliament was passed in 1863, under which the West Hartlepool Company were to sell their collieries within a period of five years and in 1865 another act was passed whereby the West Hartlepool Company became amalgamated with, and all their assets, debts, and liabilities, and engagements were transferred to, the railway company. In 1870 the plaintiffs for the first time discovered, and the evidence distinctly showed, that in 1863, after the boundaries had been settled, the West Hartlepool Company had broken through the barrier between the collieries and worked out the plaintiffs' coal. Upon a bill filed for an account of the coal worked by the West Hartlepool Company, and for damages in respect of the injury sustained by the breaking down of the barrier :—Held, that the working of the colliery by the West Hartlepool Company was not ultra vires, as the power to work for a period of five years must be implied from the authority to sell, and that whatever liability they were under at the time of their amalgamation with the railway company, was transferred to the defendant company by the act of 1865. Ecclesiastical Commissioners v. North Eastern Ry., 47 L. J., Ch. 20 ; 4 Ch. D. 845 ; 36 L. T. 174.

Where "Trespass" will Lie.]—Trespass, and not case, will lie for encroaching on a lead mine, though the plaintiff has no property in the soil above the mine, but only a liberty of digging. Harker v. Birkbeck, 1 W. Bl. 482 ; 3 Burr. 1556.

Action of Trespass—What sufficient Possession as against Wrong-doer.]—D. and H. agreed between themselves, in writing, to purchase lands then in the market. By this agreement D. was to have the surface at three-fourths, and H. the minerals at one-fourth of the whole purchase-money. H. afterwards entered into a contract with the owner of the lands to purchase them from him. The lands were duly conveyed to D. by the owner, H. being a party to the purchase deed, and executing a release of all his interest in the lands to D. Afterwards, by an indenture of the 12th July, 1834, D. granted, bargained, and sold to H., his executors, administrators and assigns, all the minerals lying under the lands, upon terms substantially the same as those contained in the previous agreement between D. and H. The indenture of the 12th July, 1834, was not inrolled as a bargain and sale, and there was no livery of seisin to make it operate as a feoffment. There were seven seams of coal and minerals lying under the lands, and soon after the execution of the deed, H. began to work and get the coal under the lands, and continued so to do between 1834 and 1844. He did not, however, go below the two first seams of coal, and on his ceasing to work in 1844, H. left tramways, implements, &c. in the tunnels and levels he had made. In 1855, H. by deed, conveyed the minerals (except the two first or upper seams), with power to dig for and get the coal, to the plaintiffs, who shortly afterwards entered and bored down below the two first seams, in order to try for, but they did not work the coal. D. died in 1848, and in 1857 his devisee and heir-at-law, by deed, granted the lands (except the coal thereunder theretofore sold and conveyed to H.) to S. subject as to the beds of coal under the same to the indenture of the 12th July, 1834. In 1872, S. granted a lease of the coal under the lands to the defendants, and they entered and worked, and got coal under the lease in 1872. On the 1st January, 1873, the surviving trustee for sale of D. granted and confirmed unto S. and his heirs, all the seams and beds of coal lying under the lands, subject to such right or interest as legally passed to H., his executors, administrators or assigns, under the indenture of the 12th July, 1834. H. died in 1861 :—Held, that the plaintiffs, through H., had sufficient possession of all the seams of coal to entitle them to maintain trespass against the defendants, who were mere wrong-doers, for intruding upon the plaintiffs' mines. Low Moor Co. v. Stanley Coal Co., 34 L. T. 186—C. A.

Damages for Abstracting — Measure of.] — When coal has been wrongfully taken by working into the mine of an adjoining owner, the trespasser, in the absence of any suggestion of fraud, will be treated as the purchaser at the pit's mouth, and must pay the market value of the coal at the pit's mouth, less the actual disbursements, not including any profit or trade allowances, for severing and bringing it to bank, so as to place the owner in the same position as if he had himself severed and raised the coal. United Merthyr Collieries Co., In re, Powell Duffryn Steam Coal Co.'s Claim, Ex parte, L. R. 15 Eq. 46 ; 21 W. R. 117.

When a coal mine has been worked by a trespasser, but under a bonâ fide claim of title, in taking an account of the coal wrongfully worked, he will be allowed to deduct the cost of getting and severing the coal as well as the cost of bringing it to the pit's mouth. Jegon v. Virian, 40 L. J., Ch. 389 ; L. R. 6 Ch. 742 ; 19 W. R. 365.

When a vendor of a coal mine, against whom a suit for specific performance was brought, had, during his delay of completion, worked the mine for his own benefit :—Held, that the purchaser was entitled to compensation on an estimate of the market value of the coal in situ, i.e. the value at the place where it was to be sold, less the cost of severing and taking it from the mine to that place. Brown v. Dibbs, 37 L. T. 171 ; 25 W. R. 776—P. C.

A defendant wrongfully worked the plaintiff's coal so that some coal left in large pillars was rendered partly by the effect of crushing less valuable to work :—Held, that inasmuch as the physical constitution of the unworked coal was changed, damages would be given for the injury to the unworked coal. Williams v. Raggett, 46 L. J., Ch. 849 ; 37 L. T. 96 ; 25 W. R. 874.

The lord of a manor, in which there was no custom authorising him so to do, entered without permission on the land of a copyhold tenant, which was in the occupation of a tenant, and dug for and carried away coprolites. A large trench was dug, which at the time when the copyhold tenant commenced a suit against the lord to restrain the trespass, was not filled up, though it was filled up and the surface restored before the suit came to a hearing. The digging was continued after filing the bill, and until the coprolites were exhausted :—Held, that the proper measure of damage was the gross amount produced by the sale of the coprolites, less the expense of the working, and such a sum by way of profit as would have induced a stranger to undertake the working. Att.-Gen. v. Tomline, 46 L. J., Ch. 654 ; 5 Ch. D. 750 ; 36 L. T. 684 ; 25 W. R. 802.

The owner of a colliery entered into a contract with an adjoining landowner for the purchase of his estate, without disclosing the fact, of which he was ignorant, that they had, without authority, gotten a considerable quantity of coal from under it :—Held, that the landowner was entitled to the value of the coals gotten under his land, with an allowance for raising, but none for getting, and to compensation in the way of way-leave and royalty for all minerals gotten by the defendants from their own mines and carried under his land. Fothergill v. Phillips, L. R. 6 Ch. 770.

In an action for digging the plaintiff's coals in his mine, and taking and converting them, the proper measure of damages is the value of the coals when first severed from the mine. Morgan v. Powell, 3 Q. B. 278 ; 2 G. & D. 721 ; 11 L. J., Q. B. 263 ; 6 Jur. 1109.

Where a party, in working his coal mine, broke through the barrier and worked the coal under the land adjoining, belonging to the plaintiff, and raised it for purposes of sale :—Held, in trespass for such working, that the proper estimate of damages was the value of coal so raised without deducting the expense of getting it. Martin v. Porter, 5 M. & W. 352 ; 2 H. & H. 70.

In a suit in equity for an account of coal wrongfully worked by the defendant, where the working was inadvertent and without fraud, the court, in assessing the compensation for the coal got by him, directed him to be charged only with the fair market value of the coal, as if the coal-field had been purchased by him of the plaintiff. Hilton v. Woods, 36 L. J., Ch. 941 ; L. R. 4 Eq. 432 ; 16 L. T. 736 ; 15 W. R. 1105.

So in an action for cutting into and carrying away land, the measure of damages is the value to the plaintiff of the land so taken, not the expense which would be incurred in restoring it to its original condition. Jones v. Gooday, 1 D. (N.S.) 50 ; 8 M. & W. 146 ; 10 L. J., Ex. 275.

In assessing the amount of damages to be paid where another person's coal has been wrongfully taken by an adjoining mine-owner, if the wrongful working was by inadvertence simply, or under a bonâ fide mistake of title, the wrongful worker is entitled to deduct from the market value both costs of severance and of bringing to bank. If the wrongful act has been fraudulent, negligent, wilful, or wholly unauthorised and unlawful, only the costs of bringing to bank are allowed. But in no case is the wrongful getter deprived of the costs of bringing to bank. Joicey v. Dickinson, 45 L. T. 643—C. A.

In an action for taking coals from a mine, where the defendant is a mere wrongdoer, the measure of damages is the value of the coals at the time when they first existed as chattels, and the defendant is not entitled to any deduction for the expense of getting them, or for a rent payable to the mine-owner on coals from the mine. Wild v. Holt, 9 M. & W. 672 ; 1 D. (N.S.) 876 ; 11 L. J., Ex. 285.

A. was the owner of a small feu of about an acre and a half in extent. The surface of the ground was occupied by miners' cottages, and underneath was coal. When A. purchased the feu, he was under the impression that all the minerals under the feu, as under all the ground surrounding it, had been reserved to the superior ; but that was a mistake, for in the deed granting the feu there was no reservation of coal. The superior granted the whole property in the coals in all the surroundings land to R. and C. They, under the impression that they had the whole of the coal, including the coal under the acre and a half, worked out and disposed of the coal under A.'s acre and a half ; and in so doing so damaged the surface. A. could not have worked the coal to a profit himself ; there was no person to whom he could dispose of it but to R. and C. ; and the element of wilful trespass, and the element of special and exceptional need of support to the surface, were absent. In a claim by A. for (1) the value of the coal ; (2) a sum for "way-leave" and the advantage obtained by working through instead of round the feu ; and (3) for damages done to the houses on the surface :—Held, that the value of the coal taken must be the value of the coal to the person from whom it is taken, at the time it is taken, and that the best evidence in the peculiar circumstances of this case of that value was the royalty paid by R. and C. for the surrounding coalfield ; therefore A. was entitled to the lordship on the coal excavated, calculated at that rate ; together with the payment of a sum for damage done to the houses on the surface. Livingstone v. Rawyards Coal Co., 5 App. Cas. 25 ; 42 L. T. 334 ; 28 W. R. 357 ; 44 J. P. 392—H. L. (Sc.)

—— Statute of Limitations.]—The plaintiffs, the owners of coal mines, discovered in 1872 that the defendant more than six years previously had, when working an adjoining colliery, worked a large quantity of the plaintiffs' coal by breaking their boundary. There had been no subsidence of the surface or anything to put the plaintiffs on inquiry, and the defendant, in plans which he kept of the workings in his own mine, had not marked the illegal workings :—Held, that the omission in the plans was not sufficient to constitute a case of concealed fraud so as to entitle the plaintiffs to an account and damages. Dawes v. Bagnall, 23 W. R. 690.

The plaintiffs, who were owners of a coal mine, claimed damages against the owners of an adjoining mine for having broken their barriers and worked their coal. The wrongful acts were committed in 1863 while the adjoining mine was being worked by the Hartlepool Railway Company. The boundaries of the two mines were settled by mutual agreement in 1862, and after negotiations a release was executed in 1864, by which all previous wrongful acts were condoned and released on both sides :—Held, that the wrongful acts committed in 1863 were not condoned by the release of 1864, the plaintiffs having had no ground for suspecting that while the release was in negotiation the previous settlement of boundaries had been broken. Ecclesiastical Commissioners v. North-Eastern Ry., 47 L. J., Ch. 20 ; 4 Ch. D. 845 ; 36 L. T. 174.

Held, also, that the Statute of Limitations only commenced to run from the time of the discovery of the wrongful acts, there being no laches attributable to the plaintiffs for not having discovered the damage prior to 1870, two years before the filing of the bill. Ib.

Liability to Account.]—A mine-owner who passes his boundary, and takes coals from his neighbour's mine, is liable to account for the value of the coals at the pit's mouth, with just allowances for the cost of raising, but not of getting or severing. Llynvi Coal Co. v. Brogden, 40 L. J., Ch. 46 ; L. R. 11 Eq. 188 ; 23 L. T. 518 ; 19 W. R. 196.

When by underground working a party had taken the coal of his neighbour, a court of equity limited the account to six years, but intimated that the amount wrongfully abstracted being proved, the onus of proof would lie on the wrongdoer to show that it was not taken within six years. Dean v. Thwaite, 21 Beav. 621.

The owner of a mine commenced to work from his own mine into an adjoining mine vested in trustees, in the bonâ fide belief that he was about to obtain from them a contract authorising him so to work, and gave to one of the trustees notice that he was about to commence working :—Held, that the working, though no contract was afterwards entered into, and the trustees had no power to make one, ought to be treated on the same footing as if it had been commenced inadvertently, and in taking an account of the minerals gotten without authority the defendant was allowed the cost of severing them, as well as the cost of bringing them to bank. But from the time that notice was given to the defendant that no contract would be made with him authorising him to work, his working was treated as fraudulent, and he was allowed only the cost of bringing the minerals to bank. Trotter v. Maclean, 49 L. J., Ch. 256; 13 Ch. D. 574; 42 L. T. 118; 28 W. R. 244.

So long as a wrongful working is to be treated as inadvertent the Statute of Limitations applies, and the account will only be directed for six years from the issue of the writ. But the onus is on the defendant to shew that minerals gotten by him were gotten before the six years. Ib.

The plaintiffs were seised in fee of lands to which their predecessors derived title under a conveyance in the reign of Elizabeth, wherein the grantor reserved to himself and his heirs male a rent-charge of 7*s.* 8*d.*, and which contained a proviso that the grantee and his heirs should not dig or get any coal upon the lands for sale, but only such as should be burned or employed thereon. The defendant, claiming title under a demise from a descendant of the grantor, had for more than twenty years worked from mines of his own under adjacent lands into, and had taken coals from, the mines under the plaintiffs' lands:—Held, that the defendant had not acquired any title to the mine by possession under the Statute of Limitations, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to an injunction with an account for six years. Ashton v. Stock, 6 Ch. D. 719; 25 W. R. 862.

Where a defendant had been working under a bonâ fide belief as to his title, he was entitled, in taking the account, to an allowance of his expenses of severing the coal as well as bringing it to bank. Ib.

—— By Mortgagee]. — The plaintiffs were mortgagees in possession of a colliery, and were also treated by the court as lessees of the same colliery under a lease for a fixed term of years at a rent and a certain royalty for all coal gotten. The lease contained covenants to leave pillars of coal to support the roof and not to work or remove the pillars. The mortgagees underlet the colliery and gave their sub-lessees permission to work and remove the pillars, which they did:—Held, that in taking the accounts as against mortgagees in possession, the mortgagees having allowed their sub-lessees to take the coal, must be treated as having taken it themselves, and, having so taken it wrongfully in breach of the covenants in the lease, must be charged, not with the amount of the royalty reserved, but with the full value of the coal, subject to a deduction for the costs of bringing it to the surface, but not for the costs of severance; and the foreclosure, which had been made absolute before the appeal was heard, was re-opened. Livingstone v. Rawyards Coal Co. (5 App. Cas. 25) distinguished. Taylor v. Mostyn, 55 L. J., Ch. 893; 33 Ch. D. 226; 55 L. T. 651—C. A.

When a mortgagor knows that a mortgagee in possession is working mines under the mortgaged premises, and for a number of years allows the working to go on without objection or complaint, the court will not allow him to surcharge the mortgagee with the value of the ores raised by him or his lessees, or of the surface land necessarily damaged by reason of such working. Millett v. Davey, 31 Beav. 470; 32 L. J., Ch. 122; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 392; 7 L. T. 551; 11 W. R. 176. See Hood v. Easton, 4 W. R. 786.

Compensation Moneys — Successive Tenants for Life — Remaindermen.] — Minerals were devised by will upon trust for B. for life without impeachment of waste, with remainder on trust for the defendant for life without impeachment of waste, with remainders over. During the life and also after the death of B., part of these minerals were won by instroke by the owners of the adjoining mines, who had trespassed innocently and paid compensation moneys for so doing:—Held, that the moneys paid in respect of the minerals so won during the respective lives of B. and the defendant, belonged to the estate of B. and to the defendant respectively. Barrington, In re, Gamlen v. Lyon, 56 L. J., Ch. 175; 33 Ch. D. 523; 55 L. T. 87; 35 W. R. 164.

Prospective Damages.]—When injury has been occasioned to land and buildings by mining operations under the land of an adjoining owner, the plaintiff is entitled to recover, in an action founded upon such injury, compensation, not only for the damage that has actually occurred at the time of action brought, but also for the prospective damage resulting from the defendant's act. As the cause of action was complete at the moment that the first damage accrued to him, the plaintiff must recover once for all in one and the same action for all damage past, present and future, resulting from that one cause of action—for the reason that no occurrence of damage subsequently, as the result of the original act of the defendant, would give a fresh cause of action. Lamb v. Walker, 47 L. J., Q. B. 451; 3 Q. B. D. 389; 38 L. T. 643; 26 W. R. 775.

There being no abstract right to the support of the adjacent land, the act of the excavating owner is only tortious when it produces and to the extent to which it produces actual damage, On the one hand, therefore, the defendant is not liable for damage which has not occurred, and which never may occur, and on the other, each fresh interference with the enjoyment of property, on the occurrence of subsequent damage, is a wrong done, and creates a further cause of action, of which the plaintiff can avail himself. Ib.

Case in which compensation for damage done to an estate was awarded once for all, so as to take away any right of action for subsequent damage against the defendants, who were held to be not wrongdoers, but persons exercising their rights of mining operations over the land of the plaintiff, subjecting to paying compensation for the permanent injury thereby occasioned to the said estate. Great Laxey Mining Co. v. Clague, 4 App. Cas. 115; 27 W. R. 417—P. C.

Right of Inspection of Adjoining Mine.]—See PRACTICE (INSPECTION OF PROPERTY).

Compensation Moneys—Interest—Lapse of Time.]—By a decree made in 1871, the defendants were declared liable in respect of coal wrongfully removed by them from under the land of the plaintiffs, and an inquiry was directed as to the quantity and value of the coal so taken. After the decree the defendants died, and the inquiry was continued against their representatives. In 1889 the official referee reported the value of the minerals taken. In 1890, on the further consideration of the action, the plaintiffs claimed to be entitled to interest on the amount so found:—Held, first, that the action was not an action for trover or trespass de bonis asportatis, and that interest could not be claimed under s. 29 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42: secondly, that assuming interest might have been awarded by the decree on the theory that this was an equitable action to compel a wrongdoer to account for benefits accruing to his estate by reason of his wrongful act, the plaintiffs' claim was barred by lapse of time. Phillips v. Homfray, 61 L. J., Ch. 210; [1892] 1 Ch. 465; 66 L. T. 657—C. A.

Trover for Minerals abstracted—Evidence.]—In trover for copper ore raised under the plaintiff's land, the presumption that the right to the minerals accompanied the fee simple of the land may be rebutted by the absence of enjoyment of the minerals by the plaintiff, and the user by persons not the owners of the soil. Rowe v. Grenfel, R. & M. 396; 27 R. R. 761.

Where, in trover for copper ore, it was proved that the plaintiff was in possession of land, in which he had sunk a shaft and raised the ore in question, and the same witness on cross-examination proved that ore was taken away by a person who had a shaft in an adjoining close, and who was getting the same lode of copper ore under the plaintiff's land when he sunk his shaft:—Held, that this was primâ facie evidence of the plaintiff's title to the ore, which must be left to the jury. Rowe v. Brenton, 8 B. & C. 737; 3 M. & Ry. 133.

The plaintiffs were lessees, under certain persons called the lords of Mold, of all mines and minerals under a large tract of waste land called Mold mountain. In trover, for ore wrongfully extracted by the defendants from a spot which the plaintiffs alleged to be part of Mold mountain:—Held, that it was not necessary for the plaintiffs to prove the title or seisin of their lessors; but that it was enough for them, as against the defendants, who were wrongdoers, to show a possession and an enjoyment by themselves under the lease; and that, for this purpose, acts of ownership exercised by the plaintiffs, by working mines on other parts of the mountain, were evidence of their right under the spot in question, being part of the waste. Taylor v. Parry, 1 Scott (N.R.) 576; 1 Man. & G. 604; 9 L. J., C. P. 298; 4 Jur. 967.

Injunction—Right to.]—Injunction granted where defendant, having begun to work mine in his own land, continued it into plaintiff's. Mitchell v. Dors, 6 Ves. 147.

The court will not by injunction restrain the working of mines, permitted during eight years, without directing an action. Field v. Beaumont, 1 Swan. 208.

An injunction to restrain the working of a quarry was granted as against a defendant claiming under a lease, and not denying the fact of his having worked, although the plaintiff's evidence did not distinctly prove the defendant's participation. Bell v. Wilson, 34 L. J., Ch. 572; 12 L. T. 529; 13 W. R. 708.

An injunction at the suit of a reversioner to restrain from quarrying, where a parol licence was granted by his lessee, and acts done on the faith of it, and the grantee was not a party to the suit, was refused with costs. Donegal (Marquis) v. Connor, 15 W. R. 888.

If a person only threatens to open mines, plaintiff may come into court to restrain him from doing it. Gibson v. Smith, 2 Atk. 182.

An injunction to restrain the working of valuable mines refused under the circumstances, on condition of the defendants making certain admissions for the purpose of enabling the plaintiff to bring an action, although there was reason to apprehend that if the working was continued the plaintiff's houses upon the surface would be totally destroyed or irreparably damaged before the legal right could be decided. Hilton v. Granville (Earl), Cr. & Ph. 283; 11 L. J., Ch. 388; 4 Beav. 130.

By a deed executed in 1799, the lord of a manor granted copyholds in fee, reserving all mines and minerals within and under the premises, with full liberty of ingress, egress and regress to and for the grantor, his heirs and assigns, to dig and search for, and to take, use and work the excepted mines and minerals. The lord of the manor granted a licence to certain persons to get china clay under the premises comprised in the deed of 1799, and under the adjoining waste land, and the licensees had entered on the premises, but the grantor asserted that they had done so by mistake, and that neither he nor they had any present intention of getting china clay on the premises, though he claimed to be entitled to do so:—Held, that this was such a threat as to empower the court to grant an injunction to restrain the grantor and his licensees from getting china clay from the premises comprised in the deed of grant Hext v. Gill, 41 L. J., Ch. 761; L. R. 7 Ch. 699; 27 L. T. 291; 20 W. R. 957.

Tipping Mining Spoil—Land—Continuous User—Measure of Damages.]—In assessing damages for trespass by tipping mining spoil for eight years on another's land, the value of the land to the wrongdoer for the purposes for which it was used by him must be taken into consideration. The principle of the way-leave cases, Jegon v. Vivian (40 L. J., Ch. 389; L. R. 6 Ch. 742) and Phillips v. Homfray (L. R. 6 Ch. 770), that a trespasser shall not be allowed to use another person's land without paying for it, applied on the ground that the trespasser, besides injuring the land, had also had the use of it. Whitwham v. Westminster Brymbo Coal and Coke Co., 65 L. J., Ch. 741; [1896] 2 Ch. 538; 74 L. T. 804; 44 W. R. 698—C. A.

4. UNDER CANALS, WATERCOURSES, &C.

Right of Support—Statutory Powers—Subjacent Minerals—Compensation.]—Ordinarily, where land is granted by private grant for the construction of specific works, the grant, in the absence of a contrary intention appearing on the face of it, carries by implication the right of reasonable and necessary support for the works to be constructed. The same principle applies to titles and rights created by act of parliament, and, where an express statutory right is given to make and maintain a thing necessarily requiring support, the right to necessary support is, in the absence of a context pointing to the contrary, implied to accompany the right to make and maintain the thing requiring support; and, in cases where a mode of compensation is provided for the owners of the lands furnishing such support, the reasons for implying that such right of support is intended by the act are overwhelming. L. & N. W. Ry. v. Evans, 62 L. J., Ch. 1; [1893] 1 Ch. 16; 2 R. 120; 67 L. T. 630; 41 W. R. 149—C. A.

Security of Canal and Mines — Compensation for not Working.]—By a section of an act empowering a company to make a canal it was provided that nothing therein contained should affect the right of any owners of lands to the mines and minerals under the lands to be made use of for the canal, and that it should be lawful for such owners to work such mines and minerals, not thereby injuring, prejudicing, or obstructing the canal. By another section it was provided that if the owners should in pursuing such mines work near or under the canal so as in the opinion of the canal company to endanger or damage the same, or in the opinion of the owners of the mines to endanger or damage the further working thereof, it should be lawful for the canal company to treat and agree with the owners for all such minerals as might be near or under the canal as should be thought proper to be left for the security of the canal or mines; and in case they should disagree then it should be lawful for certain commissioners at the request of the canal company or of such owners to summon a jury to assess what satisfaction such owners ought to receive from the canal company; and upon payment of such satisfaction such owners should be perpetually restrained from working such mines within the limits for which satisfaction should by the jury be declared to extend. Owners of a coal mine under and near the canal having given the canal company notice that they were going to work the coal, the company declined to purchase or pay compensation for leaving the coal, and the owners then worked the coal, and thereby damaged the canal. The working was in the usual mode, without negligence and without doing unnecessary damage save in not leaving sufficient support:—Held, that the owners of the mine had a right under the act to initiate proceedings and to receive satisfaction for such minerals as should be thought proper to be left for the security of the canal or the mine, but were liable in damages for working the mine to the injury of the canal. Dudley Canal Co. v. Grazebrook (1 B. & Ad. 59) distinguished. Cromford Canal Co. v. Cutts (5 Railw. Cas. 442) approved. Knowles v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Ry., 59 L. J., Q. B. 39; 14 App. Cas. 248; 61 L. T. 91; 54 J. P. 103—H. L. (E.)

Where a private act of parliament, authorising the contruction of a canal, empowers the canal company to give notice to mine-owners by the side of the canal to discontinue working adjacent minerals if the continued working is likely to damage the canal, and empowers the mine-owners to discontinue working if they consider that damage to the mines will probably result from further working, and in each case provides for compensation for the coal unworked—but there is no statutory prohibition against working—the mine-owners are not entitled to discontinue working and claim compensation on the ground that some injury may be caused to the canal by such working. Cromford Canal Co. v. Cutts (5 Railw. Cas. 442), and Knowles v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Ry. (14 App. Cas. 248), discussed and distinguished:—Semble, that if the private act imposed a prohibition upon working the mines to the danger of the canal, the canal company could not waive it. Chamber Colliery Co. v. Rochdale Canal Co., 64 L. J., Q. B. 645; [1895] A. C. 564; 11 R. 264; 73 L. T. 258—H. L. (E.)

A special act empowered certain persons to make a canal, the mines and minerals under the lands taken being reserved to the owners, with power to work them not thereby injuring the canal; and it was provided that if the owners in working any mines near or under the canal should endanger or damage it, the canal proprietors might require them to desist on making compensation. The plaintiffs were owners of mines lying under the canal, and also under lands adjacent thereto:—Held, that so far as their adjacent mines were concerned, and notwithstanding that they were also owners of subjacent mines, the plaintiffs were under no statutory liability towards the canal proprietors not to damage or endanger the canal, and consequently that they had no corresponding right to claim satisfaction for the minerals left. New Moss Colliery Co. v. Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Ry., 66 L. J., Ch. 381; [1897] 1 Ch. 725; 76 L. T. 231; 45 W. R. 493.

—— Undertaking by Canal Proprietors not to Sue.]—In such a case, if the canal proprietors undertake to allow the owners of subjacent minerals to work them, and not to sue for any damage consequent thereon to the canal (it being admitted that such damage will be comparatively trifling, and will not interfere with the navigation), the owners are not entitled to have it ascertained what portion of the subjacent minerals should be left, and what compensation should be paid therefor by the canal proprietors. Chamber Colliery Co. v. Rochdale Canal Co. (63 L. J., Q. B. 811; 64 Ib. 645; [1894] 2 Q. B. 632; [1895] A. C. 564) followed. Knowles v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Ry. (59 L. J. Q. B. 39; 14 App. Cas. 248) considered. Ib.

Waterworks — Prospective Prevention of Working through Leakage—Compensation.]—Under the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict. c. 17), compensation for the prospective prevention of the working of a mine by reason of leakage from a reservoir cannot be awarded at any time before the working has approached the limits mentioned in s. 22. Holliday v. Wakefield Corporation, 60 L. J., Q. B. 361; [1891] A. C. 81; 64 L. T. 1; 40 W. R. 129; 55 J. P. 325—H. L. (E.). And see also WATER.

Refusal to Purchase—Liability of Owner for Injury.]—A canal act provided, that no owner of any mines should carry on any work for the getting of coal or minerals within twelve yards from the canal, or any reservoir to be made by the company, nor should any coals or other minerals be got under any part of the canal, or towing-paths thereunto belonging, or any such reservoir, or any land or ground lying within the distance of twelve yards of either side of the canal, or any reservoir, except as thereinafter mentioned, without the consent of the company. By another clause it was provided, that when the owner of any coal mine, lying under the canal, towing-paths, reservoir, &c., or within the distance thereinbefore limited, should be desirous of working the same, then such owner should give notice of his intention to the company, three months before he should begin to work such mines lying as aforesaid; and upon the receipt of such notice, it should be lawful for the company to inspect such mines in order to determine what coal or other minerals might be come at and gotten without prejudice to the canal; and if the company should neglect to inspect such mines within thirty days next after the receipt of such notice, then the owners of such mines were authorised to work such part of the said mines as lay under the canal, or within the distance aforesaid; and if upon inspection the company should refuse to permit the owners of the mines to work such part of the mines lying as aforesaid, or any part thereof, as they might have come to and gotten, then the company should within three calendar months pay the owners the value thereof. By another clause, nothing in the act contained was to defeat the right of any owner of lands or grounds in, upon, or through which the canal should be made, to the mines lying within or under the lands or grounds to be set out or made use of for such canal, but all such mines were reserved to such owners respectively; and it should be lawful to such owners, subject to the conditions therein contained, to work all such mines, provided that in working such mines no injury was done to the navigation:—Held, that this proviso was to be construed with some qualifications, viz., either as importing that the party working the mines was to do no unnecessary damage to the navigation, or no extraordinary damage by working the mines out of the usual mode; and, therefore, where notice had been given by the lessee of a coal mine of his intention to work the same under a reservoir belonging to the canal company, and the latter had not purchased his right within the time limited by the act, that the lessee was entitled to work the mine under such reservoir in the usual and ordinary mode; and the reservoir having been damaged by reason of such working by the lessee, that no action was maintainable by the company against him for such damage. Dudley Canal Co. v. Grazebrook, 1 B. & Ad. 59; 8 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 361.

An act provided that the canal company should not be entitled, on purchasing lands for making a canal, to any coal mines under the same, but that such mines should belong to the same persons as would have been entitled to them if the act had not been made; but it required the owners to give notice to the company of their intention to work the mines within ten yards of the canal, and that the company might inspect the mines, and might stop the further working of them, on paying compensation to the owners:—Held, that the right of the owners to work within the ten yards was left as before the act, if, after notice given by them to the company, the latter did not purchase out their rights; and that the canal being damaged by the nearer approach of the mine after such notice and non-purchase, no action lay against the coal-owner for such injury, which happened by the default of the company in not purchasing. Aliter, where the house of one claiming under a grant from the owner of the soil was undermined. Wyrley and Essington Canal v. Bradley, 7 East, 368; 8 R. R. 642. And see Rex v. Birmingham Canal Co., 2 B. & Ald. 570.

By a canal act it was provided that no owner of any mine should work the same under the reservoir of the canal company, except as therein mentioned, without the consent of the company; and that when the owner of any mine under the canal works should be desirous of working the same, such owner should give notice in writing of such his intention to the company before beginning to work; that the company might then inspect such mine, and upon failure or neglect of the company so to inspect within thirty days after such notice, the owner of such mine might work and get such part of the mines as lay under the canal and works; and that if upon such inspection the company should refuse to permit the owner of the mines to work such part of the mine, the company should, within three calendar months after such refusal, purchase the same. And nothing therein contained should be construed to prejudice the right of the lord of the manor or waste, or any owner of any ground through which the company's works should be made, to the mines under such ground, such lord or owner being thereby empowered to work the same, subject to the conditions therein contained; provided that no injury were done in the working to the navigation:—Held, that this last proviso was not to be construed as rendering futile all the previous provisions of the act; therefore, where an owner of mines had given notice of his intention to work them, and the company had neglected to purchase the mines in the manner prescribed by the act:—Held, that the owner of mines might work the same under the company's works, and the company's works having been damaged in consequence of such working, that the company could not maintain an action against the mine-owner to recover compensation for such damage. Stourbridge Canal Co. v. Dudley (Earl), 30 L. J., Q. B. 108; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 329; 3 L. T. 449; 9 W. R. 158—Ex. Ch.

—— Liability of Company for Leakage.]—An action was brought against a canal company by the owners of mines lying beneath a canal for so negligently managing the canal as to allow the water to escape from it and flood the mines. The canal was constructed by a company under the provisions of a local act, by which it was enacted that if any proprietor of mines under the canal, or within twelve yards of either side of it, should be desirous of working them, he should give three months' notice to the company, who, if they failed to inspect the mines within thirty days, should be considered as permitting them to be worked; and if, on inspection, they refused permission, they should be compelled to purchase the same. There was a proviso in working the mines, "No injury be done to the navigation, anything therein contained to the contrary notwithstanding." By the compensation clauses of the act, the company, in making the canal, was to do as little damage as possible, and to make satisfaction for damage sustained by the owners of the lands, tenements or hereditaments taken, or used or prejudiced by the execution of the powers of the act, and compensation was made payable for the damage which should be at any time or times whatsoever sustained by the owners of the lands, &c., by reason of making, repairing, or maintaining the canal, or by flowing, leaking or oozing of the water over or through the banks of the canal (if complaint were made within six months of the injury). The owners of the mines gave notice of their intention to work the mines within the prescribed distance of the canal. The company did not inspect the mines, and refused to purchase them. The owners proceeded to work the mines, the canal being then in good order, and water-tight. They worked the mines in the usual manner, without which they could not have had the full benefit of the coal, and the effect of such working was to let down and crack the bed of the canal, and to allow the water to flow into and cause damage to the mines. The company, during the working of the mines, took all proper precautions to keep the canal water-tight:—Held, that the company was not responsible for the damage to the mines, as there was no proof of any negligence on their part, or of anything done in excess of their statutory powers. Dunn v. Birmingham Canal Co., 42 L. J., Q. B. 34; L. R. 8 Q. B. 42; 27 L. T. 683; 21 W. R. 266—Ex. Ch.

A company with statutory powers suffered water to percolate from their canal into an adjoining mill, and cause damage. Such percolation arose in the first instance from a subsidence of the land caused by the working of a mine-owner under both the canal and the mill, and could not have been foreseen or prevented by the company by any reasonable means at any reasonable cost:—Held, that the canal company were nevertheless guilty of negligence, in not making good the damage when it occurred, and must pay compensation to be assessed as provided by the Canal Act, but that it was not a case for granting an injunction against the company to restrain the percolation of water. Evans v. Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Ry., 57 L. J., Ch. 153; 36 Ch. D. 626; 57 L. T. 194; 36 W. R. 328.

Company preventing Working—Limits.]—A canal company was empowered by act of parliament to prevent the owners of land adjoining the canal from working the mines and minerals within ten yards of it, but was required to give compensation for stopping any such workings:—Held, that the company might prohibit the working of mines beyond the ten yards if in their opinion the working would endanger the canal, but that they must compensate the owner for stopping mines beyond the ten yards. Midland Ry. v. Checkley, 36 L. J., Ch. 380; L. R. 4 Eq. 19; 16 L. T. 260; 15 W. R. 671.

A canal act provided that no owner of mines should carry on any work for getting such mines under any tunnel, or within twenty yards of the same, without the consent of the company; and that no owner of any mines should, without such consent, carry on any work for getting coal or mineral within twelve yards of the canal, "except as hereinafter mentioned." Then followed clauses which provided that the owner of mines might, without such consent, get coal and minerals beyond the prescribed limits, and that the company might enter upon lands and mines for discovering the distance of the canal from the working parts of such mines, and that if any mine should be worked contrary to the act, they might use all necessary means for making the canal safe. By a subsequent clause it was provided, that when the owner of any mine lying under the canal, or within the limited distance, should be desirous of working the same, he should give the company three months notice of his intention, and upon the receipt of such notice it should be lawful for the company to inspect such mines in order to determine what materials might be gotten without prejudice to the canal; and if upon inspection the company should refuse to permit the owners of such mines to work them, then the company should within three months pay to the owners the value thereof. Another clause provided that nothing in the act contained should defeat the right of any owner of land through which the canal should be made to the mines under the land used for the canal, and that it should be lawful for such owner to work such mines, provided that no injury were done to the navigation:—Held, that the prohibition against working any mine within twenty yards of a tunnel without the consent of the company was not absolute, but subject to the same exception as working within twelve yards of the canal, and therefore if the company refused to permit the owner of a mine to work it within twenty yards of a tunnel, they were bound to pay him the value thereof. Birmingham Canal Co. v. Dudley (Earl), 7 H. & N. 969; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 24—Ex. Ch.

—— Compensation.]—By a local act, tenants for life were empowered to sell lands to a canal company for the purposes of their undertaking. It was provided that in case the parties should differ as to the amount of the purchase-money, a jury should assess the amount, and ascertain what sum should be paid for the land, and also what other sums should be paid for past and future damage. The mines and minerals under the lands conveyed were reserved to the owners, with power to the owners to get them, provided no injury should be done to the canal thereby. And the company was empowered to inspect the mines, and to compel the owners to desist from working so as to injure the canal. Under the act a tenant for life sold lands to the company, which were known to contain coal, though at the time it was not known whether the coal would be gotten. Some years afterwards a mine was opened for the purpose of getting the coal underlying the canal. The company restrained the owners of the mine from working so as to endanger the canal:—Held, that, in the absence of a special provision in the act to that effect, the company was not liable to make any compensation to the owners of the coal mine for the loss incurred by them by reason of this restriction of their powers of working the mine. Reg. v. Aire and Calder Navigation Co., 30 L. J., Q. B. 337; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 115; 10 W. R. 40.

—— Amount of Compensation.]—A canal company was authorised by their act of incorporation to require the workers of any mines under the canal to leave so much coal on each side of the canal as they might require for the safety of it; and the company were to make compensation, to be assessed (if the parties differed) by a jury:—Held, that the company were bound to make compensation, not only for the value of the coal in the bed, but also for the additional profit which could only be made by getting it. And a bill having been granted to a coal-worker pending the purchase of part by the company, he also was entitled to compensation. Barnsley Canal Co. v. Twibell, 7 Beav. 19; 13 L. J., Ch. 434.

—— Mode of Obtaining Compensation.]—By an act a company was empowered to take lands for the purpose of its navigation, with provision for a jury to ascertain the sums to be paid as purchase-money, and for damage in carrying the act into effect. By s. 170, no mine-owner should work any mines in or under any lands within forty yards of certain tunnels (by which the canal passed under a hill), without the leave of the company; and by s. 171, if the company instead of insisting upon having the full forty yards left unworked, should require less than thirty yards to be left, then the mine-owner might insist on having a greater quantity, not exceeding thirty yards, left unworked for his security: and the question in dispute as to such last-mentioned quantity was to be tried, settled and determined by an issue at law. By s. 172, whenever any mine in due course should become workable within forty yards of the tunnels, the mine-owner should give notice to the company, who, thereupon should pay him (as the case might be) for so much of the forty yards as they should require to be left unworked for their security, or as might be ascertained by the issue to be necessary to be left unworked for his, provided that no mines should in any case be worked under the tunnels. But whenever any such last-mentioned mines should become workable, satisfaction should be made by the company for the same, such satisfaction to be settled by an issue at law. Sect. 173 gave the mode of trying any feigned issue, and enacted, that, after trial and verdict, the court should give judgment for the sum of money awarded by the jury:—Held, that where a mine had become workable within forty yards of the tunnels, and the company had required the whole forty yards to be left unworked for their security, the owner of the mine was entitled to compensation for the forty yards; but that the only remedy to enforce it was by a feigned issue, and not by an action. Fenton v. Trent and Mersey Navigation Co., 2 Railw. Cas. 837; 9 M. & W. 203.

A canal act prohibited any proprietor of mines from working the same under or within twenty yards of any tunnel, and directed that if he should be desirous of so working the same, he was to give notice of the intention to the company; and if they refused to permit him to work such part of the mines as he might have gotten, they were to pay him for it such sum as a compensation jury should assess. The lessees of minerals under a lease covenanted with the lessors to work the mines, and raise and get the coal thereout, until the whole of the mines, or as great a quantity as, by working, could be gotten, should be worked out, "except the ribs and pillars, which must necessarily or which the lessors might require to be left." The lessees accordingly gave notice of their intention to work the mines under a tunnel of the company; on which the company gave their refusal, and a jury assessed a sum to be paid by the company to the lessees for their ceasing to work such part of the mines. In an action by the lessees against the company for nonpayment of the assessed sum, the company pleaded that the mines which the lessee so ceased to work were a rib within the meaning of the covenant in their lease, and that the lessors did require the coal to be left by the lessees; also, that the lessees did not cease from working the minerals within twenty yards of the tunnel; also, that after refusal by the company, and before the summoning of a jury, the lessees abandoned their notice, and did, in fact, work and carry away a portion of the coal within twenty yards:—Held, that there was no answer to the action. Swindell v. Birmingham Navigation Co., 9 C. B. (N.S.) 241; 29 L. J., C. P. 364; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 190.

Injuries to Watercourses.]—An owner of freehold lands and his lessee will be restrained from working mines under a watercourse otherwise than in a manner not likely to prevent the plaintiff from enjoying an uninterrupted flow of water to his works. Elwell v. Crowther, 31 Beav. 163; 31 L. J., Ch. 763; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1004; 10 W. R. 615.

By mining operations, the defendant had sunk not only the level of a stream supplying the plaintiff's mill, but also that of the adjoining land. The plaintiff filed a bill for an injunction; but it did not appear that there had been any diminution of water to the mill:—Held, that the bill ought not to be dismissed; and, on the defendants undertaking not to work the minerals so as to obstruct the water and the supply thereof along the watercourse, it was retained, with liberty to apply. The court, however, intimated that, in default of the undertaking being given, an injunction would be granted. Ib.

5. Under Railways.

a. Purchase of and Compensation for.

"Minerals"—Open Workings.]—"Minerals" in ss. 77 & 78 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, includes minerals which are got by open quarrying. Limestone is a mineral within the same sections. Midland Ry. v. Robinson, infra.

The word "mines" in s. 77 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, includes minerals, whether got by underground or by open workings; and therefore a bed of clay, on which the railway had been made, was as a mine excepted out of the conveyance of the land to the railway company, and might, unless the company were willing to make compensation to the landowner, be dug and worked by him. Midland Ry. v. Haunchwood Brick and Tile Co., 51 L. J., Ch. 778; 20 Ch. D. 552; 46 L. T. 301; 30 W. R. 640.

Clay is a mineral within the meaning of s. 77 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845. Therefore a railway company was held liable to the owner of land taken by them in respect of clay for such land used for puddling bridges, which clay it was not necessary to remove in the construction of their line. Loosemore v. Tiverton and North Devon Ry., 51 L. J., Ch. 570; 22 Ch. D. 25; 47 L. T. 151; 30 W. R. 628.

Where Land Purchased.]—The company having, by the terms of its purchase, precluded the owners of lands from working mines in a way injurious to their property, cannot, in the absence of statutory provision to that effect, be compelled to purchase those minerals of the owners. North Eastern Ry. v. Crosland, 4 De G. F. & J. 550; 1 N. R. 72; 32 L. J., Ch. 353; 7 L. T. 765; 11 W. R. 83.

Construction of ss. 6 and 78 of Railways Clauses Act.]—In claims for compensation for not working mines adjoining a railway and railway works, s. 6 and s. 78 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, must be read together. Smith v. G. W. Ry., 47 L. J., Ch. 97; 3 App. Cas. 165; 37 L. T. 645; 26 W. R. 130—H. L. (E.)

Sect. 6 gives a general right to compensation to "owners and occupiers of, and all other parties interested in, lands taken or injuriously affected by the construction" of the railway. Ib.

In s. 78 the person entitled to give notice to the directors of a railway company of his intention, within thirty days, to work a mine, is the owner, lessee or occupier, who has the right and the power to work it. The directors are entitled to have an inspection of the mine, and to offer compensation to him for not working, which compensation may be settled as therein mentioned. The compensation thus settled is that to which he is individually entitled, according to the extent of his interest. If the lessee is the person thus giving notice, and receiving compensation, the owner, if he can show a right of his own beyond that of his lessee who has been compensated, is also entitled to compensation under s. 6. Ib. But see Dixon v. Caledonian Ry., infra.

The words "he" and "his," in two of the parts of s. 78, refer to the person entitled to compensation, whether owner, lessee, or occupier. Ib.

The word "lands" in s. 6 includes mines; and that section, in regard to the compensation thereby provided, is to be read with reference to the Lands Clauses Act. Ib.

Injunction restraining Working after Compensation.]—After compensation agreed on, and obtained or tendered, a perpetual injunction may be granted against the working of the mines. H. was the lessee of mines under a railway, his lease being of sufficient length to enable him to exhaust the coal; he gave the company notice of his intention to work the mines, and they gave him a counter-notice under s. 78 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, and made compensation as provided by the section. Before the expiration of his term, H. surrendered his lease, and S. became owner of the mines in fee. On a bill by the company to restrain S. from working the mines:—Held, that the company, by compensating the lessee, became the owner of the mines, and was entitled to a perpetual injunction, but that S. might obtain compensation for any injury he had sustained under s. 6. Smith v. G. W. Ry., supra.

Purchase by Company of other Strata besides the Surface Soil—Compensation.]—The provisions of ss. 77—85 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, apply to every case where a railway company acquiring land leaves untaken any portion of the mines or minerals beneath it; their operation is not restricted to the case of a purchase of the surface soil only. Where a railway company serves a notice to treat for the compulsory taking of land including mineral strata, but leaving other strata to the original owner, compensation for the interference with the latter cannot be awarded in the arbitration under the notice to treat, but can be obtained only under the provisions and subject to the conditions of ss. 77—85 of the Railways Clauses Act. Gerard (Lord) and L. & N. W. Ry., In re, 64 L. J., Q. B. 260; [1895] 1 Q. B. 459; 14 R. 201; 72 L. T. 142; 43 W. R. 374—C. A.

When Notice may be Given.]—An owner is not justified in giving a notice under s. 78 unless he has a bonâ fide present intention to work the minerals, but it is immaterial whether he intends to work them himself or by lessees or licensees. Midland Ry. v. Robinson, 59 L. J., Ch. 442; 15 App. Cas. 19; 62 L. T. 194; 38 W. R. 577; 54 J. P. 580—H. L. (E.)

Though a mine-owner may give notice under ss. 77 to 79 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, of his intention to work out the minerals under a railway, the railway proprietors are not bound to any fixed period after that notice within which they must give a counter-notice. They can stop the working at any time thereafter that they fear danger to the line, by a notice of their willingness to pay compensation for the minerals they desire left standing. Dixon v. Caledonian Ry., 5 App. Cas. 820; 43 L. T. 513; 29 W. R. 249; 45 J. P. 105—H. L. (Sc.)

A. and B. were the lessees of the minerals, viz., limestone, under a railway passing through Caldwell. They, on the 8th of July, 1878, gave notice in terms of the above sections to the proprietors of the railway that they were desirous of working, and intended to work, the "mines and minerals including limestone" lying under the railway. The proprietors of the railway did not, before the expiration of thirty days, give notice to A. and B. of their desire to have such mines and minerals left unworked, but they did give such notice on the 20th of February, 1879, offering compensation for the limestone unworked. A. and B. contended that the notice of the 20th of February, 1879, was too late to prevent them working out the limestone; because such notice to be valid was required to be given before the expiration of thirty days from the date of their notice of the 8th of July, 1878:—Held, that the notice of the railway proprietors was valid. Ib.

The incidental dictum in Smith v. G. W. Ry. (3 App. Cas. 182), that after thirty days had expired the time had passed for the railway proprietors to give a counter-notice is no judicial authority, being said where it was in no way material for the decision, and where the point could not have been fully argued, no counter-notice having been given in that case. Ib.

Company not Purchasing — Working by Owner.]—If the owner of minerals usually worked by open quarrying desires to work them and the railway company does not purchase them, he may, under s. 79 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, enter upon and break up the surface of the land of the railway company for the purpose of winning the minerals, even though the consequence be the destruction of the railway. Ruabon Brick and Terra Cotta Co. v. G. W. Ry., 62 L. J., Ch. 483; [1893] 1 Ch. 427; 2 R. 237; 68 L. T. 110; 41 W. R. 418—C. A.

A railway company on purchasing, under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 20, ss. 77—79, land for the purpose of the railway, does not become entitled to the mines under the land; the owner may work them after notice duly given; and if, after such notice, the company, though desiring to prevent the working, does not give compensation for the minerals, the owner may work them up to and under the railway, working them in a proper manner and according to the usual manner of working such mines in the district. G. W. Ry. v. Bennett, 36 L. J., Q. B. 133; L. R. 2 H. L. 27; 16 L. T. 186; 15 W. R. 647. S. P., Fletcher v. G. W. Ry., 29 L. J., Ex. 253; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 961; 2 L. T. 803; 8 W. R. 501—Ex. Ch.

Claim for Compensation—Lands Clauses Act.]—The provisions of the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, are applicable to claims for compensation made under s. 78 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, but, semble, not under s. 81. A prerogative writ of mandamus is the proper remedy for enforcing the taking up of awards made under the Lands Clauses Act. Reg. v. Lambourn Valley Ry. (22 Q. B. D. 463) distinguished. Reg. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 63 L. J., Q. B. 695; [1894] 2 Q. B. 512; 10 R. 359; 58 J. P. 719.

—— Items of Compensation.]—By s. 81 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, a railway company shall "from time to time pay to the owner, lessee or occupier of mines extending so as to lie on both sides of the railway, all such additional expenses and losses as shall be incurred by such owner," by reason of the severance of the surface land or of the continuous working of the mines being interrupted, or by reason of the same being worked so as not to prejudice the railway; and in case or dispute as to the amount of "such losses of expenses," the same shall be settled by arbitration:—Held, that an arbitrator appointed to assess the losses or expenses sustained and incurred by a mine-owner by reason of his land being severed and the working of his mine being interrupted, rightly included in his award items of compensation for additional losses or expenses not then actually sustained or incurred, but which would necessarily be sustained or incurred in working the mines and which were capable of being immediately estimated with reasonable certainty. Whitehouse v. Wolverhampton and Walsall Ry., 39 L. J., Ex. 1; L. R. 5 Ex. 6; 21 L. T. 558; 18 W. R. 147.

Bond given before Entry on Lands—Amount.]—The compensation in respect of which the bond is given by a railway company under s. 85 of the Lands Clauses Act, on entering upon lands before agreement, does not include compensation for minerals under ss. 78 and 81 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845. Neath and Brecon Ry., Ex parte, 45 L. J., Ch. 196; 2 Ch. D. 201; 24 W. R. 357.

A railway company, being desirous of entering upon certain lands before agreement, made the usual deposit and gave the usual bond. Afterwards, by an agreement in writing between the company and landowner, it was referred to an arbitrator to determine the purchase-money for the lands taken by the company and also the "compensation for any damage sustained by the landowner by reason of the execution of their works, and which, under the special act, the Lands Clauses Act, or the Railways Clauses Act, the landowner was entitled to claim against the company":—Held, that the bond did not include compensation awarded by the arbitrator in respect of minerals under the Railways Clauses Act, ss. 78 and 81, and that the company, having paid the sum awarded as the purchase-money and compensation in respect of the lands taken by them, had performed the condition of the bond, and was entitled to the return of their deposit. Ib.

No Conveyance of, unless expressly Purchased.]—A railway company compulsorily purchasing land is not entitled to a conveyance of the mines and minerals, unless they have been expressly purchased, even where the land has been valued and taken at a large price as building land. Metropolitan District Ry. and Cotton's Trustees, In re, 45 L. T. 103—C. A.

Where Corporation purchases Land.]—A corporation served the usual notice on a landowner before applying to parliament for power to take his land. The act, when obtained, gave the corporation power to take more of his land than was described in the notice:—Held, that under the circumstances the corporation was not obliged to take the mines and minerals under the land taken by them. Huddersfield Corporation and Jacomb, In re, 44 L. J., Ch. 96; L. R. 10 Ch. 92; 31 L. T. 466; 23 W. R. 100.

Subsequent Purchase of Minerals under Lands previously acquired.]—A railway company having the usual power to purchase lands under its special act, has, by virtue of s. 6 of the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, power also to purchase the minerals under those lands compulsorily at any time before the expiration of the time limited for the exercise of its compulsory powers, if it should deem it advisable. That power is not taken away by the 77th and following sections of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, which are for the benefit, not of the mine-owner, but of the company, and only exempt the company from the obligation of buying the minerals at once, together with the surface lands. The words "expressly purchased" in s. 77 are not to be confined to "purchased by agreement." There is no distinction between the severance of ownership vertically, that is, of the surface lands from the mines beneath, and the severance of ownership laterally by the taking by successive purchases of surface lands from the same landowner. So a railway company having already acquired surface lands may subsequently purchase compulsorily the minerals under those lands. Errington v. Metropolitan District Ry., 51 L. J., Ch. 305; 19 Ch. D. 559; 46 L. T. 443; 30 W. R. 663—C. A.

Compensation Money—Apportionment—Tenant for Life.]—A tenant for life without impeachment of waste is not entitled to an apportioned part of the compensation money paid into court by a railway company under s. 69 of the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, in respect of unworked mines and minerals lying under or adjacent to a railway, constructed on land conveyed to the company by the tenant for life under s. 7 of the act, even though the bulk of the minerals could have been, in all probability, worked out during his life. Robinson's Settlement Trusts, In re, 60 L. J., Ch. 776; [1891] 3 Ch. 129; 65 L. T. 244; 39 W. R. 632.

Minerals were devised on trust for B. for life with remainder on trust for defendant for life without impeachment of waste, with remainders over. The minerals were leased by the testator. A railway passed over a portion of the lands under which they lay, and after the death of B. the lessee gave the railway company notice of his desire to work the minerals lying under and adjoining a portion of the railway. The company gave a counter-notice that these minerals were required for the support of the railway, and ultimately paid compensation money, part of which was apportioned as paid in respect of the lessor's interest:—Held, that as the minerals in respect of which the compensation money had been paid were not of such extent that they could not possibly have been got during the life of the existing tenant for life, the defendant, as such tenant for life, was entitled to such apportioned part of the compensation money under s. 74 of the Lands Clauses Act, 1845. Barrington, In re, Gamlen v. Lyon, 56 L. J., Ch. 175; 33 Ch. D. 523; 55 L. T. 87; 35 W. R. 164.

b. Working, and Right to Support.

Land conveyed to Company for Purposes of Railway.]—A conveyance of land to a railway company, for the purposes of the line, gives a right by implication to all reasonable subjacent and adjacent support connected with the subject-matter of the conveyance, and therefore, although in the conveyance to the company minerals are reserved, the grantor is not entitled to work them even under his own land, in any manner calculated to endanger the railway. Caledonian Ry. v. Sprot, 2 Macq. H. L. 449; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 623; 4 W. R. 659.

In a grant to a railway company for the purposes of the railway, if the line which divides the land granted from the land retained traverses a quarry, it may be that no adjacent support is necessary, and that the grantor may dig or remove the whole contiguous soil. Ib.

But if the dividing line traverse a bog or bed of sand, it will be incumbent on the grantor to leave untouched such an intervening measure of lateral support as will prevent any part of the land granted from retreating. Ib.

S. had in 1834 sold to a railway company land over which the railway was to pass, but by the same deed stipulated in these terms—"Reserving always to me, and my heirs and successors, the whole mines and minerals, of whatsoever description, within the lands conveyed, and full power and liberty to us, or any person or persons authorised by us, to search for, work, win and carry away the same, and to make aqueducts, levels," &c. Subsequently several acts of parliament passed giving further powers to the company, and providing for cases of dispute with the landed proprietors as to value of land for purchase, mines, &c. S. continued to work out his minerals until August, 1848, when he received notice from the company that his works were of a nature to endanger the line. A suit having been brought to try the question, and judgment given:—Held, that S. by his conveyance had contracted an implied obligation to afford to the land so conveyed for the purpose specified, viz. a railway, all necessary adjacent and subjacent support by his other land, underlying or contiguous to it. Ib.

Held, also, that the subsequent acts of parliament were not retrospective, and could not alter the effect of the previous bargain and conveyance. Ib.

B. gratuitously granted a portion of his land to a railway company for the purpose of forming a line of railway thereon, with a reservation to him and his heirs of all the mines and minerals in the land so granted, and with full liberty to dig, search for, work and carry away the same, so as the same be done without entering upon or breaking the surface of the land thereby granted:—Held, that the company was entitled to the subjacent and adjacent lateral support necessary for the maintenance of the railway. Caledonian Ry. v. Belhaven (Lord), 3 Macq. H. L. 56; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 573.

A conveyance of a strip of land was made to a railway company in 1834 under an act of parliament, which provided, that all coal or other mineral should be deemed to be excepted out of any purchase of lands by the company, and might be worked by the owners and lessees thereof, so that no damage or obstruction be done or thereby occur to or in such railway or other works; and in case of damage, reparation was to be made by the owners or lessees. And whenever the working should approach within twenty yards of any masonry or building belonging to the company, notice should be given to it, and it might deliver a declaration requiring the minerals under such masonry or building to be reserved for its protection, and in that case it should purchase the same; and in case it should not deliver such declaration, that the owners or lessees might work the minerals under the masonry or buildings, in the usual and ordinary manner of working mines, doing no avoidable damage. The land was taken for the purpose of building thereon a bridge of great weight, which was subsequently built by the company. At the time of the purchase there was beneath the land, and a large tract of adjoining land belonging to the vendor, an old mine which had been accidentally flooded, and had long previously been full of water. In 1859, a lessee, deriving title under the vendor, threatened to drain the mine and renew the workings:—Held, that in addition to the special protection afforded by the act in respect of workings within twenty yards' distance of any masonry or building, the company was entitled, by way of necessary incident to the grant of the land, to such lateral support from the adjacent land of the vendor not situate within the twenty yards as might be necessary to uphold the bridge; and that the lessee was properly restrained from working minerals under the adjacent land not the property of the company, and not within the limits of twenty yards, so as to affect the stability of the bridge. Elliot v. North Eastern Ry., 10 H. L. Cas. 333; 2 N. R. 87; 32 L. J., Ch. 402; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 555; 8 L. T. 337; 11 W. R. 604.

Held, also, that the circumstance that the conveyance of the land was compulsory and not voluntary could not, in the absence of any special enactment, affect the construction of the conveyance, nor prevent it from passing to the company the necessary right of support as an ordinary legal incident. Ib.

Held, however, that although the water might afford additional support to the surface, the company had no right to speculate on the continuance of such an accidental circumstance, and that the lessee ought not to be restrained from withdrawing the water from the spaces left in the old workings, if such effect should be produced by working the colliery in a proper manner. Ib.

In cases similar to the foregoing, it being impracticable to define beforehand the limits within which the workings ought to be restrained, an injunction is properly expressed in general terms against working so as to produce the particular evil apprehended. Ib.

A railway company is entitled to the vertical and lateral supports of the adjoining lands of the proprietor from whom the lands or easements required for the railway were purchased: and such proprietor is not at liberty to work the minerals adjoining the railway in such a way as to cause damage to it. North Eastern Ry. v. Crosland, 4 De G. F. & J. 550; 1 N. R. 72; 32 L. J., Ch. 353; 7 L. T. 765; 11 W. R. 83.

In 1835 the Leeds Railway Company, constituted under an act which excepted mines from land purchased and allowed the landowners to work them provided they did no damage to the railway, bought land for its railway. In 1836 the York Railway Company was constituted under an act, containing provisions as to mines similar to those of the Railways Clauses Act. Afterwards the York company purchased the Leeds railway under the powers of an act of 1844, which provided, by s. 4, that on completion of the line the Leeds act should be repealed, provided that the repeal should not affect anything done under the act, but that all acts done under it should remain as valid as if there had been no repeal. The 9th section provided, that all the provisions of the York railway act, so far as they were not repealed, altered, or otherwise provided for by the act of 1844, or by any statute should apply to the Leeds railway :—Held, that the provisions as to mines in the York railway act were not, by the act of 1844, made applicable to the Leeds railway, so as to give the owners of the mines under the lands purchased by the Leeds company a right to work them to the injury of the railway, if the York Railway Company did not choose to purchase them, but that the unqualified right to support, which was incident to the grant of the lands for the purposes of the railway, remained unaffected. Ib.

The company cannot, under this statutory purchase, claim the benefit of the right of an ordinary purchaser of the surface to subjacent and adjacent support, the statute having created a specific law for such matters, by which alone the rights of the company and the mine-owner are regulated. G. W. Ry. v. Bennett, 36 L. J., Q. B. 133 ; L. R. 2 H. L. 27 ; 16 L. T. 186 ; 15 W. R. 647.

User of Tunnel—Grant of.]—The grant to a railway company, under its act and the railway acts, of the right to make, maintain and use a tunnel, does not give the company such a right to support to its tunnel that the grantor, acting duly in accordance with the Railways Clauses Act, ss. 77, 78, cannot work or have the benefit of mines under and adjacent to the tunnel. L. & N. W. Ry. v. Ackroyd, 31 L. J., Ch. 588 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 911 ; 6 L. T. 124 ; 10 W. R. 367.

Tunnelling under Railway — Compensation.]—Sect. 80 of the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, applies to minerals lying more than forty yards from a line of railway, and enables the owner of minerals, whose access to them is cut off, by reason of a railway company having purchased from him the minerals lying under their line of railway or within forty yards from it to tunnel under the railway for the purpose of working his minerals which are on the other side of it. And this power extends, not only to minerals in the ordinary sense of the word, but also to such a substance as clay, which is usually worked from the surface. And by s. 81 the mineral owner is entitled to be compensated by the company for any additional expense caused by his having to work the minerals in this way. Midland Ry. v. Miles, 55 L. J., Ch. 251 ; 30 Ch. D. 634 ; 53 L. T. 381 ; 34 W. R. 136.

The defendant was the owner of the minerals lying in and under a triangular piece of land, which was completely surrounded by three lines of railway belonging to the plaintiffs, and also of the minerals lying under certain portions of those three lines. The company had purchased the surface of the triangular piece of land, and also the surface of the land on which those parts of the three lines were constructed. The minerals in and under the lands so purchased were not in the first instance purchased by the company. The defendant, in April, 1885, gave the company notice, under s. 78 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, of his intention to work the minerals belonging to him in and under the triangular piece of land, and also under the lines of railway. The company gave the defendant notice that they were willing to make compensation for the minerals under the lines of railway, and arbitrators were appointed to assess the compensation. The defendant then gave the company notice that he intended to work the minerals in and under the triangular piece of land, and for that purpose to enter upon and across the line of railway :—Held, that such a mode of working would be a trespass, and that the defendant must be restrained from working in that way, but that he would be entitled to tunnel under the railway in order to work the minerals in and under the triangular piece of land, and that the company must compensate him for the extra expense of so working. Ib.

A railway company under the powers of a special act and of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, bought a piece of land on part of which they made three railways, leaving the rest of the land within the triangle formed by the railways, except two small pieces on the west of their lines. The landowner from whom they bought owned the adjoining land on the east. This he afterwards sold, but acquired a right of way over it. He had also bought the two severed pieces on the west. The conveyances to the railway company did not include the minerals under the land :—Held, that as under the special act and under s. 80 of the Railways Clauses Act, the landowner when he sold the land was entitled to make passages under the railway from his land on the east, no right of way over the railway for the purpose of working the minerals would be implied, and that he had not now such right of way. And that, being neither "owner, lessee, nor occupier" of the land to the east, he had no right, under s. 79 of the Railways Clauses Act, to work the minerals under the land within the triangle by means of passages under the railway ; but he might work the minerals from the pieces of land on the west, and under s. 81 get compensation for extra expenses. Midland Ry. v. Miles, 55 L. J., Ch. 745 ; 33 Ch. D. 632 ; 55 L. T. 428 ; 35 W. R. 76.

Held, also, that under s. 79 of the Railways Clauses Act the owner of the minerals might, having lawfully made a communication with the land sold to the railway company, work the minerals by open workings, that being the usual mode of working such minerals in the district where the same were situate. Ib.

Flooding—Liability of Company.]—A railway company is responsible for injuries sustained by reason of water escaping from a stream in flood time, or collected from rain falling on the railway, and flowing along a cutting of the railway and percolating through the substratum into mines beneath, although such mines had not been worked at the time of the formation of the railway. Bagnall v. L. & N. W. Ry., 1 H. & C. 544 ; 31 L. J., Ex. 480 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 254 ; 9 L. T. 419 ; 10 W. R. 802—Ex. Ch.

V. CUSTOMS AND PRESCRIPTION.

To Work Mines to Injury of House Property.]—In an action for working mines under ground near to a house, so that the house was injured, and in danger of falling for want of support, the defendant claimed, as lessee of the manor in which the house was situate and of the mines therein, a prescriptive right to work the mines under any houses parcel of the manor, paying to the occupiers of the surface a reasonable compensation for the use of the surface, but without making compensation on any other account, and justified under that right :—Held, first, that such a prescription was bad, as being unreasonable. Hilton v. Granville (Earl), D. & M. 614 ; 5 Q. B. 701 ; 13 L. J., Q. B. 193 ; 8 Jur. 310.

Held, secondly, that such a right could not exist by custom. Ib.

—— To Injury of Surface.]—A declaration stated that the plaintiff was possessed of land, and that the defendant wrongfully and without leaving sufficient support, worked the mines beneath the land, by reason whereof part of the land fell in and sunk. Plea, that the lord of a manor being seised of the common and waste land, parcel of the manor, and of the coal mines underneath, and certain persons being entitled to a right of common over the same, an act was passed, whereby the common and waste land was divided and allotted amongst the persons so entitled to rights of common, but reserving to the lord all original rights by him enjoyed in respect of the manor, and the right of working all mines underneath the common and waste land, together with convenient and necessary rights of way. That from time whereof the memory of man is not to the contrary, up to the time of the act, the lord for the time being and his assigns had been used and accustomed as of right to search for, win and work the coal mines lying and being under the commons, without let or interruption, and without leaving any support for the lands in and under which the mines were situate, and without making or paying satisfaction for an injury caused by working the mines, and that the mines had always been so worked without leaving support ; and justified under a lease granted by the lord of the manor : —Held, a bad plea. Beckett v. Bradley, 1 B. & S. 140 ; 31 L. J., Q. B. 65 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 588 ; 5 L. T. 832.

Pleas that, for forty years and for twenty years the lord of the manor and his tenants had been used and accustomed of right to work the mines, without leaving any support for the lands ; that the defendants were tenants to the lord of the mines, and that the working the mines without leaving any support for the land was a working of the mines in the exercise of and according to the right and custom :—Held, that both pleas were bad, as not shewing any acts done on the plaintiff's land ; acts done on the land of another, though done as of right for twenty or forty years, not affecting the plaintiff's rights. Ib.

To a statement of claim for working mines under the plaintiff's land without leaving sufficient support for the surface, the defendant pleaded that he was the lessee of the mines from the lord of the manor ; that the plaintiff's land had, previously to the passing of an inclosure act under which the waste of the manor was inclosed and allotted, formed part of such waste ; that the lord of the manor from time immemorial had been accustomed to work the mines under the waste without leaving sufficient support for the surface, and without making any compensation for injury so caused ; that by the inclosure act it was provided that the lord of the manor, his successors or assigns, might hold all the mines and quarries lying under the waste, together with liberty of searching for, winning and working the same as fully and freely as he or they might have had and enjoyed the same in case the act had not been passed, and that without making or paying any satisfaction for so doing ; and that it was further provided by the act that compensation for damage caused to any person's allotment by such working of the mines should be assessed by a justice of the peace, and should, when so assessed, be paid by the occupiers of the other allotments in the same township :—Held, that the defence was good, on the ground that, whether any valid custom such as alleged existed previously to the act or not, the act expressly gave to the lord of the manor and his assigns the right to let down the surface by mining without making any compensation. Beckett v. Bradley (31 L. J., Q. B. 65) not followed. Gill v. Dickinson, 49 L. J., Q. B. 262 ; 5 Q. B. D. 159 ; 42 L. T. 510 ; 28 W. R. 415 ; 44 J. P. 587.

Semble, that there may be a valid claim by custom, or prescription in a manor, for the lord or his licensees to work mines so as to destroy the tenants' surface. Wakefield v. Buccleugh (Duke), 39 L. J., Ch. 441 ; L. R. 4 H. L. 377 ; 23 L. T. 102.

To a declaration by a reversioner of land, alleging that the defendant dug and excavated stone and sand, and converted the same to his own use, and made holes and excavations in the land, and erected mounds of earth and rubbish, so as permanently to alter, damage, injure and spoil the surface of the land, he pleaded that R. was seised in fee of the mines and stone within certain parts of a lordship, and that R. and all whose estate he had, and his and their tenants, from time immemorial had been used and accustomed of right, as often as it might be necessary for the purpose of effectually working the quarries, to enter upon the waste lands within the part of the lordship within which the quarries were situate, and to dig through the same to the quarries, and to raise the stone and carry away the same, doing no more than necessary for the purpose aforesaid. The plea alleged a demise by R. to the defendant of a quarry of stone under the lands, and justified the acts complained of in exercise of the right. The defendant also pleaded statutory prescriptive pleas, under the 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 71, alleging the enjoyment of the right for forty and twenty years :—Held, that the pleas were good, for the right was not unreasonable, and might have originated in grant. Rogers v. Taylor, 1 H. & N. 706 ; 26 L. J., Ex. 203.
